IGNORANCE OF SCRIPTURE

It is positively pitiful how ignorant some people, even church people, are of Bible truth.

For example, at the Deacons' and Elders' Institute, in the summer of 1927, at DeFuniak Springs, Fla., I heard one of the speakers tell this sad incident:

After an Episcopal bishop had spoken in one of a series of services, one who was a member and a worker in that church said to the wife of a Presbyterian deacon, "What do you think the bishop said?" Of course the deacon's wife did not know. Then the other answered, "Why, he said that God is everywhere!" "Well, do you not believe that?" asked the deacon's wife. "Why, no! Do you think I would sit down at the card table and play cards, if I knew God was right there?"

It was not said what sort of card game it was that she referred to—likely some game for a prize, which is gambling, it matters not who engages in it. But it is plain that the woman regarded it as wrong; and she seemed to think she could engage in it and "put one over" on God because she thought God was not there.

What pitiable ignorance of the teaching of God's Word! Had that poor, ignorant church member never read Prov. 15:3, "The eyes of the Lord are in every place, beholding the evil and the good?"

Men may work wickedness under cover of darkness and hide it from other men, but "All things are naked and opened to the eyes of Him with whom we have to do." (Heb. 4:13). We do well to keep in mind the word, "Thou seest me." (Gen. 16:13).—Daniel J. Currie.

"CAN'T DO IT"

The story is told of a minister, a temperance man, visiting a friend. At dinner the friend wished him to take a glass of wine.

"Can't do it," said the minister. "Wine is a mocker."

"Take a glass of brandy, then."

"Can't do it, brother. Strong drink is raging."

By this time the host became excited and remarked:

"You will pass the decanter to the gentleman next."

"No, my friend. I cannot do that. Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink, that putteth the bottle to him."

"Well, then," said the host in desperation, "pass it over to me."

"Can't touch it," said the minister, "for the good Book says, 'Touch not, taste not, handle not.'"—The Wesleyan Methodist.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Sept. 30: Paul the Missionary (Review)

Golden Text: Christ liveth in me. Galations 2:20.

The Early Life of Saul

(Deut. 6:4-9; Phil. 3:4-6; Acts 22:3, 27, 28)

Saul was well trained in the law of the Lord, as were all of the Hebrew children. He was born in Tarsus of Cilicia, circumcised according to the Jewish law, instructed by the great teacher, Gamaliel. He was a "Hebrew of the Hebrews," and by sect, a Pharisee. His early teaching showed its effect in his zeal for the cause he represented in later life. "Train up a child in the way he should go; and when he is old, he will not depart from it." (Prov. 22:6.)

Saul and Stephen

(Acts 7:54-8:3; 22:3, 4, 19, 20; 26:4, 5, 9-11; Gal. 1:13, 14)

Yes, he was there when the vicious mob stoned the faithful saint of God, Stephen, for he guarded the outer cloaks of the murderers as the crime was being committed. It is thought probable that Saul directed the affair. Whatever the attending circumstances, "Saul was consenting unto his death." We may be sure that the benign forgiving aspect of the martyr's face made its indelible impression upon the man, Saul.

The Conversion of Saul

(Acts 9:1-19; 22:6-16; I Cor. 15:8)

As Saul, "breathing out threatenings and slaughter," journeyed toward Damascus to persecute the Christians, he could not dismiss from his mind the tranquil death of the martyr, Stephen. It was then that the convicting and converting power of God came upon him, so that in humility and blindness he was compelled to call upon the name of the Lord. He reached his destination, but instead of leading he had to be led; instead of directing he had to be directed. He was a helpless creature in the hands of his Creator.

Saul's Early Ministry

(Acts 9:19-30; 11:19-30; 12:25; Gal. 1:15-18)

After his sight was restored to him at the end of three days by the power of God through the faithful disciple, Ananias, "straightway in the synagogues he proclaimed Jesus, that he is the Son of God." Then the Jews, being chagrined and humiliated that their purposes had suffered such a destructive blow by their leader turning "traitor," made an effort to destroy him. His friends became his foes, which of necessity must happen sometimes when a man takes Christ into his heart. He escaped and went to Jerusalem, where some of the disciples were afraid of him. What discouragements! But praise be to Barnabas, he had faith in Saul's conversion, and stood by him. Blessed be such friends!

The First Foreign Missionaries

(Acts 13:1-52)

The church at Antioch in Syria was the first missionary church. After fasting and prayer, Saul (called Paul) and Barnabas were sent out to preach the gospel to other countries. Their itinerary included Salamis and Paphos on the Isle of Cyprus, Perga in Pamphylia, from which place John Mark, who had gone with them, departed and went back to Jerusalem, Antioch in Pisidia, where he preached a great sermon and won many to the Christian faith, both of Jews and Gentiles.

(Acts 14:1-28)

Being opposed and persecuted by the Jews in Antioch, they continued their journey to Iconium, almost due east of Antioch. Here also they met with persecution, and journeyed southward to Lystra. In this city, an attempt was made to do sacrifice unto them as gods, because of a miracle of healing performed upon a life-long cripple, which, of course, they resisted. From here, being persecuted again by the envious Jews, they went to Derbe, 20 miles east, where they preached the gospel. Retracing their steps, confirming the disciples as they went, they reached Attalia, a little south of Perga, from whence they sailed for Seleucia, the seaport of Antioch of Syria.

The Council at Jerusalem

(Acts 15:1-35; Gal. 5:1-15)

A contention arose among the apostles and disciples regarding the Jewish rite of circumcision. This led to the calling of a council at Jerusalem, where the mother church was maintained. As this requirement would lay a burden upon the Gentile proselytes, and as it was not essential to salvation, the decision was handed down that it did not have to be observed, which caused satisfaction among the apostles.

Paul Carries the Gospel Into Europe

(Acts 15:36-16:15)

On the second missionary journey, Paul takes Silas with him instead of Barnabas, because of the contention over John Mark. Their trip took them north and west through Syria, thence into Cilicia through the Cilician gates in the Taurus Mountains to Derbe, Lytra, Iconium and Antioch, and to the coast town of Troas. From here they took ship and sailed around the head of the Aegean Sea to Neapolis and Philippi in Macedonia, Paul having received a vision in Troas of a man of Macedonia calling for help. By the riverside at Philippi, the first European convert was made, a woman of Thyatira named Lydia.

(Acts 16:16-40)

In this latter Macedonia city, because a demented girl who brought money to her masters by soothsaying was converted, Paul and Silas were thrust into prison. Singing praises and praying to God at midnight the doors of the prison were opened by a mighty earthquake, and the jailer, so affrighted that he would have taken his own life had not Paul prevented, asked for salvation, which Paul and Silas gladly offered to him and his household, all of whom joyously received it.

Paul in Thessalonica

(Acts 17:1-15; Rom. 15:18-20; I Thes. 5:12-23)

From Philippi, the apostles journeyed to Thessalonica, the capital of Macedonia. These people were no different from those elsewhere as far as the gospel was concerned. Some believed and some persecuted. To escape the vicious Jews, Paul and Silas were sent away by night, and came to Berea, 47 miles southwest. The Bereans were declared to be more noble than those of Thessalonica, because they possessed more open minds for the truth. Many believed of Jews and Greeks, men as well as women.

Paul in Athens and Corinth

(Acts 17:16-18:17; I Cor. 2:1-16; I Tim. 2:37)

Leaving Berea, Paul came to the city of learning and art, Athens in Greece. His heart was sick as he observed the ignorance among these intelligent people concerning their spiritual life. Seeing an altar erected to "The Unknown God" among the many to be found there, he preached to them God the Creator and His Son the Saviour. His message had effect, and a number were converted.

At Corinth, to the west of Athens, the apostle repeated his practice of preaching in the synagague. Likewise was repeated the opposition that he had received all along his journey. He then turned his attention to the Gentiles, who accepted his Christ more readily. An assurance of the Father's approval and protection was given him here in a dream. He remained with them 18 months.

Back from the Arctic

Com. Donald B. MacMillan, famous Arctic explorer, is back in the United States after spending more than a year exploring the Arctic regions. This was his 11th expedition into the Far North. He brought back more than 6,000 specimens of plant, bird, and animal life. Some of them had never before been found in the Arctic. He tried to find relics in Labrador showing that Scandinavian explorers had visited that country and made settlements there long before Columbus discovered America. However, he did not discover enough evidence to prove beyond a doubt that that is true.—Current Events.

Lindy's Mother Goes to Turkey

Mrs. Evangeline L. Lindbergh, Lindy's mother, is now in Turkey. She has been granted leave of absence for a year from her school in Detroit, Mich., to teach science at the American Woman's College in Constantinople. While she is away, her famous son will continue to promote commercial aviation in the United States. He is working out plans from regular 48-hour passenger service from coast by railroad and airplane. —Current Events.

—The special meeting at Flat Rock church will begin Sunday, September 23. Two services will be held on that day, with dinner on the grounds.

—Mrs. Willis Booth, of Calvary church, was accompanied last Sunday by her sister, Mrs. Spencer, of Georgia.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Liberty.—The regular meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Methodist Protestant Church was held in the church Monday afternoon. The meeting was well attended and real enthusiasm was shown by the members.

We had a very interesting program on Stewardship, also a few missionary items, after which there was an unusually encouraging business meeting. Reports from the three auxiliary circles were good financially. The circles reported money collected both by collection of dues and sales made since the last meeting.

A committee was appointed to plan a silver tea to be given a little later. This will consist of a musical program and readings, and a salad course will be served. A free-will silver offering will be received at the door.

Further plans for raising money were discussed, also instructive programs for the remainder of the year.

Siler City.—Sunday, August 26, closed a series of revival services at our church. While there were not as many conversions as were expected, we feel that the number of wonderful sermons we heard were very beneficial to all of us. As a result of the revival Mrs. Campbell united herself with our church and was baptized Sunday afternoon, September 2. Mr. Campbell was also received by letter.

Mr. Billie Wrenn, who has been spending the summer with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Les Wrenn, has returned to the Alabama State College to continue his studies.

Miss Lebus Stone left September 11 for High Point College where she will be a member of the freshman class this year.

Miss Theo Sewell, of Pageland, S. C., who is the guest of Miss Minnie Cooper, has been very helpful in rendering special music in many of the services.

We are very glad to have with us until October 1 Miss Margaret Siler, of Nashville, Tenn., who is one of our number.

REPORTER.

Pageland Circuit, New Hope Church.—The camp meeting held under the auspices of New Hope Tabernacle a few months ago was one of the best for a small camp I have ever seen. A large crowd attended and gave the best of attention to the gospel messages.

We were highly favored with a gracious outpouring of God's Spirit. Rev. A. E. Belk was the evangelist. Bro. C. E. Phillips, our pastor, did part of the preaching. With those two gospel preachers we enjoyed the Bible truth expounded in all of its fullness. We as a church praise God for good, old-fashioned Bible truths, for ministers who are fearless in declaring the truth.

We had 19 accessions to the church. Pray that we may lead these young people aright.

We had a large attendance at prayer meeting Sunday night. The leader spoke from part of the fifth chapter of Ephesians. A number of Christians testified with freedom and liberty in the Lord.

We love Brother Phillips, our minister, and trust we will be able to keep him. With his preaching, our prayers and loyalty to God and our church, we are expecting to beat back the powers of hell and Satan and shine for God as a city set on a hill which cannot be hid. We feel more determined than ever to press on to the mark of the high calling in Christ Jesus. I am glad God is able to keep that which we have committed unto Him.

Lexington, State Street.—The opening exercises of Sunday school Sunday morning were made very interesting by Mrs. Curtis Koonts and members of her Sunshine Circle. A little play was given stressing the need of literature for the children of China and India. Miss Lila Aron gave in her delightful way a reading, bringing to our minds the Lord's ability and willingness to make our small gifts and sacrifices bring great results.

There was no preaching, morning or night, at State Street as Brother Bethea is conducting revival services at West Lexington. A large number of our folks heard Mr. Bethea at West Lexington Sunday morning and enjoyed the service a great deal.

Mrs. Dickens, of Enfield, spent the past week at the parsonage as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Bethea. She has been in all the services since her coming and has made many friends here. We hope to have her often.

A very interesting service was the meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society at the church last Thursday afternoon. The answers to the questions in the "Question Box" were given by Mrs. Harkey in a manner that clearly showed she had read the "Record" from cover to cover. The Stewardship Study was given by Mrs. C. L. Koonts, who always does well the many worth-while things she does.

The requirements of the "efficiency chart" were reviewed and we find we rate as an honor society.

We are pleased to find that we have in the city schools four teachers who are Methodist Protestants: Miss Mabel Hutton, who has taught here for the past three years; Miss Taylor, and Miss Welch, who comes this year for the first time, and Mrs. Frank McCrary, who lives here and has been a very efficient school teacher for several years. Mrs. McCreary and her children are helpful members of State Street church and Sunday school. Miss Hutton, while not a member of the church here, is a faithful worker, a great help in all the services. We hope to have Miss Taylor and Miss Welch in the services soon, as we feel sure they would be vauable assets.

REPORTER.

Mebane.—The Home and Foreign Missionary Societies met at the church in joint session Monday evening of last week. At this meeting the societies were merged into a Missionary Society and divided into circles. The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. H. C. Nicholson; first vice-president, Mrs. J. W. Nicholson; second vice-president, Mrs. Jack Smith; treasurer, Miss Mary Jobe; recording secretary, Mrs. George Wyatte; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Carl E. Sykes; circle leaders were appointed by the president as follows: Circle No. 1, Mrs. Highfill Jobe; Circle No. 2, Mrs. George Wyatte; Circle No. 3, Miss Pauline Nicholson; Circle No. 4, Mrs. J. E. Barnette. We feel sure our Missionary Society will increase in interest and membership.

The board of tsewards met with Mr. W. G. Smith Tuesday evening of last week with splendid attendance. The treasurer's report was encouraging. After the business was transacted Mrs. Smith served refreshments.

We were delighted to have Rev. J. F. Minnis speak to us last Sunday evening at 7:30. Rev. Mr. Minnis is a native of Orange County and has spent over five years in India as a missionary. It is certainly our privilege to contribute to missions and certainly it is our duty to do so. When we hear of the terrible conditions that exist there we should want to do more than ever, and I believe we do. An offering of $13.16 was taken at this service for missions.

We are glad to report Mr. H. C. Nicholson is recovering nicely after having his tonsils removed.

REPORTER.

Efland, Orange Charge.—The Ladies' Aid and the W. H. M. S. gave a lawn party on the church lawn Saturday night for the benefit of the church. A nice sum was taken in.

Our Sunday school is increasing in attendance from Sunday to Sunday. We now have 147 enrolled. May the Lord add His blessings to all our efforts.

Brother Williams gave us another of his splendid sermons Sunday night. We always enjoy his sermons. He will be with us for only three more services before Conference. We are hoping that Conference will be kind enough to send him back to us.

MRS. E. S. TAYLOR, Reporter.

English Street.—Last Sunday our Sunday school was not large, but lots better interest in every class was shown than in some time. The last payment on the piano was due and $73 was raised, which finishes paying the full amount.

The Junior Philathea class held its monthly meeting with Misses Myrtle and Bessie Cates, it being time to elect new officers for the next six months. Much business was brought up. Mrs. J. A. Lee was re-elected teacher and Miss Louise Swann was elected assistant teacher. These young folks are planning to go to higher heights in God's work.

The Philathea class met this month with Mrs. Allred, and the teacher of the class, Mrs. Goebel, was re-elected for the coming six months and Mrs. Boswell was elected as assistant teacher. Much interest was taken and the business went along nicely, after which delicious refreshments were served by Mrs. Allred and Mrs. Guyer.

A few of the ladies and our pastor visited the Children's Home some time ago and asked for measures of the most needy children. The sewing matron granted the request, so last week 10 little children's hearts were made glad because they had something new to wear. I think the ones that made this possible were happiest. Lots of things are needed for these children to wear to school and when you lend a helping hand the blessing will be yours.

The Christian Endeavor business and social meeting for September was small in number but those who were not there missed a jolly good time at the home of Miss Annie Crater.

On last Tuesday night the Ladies' Aid came together at the home of Mrs. Caudle for the regular monthly meeting. The general business routine was carried out, and it was decided to use the "rainy day bag." Just before we started home we had something just fine to eat. Now the president has sent each member a pretty little bag and every day it rains they are to put a penny in the bag.

I guess my report is getting lengthy, but I have not written in a long time, and I'll just have to tell you readers that our pastor, Rev. D. I. Garner, is preaching better and better. Sunday night he preached a special sermon on the subject, "Dead Made Alive." It was a very strong sermon, showing the great importance of church members being much alive.

Pray for us that we may not be discouraged.

MRS. J. A. LEE, Reporter.

Enfield Charge.—The regular evangelistic services were held at the Whitakers Chapel church, morning and evening, with the exception of Sunday, beginning with the second Sunday and closing on Friday night of the same week. While there were no conversions, yet the spirit of the services was good and every one seemed to be helped in a very definite way. The writer did all the preaching with the exception of Tuesday morning and Wednesday night. Rev. J. F. Minnis was there and brought two stirring appeals at these services. The people greatly appreciated Brother Minnis' messages and welcome him back at any time that he can make it convenient. As an appreciation in part for his soul-stirring messages a purse of $10 was made up to be sent to Mr. Minnis.

In the absence of the pastor last Sunday morning at the Enfield church, Rev. J. B. O'Briant kindly came over and preached at the morning hour. The people greatly appreciated his message.

Here, also, Mr. Minnis spoke to the people on Tuesday night.

Mr. B. R. Kimball remains very ill; however, we are hoping and praying for his recovery. J. CLYDE AUMAN.

West End, Greensboro.—The W. H. M. S. held a very interesting meeting Monday afternoon, September 17. All business was transacted in our usual way. Finances are improved and, we are hoping, will grow better. The two societies have been working together on a silk quilt, and have raised quite a nice sum. For every one who gives a donation we embroider their name somewhere on this quilt, and we are expecting to sell the quilt at auction; so watch for this sale and give us a bid.

Sunday, September 23, marks another birthday for our church. We are looking forward to a very happy day as we are hoping all our friends and former members will come and join with us for the day. We will have tables for dinner to be spread on, so come and bring a basket. Let us all rejoice together. REPORTER.

Happenings at Flat Rock Church.—Possibly I should not have begun this epistle with the word "Happenings," for things do not happen only as some material law or some person gets behind them and causes them to happen. The members of Flat Rock have had a mind to work together and cause something beautiful to happen there in the building of our church. Three months ago the old frame church was standing. Now we have remodeled and transformed it into a beautiful, up-to-date church, furnished with the exception of the seats, which we hope to put in before very long. The church is built of gray stone, quarried from the quarry nearby, which was first called Flat Rock, and the church was named for this rock. Electric lights have been installed.

We hope soon to organize a Ladies' Aid Society. In the meantime the ladies are busy trying to raise money for a new piano and to curtain off the Sunday school rooms, four of which were added. The church was designed by Herbert Hunter, of High Point, and the contract was given to Mr. J. W. E. Lewis, of Greensboro, for the woodwork and to Mr. H. A. Sherrill, of Hillsdale, for the stone. Mr. Lewis, with his efficient sons, and Mr. Sherrill with his helpers have given us a beautiful building. Watch the Herald for the picture of it. This is for my good friend at Grace to see.

Our special meeting will begin the fourth Sunday in September. The Sunday school is improving, those coming taking a lively interest.

Mr. Humphrey, of Bethany church, is delegate to Annual Conference.

The health of the church membership is good with the exception of Mrs. George Friddle and Mrs. Sidney Parish. They both continue quite ill.

Richard L. Ogburn and Miss Dorothy Holland, of Marion, Maryland, were married at the home of bride's parents on September 8. They are on a bridal trip to Niagara Falls and will be at home to their friends at Summerfield October 1.

M. W. Thomas is building a nice home near the church.

R. L. Ogburn's home is almost completed, and Percy Friddle will soon begin to build his home. All these are live members of Flat Rock.

Mrs. J. B. Ogburn had as her guests this past week her cousins, Mr. Joseph Davis and daughters, and his sister, Mrs. Esther Hodson, of Hagerstown, Ind. This was their first trip to N. C., except that Mrs. Hodson was here once when a very small girl. They were relighted with this part of the state and said the religious status of the churches was better than with them. They said the churches in their part of the state had, to a great extent, adopted the Holy Roller manner of worship, which had not as yet seemed conducive of much religious improvement.

MRS. J. B. OGBURN, Reporter.

West Forsyth Circuit.—The fourth quarterly conference will meet at Harmony Grove on Thursday, October 4, at 11 o'clock. President Taylor will preside. Business of great importance to all the churches will be taken up.

C. H. WHITAKER, Pastor.

High Point.—Last Sunday morning at the Sunday school hour the students of High Point College were given a special welcome upon their arrival at the church when committees greeted them at the several classrooms. Special programs were presented by the Baraca and Philathea classes in their rooms. The attendance at Sunday school numbered 485.

At the hour for morning worship a splendid congregation filled the auditorium. A delightful program of music was presented; the choir sang the beautiful anthem, "Seek Ye the Lord," by Roberts. In her lovely contralto voice, Mrs. John C. Whitesell rendered Watson's "Babylon" in a charming manner. Prof. Ernest B. Stimson presided at the organ with remarkable skill and fine effect.

Rev. Roy I. Farmer chose for the basis of a splendid discourse on "The Dominion of Man," the text from Psalm 8:4: "What is man that thou art mindful of him? or the son of man that thou visitest him?" In part, he said: "Man is half-way between nothing and deity; he is either the scandal or glory of the world. Shakespeare said:

"'Man was not born to shame;
Upon his brow shame is ashamed to sit,
For 'tis a throne where honor may be crowned.'

"God never intended for man to be the victim of circumstances; he rises to his highest self when he sacrifices most for humanity. The greatest life is the one that flings itself into service. Diseases of the body yield themselves to the X-ray; mechanics can make nothing that works like the joints of the arm: there is no laboratory like the human body; all this physical machinery goes on day after day! This is the physical being that God made, but the image of God is not here. Is the image of God in the intellect? A man is worth more above his chin than below, but to cultivate the intellectual side of life alone is dangerous. A man who is expert at golf, tennis, or business may have evil thoughts. The image of God is not in the physical or intellectual side of life, but in the moral, or spiritual life. We have the same faculties of conscience, love, generosity, and justice that God has. When we learn to look upon life as a priceless possession, we become responsible beings. If we want to excel in any place in life we must develop and exercise our power in that realm. If we want to be what God wishes us to be, we must love Him, and take Him for our guide; as the clod of earth is different because it lives close to the rose, then our lives are sweetened and hallowed when we live near Jesus."

At the evening service the pastor brought a most practical message on "What Is It to Be a Christian?" and Clarence Schultheiss, whose beautiful voice is always pleasing to our congregation, sang a lovely solo, "Save Me, O God."

A very delightful meeting of the two Missionary societies was held Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. A. M. Rankin, Sr. After a short business session, Mrs. Ben Moore in a few well-chosen words introduced Mrs. W. C. Hammer, of Asheboro, who presented a splendid, concise summary of the Home Mission study book, "What Next in Home Missions?" by Dr. William P. Shriver, who has been for 18 years the director of city, immigrant, and industrial work for the Board of Home Missions of the Presbyterian church in the U. S. A., and of its successor, the Board of National Missions. Mrs. Hammer's clever presentation of this very interesting book was greatly enjoyed by all members present. At the conclusion of the study book, Mrs. Hammer outlined the plans of the merger of the two Missionary societies as adopted by General Conference. On behalf of the societies, a beautiful bouquet of pink dahlias and zinnias was presented to Mrs. Hammer in token of appreciation for her visit to us. Two lovely piano solos were then rendered by Mrs. Roy I. Farmer. Delicious refreshments were then served by a committee from the Home Missionary Society.

A tragic and most deplorable accident occurred last Sunday afternoon when Capt. A. J. Morris of the police force lost his life while in the discharge of his duty. He and Policeman Friddle had arrested a young man, Garland Shipwash, who, on the way to police headquarters tried to break away, and in the scuffle which followed Captain Morris received a severe blow in the stomach, which caused almost instant death. He lived at 805 East Commerce street, and was one of the most popular men on the force. He was a member of the Junior Order and of the First church, where funeral services were held for him Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, conducted by the pastor, Rev. Roy I. Farmer, assisted by Rev. E. J. Harbinson, assistant pastor of Wesley Memorial M. E. church, and Rev. W. A. Barber, of Stanley County. Captain Morris was born in Davidson County 62 years ago, and is survived by his widow, three sons, Messrs. O. C. Morris, A. W. Morris, and A. C. Morris, and one daughter, Mrs. Reitzel Wagner. Pallbearers at the funeral were fellow members of the police force and interment was made in Oakwood Cemetery. The sympathy of a large number of friends is extended to the bereaved family.

The Christian Endeavor Society held its weekly meeting Monday evening, when the leader, Miss Nellie Martin, presented a very helpful and entertaining talk on the topic, "The Service of Science to Human Life."

The Young Woman's Missionary Auxiliary is holding a wienie roast in the church kitchen this (Tuesday) evening.

Professor Stimson is planning to organize a choir among the boys of the church between the ages of 7 and 14 years. This will be a good opportunity for these boys to receive some musical training that will be beneficial, and be of service to their church as well.

The executive board of the N. C. Branch of Missionary Societies will meet Thursday of this week with Mrs. W. P. Pickett and Mrs. Minnie P. Harrell on North Main street.

The local W. C. T. U. met Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. R. T. Pickens, but owing to the disagreeable weather, there was not a full attendance. Plans are being formulated for the entertainment of the State W. C. T. U. convention, which meets here October 23-25. The sessions will be held in Wesley Memorial M. E. Church; there is to be a banquet on Tuesday evening, a speaker of national reputation, Mrs. Welch, of Tennessee, will deliver an address Wednesday evening, and the convention will close Thursday afternoon, October 25th. Approximately 75 delegates are expected to attend and they will be entertained in the homes of High Point. Luncheon will be served them on Wednesday and Thursday at Wesley Memorial church by courtesy of the Rotary, Kiwanis, and Civitan Clubs of the city.

Wyatt A. Pickens, who has been here on a visit to home-folks, left Monday morning for Baton Rogue, La., where he will be assistant professor of Romance Languages in Louisiana State University. He taught there the two past summer school sessions, and says he likes the sunny country of the Creoles and Spanish better than the frozen north of the Bostonese, where he has lived for three years at Harvard. He visited the little town near Baton Rogue where Evangeline, the ill-fated heroine of Longfellow's beautiful poem, lived and was shown the Evangeline Oak, named in her memory and near which she lies buried. The people there tell the legend differently from Longfellow's version, saying that she after a long search found Gabriel, her lover, in Louisiana, but he was the husband of another; she lost her reason and wandered around among the poorer classes, who kindly took care of her until death released her from suffering. The Louisiana State University is putting on a program of great expansion—it is comparatively new, but bids fair to rival in a short time our own State University, and the fishing in that charming and romantic land is most excellent!

Bethesda, Halifax Circuit.—Mr. Spencer is still busy in revival meetings. This week he is at Harmony church, assisted by Rev. A. D. Shelton. The meeting next week at Ringwood will close the list.

The people here were very much pleased with Mr. Taylor's visit last month and with his splendid and inspiring sermon. His business talk afterward was interesting, also, delivered in his pleasant and modest manner. Mr. Taylor has long been a favorite among us, and we are always glad to see him.

The Ladies' Aid meets monthly at the homes of the members. Sickness in the home of Mrs. F. M. Taylor prevented the last meeting being held there, as appointed. Mrs. Horace Mitchell is president, succeeding Mrs. Spencer (the first president), who "did not choose to run" again.

Capt. Horace Mitchell is sick here at the home of his mother-in-law, Mrs. N. M. Harrison.

Mrs. W. H. Wilcox has recently returned from Greensboro, where she attended the summer school for teachers. Her sister, Miss Agnes Wills, is visiting her.

Miss Mary Hunter, who has just spent several weeks with her mother, Mrs. M. J. Hunter, has returned to her work in Chapel Hill.

REPORTER.

September 17, 1928.

Concord.—Home-coming day was observed at our church Sunday, and good congregations were present at the three services. Dr. P. E. Lindley, of High Point College, a former pastor, preached at 11 o'clock, and his message was greatly enjoyed. In the afternoon the service was more in the form of a memorial service in memory of some who have done so much for our church, but who now have passed on. Words were spoken in appreciation of Mr. W. H. Scarboro, Revs. D. A. Braswell, and W. R. Lowdermilk.

At night we were privileged in hearing Dr. R. M. Andrews, of High Point College, who preached a helpful and inspiring sermon. There was special music at all services and the day was thoroughly enjoyed by all. We were sorry that more of our former pastors could not be with us.

The Christian Endeavorers held their regular monthly meeting at the County Home Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. A good crowd was present and an interesting meeting held.

On last Tuesday night the Clyde Auman Missionary Circle held a birthday party in the dining hall of the Sunday school building, a very interesting program being given. Miss Laura Thompson, formerly of Greensboro, who is teaching here now, gave a splendid talk on India. The program was followed by a social hour which was in charge of Miss Ethel Blackwelder and Mrs. W. A. Herrin. Refreshments were served to about 200 people who attended. Proceeds amounted to $34.

Our Ladies' Aid Society expects to conduct a booth at the Cabarrus District Fair, which opens October 9. We will be glad to have any of our friends visiting the Fair hunt up the M. P. booth and eat with us.

Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Sides left last week for a trip to Texas and Mexico.

THE IDEAL PREACHER'S WIFE

A preacher's wife, to be ideal,
Must be a woman who is real;
Not too large and not too small,
Not too short and not too tall;
Her face and form must be just fair,
She must not be at all too rare;
In dress she must be considered sane,
And yet not altogether plain.

Her home must be in perfect grace,
With everything in its proper place;
Her family must not be large or small,
'Tis wrong to have no child at all,
But six or eight will never do,
'Tis just as bad as to have too few;
Her children, the precious, darling things,
Must each one have at least two wings.

She must lead in all the women's work,
And from no task will she ever shirk;
To the church's task she must be always true;
Although to her no salary is ever due;
Oh, the wedding fees are hers, perhaps,
If her husband's memory does not lapse;
But if her husband gives her all,
Her salary, alas! will be quite small.

If God in heaven has prepared a place
Above the average for the race,
A mansion built in heaven's center,
Into which no one else can ever enter,
It is for the devoted preacher's wife,
When she is done with this world of strife;
A place of quiet, helpful rest,
In a mansion that is the very best.

—J. B. CONNETT.

NOTICE

There will be an all-day missionary service at Orange Chapel the 5th Sunday in September. We expect to have a treat in store for all who come—good speaking and singing and a regular Orange Chapel dinner. If you have ever been there you will know what to expect. MRS. J. J. CRAWFORD.

—Rev. C. W. Bates has made over a thousand pastoral calls this year. This surpasses every previous record of his.

—The West Indies and the Gulf coast, especially in Florida, have been hard hit by storms the past few days. The dead are numbered by scores and hundreds. Of course the property loss is immense. So great is the distress that the Red Cross has gone to relief and is calling on all of us for money to defray the expenses.

Eight charges report this week, with total amount of $245.70. Thomasville Community church goes in the "Paid in Full" on the college assessment. Glad to put them NOW where we knew they would ultimately go.

First Church, High Point, Thomasville Community, Grace, and Weaverville, lead the list this week, in the order named, on A. C. B. Lincolnton takes second place on college assessment. Lincolnton will be heard from again, and it will be no surprise to us to find this church on some honor rolls before long. We are grateful to all of these charges for these remittances, whether the amount is large or small. Small payments oftimes represent as much effort and sacrifice as large payments do.

Bethel church on Mocksville charge is entitled to a place in the college "Paid in Full" list. The amount was sent in previous to this report and credit given to Mocksville charge. We have learned since that it was paid by Bethel church, and that it is their total assessments for college maintenance. We are glad to have Bethel on this honor roll. And we are fully expecting that other churches from this charge will be honor roll churches, if not in every particular, certainly in one or more.

Now, brethren, for an earnest, steady pull, until every dollar possible has been secured for these budgets. We know that "times are hard," but that has always been so. Still we have gone right on prospering from year to year. There never will be a time when it is perfectly easy to collect money for anything. Business encounters great difficulties in this particular, and certainly it will be so of the church. But business does not stop because of this; neither must the church. Let us do our best, then, to raise these budgets, even to the last possible dollar.

And once more: PLEASE do not hold back your collections, but send them in promptly from week to week. This will give to us the inspiration of the increasing payments, and also make the work of the treasurer lighter when Conference meets.

EIGHT charges reporting this week: Let's double it next week. Say so?

Fraternally,

S. W. TAYLOR.

SOME STORIES THEY TELL

A colored preacher was discoursing on the Rich Man and Lazarus. He made the statement that Lazarus was borne by the angels into Beelzebub's bosom. One of his young parishioners at once called attention to the fact that an outrageous mistake had been made, that it was Abraham's bosom. The preacher did not thank him for the correction, but on the contrary replied:

"What diff'ence does it make, smarty? Dey was bof good men." Not satisfied with administering this rebuke he proceeded to institute a test of Bible knowledge which he felt sure would humiliate the young man who had presumed to correct him. He said: "You claim to know so much about de scriptures: I bet you can't tell de name ob de dogs dat licked Lazarus' sores." The young man replied that the Bible did not give the names of the dogs. "Yes it do. I knew you couldn't tell. The name is 'Moreover'."

Two Methodist Protestant preachers of our Conference went one night to a negro church to a service led by a negro preacher. They were the first to leave the church at the close of the service. Not far from the church they had to cross a deep ditch by a narrow bridge. In the dense darkness one of the preachers missed the bridge and landed in the ditch with much crackling of breaking brush. It took him quite a while to find firm footing and get out. Every move he made was accompanied by more breaking of brush. One old negro woman, hearing the crackling in the ditch, inquired, "What negro is dat down in de ditch?" There was no answer, and the question was repeated in louder tones. Still there was no answer, and then she said, "I don't blame you, fool nigger, for being ashamed to tell your name."

Government Finances

Our government is the biggest business institution in the world. For the fiscal year 1928, which ended June 30, its total receipts were $4,042,000,000; total expenditures, $3,644,000,000. That left a surplus of $398,000,000, in spite of the fact that taxes had been reduced $220,000,000 a year. The public debt was reduced by $907,000,000. On June 30, it stood at $17,604,000,000. Interest payments on the debt for the year amounted to a total of $732,000,000. The average interest rate paid by the government was 3.87 per cent.—Current Events.

—The banks of the United States have deposits of nearly 57 billion dollars and aggregate resources of 70 billion. On February 28th last, there were 26,699 banks in all,—18,965 state-chartered institutions and 7,734 national banks.

MARRIED

Browne-Potts

A very pretty but simple wedding was solemnized at the home of Rev. Parks W. Wilson on Clarkson street, Charlotte, N. C., pastor of the bride, September 8, 1928, when Miss Ellis Trettie Potts, of Charlotte, became the bride of Mr. Clyde E. Browne, of the same city, formerly of High Point, N. C.

The bride is the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Potts, of 408 E. Seventh street, Charlotte, N. C., and is a graduate of Martin Institute, Jefferson, Georgia.

The bridegroom is a member of the Methodist Protestant church and has held a position with the Southern Coach Company for the past three years.

Immediately following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Browne left for an extended tour in the mountains of Western North Carolina.

The friends of the popular couple are wishing them many years of marital bliss and happiness.

After September 18 they will be at home at 13½ Andrille Terrace, Charlotte, N. C.

Moss-McGee

On August 21, 1928, 10 o'clock P. M., in the home of Rev. and Mrs. J. B. O'Briant, Rosemary, N. C., Mr. Clifton E. Moss and Miss Mattie McGee were married by the writer.

These young people are both from Weldon, N. C., and are quite popular and have a wide circle of friends who are wishing for them the best in life. J. B. O'BRIANT.

—Calvary church has a notable member—notable for her good achievements under unfavorable conditions. We say unfavorable conditions because she is infirm in health, unable to attend church many times. But she thinks of the church and for the church when she is at home. The church needed a bell. She raised the money and bought it. The church needed cushions for the communion altar. She traded and made the money for the materials and then with a little help made the cushions. The church needed glass for an ornamental window in the gable. She raised the money and had glass put in. She proceeds so quietly with her good deeds that it is sometimes quite a while before we learn what she is about, but we are always gratified when we learn. We highly appreciate such a member. May she find a feast of joy in her consecration to the church. She is doing what she can.

During the sermon a baby began to cry and its mother immediately picked it up and began to carry it towards the door.

"Stop!" the minister exclaimed. "Don't go away. The baby is not disturbing me."

"Oh, he ain't, ain't he?" replied the mother, continuing her way to the door. "But you're disturbin' him, the precious little darlin'."

THE WARFARE AGAINST BUGS

More than 600 scientists, representing 30 countries of the world, met at Ithaca recently in the Fourth International Congress of Entomology. There is no work in the world which is more important than that of the economic entomologists who spend their lifetime in finding new ways and means of fighting harmful insects.

It is estimated that insects consume at least 10 per cent of all the world's crops and in spite of the fight that man is waging against them and of the millions of dollars that have been spent to control them their ravages are constantly increasing. Any farmer of middle age or over can name dozens of "bugs" which afflict agriculture now that were unknown even 40 or 50 years ago. A common and outstanding example is the potato bug which did not become a serious pest until after the Civil War.

Some of the species of insects are germ-carriers, spreaders of disease. Others burrow into cattle and torture their victims. Still others make life miserable for us by their bites and stings, and an untold number live on valuable plants and crops.

The Indians used to say that the white man brought the weeds. It is equally true of the insects. The constant carrying of all kinds of animals and plants from one part of the world to another also brings the pests which afflict them. Thus the pests of one locality tend to become universal.

As an illustration of how "bugs" spread, it is interesting to know that in Australia blackberry bushes rapidly cover the land and drive out the farmers. What a paradise for the berry pickers! To combat these bushes scientists are trying to find insect pests that will destroy them. Yet in other parts of the world blackberries are a cultivated crop, and the helpful insects of Australia may in time, if imported, become the harmful pests of other lands. Thus, it is easy to see why the scientists are worried about the advancement of the great insect army, and are wondering if man is going to be able to hold them in check in the future.

Added to the danger is the fact that many of these "bugs" are physically better equipped to survive than is man himself. There are for instance insects that refuse to die after being exposed to deadly gas for several hours, which would snuff out the life of man in 30 seconds. As one of these scientists expressed it, "Our only hope lies in the fact that man has a brain and the insect does not."

When one begins to think of the problem, he sees the importance of the profession of entomology. These great scientists and their meetings and work are not spectacular. Their doings do not often find their way to the front pages of the newspapers. Nevertheless, there have been few more important gatherings in recent years than the recent meeting of the Congress of Entomologists at Ithaca, and one would travel a long way before he would find a world-wide gathering of men more devoted or necessary to the real welfare of mankind.—American Agriculturist.

Mr. Geo. R. Garrett (father of Mr. H. A. Garrett), who is 84 years of age, very kindly remembered the Children's Home with a nice box of apples.

The W. H. M. S. of the Union Grove Church, Orange Circuit, donated us two nice quilts.

For the continued loyalty of these good folks we are deeply appreciative.

We have completed one week of our school, which has started off nicely.

We are glad to report our large family enjoying good health at present.

E. F. ALLMAN, Superintendent.

—The South has planted more than 46 million acres to cotton, as against less than 42 million last year, but a late spring and a wet summer have puzzled the crop estimators. Given good luck the acreage planted might well produce 15 million bales, but weevil infestation is heavy in many sections, and the weather has stimulated propagation of the pest. Government estimates fix the carry-over for August 1st, the beginning of the crop year, at 2 1-2 million bales, as against 3,760,000 in 1927. Under the circumstances there seems little danger of an over-supply this year.

—Dr. Allman has resigned as superintendent of our Children's Home at High Point and Rev. A. G. Dixon has been elected as his successor. This is a very responsible position and we are glad to see it filled by one who will realize and meet the responsibilities of the position; but it does seem that Brother Dixon is needed in the pastorate. However, he will doubtless continue to preach. We wish him the best of success in this new position. We understand that Dr. Allman has accepted a business offer in Winston-Salem.

Woman's Missionary Department

TO MEMBERS OF THE FOREIGN MISSIONARY SOCIETIES

Ladies, I have not yet received the Life, Memorial and Perpetual certificates. I asked for them when I sent to Miss Rittel 19 names before our branch meeting, when she wrote me they were "out of print." However, since the branch meeting I have sent two names, Mrs. Prichard and Mrs. Teague; both of these are in the July Record, but none of the nineteen sent before. I wrote for certificates again when I saw in this Record they had been printed and I am writing again for them and hope to have them soon.

Trusting that you may not be over-anxious, I am yours in the Master's work.

MRS. SAMUEL R. HARRIS, Sec.

WASHING AN INTERNATIONAL ELEPHANT

More than a million American women rolled bandages and made surgical dressings during the Great War. Why not carry on for the lepers? The medical staff headquarters won't fuss at you if the bandages vary one-eighth of an inch from regulations, and you can feel, in the immortal language of a recent song-hit, that you are washing one of the largest elephants of all time.

The war may be over, but leprosy isn't, although the American Mission to Lepers is bending every effort to secure the world co-operation of governments, of scientists, and of all intelligent and considerate people to put an end to this age-old menace. While the wheels are turning to bring about these large results, the intimate needs of the destitute lepers in rescue stations in twenty countries must not be overlooked. One of the greatest of these needs is for bandages.

To stand by a doctor's side and watch the number of dressings required for even one patient makes one wonder just how a missionary doctor manages 12,000 miles from "Johnson and Johnson" and with insufficient funds to buy dressings locally, even if they could be obtained. Yet they do manage, and incipient cases of leprosy are being cured and the suffering of incurable cases is being eased, and the sound bodies of little children of lepers, who fortunately do not inherit leprosy, are being safeguarded in separate homes.

If these doctors, serving without special compensation and handicapped by lack of equipment and trained assistants, are willing to carry on, the women of America who pride themselves on leading in so many good causes will surely be willing to help them.

Strong bandage material for outer dressings can be washed and used again and again. Any firm cotton or linen cloth is suitable for this. Old sheets or table linen are excellent—cut into two-inch strips, rolled, and fastened with that great national instrument, the safety pin. Even the pin will be used. It will sparkle like a brooch while it holds together the edges of a shawl pinned across the pain-racked shoulders of some leper recipient of your generosity.

If you are willing to prepare a parcel of bandages or merchandise material, let the American Mission to Lepers send you the address of a medical missionary to whom you can ship direct by parcel post.

Write for a free circular, "Material Gifts for Lepers," to W. M. Danner, General Secretary the American Mission to Lepers, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York.

—Two intermingled paragraphs appeared in the Herald last week. The intermingling made nonsense of both. The error occurred in putting the type in place in the forms and was not noticed until after the paper was printed. Such mistakes will occur sometimes, but we hope they will not occur often. It is especially untimely when they appear in paragraphs meant to be complimentary.

Beggar (accosting stranger on street)—Pardon me, Mister; I haven't had anything to eat for three days. Won't you give me a dollar?

Stranger—If you are as bad off as you say you are, it seems to me that you would have asked for 25 cents. You would have been more likely to receive what you asked for.

Beggar—You can either give me a dollar or refuse to do it. You can't tell me how to manage my business.

"Don't you know the difference," said the smart young lawyer, "between a horse and a donkey?"

"Well, sir," replied the witness, "I should never take you for a horse."

AN EARNEST CALL TO PRAYER FOR A WORLD-WIDE REVIVAL

Whereas, the apostasy from Christ has been rapidly spreading all over the world, and

Whereas, there has also arisen a growing yearning in the hearts of many for a fresh heaven-born revival to visit this earth,

Therefore, as the result of the meetings of a Victorious Life Conference at Oakland, Cal., an International Prayer Council for World-Wide Revival has come into being. The objective of this Prayer Council is to organize both in America, as well as in many other countries, a large number of prayer groups, which will meet once a week, in church or home, for the special purpose of praying for a spirit "of repentance toward God and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ" (Acts 20:21.)

Christian people everywhere, who are like-minded with the initiators of this movement, are invited to co-operate with them in organizing such prayer groups, and informing the above mentioned Council of same by applying for membership in this Prayer Council for World-Wide Revival. In their application, the name and address of convenor of each prayer group can be given; also place and time of meeting. Two or more praying persons can constitute a group. Information to the prayer groups will be given from time to time through the Evangelical Press; or occasionally through special bulletins. The officers of the Council are: Dr. Arthur T. O'Rear, President; Rev. O. M. Temple, Vice-President; Mr. Ivan C. Frickstad, Secretary-Treasurer.

There are no membership fees, but donations towards the support of our traveling prayer organizing secretary and for the dissemination of revival messages will be gratefully received.

Address all inquiries, applications and correspondence to the president, Dr. Arthur T. O'Rear, 1559 Church Street, San Francisco, California.

THE MESSAGE OF HOPE

Alone, in a valley of sorrow and care,
The darkness fast falling around,
Crushed down by a burden too heavy to bear,
I trembled on uncertain ground.
Forsaken, it seemed, by the forces of Light,
Forsaken by Guide and by day;
O, how could I press on through unending night,
With no one to show me the way?

When, lo! from the distance of the voice of a man,
A voice of assurance and cheer,
Like fresh springing waters in dry desert land,
Gave hope to me, banished my fear.
"Fear not, I am with thee, O be not dismayed!"
His message rang out on the night.
"For I'll be thy Guide. I will still give thee aid!"
O wonders! a faint-gleaming light
Appeared in the east. Had the day broke so soon?
Or magic perchance could it be?
Or was it the beams of the new virgin moon
That glimmered so softly 'round me?

The stranger drew near and with outstretched hand,
Addressed me. "O, pilgrim," said he,
"You're lost! Let me point you to Canaan's fair land, Where darkness nor cares there shall be."
"E'en now I am trying to journey that way;
My burden is hindering me, though,
I've struggled to follow the path day by day,
But heavier my sorrow did grow."

Then answered the stranger—the light brighter grew—
"Your burden, my friend, is your cross;
The symbol of membership given to you
By Jesus who died on a cross.
Sing praise to the emblem that makes you as one
With Him whom you journey to see.
Sing praise; pray for strength. When your journey is done You'll wonder so light it could be."

The day broke in full as he pointed me back
To heights I had lost in my woe.
I praised now my burden; begged grace I did lack;
Prayed strength that I onward might go.
And, wonder of wonders, my burdens decrease,
My sorrow and cares roll away.
All praise to the King for His blessed release,
To His servant for pointing the way.

—NILA GARNETTE AMICK.

—Mrs. Bates has organized a battalion of one-cent-a-day money-givers to pay off Calvary's floating debt contracted in building. This bids fair to aggregate very appreciably in quickening the process of emerging from debt. If absolutely all our members will join in, the results will bring an agreeable surprise. In order to encourage those who can pay only a cent a day, those who can and do pay more might fittingly enter the company.

Taking the Sacrament Unworthily

Paul wrote that we may be condemned for taking the sacrament of the Lord's Supper unworthily. This statement of the apostle has caused some Christians to hesitate to go to the Lord's Table and has perhaps kept some from going. It has been taken to mean that those who feel unworthy of the sacrifice Jesus made for them in his death are disqualified for participation in the communion. But surely Paul did not mean that! What Christian does feel worthy of the offering Jesus made for him? Surely the meaning must be different from that. Paul himself explains what he means by eating and drinking unworthily when he says—"not discerning the Lord's body." The person who receives the bread and wine as he receives common food, without any thought of the death of Christ for him, is eating and drinking unworthily and will be condemned or rather is now condemned for the act. But the person that eats in remembrance of Jesus as his suffering Savior will not be condemned therefor but will receive a blessing.

If it be a sin to lose sight of the meaning of the sacrament when we are partaking of it, is it not much more a sin to lose out of our consciousness all thought of the atoning sacrifice of Jesus for the sins of the world? Should we not keep ourselves ever in the frame to sing:

"In the cross of Christ I glory,
Towering o'er the wrecks of time;
All the light of sacred story
Gathers round its head sublime."

West End Church's Gratifying Progress

West End Church, Greensboro, came last Sunday to the celebration of its eleventh anniversary and the formal opening of its new Sunday school building. An elaborate program for the day involved addresses or sermons by Prof. Jackson, of N. C. C. W., President S. W. Taylor, Revs. R. M. Andrews and N. G. Bethea and Bro. J. Norman Wills; the first two in the forenoon, the next two in the afternoon, and the last one at night. All services were well attended. A dinner was enjoyed at the noon hour on the church grounds.

A comparison of the present with the beginning 11 years ago abundantly justifies the effort that has been put forth and makes the pioneers in the movement glad that they had faith enough to go forward in the beginning. Three members of Grace church living in the west end of Greensboro united in a request to Rev. R. M. Andrews to be organized into a nucleus of a new church to hold the real estate (church lot) until the church was fully organized. These three men were Bros. C. F. Johnson, F. S. Stockard, and L. M. Foust. All remain to this day and all have been strong pillars in the church throughout its history. The church was duly organized in September, 1917, by Revs. R. M. Andrews and N. G. Bethea with 32 members. The number of members has grown to nearly 300. It has live organizations for mission work, Sunday school work, and other interests. We may not only speak of it as one of our coming churches, we may go further and say that it has already come.

Its roll of pastors bears the names of Rev. R. A. Hunter, Rev. N. M. Harrison, Rev. E. Lester Ballard, and the present pastor, Dr. J. D. Williams.

In an early issue of the HERALD we hope to present pictures of this church's buildings with those of a number of other churches.

Its members have come to the place where they may thank God and take courage. It will not always be easy going; there are burdens to carry, and there may be obstacles to surmount, but with faith in God and consecration to the work which Providence has committed to their hands, they may press forward and have the high pleasure of seeing the Lord's work prosper in their hands. So may it be.

Pastor Williams announced evangelistic services to run through this week.

Some of Uncle Sam's Findings

Our Federal Government has been taking a census of the churches of our country. Statistics ordinarily make dry reading, but Uncle Sam has succeeded in presenting his report in a fashion more entertaining than mere tables of figures. He took this census in 1916 and again in 1926, and his report makes a comparison of conditions at the two periods.

In 1916 he found 200 denominations in the United States. In 1926 he found 213. Some denominations went out of existence in this decade but enough came into existence to make a net increase of 13. Among the new ones we note the names: African Orthodox Church, African Orthodox Church of New York, Apostolic Over-Coming Holy Church of God, Independent Baptist Church of America, Church of Christ, Holiness, Congregational Holiness Church, Divine Science Church, Church of God (Apostolic), Free Church of God in Christ, Liberal Catholic Church, Reformed Methodist Church, Independent African Methodist Episcopal Church, National Spiritual Alliance of the United States of America, Universal Brotherhood and Theosophical Society, and others.

In addition to our own Methodist Protestant Church I find two others; the Colored Methodist Protestant Church and the African Union Methodist Protestant Church. The last named has 43 churches and 4,086 members.

Several denominations lost churches in the decade beginning 1916. The M. E. Church lost over three thousand churches. The M. E. Church, South, lost over one thousand churches. Our own denomination lost over two hundred

THE BUDGET BULLETIN

The Machinery of the Church

Most of us are interested in machinery. We like to see "the wheels go round," and to follow the processes of manufacture from the raw material to the finished product as it goes through the various machines.

Perhaps we have not thought of the church as a sort of a factory engaged in the business of taking certain raw materials, transforming them into a finished product, other and better than the raw material with which it started. When Jesus said, "Go ye into all the world and make disciples of all people," he was thinking of the raw material and of the finished product. He was thinking of the church as a factory.

In the production of this finished product, three things are necessary: the raw material, the machinery, and the power. If any one of the three is missing, there is no product.

It is not stretching the analogy too far to say that the raw material is the human element, the men and women, boys and girls, with which the church has to work. Some one says, "The Sunday school of today will be the church of tomorrow." That is just saying in another way that the boys and girls of our Sunday schools will be reached and won, trained and prepared, for the work of the church.

And here they are: in our colleges, in the Children's Home, in the mission schools, within reach of our mission churches. The raw material to be molded in Christian character as the church gets hold upon it.

But the machinery is also necessary. The Sunday school, the church, the Christian college, at home and abroad, and every other agency that is at work in the task of transforming character. All this is the machinery. Without it the raw material will remain raw material. I think this is why Jesus organized His church, and that later, other agencies arose within the church. "Make disciples," but it is hard to make disciples—which means learners—without organization, without machinery.

And we must have power. The raw material remains raw material, the machinery is useless, unless it can be made to run so the raw material through it can be turned into the finished product. And what is the power? Jesus says to those who are to act as the machinery in making disciples, "Tarry until ye be endued with power." For these leaders, for all the organizations and institutions of the church, the first requisite is the Holy Spirit. We have tried to run the church without power with as much success as a miller has who tries to run a mill without it. Yes, the Holy Spirit, first of all.

But something more is necessary, if that machinery is to run. That something is money. If you will read the Book of Acts carefully, and the Epistles, you will find that in the missionary journeys, and in all the work of the early church, there was great need of gifts to forward the enterprises of the church. True, Paul labored with his hands, but now and again he was helped by the churches he had established, helped to establish more churches. Call it if you will, Church Extension, Home Missions, Foreign Missions. What he was doing was all of that. Did the early church have educational institutions? Nothing is said about it in the New Testament; but if Paul, the Jew, sat at the feet of Gamaliel in Jerusalem, you may be pretty sure he saw to it that Christian teachers were training young men and young women to be preachers and deaconnesses. And the church supported the teachers as they taught. Funds were sent to the poor saints at Jerusalem. That is, in all the tasks of the early church money was needed and money was given. "So mightily grew the Word, and prevailed."

Now, what is true of the early church is true today. The raw material is all about. We have the machinery. Let's pray for power to run it. But not only the power of the Holy Spirit. But also the power that is in our money, your money and mine. To pray for the one, and not give the other, won't get us very far in the task. We are in a divine partnership. God will give the Holy Spirit. Let us give the money.

THE BUDGET COUNCIL.

CENSUS OF RELIGIOUS BODIES, 1926

Washington, D. C., September 28, 1928.—The Department of Commerce announces that, according to the returns received, there were in the United States in 1926, 213 religious bodies with 231,983 organizations and 54,624,976 members, as compared with 200 denominations reporting 226,718 organizations and 41,926,854 members in 1916. Comparative figures are shown in the following table for number of churches (or other local organizations) and members for the denominations for which data were collected in 1926 and 1916. As the term "members" has a variety of uses, each church was requested to report the number of members according to the definition of membership in that church or organization. In some religious bodies the term member is limited to communicants; in others it includes all baptized persons; and in still others it covers all enrolled persons.

The report for 1916 included statistics for 200 denominations, 19 of which are not shown at this census. Some have joined other denominations and their statistics are included with them, others are out of existence, etc. There are 32 denominations shown at this census not reported in 1916. All of them are not new, however, as a number were created by divisions in denominations which were shown as units in 1916.

At the census of 1926 the total expenditures were $814,-371,529, as compared with $328,809,999 in 1916. Under this item are included the amount expended for salaries, repairs, etc., for payments on church debt; for benevolences, including home and foreign missions, for denominational support, and for all other purposes.

The value of church edifices in 1926 was $3,842,577,133, as compared with $1,676,60,582 in 1916. This item includes any building used mainly for religious services, together with the land on which it stands and all furniture and furnishings owned by the church and actually used in connection with church services. It does not include buildings hired for religious services or those used for social or organization work in connection with the church.

All figures for 1926 are preliminary and subject to correction.—Department of Commerce, Washington.

—Dr. George R. Brown will conduct evangelistic services in our Reidsville church, of which he is pastor, next week. Rev. E. L. Ballard will lead in song. We hope they will have a good meeting.

Denominational Enterprises

A MESSAGE TO THE CHURCHES

Rev. J. C. Broomfield, D.D.

During the past ten years I have travelled quite extensively throughout our denomination. In my visitation of the annual conferences during the last three months I have covered much of the territory previously gone over. Hence I am in position to compare conditions in our church today with what they were ten years ago; and my conclusions give me great joy.

In the last three months I have visited, in the order named, in the North Carolina, Missouri, Onondaga, Illinois, Ohio, Michigan, Pittsburgh, West Virginia and Maryland Conferences. In all of these conferences, in the individual churches visited, and in the annual sessions, I found the same attitudes, and was forced to the same conclusions. Three of these conclusions I pass on to you.

First, I found everywhere a new and justified confidence in ourselves. This led me to seek its explanation, and my conviction is that this new confidence began in the Million Dollar Campaign, has been fostered in the Young People's Summer Conferences, was greatly strengthened in the Centennial Gratitude Gift Campaign, and was full-born in the great centennial celebration held in the Lyric theatre, Baltimore, Md., May 16 of this year. In that celebration, to me my church was reborn.

The second thing I am finding is a ready and willing acceptance of the challenge of our new task in this new century. The new slogan, "The New Century Service," is being caught up everywhere, and in harmony therewith we are quickening our pace.

In addition to the above, I find on all sides a refreshing spirit of optimism. No minor note is being sounded. The spirit of Christian daring, so frequently manifested during the sessions of the recent General Conference, seems to be sweeping over the church.

I confess to great joy in the present, and large hopes for the future. Naturally, as president of the General Conference, I have ambitions for the coming quadrennium; three of these I desire to share with you.

My first ambition is that during this quadrennium all our people shall be increasingly good, that they shall grow in grace, so that four years hence, if spared, we shall all be better Christians than we are today. O, for an enrichment of our spiritual life!

My second ambition is for the conversion of a multitude of folks. In making this confession I am discriminating between joining the church and being born again. It is saved folks we want.

My third ambition is for a marked increase in the financial response of our people to the appeal of our denominational program.

If my ambitions are to be realized, we must have sane, sympathetic, united denomination-wide prayer. We must advance on our knees. We must have a pronounced revival of the sense of personal responsibility for the success of our program. No "Let George do it," but "God and me; He and we."

I am asking folks everywhere to draw a circle, real or imaginary, around their feet, and then to say to themselves and to God: "God needs me, my church needs me, the world needs me; and to meet these needs, God and my church, and the world, can have all that is inside the circle—all my body, all my mind, all my spirit, and all my possessions." Such a circle will then become your Victory Circle; and with two hundred thousand Victory Circles, who is there that can estimate our progress, or our contribution to the Kingdom, in this quadrennium?

THE NEW CENTURY SERVICE AND RALLY DAY

By the action of the denominational Executive Committee and the Budget Council, Rev. J. H. Straughn, D.D., Promotional Executive Secretary and Treasurer, has adopted the slogan, "New Century Service," a term which covers all the work the denomination is attempting by the direction of the General Conference. This covers the causes formerly included in the General Conference budget and is now stated in terms of Missions, Christian Education, and Benevolences. The entire Home and Foreign missionary enterprise is administered by the Board of Missions. The cause of Christian Education is administered and promoted by the two departments of the Board of Christian Education. The interests covered by the term "Benevolences," such as the Home for the Aged, the Children's Home, and the Superannuated Fund, are cared for by special Boards without the services of full-time secretaries. The denominational administrative expenses are provided for through the "contingent fund," one per cent of the "New Century Service" being set apart for this purpose. One per cent goes also to the American Bible Society.

Rally Day is the first special opportunity our people have to express their interest in the "New Century Service." It is the one opportunity during the year when the Department of Educational Institutions of the Board of Christian Education has of stating its case, of appealing for the consideration and financial support of our people.

The increased support given the Board of Education during the last quadrennium as compared with the preceding four years was most gratifying. From 1920-1924 the Rally Day offerings averaged $7,117, and during 1924-1928 they averaged $15,787, an average annual increase of $8,660, and a net increase of $34,681. That accounts for all but $8,826 of the increased resources of the Board.

The growth of our work makes our needs more urgent than ever. The enrollment of our colleges and seminary increased 57 per cent during the last four years. We are helping more students and on a more generous basis than ever before. The number of Leadership Training Conferences held each summer has increased from year to year. By the action of the last General Conference the Board was instructed to make more generous terms with our ministerial candidates which will reduce the amount of return payments for loans made. Our usual resources did not warrant this but the inducements being offered our students by other schools compelled it.

The importance of increasing the offerings received on Rally Day is evident. The future growth and usefulness of the Methodist Protestant Church depends very largely upon the support given Rally Day. If you have not ordered your supplies, do so at once. They are free for the asking. They can be secured from either the Pittsburgh or Baltimore headquarters. Your support is imperative if our service is to increase.

THE BOOK OF BOOKS

Born in the East and clothed in Oriental imagery, the Bible walks the ways of all the world with familiar feet and enters land after land to find its own everywhere. It has learned to speak in hundreds of languages to the heart of man. It comes into the palace to tell the monarch that he is a servant of the Most High and into the cottage to assure the peasant that he is a son of God. Children listen to its stories with wonder and delight, and wise men ponder them as parables of life. It has a word of peace for the time of peril, a word of comfort for the time of calamity, a word of light for the hour of darkness. Its oracles are repeated in the assembly of the people, and its counsels whispered in the ear of the lonely. The wicked and the proud tremble at its warnings, but to the wounded and the penitent it has a mother's voice. The wilderness and the solitary place have been made glad by it, and the fire on the hearth has lit the reading of its well-worn pages. It has woven itself into our dearest dreams; so that love, friendship, sympathy and devotion, memory and hope, put on the beautiful garments of its treasured speech, breathing of frankincense and myrrh. —Selected.

A PERSONAL QUESTION

Were the whole world as good as you
—not an atom better—
Just as pure and true as you,
Just as strong in faith and works,
Just as free from crafty quirks,
All extortion, all deceit,
Schemes its neighbor to defeat.
Schemes its neighbor to defraud,
Schemes some culprit to applaud—
Would this world be better?

If this world would but followed you —followed to the letter—
Would it be a nobler world,
All deceit and falsehood hurled
From it altogether?
Malice, selfishness and lust
Banished from beneath the crust,
Covering human hearts from view—
Tell me, if it followed you,
Would this world be better?
—The Messenger, First Baptist, Houston.

THE WORST BLINDNESS

"The pure in heart shall see God. That is the very actual fact. And the impure cannot see Him. What an awful thought: to be blind, while we apprehend no danger. Where may we not be going, what horror, what pitfall may we not be near? What end may we not be reaching? Even eternal loss, and yet feeling not, seeing not."—Selected.

"THE THINGS UNSEEN"

At the end of their first week in business the owners of a little shop lowered the curtains of their windows and went home.

On each succeeding Saturday night the curtains were pulled down and kept down until Monday morning.

As the little shop grew the suggestion came from many sources that the curtains should stay up. "The windows are beautiful," people said, "let us walk by and look."

The owners had an old-fashioned background. They had been taught in childhood that six days are enough for the things that are seen. The first day of the week, they said, is for the things unseen—rest and worship, and family life, and freedom from thoughts of business.

Seventy-five years have passed. The store has grown until its windows are said to be more valuable than any windows in the world. But the example of the founders remains and all day Sunday the shades are down.

Strong churches and strong homes build strong cities. All the great words of business—service and courtesy and kindliness and truth—have their inspiration in religion. And prosperity is only permanent where there is reverence and mutual trust and faith.

It pays. —Selected.

WHY CHRIST'S YOKE IS EASY

Mark Guy Pearse gives an incident occurring in connection with a sermon of his on Christ's invitation to the weary and heavy laden. I had finished my sermon when a good man came to me and said: "I wish I had known what you were going to preach about. I could have told you something." "Well, my friend," I said, "may I have it still?" "Do you know why His yoke is light, sir?" "Well, because the good Lord helps us to carry it, I suppose." "No, sir," said he, shaking his head, "I think I know better than that. You see, when I was a boy at home I used to drive the oxen, and the yoke was never made to balance, as you said. Father's yokes were always made heavier on one side than the other. Then, you see, we would put a weak bullock in alongside of a strong bullock; the light end would come on the weak ox, the heavier end on the stronger one. That's why the yoke is easy and the burden is light, because the Lord's yoke is made after the same pattern, and the heavy end is upon His shoulder."—Selected.

SOME BENEFITS OF RELIGION

A religion which teaches personal responsibility to God gives strength to morality. There is a powerful restraining influence in the belief that an all-seeing eye scrutinizes every thought and word and act of the individual.

There is a wide difference between the man who is trying to conform his life to a standard of morality about him and the man who seeks to make his life approximate to a divine standard. The former attempts to live up to the standard, if it is above him, and down to it, if it is below him—and if he is doing right only when others are looking, he is sure to find a time when he thinks he is unobserved, and then he takes a vacation and falls. One needs the inner strength which comes with the conscious presence of a personal God. If those who are thus fortified sometimes yield to temptation, how helpless and hopeless must those be who rely upon their own strength alone!—William J. Bryan.

OPTIMISM | The President's Letter | EVANGELISM

SLOGAN

for the Closing Quarter

No Charge Without an Honor Roll Church

The reports that are coming in on budget receipt prospects are encouraging. Despite the fact that this has seemed to be a year of much difficulty in raising money, the prospects now are that we will come up well in the end. Why not? It is the Lord's work that we are doing, and it can't be done without money. Why not believe, then, that He will help us, and that He is helping us raise the budgets.

In that faith, brethren, determine to make this slogan real.

Again

The Rally Day! If you have not ordered the program, please do so at once, and observe this special day, as ordered by the General Conference. By doing this you will boost the interest in general of the local church, raise something on the G. C. B., and give encouragement to the work that the Board of Christian Education is doing. The more we raise through this offering, the more the Board can do for our schools. By observing this Rally Day we are helping High Point College.

Definite Amounts

If pastors will work out for each church the definite amount for each budget interest, and present it to the churches in this way, it is our opinion that good results will follow. We recommend, also, that each steward be supplied with such a statement. Only a little work will be required to do this, and we are sure it will pay. Try it, Bro. Pastor, and church officials. Set your people to work toward these definite goals, and see if it doesn't pay—if they don't pay.

Salaries

We are approaching "Pay Day" now, for many of our pastors. It is altogether probable that half the amount promised pastors for the year is yet unpaid, with only 40 days of the conference year remaining. This, of course, will be paid, every dollar of it we trust. Bro. Layman, please let us beseech you to see to it that every dollar promised your pastor is paid before he goes to conference. According to the Journal, a few charges—16, to be exact—failed to pay up last year. Several charges overpaid—15 in all. And the overpay on these charges will, we believe, more than balance what was not paid on the other charges. But this did not help the underpaid pastor, for he did not get this overplus. This is a case where "every tub must stand on its own bottom." Please, every charge, send your pastor to conference with every cent of his salary paid.

Special Herald Number

Quite a while ago we announced our purpose to run this number by the consent of the obliging editor, and asked through HERALD, and by personal letter, for pictures of new churches and parsonages, and repaired churches and parsonages. To date we have received three replies only. Perhaps more difficulty is experienced in getting these pictures than we anticipated. And, too, we know that pastors have many matters to which they are expected to give attention. So we are not complaining. However, we believe that this number would prove interesting and pleasing, and we have been and are still anxious to run it. If pictures can't be furnished, we may be able to carry out our purpose somewhat by a brief statement of what has been done at each place. We, of course, prefer the picture, if we could get it; but if not, please let us have the brief sketch without it. Thank you.

West End

Sept. 23, Sunday. It was our privilege and pleasure on this date to worship with this church morning and afternoon in their eleventh anniversary program, and the public opening of their new Sunday school building. We preached at the 11 o'clock hour, and also attended the afternoon service, at which time Bros. Andrews and Bethea were the speakers. We noted four other ministers at this service—Editor McCulloch, Bro. T. F. McCulloch, Bro. Bates and Bro. Ballard.

The weather was favorable, and we trust that the results of the day were in keeping with the full expectations of pastor and people. The offering will be used in completing the Sunday school building, a small part of which is unfinished.

The growth of this church has been gratifying. They began eleven years ago with only a few members. Now they have 300. We doubt if any other church in the conference excels that growth. Their Sunday school building is well arranged and constructed, and will prove highly facilitating to their work. We heartily congratulate them upon this achievement, and upon their progress during this first decade of their existence. Bro. Williams is popular with his people, and under his leadership the work is going forward. Despite their heavy local obligations, this church will be on the conference honor roll. Revival services will follow this week. We shall hope and pray for good results.

Mt. Pleasant

This is Mt. Pleasant church, on Mt. Pleasant charge. We were here for the service Sunday night, and had the pleasure of preaching to a large congregation, and then presenting the conference interests. We were pleased to see old friends in the congregation that we have known for years, and that we highly esteem.

This is one of our strongest, most flourishing, and most influential rural churches. The membership is large, active, and loyal. This church will be on several of the conference honor rolls. We should be delighted to see the entire charge an Honor Roll charge. How say you, Mt. Pleasant charge?

Pastor Millaway is popular with his people, as is evidenced by his long pastorate; he is closing his sixth consecutive year on this charge. His faithful labors have been owned of God and blessed to the edifying of the people. We trust that this year may be one of his happiest and best. Our visit to this church did us good.

Passing

These last weeks. And "there is much land yet to be taken." Let every pastor, every church official, every member work and pray—pray and work—that there shall be no lacking when the last day comes. We want a good report, that the balance may be right for this year; and we want the encouragement of such report for the new year that lies ahead. A "God bless you," brethren, for these closing weeks.

churches. All these denominations increased in total membership. The loss of churches is to be explained in large measure by the consolidation of churches. Probably a few churches have died from lack of support.

The Roman Catholic Church reports an increase in number of members and also in number of churches. This is by far the largest church in our country.

The Primitive Baptists report an increase both in number of members and in number of churches.

Uncle Sam has done an appreciated service in gathering and publishing this information regarding the churches.

LIVING WITH CHRIST

"Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, the truth and the life. No man cometh unto the Father but by me."

When a soul receives Christ he receives power to live the life of Christ. Christ in His humanity wrought out a perfect character and this character He offered to impart to us. When on earth He said to His disciples, "I have kept my Father's commandments." If we look to Christ we shall be clothed with the garment of His righteousness. It is in this life that we are to put on the robe of Christ's righteousness.

All men have been bought by the price of Christ's blood. We are not our own, we have been bought with a price. "Not with corruptible things as silver and gold, but with the precious blood of Christ," "that they which live should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto Him which died for them and rose again." The entire Bible is crimson with the story of the blood. From the offering of Abel, recorded in Genesis, to the song of the redeemed, recorded in Revelation, the blood is conspicuously present. "Without shedding of blood there is no remission of sin."

We must all take Jesus as our Saviour. There is no other way but His way. The way to heaven is by Christ's blood.

"Lord Jesus, I have promised to serve Thee to the end,
Be thou forever near me, my Master and my Friend,
I shall not fear the battle if Thou art by my side,
Nor wander from the pathway, if Thou wilt be my guide.

"O, Jesus, Thou hast promised to all who follow Thee
That where Thou art in glory, there shall thy servant be,
And, Jesus, I have promised to serve Thee to the end;
Oh, give me grace to follow my Master and my Friend."

Christ said, "I am the Light of the world." Faith in Jesus Christ has grown as the world has advanced in knowledge. If the teachings of Christ were followed, our problems would all be solved, we should reach the ideal of human life. No one with the life of Christ before him can cease to have faith in his fellowman or himself. It is our faith in human life which gives us power. Jesus Christ with His eyes open to all weakness gives us a faith and hope in human life that nothing can destroy.

There is no substitute for the Gospel of Salvation through Jesus Christ. No man can be saved by any other method than faith in Jesus Christ.

The life of Christ has shown what humanity can do by being partakers of the divine nature. All that Christ received from God we too may have. For are we not children, "heirs of God, and joint heirs with Jesus Christ?" We should let the glorious conception of God possess our minds and let our lives be knit by hidden links to the life of Christ.

"I have a friend so precious,
So very dear to me,
He loves me with such tender love,
He loves me faithfully.
I could not live apart from Him,
I love to feel Him nigh,
And so we dwell together,
My Lord and I.

"Sometimes I'm faint and weary,
He knows that I am weak,
And as He bids me lean on Him,
His help I gladly seek.
He leads me in the paths of light
Beneath a sunny sky,
And so we walk together,
My Lord and I.

"I tell Him all my sorrows,
I tell Him all my joys,
I tell Him all that pleases me,
I tell Him what annoys.
He tells me what I ought to do,
He tells me what to try,
And so we walk together,
My Lord and I."

LITTLE SINS

Be fearful of little sins. Take alarm at even an evil thought, wish, desire. These are the germs of sin—the floating seeds which drop into the heart, and finding in our natural corruption a fat and favorable soil, spring up into actual transgressions. These, like the rattle of the snake, the hiss of the serpent, reveal the presence and neighborhood of danger. The experience of all good men proves that sin is most easily crushed in the bud, and that it is safer to flee from temptation than to fight it.—Rev. Thomas Guthrie, D.D.

OUR STORY PAGE

BOBBY'S SISTER

Bobby Thatcher took his tennis racquet, his bathing suit, his canoe paddle and a good big lunch and started out for a day's outing at the picnic grounds and bathing beach. At the gate he met his sister Mildred.

"May I go?" she asked, wistfully. Secretly she admired her brother because he could swim, canoe and play tennis so well.

"Really, Mildred," pleaded Bobby. "I'd like to have you go, but gosh—it's awful doing things with girls."

"I can play tennis," said Mildred. "Honestly I can."

"Maybe you can swing a racquet and hit the ball once in a while," replied her brother with a laugh. "But I don't think you can play tennis the way a boy likes to play it. Besides, I'm going to be canoeing most of the day."

"Well," informed Mildred. "I can paddle, too. You weren't with me last summer when I went down the rapids with that Indian guide, were you?"

"No, but I bet the guide did all the work."

"No, Bobby, really he didn't. And if you're going swimming, I can do that too. You ought to see me!"

"You'd lie on the beach a lot like most girls," said Bobby, "but I doubt whether you would do much real swimming. You'd be afraid to go out to the raft, anyway, and that's where I always go. No, Milly, excuse me this time. Why don't you ask your girl friend in the next house to go with you?"

"She doesn't play tennis, she can't swim, and I don't believe she's been in a canoe in her life," replied Milly, dispirited. "But go ahead, Bobby. I won't spoil your fun. I hope you have a good time."

Bobby really hated to disappoint his sister, but this was his first day at the lake and he wanted it to be good. Girls had to be pampered, and they were awfully slow and scary about things, especially canoes. Besides, Billy Davol would be waiting for him at the boathouse, and Billy was a fellow who could do anything, and do it well.

" 'Lo, Bill," greeted Bob, a half-hour later. "What'll we do first?"

"We'll play tennis," was the eager answer. "After that we'll go in for a plunge. Then we'll have lunch, and after we've rested a while we'll go canoeing until late in the afternoon, and finally we'll top the whole day off by another swim, this time a real good one."

"That'll be great!"

The chums put on their sneakers and applied for a permit to play tennis. Each boy won one set, and the third set was a tie for twelve games apiece, finally broken by Bobby, who won by the narrowest margin possible.

After these three strenuous contests, they sat on the grassy bank for a rest, and while the two boys were sitting there, they noticed quite a crowd of people watching a boy and girl playing singles on a court some distance away. Bobby couldn't see who the players were, but the girl was dressed in red, and she was a fiery streak at tennis if there ever was one.

The fellow she was playing against didn't pamper her any either. Whenever a ball went out of the court, if it happened to be on her side, she chased after it. Whenever her partner got a chance, he drove the ball straight at her as hard as he could, but she always caught it fairly on her racquet and sent it back where he couldn't get it.

"I believe she's beating him!" said Billy, excitedly. "For a girl, she sure can play tennis!"

"I'll bet she's a stranger," replied Bob. "No girl from our town plays as good as she does."

And with those tributes to the unknown girl, both boys rose to their feet and went to the bathing pavilion.

"Gosh!" said Bob, as they came out ready for their swim. "Look at how rough the water is! I don't believe I care to swim out to the raft today."

"Nor me, either," replied Billy. "I think I could make it, though," he added.

"Oh—I could make it all right," answered Bobby, hastily. But as he looked at the waves that he would have to swim against, he was a little doubtful of his ability to do what he said he could.

A half-hour later he was more than surprised to hear Billy cry out:

"Look, Bob! There's a girl swimming out to the raft against those big waves! And I believe she is going out alone!"

The two chums had dressed by that time and were eating their lunch on the boathouse porch. They couldn't see who the girl was, but they knew by the speed she was making that she was a good swimmer. With strong, overhand strokes, she fought her way out to the raft, climbed aboard and waved delightedly to the people on shore. She stayed there just long enough for Bobby to see that she had on a green bathing suit; then she plunged again into the water and set out for the beach.

"I didn't know girls could swim that way!" gasped Billy.

"They can't, as a rule," answered Bob. "She's an exception."

That afternoon, instead of remaining near the clubhouse for the canoe and boat races, the boys took a long trip down the lake to the boys' camp, returning just before dark. They did not have time to take the long swim that they had planned to take, so they just plunged in to cool off, coming right out again. As they went up the road toward home, a friend of Billy's caught up with them and told how a girl had won the canoe race that afternoon.

"She was a wonder," he said. "Handled her paddle better than most fellows can handle one, and she was as steady as an Indian. She won the cup without any trouble at all."

Bobby walked the rest of the way home in silence. When he got to the house he saw a green bathing suit hanging out to dry on the clothes line. On the table in the living-room there was a silver loving cup with two handles.

"What's the cup for, mother?" he sang out.

"Canoe race, first prize," answered Mrs. Thatcher.

"Whose green bathing suit on the line, mother?" was his next question.

"Mildred's."

Bobby's eyes opened wide in surprise and amazement. Then he asked another question.

"Has Milly got a red dress, mother?"

"She has, Bobby. It is a new one that I bought her especially for the tennis courts. Is there any particular reason for asking?"

"You bet there is, mother! Here I've been thinking all along that Milly was just like other girls, but I found out today that she's the best tennis player, the best swimmer and the best canoe paddler at the resort. Where is Mildred now?"

"Out in the yard playing with the kittens, I believe."

Bobby went as far as the door.

"Oh—Milly! Milly!"

"Yes, Bob."

"Tomorrow morning. Don't forget—you and I—play tennis, swim, go paddling. All right?"

"Oh, Bobby, I'll be delighted. You're a great brother."

"And you're some sister!" replied Bobby, proudly, wondering why he had been so blind as not to see it before.—Selected.

VIOLETS OR BEER?

The old man sniffed the fragrant blossoms appreciatively. "A little bit of heaven," the poor flower-woman had called them. How true!

"Hallo, hallo! and wot are we doin' with our bookays, eh? We wouldn't like to give a poor pal a few flowers, wot hasn't got no garden, I suppose?"

Jim Burch lurched up and tried to snatch, but the old man was too quick for him.

"Be careful, Jim; they're for my old gel's grave. Vi'lets was her favorites, and they're dear yet."

"How much?"

"Thrippence a bunch."

The other shrugged significantly.

"I should want a few drinks for that."

"You'd be all the better without 'em, mate. How's little Kit?"

Jim's face darkened.

"No better; it's cruel wot the kiddie suffers. I'm obliged to 'ave an extra pint at times to keep from thinkin' about 'er."

"Why not buy her a bunch o' these?"—touching the blossoms tenderly. "A whiff o' their scent in her room would be more refreshing than the smell o' beer."

Jim flushed angrily at the old man's words and murmured something about it being very 'ard for some people to mind their own business, 'specially since they had turned pious.

The moment the words had passed his lips he regretted them. Dear old John Keen, what a heartbroken look he gave him. He tried to forget it, and, a few minutes later, slouched off to the public-house.

The rush of noxious fumes that met him on pushing open the bar door brought back the old man's words very forcibly. Did he really take that ghastly smell home with him every day? Poor little Kit!

Something seemed to draw him back, and the next moment he was in the street again.

"Vi'lets, sweet vi'lets! Thrippence a bunch."

The poor flower-seller's voice was weak and cracked, yet there was something rather sweet about that, too; and, setting his lips, he strode over to where she was standing and recklessly demanded four bunches. A shilling! He supposed he was going crazy.

The house was very quiet when he reached home, for his wife was out charring and the children were still at school. So much the better! He went in quietly and opened the door of a black room where eleven-year-old Kit had lain suffering for two years with spinal complaint. Her worn little face lighted up at the sight of the flowers.

"O-oh, daddie! How l-lovely!"

"They're for you, Kit," he said, flushing like a schoolboy. "I thought maybe they'd cheer you up."

She gave a little scream of delight.

"For me? O-oh!"

She began kissing the dainty little bunches rapturously, and her father felt a queer sensation in his throat. He bent over the suffering mite, and tenderly touched her curly hair.

"Sit by me," she pleaded.

He placed a chair by the bed, sat down, and she stroked his hand very gently.

"Daddie," she began shyly, "you haven't been to the 'Blue Anchor' on your way home."

He started.

"How do you know, Kit?"

She fondled his hand again and laid it against her cheek.

"Don't mind me saying it," she whispered, "but I can tell by the smell. Last night, after you came in to kiss me goodnight I had a dreadful turn of sickness. It has happened often lately. Mother can't think what causes it, and, of course, I've never told her. I wouldn't for anything, daddie," she added loyally.

Jim's eyes suddenly smarted, and he sniffed suspiciously. Muttering something about having a wash, he left Kit's bedside.

A few days later he met John Keen again, and held out a friendly hand. The old man looked his surprise.

"I was rude to you the other afternoon, John, and I'm sorry," said Jim.

"I don't remember anything about it, mate."

"Thanks! I—I bought the violets for my little Kit."

"Instead o' beer?"

"Yes."

The old man shook Jim's hand again. "Good! It won't be the last time, Jim?"

"No; I'm going to try for the kid's sake. She's that braced as never was."

Old John wrinkled his nose and smiled.

"Maybe 'twouldn't be a bad idea if I offered another suggestion," he added whimsically.

"Go ahead, then."

"What about going with me o' Sunday night to Speer Hall? The singin's something lovely."

Jim looked at him affectionately.

"You artful old fellow!" he grinned. "Well, I ain't sure but what it is a good suggestion, and I've had a mind to."—British Weekly.

DEATH INESCAPABLE

"There is one angel with whom we must wrestle, whether we will or no, and whose power of curse or blessing we cannot alter—even the Angel of Death. We know not when he cometh, but as surely as the leaves of the forest which last spring you saw so young and green in the rain and the golden sunshine are now fading and falling around us, and being trodden down into the dishonored dust—so surely the generations of men are passing, so surely shall each of us be carried among mourners to our last home, outstretched in the cold fixity of death."—Selected.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

By F. L. Gibbs

Young People's Christian Endeavor Topic for September 30: "Goals for Our Society." Gal. 5:22-26; 6:10.

Vitagraph

"The straw hat season is over
The vacation days, they ain't;
Our Christian Endeavor Societies need
A brand-new coat of paint."

Suggested Program

Prelude, played quietly while members are taking their places.

Call to worship; read some appropriate responsive selection from M. P. Hymnal.

Song, "A Charge to Keep I Have."

Prayer, by chairman lookout committee, ending with Lord's Prayer.

Leader's talk, (President), "Worth-while Goals for Our Society."

Song, "I'll Go Where You Want Me to Go."

Two minute talks by members of the various committees: "What Our Committee Is Planning to Do to Make Our Society More Efficient."

Hymn, "The Fight Is On," or "To the Work, to the Work!"

Discussion, generally.

Motto: In unison, "One group of heroic hearts, are we. Strong in will, to strive; to seek; to find; and to conquor, but not to yield!"

Announcements.

Benediction.

Suggested Activities

(a) Business Meetings and Socials. Any Christian Endeavor Society will remain in the vacation rut if it fails to have a regular monthly business meeting and social. Here is opportunity for the president and social committee chairman to get their heads together.

(b) Reading. The long winter evenings furnish much time for reading. Have your society join the "circulating library" of the Board of Christian Education of the M. P. Church, Durham, N. C. The price of joining for a life-time is only $1.00. From this source the latest helps on C. E. and S. S. work can be secured for the payment of return postage on materials. Another one: Join our group of readers and take a reading course, or, better yet, take a course in leadership training via correspondence. Another one: Secure free helps on C. E. topics from International Society of Christian Endeavor, 41 Mt. Vernon street, Boston, Mass. (E. P. Gates, general secretary). Provide a literature table for your society. See that your society members have access to the M. P. Herald, the Methodist Protestant, the Methodist Recorder and Christian Endeavor World. Here is activity for you, Mr. Good Literature Committee.

(c) Methodist Protestant Life Service Leaguers. Hundreds signed the M. P. Life Service League Covenant this summer, giving their lives in part-time and all-time religious work; 40 part-timers and 10 all-timers joined the ranks of others in N. C. this last July at the Leadership Training School at High Point College. May we be faithful to our covenant and secure others to the ranks. This is a worthy task for any society.

(d) Start a Leadership Training Fund. There is no greater need in the church today than more efficient leaders consecrated to the Kingdom's work. Start a fund now to send members of your society to our "Winter Leadership Training Schools that will be promoted in your vicinity this winter," or to send a large group to High Point School next summer." (Asheville is already planning to send a large delegation down, so the writer was informed last night). The time will soon come! "O, wind! if winter comes, can spring be far behind?"

(e) Annual Conference One Month Away. Co-operate with your pastor and church in an effort to place your church upon the "Honor Roll" at Conference, by raising all claims in full. Here is work for your finance committee!

(f) Other Suggestions: Secure new members for the "Quiet Hour," "Tenth Legion," and conduct "A constructive membership campaign for your society." Secure a "Crusade With Christ" chart from C. E. headquarters and put your society to work upon it. Visit the sick and shut-ins. Form a Pastor's Aid Committee. Plan proper recreation for the society, such as socials, hikes, weinie roasts, etc. Conduct a "Go to Church Campaign," etc.

Notice to Church Workers

If you want a C. E. Society organized in your church, get in touch with Rev. Elwood Carroll, Burlington, N. C., Route 8. He and his workers will be glad to serve you.

N. B.: Watch this page of the Herald for C. E. helps each week. Any suggestions are appreciated.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

October 7: Paul in Ephesus

Scripture basis: Acts 19:1-41; Eph. 4:1-16.

Golden text: We are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus for good works, which God afore prepared that we should walk in them. Eph. 2:10.

Dedication

From Corinth Paul sailed across the Aegean Sea to the important city of Ephesus. "It was the most important city in the Roman province of Asia, which included the western part of Asia Minor; and among cities in that part of the world it ranked with Antioch and Alexandria."

Here Paul found 12 disciples of John the Baptist, who evidently were void of the spiritual power so dominant in the early Christians. Upon inquiry he learned that they were ignorant of the indwelling of the Holy Spirit. Laying his hands upon them, the Spirit entered their souls and demonstrated his power. They were dedicated to the Christ who died for them.

Dissertation

For three months the Apostle to the Gentiles diligently spoke to the assemblies on things pertaining to the kingdom. As usual, some believed and others' hearts were hardened. Paul wasted no time on them, but "separated the disciples, disputing daily in the school of one Tyrannus," who may have been a Jewish rabbi or a Greek rhetorician. The latter is the common opinion. The gospel was preached in this school, or lecture hall, for two years, and many Jews and Greeks heard the convincing dissertations.

Demonstration

In two ways the Spirit's power was demonstrated: (1) "God wrought special miracles by the hands of Paul." Handkerchiefs which had touched his body were carried to the sick and demon-possessed, and they were healed. Observe that they were "special miracles," and performed in the days of the early apostles. How absurd it is for men of this dispensation to claim any such powers with God and man!

(2) When the sons of Sceva, a Jew, not having the personal experience of salvation through Christ, endeavored to cast out demons in the name of "Jesus whom Paul preacheth," the evil spirit of one man leaped upon them and drove them from the house naked and wounded. Evil spirits knew Christ and His power, and also knew those who were his.

Destruction

Observing the power demonstrated by the Holy Spirit, the people feared, many believed, others brought the books of magic which they had been reading and believing to a common place and burned them, the value of the books destroyed being "fifty thousand pieces of silver," $7,500 or $8,000. "So mightily grew the word of God and prevailed."

Demetrius

In general, humanity has been similar throughout the ages. Today, as of Paul's day, a man will raise a howl when his purse is disturbed, when his income is reduced, even though his business or practice be for the detriment of his fellowman. So with the silversmith, Demetrius. He made his living manufacturing small shrines of the goddess of the city to sell to visiting pilgrims. Acceptance of Christ meant the destruction of idolatry in any form; hence his business began to fall off.

Dissension

Discovering this, Demetrius consulted with others of his trade and induced them to join him in an uproar. He appealed to them, not only from a business standpoint, but from the standpoint of religion as well. The slogan of the contenders was "Great is Diana of the Ephesians!"

Rushing hither and thither over the city, they aroused men and women who followed them to discover the meaning of it all. Into a public place the came, rushing two men of Macedonia, who had come from there with Paul, into the theater. Paul would have entered himself, but his friends constrained him. Many of the people knew not what it was all about; "some cried one thing and some another." What a tumult!

Deliverance

Humanly speaking, it seems a pity that the names of some obscure persons who performed noble deeds are not recorded in the Sacred Writ. But because they are not, encouragement is lent to us who are trying to le faithful in our regular duties to our Lord. It was the town clerk who succeeded in quieting the mob, after going their attention and reasoning with them. It appears that he must have made them ashamed of themselves, for with apparently little difficulty, the crowd was dismissed after he finished his speech. God's hand was in the deliverance, for he had other work for Paul yet to do.

Mount Pleasant charge goes on the A. C. B. honor roll this week; so does Union Grove church, Orange charge. Bethel church, Alamance charge, goes on Superannuate honor roll; and Connelly Springs charge goes on the College honor roll. We congratulate them, and gladly give to them their places of honor. "May their tribe increase."

Nine reports are made on A. C. B.; four on G. C. B.; and two on College. It is our purpose to run a full report next week of all payments to date, including the amounts paid through missionary societies. We shall try to have this report absolutely correct in every item. If we fail in this we shall be glad to have our errors indicated so they may be corrected.

From now until Conference many remittances will pay "in full." Please do not fail to indicate that in making report to Treasurer Idol. Otherwise proper credits may not be given.

Several pastors have not yet returned budget questionnaire sent out by the Budget Council. Please let us urge that this be done AT ONCE. If we can get it now, it will be of much value to us. Much delay, however, will defeat our purpose.

We are counting on every charge for the most liberal response possible during the closing weeks, and we are praying that God's rich blessings may attend every effort to meet these financial obligations.

Fraternally,
S. W. TAYLOR.

—One hundred and twenty people lost their lives in a theater fire in Madrid, Spain, last Sunday night. Better would it have been for them if they had attended church that night.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Bethel, Alamance Charge.—It has been a long time since Bethel reported. For quite awhile the reporter was away, then sickness of herself and members of her family prevented her attending church, and 'tis hard to report what we do not know. However, we do know that our pastor, Rev. J. A. Burgess, has been doing good faithful work among us. We are liking him better every day and are hoping to have him remain with us another year. He filled his appointment last Sunday and, as he always does, gave us a good sermon. We had the pleasude of entertaining him and his wife in our home for a short time. Our special meeting was held in August. Bro. B. M. Williams was with us. We enjoyed having him. His sermons were good and soul-stirring. We trust much lasting good was done and our church revived.

Our Sunday school has been progressing nicely with Bro. Lon McPherson superintendent. Our Mothers' class was pleasantly entertained in the home of our teacher, Mrs. Lon McPherson, recently. The class was divided and each side worked for attendance and lesson study. The losing side entertained the other. Our hostess had everything nicely planned. We enjoyed it much and left feeling anew the Christian ties that bind the class together.

Miss Marcia Foust and Miss Bessie Holmes also recently entertained their classes, the Junior and Intermediate, at the home of Mrs. A. L. Foust. Games were played on the wide lawn and refreshments served. Many were present and enjoyed the occasion to the fullest extent.

Memorial service, all day and dinner on the grounds, will be held at Bethel the fifth Sunday in September. Everyone cordially invited to come. Next year we hope to have a younger and better reporter.

MRS. J. M. FOUST, Reporter.

Henderson.—The Missionary Societies were delightfully entertained at the home of Mrs. George B. Harris August 20 with Mrs. H. T. Powell assistant hostess. A large attendance was present and the meeting was presided over by the president, Mrs. L. R. Gooch. Rev. R. A. Hunter opened the meeting by prayer for Rev. and Mrs. Soderbom and Dr. Fleagle. Mrs. Sam Harris conducted the devotionals from the "Jewel Box." The general business of the societies was then transacted and a general discussion of China followed. A letter from the Soderboms was read by Mr. Hunter and the "Question Box," conducted by Mrs. S. R. Watson. The meeting was closed by prayer. The guests were then invited to the dining room and served delicious cream and cake.

The Young Ladies' League held a "coupon concert" on Thursday night, August 30. A splendid musical was given and a silver offering and coupons were collected for the purpose of buying two silver vases for the church. The concert proved a success in every way and the program was greatly enjoyed by a large attendance. Wafers and lemonade were served at the close of the program.

Preceding our revival a series of prayer services were held at the church for three consecutive nights. Beginning Wednesday night, September 5th, Lawyer J. C. Kittrell being leader, gave us a most helpful talk on the power of prayer and the need of it. Thursday night, Rev. H. B. Porter, of the M. E. church, led the services and another inspiring talk was enjoyed. Friday night, Rev. H. A. Ellis, pastor of the Baptist church, gave a splendid talk on the "Living Words of the Bible." These meetings were well attended and very encouraging for the beginning of our revival, which began the second Sunday in September.

The Philathea class held a very interesting meeting at the home of their new president, Miss Ruth Cunningham, on Tuesday night, September 3rd. Miss Cunningham called the meeting to order and Mrs. Silas Powell conducted the devotionals. The general routine of business was concluded and reports of special committees given. The new chairmen were appointed, and read the duties of each officer and who their assistants would be for the following term. Many important matters were discussed and voted on: One to build a booth at the Fairgrounds for the purpose of serving meals there during the Fair. The meeting was closed by prayer and the hostesses served a delightful ice course.

The revival which has been in progress for one week, closed last night, with much evidence of a great spiritual help to our church. Rev. H. W. Maier, of Thomasville, held the services and a great deal of interest was shown by the large attendane at both morning and evening services. Sunday was a good day with us and two splendid sermons were enjoyed by the large congregations. On next Sunday, Pastor Hunter will open the doors of the church and receive new members. Let us pray for a great blessing on that day. We as a church are most grateful to Rev. Mr. Maier for his efforts and time, given us so freely, and his presence with us will be ever a pleasant memory. God bless him in his work elsewhere. REPORTER.

West End, Greensboro.—The Woman's Home Missionary Society met at the church Monday afternoon with a good attendance and an interesting program prepared by the president, Mrs. J. K. Osborn. The meeting was said to be the best one held since the Branch meeting. The treasurer gave a good report. It was decided to pay half of the scholarship pledges at this time. Two bedspreads have been given to the Children's Home. A large number of visits to the sick have been made. The Society is making a silk quilt for sale and will give a supper at the church soon to help raise some money.

During the summer months Dr. Williams had a short vacation, during which time he conducted revival services where he visited. Rev. W. F. Kennett and Rev. J. P. Lanning filled the pulpit during his absence. Recently Dr. Williams exchanged pulpits with Rev. H. C. Carmichael, and conducted revival services the week following at Moriah.

On next Sunday West End will celebrate the 11th anniversary and the formal opening of the new church school building. The program is arranged for all day service. Those expected to attend, and contributing to the program are President Taylor, President Andrews, Dean Jackson, of N. C. C. W., Greensboro, Rev. N. G. Bethea, and Mr. J. Norman Wills. All the former pastors are invited. Rev. E. Lester Ballard will sing the beautiful song, "A Vision." Miss Ruth Maynard and Mr. Stedman Clifton will assist the choir and the I. C. E. Choral Club with the music. The offering will go to help complete the new building. All of us being from the country, we decided to have the basket dinner on the church grounds. The opening address will be at 10 o'clock and the closing one at the evening service.

You are invited to come.

Friendship Station.—This Conference year will soon draw to a close. As it is so near spent, it causes us to ask ourselves the question, "Have we done what we could for the Master?" I trust we have done our best. We held our special meeting beginning the first Sunday in August. Rev. J. M. Morgan came to us for the first service and stayed until the close, which was on Friday night following. He did a wonderful work that week in the messages he brought. The people all were well pleased, and they say, come again, Brother Morgan. There were 38 souls reclaimed and converted. Five united with the church, with others to follow later on.

This is a loyal band. They believe in dividing with the pastor and family in what the Lord blesses them with, such as all kinds of fruits, vegetables, milk, butter, and many other things as good neighbors will do for each other. All this they have done beside the real pounding they gave us after we came back from Conference. We ask the Lord to bless each one, as He knows the giver, and to make us worthy to receive each gift.

Porter: Our special meeting began the third Sunday in August. My Brother, W. E. Hill, of Denton, came over and spent the week with us in the meeting and did most of the preaching. This was one of the sweetest meetings I ever attended. There was a large congregation at every service. We began the service on Monday morning with a prayer meeting at 10 o'clock, and kept it up each day until the close of the meeting, which was on Friday. Let me say here, we did not have to preach at 11, for when that hour arrived some were at the altar seeking Christ, some praising Him aloud, and all feeling like it was good to be there. There was not a sermon preached during the day throughout the week.

There were 14 conversions, and 15 joined the church .Some came from other churches, others joining on profession of faith. We gladly welcome them all.

It was wonderful to see how the members of other churches took part in the meeting. It made our souls rejoice to see all come together as one. For we know the Lord is pleased for His people to work for the upbuilding of His kingdom here on earth. I don't wonder at the outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon the people that are working for the Master as this little band is. They are wide-awake, as you all that read the church paper can see; they were the first on the Honor Roll to pay all claims in full, and did not stop there; after beautifying their church they bought $100 worth of ground adjoining the church ground and cleaned it off. It has added a great deal to the value of the church, and they have it all paid in full. They gave us a real pounding in the beginning of the Conference year, and added many things throughout the year from time to time for our comfort. We haven't words to express our gratitude for all these gifts. Our prayer is that this people may continue to grow and prosper in the work of the Lord.

C. H. HILL, Pastor.

Hickory Grove, Chatham Charge.—We were very glad indeed to have our president, Rev. S. W. Taylor, with us last second Sunday night. It was his first visit here, and a large audience enjoyed his fine and helpful sermon. We hope he will come again.

REPORTER.

Rehoboth, Creswell Circuit.—We are very glad to say we had a fine crowd out at Sunday school Sunday.

Miss Eva White, teacher of class No. 4, entertained the entire Sunday school on her birthday Wednesday, September 12, 1928. Had a large crowd present. Games were played and afterwards refreshments were served.

We are very glad to have back with us our pastor, Rev. Mr. Hethcox, who has been absent two weeks.

Mr. C. V. White was taken sick yesterday and is now slowly improving.

Sorry to say that Mrs. G. L. Davenport is confined to her bed.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Vick and son, L. A. Vick, and family, motored from Portsmouth, Va., to visit their daughter and family, Mrs. N. W. Tarkington. Mr. Denver Parker Tarkington and Samuel Vick Tarkington returned to Portsmouth, Va., with their grandparents Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Wilson Phelps, a member of Rehoboth Sunday school, returned from Norfolk Sunday, Spetember 16, 1928.

Interest is still being shown in our weekly prayer meeting.

Miss Pattie Spruill, who has been away three weeks visiting relatives, has returned home and is back teaching her Sunday school class at Rehoboth.

Mr. Robert Brewer, a member of Rehoboth church, has been absent for some time. He is now visiting friends in the neighborhood.

REPORTER.

Mocksville Charge.—"A Knowledge of God Man's Greatest Need Today" was the subject of Rev. J. W. Braxton's message today. He preached to an attentive congregation at both Bethel and Union Chapel. In his message he pointed out some of the things which have been stumbling-blocks for many in their religious life, and then described some of the paths which lead to God.

The attendance at Bethel was not as large today as it has been at times, but there was a reasonable congregation today. Union Chapel seems to be breaking its record in attendance at preaching service. The 3 o'clock service this afternoon proved to be one of the best services held since Mr. Braxton has been on the work.

The pastor is trying to increase the devotion in the worship services, and to make them a period of real worship. It is hoped that every one will co-operate in doing this.

It was announced this afternoon by the pastor that on the second Sunday morning in October they would hold the election of church officers for the coming year at Union Chapel. It is urged that the members spend much time in prayer and meditation concerning this election. It was also announced that the fourth quarterly conference would be held on October 20th at Elbaville church.

Asheville.—For the first time the writer has had an opportunity to visit the work at Asheville. In the absence of the pastor, Rev. F. W. Paschall, it was my privilege to be in the Sunday school, the Christian Endeavor and to lead in the two services of worship last Sunday. A good working organization was evident on every hand and the members seemed happy in their work. They are well pleased with their new pastor, as evidenced by the many good things heard about his work.

Much interest was added to the stay by a motor trip ofer the city and to Sunset Mountain. The kindness of the members who made this trip possible will long be remembered. Western North Carolina has some of the most beautiful scenery in the world, and surely the writer has never seen more beautiful scenery anywhere. The Christian fellowship and places of interest will long be remembered.

F. L. GIBBS.

Asheboro.—Next Sunday, September 30, is to be a Red Letter Day for our church here in Asheboro. We will start the day with Rally Day services in the Sunday school, the entire Sunday school hour being used for this purpose. Then at 11 o'clock we will have the dedication of the church, Rev. R. M. Andrews, D. D., preaching the sermon. At the evening hour, 7:30, Rev. N. M. Harrison will preach. All members of the church, whether living in Asheboro or elsewhere, and all former members and friends of the church are cordially invited to be present for the day.

The "Go to Church" campaign which has been on in Asheboro with all the churches will end next Sunday. The campaign has had a wholesome effect on the town.

Our church lost another one of its members on Saturday evening, September 15, when Brother John Sherman Ridge died at the age of 66 years. Brother Ridge had lived in Asheboro for many years, being a merchant and a justice of the peace, but had been a member of our church only since 1923, having moved his membership from the M. E. church. For the past two or three years his health had been very bad and he has not been able to be out much. Mrs. Ridge and one son, W. M. Ridge, are members of our church here in Asheboro. The funeral was held from our church on Monday morning, September 17, and was conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. T. M. Johnson, D. D., a former near neighbor of the deceased, and Rev. B. C. Reavis, of the M. E. church.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

Macedonia, Fallston Charge.—The attendance at Sunday school is improving every Sunday. The superintendent is right on his job. He is a good man, and I think we will have more improvement.

Our revival meeting ran all of last week, closing Saturday night. Brother Carson, of Lincolnton, was the pulpit help; he brought us some good messages. He is a live wire. We hope to have him again. There were 18 or 20 conversions and the church is greatly revived. May the good Lord greatly bless Brother Carson and his family in their noble work for the Master.

Our fourth quarterly meeting will convene at Macedonia October 13. Pray for us that we may be able to meet all obligations so that our pastor can go up to Conference with a light heart.

Brother Morgan has been with us nine years and we want him back again, for he is a good pastor and a good preacher.

God bless the Herald and its readers.

Pray for us. EMMA HOYLE, Reporter.

Zoar, Mecklenburg Circuit.—Our reports have been few, but we have been moving a little. Since our last report the meeting has been held at Zoar. It began the fifth Sunday in July. Rev. J. W. Hulin, of Midland, did the preaching. He came on Monday afternoon and remained until Thursday night. Brother Hulin did some good preaching. He will be long remembered by this people. The church was greatly revived. Our pastor filled the pulpit at 11; he preached an excellent sermon.

Brother Hall has been very faithful to us. He has filled all of his appointments. All like him as a man and preacher. We hope he will be returned to us for the incoming year.

On account of rain and bad weather President Taylor did not get to fill his appointment the sixth of September. We hope that he can get to us later.

The Ladies Aid Society gave an ice cream supper at the home of Mrs. W. W. Osborne. A large crowd attended; proceeds amounted to $12.25.

The church register will be revised the third Sunday in next month; also, the officers and teachers will be elected.

Mr. W. C. Hartis, of Zoar, will represent Mecklenburg as delegate to the Annual Conference.

REPORTER.

Draper.—At the St. Leo's Hospital in Greensboro the 19th of September, Mrs. Martha Fuqua passed from a bed of suffering to her home above. She was one of our best members, a capable and willing leader of children. It was upon her we depended for our Christmas, our Easter, and our Children's Day exercises. Under her direction the children acquitted themselves well at all these services. Now we must depend upon others for the Rally Day.

W. T. TOTTEN.

Burlington, First Church.—Our Sunday school attendance is getting back to normal, as we had 319 in attendance today, and offering amounted to $12.56.

Brother Gerringer brought us a helpful message on "Prayer" at the morning preaching hour. The attendance at this service was very large, and good music was rendered by the choir.

Our revival meeting begins next Sunday and we are hoping and praying for a great meeting. We ask that each reader of the Herald will join us in praying for this meeting and all the meetings that are in progress in other churches, also. Brother G. F. Millaway is to be with us in this meeting and we welcome him home again, as Brother Millaway served this work many years ago. He is a strong preacher of the Gospel and we are looking forward to a great meeting.

At the evening service Rev. T. M. Johnson brought the sermon, which was indeed inspiring and uplifting.

Something like five weeks and this Conference year will come to a close and there is much to be done. Let's all work faithfully and ask God to help us accomplish much in these closing weeks.

L. A. BRAXTON, Reporter.

Corinth, Littleton Circuit.—Our special meeting began September 2 and closed the following Thursday night. In spite of the downpour of rain all during the meeting we had fairly good crowds and our pastor gave us some good sermons. We had a good meeting, had several conversions and reclamations, with two to join the church.

Since our last report, gas lights have been put in the church.

The Christian Endeavor Society held its first social Friday night at the home of Misses Louise and Virginia Insco. There were about 25 present and all had a good time. We were very glad to have our pastor with us. Misses Insco served a salad course.

On Saturday evening at 7 o'clock, September 15, Mr. Clifton Morris, of Rich Square, (one of our members) and Miss Sarah Jones, of Richmond, Va., were quietly united in marriage at the M. E. parsonage at Williamsburg, Va. Rev. Mr. Jones officiated, the ring ceremony being used. We wish for them a prosperous and happy life.

Lizzie Coley, one of our Sunday school girls, is attending business college at Richmond, Va.

Louise Insco left today (Monday) for Greenville, where she will enter E. C. T. C. for her second year.

Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Morris visited friends at Greenville Monday.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

MRS. B. F. MORRIS, Reporter.

Lexington, State Street.—Sunday school was well attended Sunday morning. There was no preaching at 11 o'clock because of the meeting at West Lexington, where Mr. Bethea is conducting a revival meeting that is being well attended by the West End folks and State Street congregation and also many from other denominations. The preaching is appealing and helpful and much interest is being shown. It has not been announced when the meeting will close.

At the Sunday night service Miss Willie Veigh Leonard and Mr. Bethea sang a duet that all enjoyed very much.

Mrs. C. L. Koonts, pianist at State Street, is playing the piano for all the services at West Lexington.

Mr. Bethea gave an address at the opening service of West End, Greensboro, new church school building Sunday afternoon. The program for that occasion was especially good and we congratulate the West End congregation and their efficient leader on the progress they are making. REPORTER.

West End, Greensboro.—Born in Grace, January 11, 1917, by Rev. R. M. Andrews with three members to legally hold the title to the property; charter membership organized September 23, 1917, by Rev. R. M. Andrews and Rev. N. G. Bethea; thirty-two members. Served by four pastors: Rev. R. A. Hunter, Rev. N. M. Harrison, Jr., Rev. E. Laster Ballard, and the present pastor, Dr. J. D. Williams.

Celebrated the 11th anniversary and formal opening of the new church school building yesterday. Those contributing to the program were Dr. Williams, pastor, Dr. Jackson, dean of North Carolina College for Women, Rev. S. W. Taylor, president N. C. Conference, Dr. R. M. Andrews, president High Point College, Rev. N. G. Bethea, pastor State Street church, Lexington, Rev. E. Lester Ballard, junior pastor High Point, Rev. T. F. McCulloch, superannuated pastor, Rev. C. W. Bates, pastor Calvary church, Greensboro, Miss Ruth Maynard, student of music, and Mr. Stedman Clifton, teacher of violin, Central High School, Greensboro.

It was an all-day program, opening at 10 o'clock in the morning with an address to the adult division of the church school by Dean Jackson, followed by a sermon by President Taylor. In the afternoon President Andrews and Rev. Bethea addressed the congregation. Rev. Ballard rendered a vocal solo. In the evening, Mr. J. Norman Wills gave an address. Miss Maynard sang at the morning and evening services, and Mr. Clifton played beautifully on his violin at both services. At noon refreshments were served on the church lawn. The offering will be used in helping complete the new building. It was nearly $100, for which we are grateful. A large congregation remained throughout the day to hear the very splendid and helpful addresses of well chosen subjects and many people expressed sincere appreciation of every part of the program.

We were glad to have a number of former members and friends of the church with us on this occasion. We were also glad to have the presence of Dr. J. F. McCulloch, editor of the Herald, at the afternoon service.

The church is very grateful to these people who brought to us such stirring messages, and to Dr. Williams for planning such a splendid program for his people. At the close the pastor announced that the most important part of it all will be the revival services which he will conduct through this week and next. What can compare to the joy in heaven over one sinner that repenteth? We shall be glad to have you unite with us in prayer for the one who shall conduct the meeting and for the renewing of the kingdom in the church and the community.

REPORTER.

Knob Creek, Fallston Charge.—We are having a very large attendance in our Sunday school and church service. Brother Morgan preached a wonderful sermon Sunday on the subject, "Robbing God." Text, Malachi 3:8. Mr. Morgan gave us some strong points on this subject, after which the Lord's Supper was observed.

Our last quarterly conference will be held at Macedonia on Saturday before the second Sunday in October. We are urging that all of our stewards be present with a good report. We are all trusting that Brother Morgan will return to us, as he has done a wonderful work on this charge and has been a great help to our people.

Brother Morgan is going to give us an extra sermon the third Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. Subject, "The Signs of Time." We are hoping to see the church crowded.

Our church has prayer meeting every First Sunday night, being conducted by different members of the school. Everybody is urged to attend and take part in these services.

Our church has installed electric lights, which make these services more convenient.

We were very sorry to learn that Mrs. Hartman, wife of our good superintendent, is sick and confined at her home. We hope, if it be God's will, that she will soon be restored to health and that she can be with us again in our church services, as she is greatly missed by the church and the community.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

MRS. BYNUM CHAPMAN, Reporter.

Hollister, Halifax Charge.—We had a splendid service Sunday morning. Rev. W. H. Neese was with us and by much persuasion of Pastor Spencer he kindly consented to preach for us. We were glad to have him with us and hear him preach. We enjoyed his sermon and will be glad to have him visit us any time he can.

Brother Neese is assisting in the meeting at Ringwood this week. They had a splendid service Sunday afternoon. This was the first of the series of services to be held there this week.

Conference will soon be in session and we have a lot to do before then. We are behind with our finances. We will have to get busy in order to raise our apportionments before Conference meets.

On the fourth Sunday in October we will elect our church officers for the ensuing year. We hope to have all members present as this is very important business.

September 24.

High Point.—The executive board of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies held a most harmonious and interesting session last Thursday, September 20, at the home of Mrs. W. P. Pickett, with her daughter, Mrs. Minnie P. Harrell, corresponding secretary of the Foreign Society, as associate hostess. The meeting convened at 10 o'clock A. M., with a full attendance, the absent members being Mrs. A. G. Dixon, of Liberty, and Mrs. H. C. Nicholson, of Mebane. Much routine business was transacted during the day. It was decided to ask Miss Mildred Miskimen, returned missionary to India at home on furlough, to come to the Annual Conference, which convenes in Winston-Salem October 31. It is expected that Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Minnis will be there also. Another matter of importance was decided when a motion was carried to call off the proposed meeting of N. C. Branch at Mebane, N. C., in October, since the majority of those present felt that the societies in the state are not yet ready for re-organization according to the constitution and by-laws adopted by the General Conference in Baltimore last May. It was thought best to go on as we have heretofore until the regular annual Branch meeting next April. At 1 o'clock a delicious luncheon was served to the members. The hostesses were assisted in serving by Mrs. John Walker and Mrs. J. S. Pickett. Those present were the following: Misses Mary, Velna, and Pearl McCulloch, Greensboro; Mesdames W. C. Hammer, of Asheboro; George R. Brown, of Reidsville; H. W. Maier, of Thomasville; L. W. Gerringer and H. A. Garrett, of Burlington;

T. L. Speas, of Winston-Salem; J. Norman Wills, J. M. Millikan, C. W. Bates and S. W. Taylor, of Greensboro; R. M. Andrews, C. L. Whitaker, W. P. Pickett, E. L. Ballard, Minnie P. Harrell, and S. S. Coe, High Point. Additional guests were Rev. and Mrs. Roy I. Farmer and two children, and Mrs. R. T. Pickens.

On Sunday morning at the worship hour services were conducted as usual for the juniors in assembly room by Rev. E. L. Ballard. This service for the younger members of the congregation continues very popular, and maintains an average attendance of 80 to 90 children and young people. In the auditorium Rev. Roy I. Farmer delivered a beautiful sermon on "Breaking Dawn and Fleeing Shadows," from the text in II Peter 1:19: "Ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arises in your hearts." He said in part that shadow is a deficiency of light within an illuminated region. After shadows the world passes through night and darkness, then comes dawn when the shadows flee away! Life is full of shadows, the shadow of disease, shadow of temporal or pecuniary loss, shadow of death; nobody likes them, and we rebel against them, but they are useful. God in the darkness of the world changes things; wantonness, wickedness, sin, lust, and hate give way to light through God when the day star rises. Hold fast then that faith of yours in hours of darkness, welcome Christ, the day star, into your hearts. Help us to catch a vision of what Thou wouldst have us to be.

"Behold! we know not anything;
I can but trust that good shall fall,
At last far off, at last to all,
And every winter change to spring."

The music at this service was particularly appealing; the duet, "I Waited for the Lord," from Mendelssohn's Hymn of Praise, was sung in a charming manner by Mrs. J. C. Whitesell and Mrs. J. H. Allred; the choir rendered a beautiful anthem, "How Long Wilt Thou Forget Me, O God!"

At the evening service the pastor brought a very forceful message on "The Weapon of Christ," from the text in Zechariah 4:6: "Not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord of hosts." A delightful trio, "Lift Thine Eyes," was sung by Miss Elizabeth Welch, Mrs. Allred and Mrs. Whitesell.

Promotion Day will be observed next Sunday, September 30 in the Sunday school, and on the following Sunday, October 7th, Rally Day will be held, when an appropriate program will be presented under direction of a capable committee. A great effort will be made to make this a record day in attendance as well as the offering.

An important meeting of the stewards will be held Tuesday evening and there will also be a meeting of the Workers' Council of the Sabbath chool at 7:30 o'clock at the church.

A marriage of great interest to a large circle of relatives and friends here and in the eastern part of North Carolina was solemnized in Jacksonville, Fla., on Saturday, September 15, when Miss Juanita Hammer, of High Point, became the bride of Mr. Neill J. Parker, of Tampa, Fla. The bride was accompanied to Jacksonville by her sister, Mrs. O. Arthur Kirkman and Arthur Kirkman, Jr. She is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Hammer, of High Point, a graduate of the city graded school and Elon College. She taught here and at points in Eastern North Carolina for several years, and was at one time private secretary to Dr. Andrews when he lived in Greensboro. She is a young lady of charming personality and many graces, devoted to the work of her church and Sunday school. Mr. Parker was at one time a resident of High Point, and is now in business in Tampa, Florida. This young couple has hosts of friends who extend best wishes and congratulations. The bride, who is a great-granddaughter of the late Rev. Alexander Robbins of sainted memory, will be sadly missed in the work of the local church, where she has taken an active part for several years.

An operation for appendicitis was performed on Herbert Garmon, of Charlotte, one of the boys of the Children's Home family, at Guilford General Hospital last Sunday, and he is doing nicely.

Mrs. Geore T. Penny recently made glad the heart of the treasurer of the Woman's Home Missionary Society with her gift of $100 for a Pine Ridge scholarship. This contribution is made annually, and Mrs. Penny's generosity is greatly appreciated.

Rev. E. Lester Ballard will go to Reidsville next week to lead the singing in a revival, which Dr. Brown will conduct in his church.

Miss Martha Sanford, of Knaxville, Tenn., was the guest of her school-mate, Miss Daisy Lee York, for the week-end, and together they returned to Charleston, S. C., where they are students in Ashley Hall, a school for kindergarten teachers.

Mr. John Eller, of Davidson County, who has passed his 97th milestone, is the guest of his daughter, Mrs. W. P. Pickett. He was accompanied by his faithful and devoted daughter, Miss Mary Eller.

A most singular and interesting coincidence was related here by Prof. E. B. Stimson, the able and efficient director of music in High Point College and also of First church choir. He says he started off the Children's Home, for when a lad in his teens and a resident of Fayetteville, N. C., he gave a piano recital in Winston-Salem for the benefit of the Home, then just being established in Denton, N. C., by Miss Mabel Williams, sister of Rev. J. S. Williams of Asheville, now Mrs. R. S. Russell, of this city, and a member of the First church. This was the first appearance in public by Mr. Stimson, who recalls the occurrence with much pleasure.

Apropos of the Children's Home, it is another singular coincidence that Rev. A. G. Dixon, who was pastor of First church when the Home was moved to High Point, will come to it as superintendent October 1st. His hosts of friends here in High Point of all denominations, who remember with much love and gratitude his remarkable ministry of nine years' duration, assure him of their gratification in the thought of his return to their midst, and will give him and his beloved wife a most cordial greeting. It is said that all who have lived in High Point, although they roam far, far away, always long to return, which is a splendid advertisement for the goodness of its people.

THE YADKIN COLLEGE BELL

Recently there was run in the Herald an article by Rev. Geo. L. Curry relatives to the Yadkin College bell. Of course, it is generally known that the bell is here at High Point College on the campus and is being used for calling the classes. I agree with Brother Curry in that if the bell could be electrified—that is, an electrical ringer could be attached and placed in the tower it would be quite a splendid arrangement. If Brother Curry succeeds in his project, that is what will be done. The bell will be placed in the tower in Roberts Hall and an electrical device for ringing installed. This will cost around $100—that is, the price that has been summed up.

We would greatly appreciate this way of keeping the old bell in service and we believe that every alumnus of Yadkin College would be pleased to know that it is done.

I am just adding my word of approval with what Brother Curry has said.

Fraternally yours,
R. M. ANDREWS,
President High Point College.

—Greensboro is asked to contribute $4,000 to the relief of storm sufferers. Already about half of this amount has been contributed.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Mayes

Durey Stokes Mayes was born in Davidson County, N. C., on June 10, 1858. On September 13, 1928 he was called to answer the call and moved from his earthly tabernacle into the place prepared for him in the mansion above. Because of about three years of illness, a good part of which had been intense—even greater than his family and intimate friends knew—he endured patiently, continually fighting the battle and, like every one, wanted to regain his health. The services and advice of many and learned physicians were secured, but to no avail. All they and friends could do was done for him. Bravely he struggled, and patiently he waited and prayed, but it was the will of God that he be taken. He wanted to get well that he might carry on for those he loved.

In 1900 he moved his family to Orange County where he bought a farm and made his home until he answered the call of God. From May 10, 1884, he made his home in Durham, N. C. In his hands lay vast sums of money and materials and great responsibility. He was a man with a big mind when structures were to be built and plans made for larger service and greater efficiency.

After moving his family to his farm in Orange County in 1909 he did public work in Chapel Hill, after which he gave his time to his home, his farm and to making better the community in which he lived, because of his quiet, peaceful disposition and good influence, aiding wherever he could in any way a friend who called upon him for service. He was a big-hearted man, too big to say no to a friend he could help.

Living by him for most of these 19 years, working with him and his six boys, the writer knows because of these years of association that we have lost a good neighbor, a valuable member of our community, a good citizen and a good man. His life has been an example we would all do well to follow. His faith was fixed on and in Jesus Christ. In Him he lived, moved and trusted. Evidences of this he plainly showed until the summons came. He never failed to ask that I remember him in prayer when I would leave.

Surviving are the following relatives. A companion (to whom he was married in 1889, Evelene Booker Mayes); two brothers, Messrs. Cid Mayes, of Gaffney, S. C., and Augustus Mayes, of Greensboro, N. C.; six boys, Vestal, of New York City, Oswald, Baltimore, Md., Edgar, Efland, N. C., Clyde, Spencer, N. C., Norman, Chapel Hill, N. C., Carl, Henderson, N. C., and four grandchildren.

Funeral service was conducted at Bethel Baptist church near Chapel Hill by Rev. B. M. Williams, of Efland M. P. church, and the writer in the presence of a large group of relatives and friends.

Because of his quiet, submissive life the following tribute can be paid him:

"Servant of God, well done!
Thy glorious warfare's past;
Thy battle's fought, the race is won,
And thou art crowned at last."

M. IVEY CRUTCHFIELD.

McDaniel

Mocksville charge. Heart failure caused the death of Mrs. Susan Williams McDaniel, who died almost suddenly Sunday night, September 16, at the home of her son, Bonas McDaniel. Mrs. McDaniel was born August 7, 1841. She joined the M. P. church when a young girl and was a faithful member until her death. She was married in 1859 to Mr. George McDaniel and to this union were born eight children, six of whom survive: Mrs. Ester Plott, Messrs. Spencer, John, Jasper, Napoleon, and Bonas McDaniel. Two daughters, Mrs. Delia Hudson and Mrs. Cornie Foster, departed this life several years ago. Mrs. McDaniel also leaves 37 grandchildren and 35 great-grandchildren to mourn her death.

She was Aunt Susie to all and to know her was to love her.

The funeral service was conducted by her pastor, Rev. J. W. Braxton, Tuesday morning, September 18, in Smith's Grove church, after which her body was laid to rest in the church cemetery.

Waller

Mocksville Charge. John Waller died from on attack of dropsy on September 16, 1928. Mr. Waller was born in 1858. He leaves to mourn his death his wife, nine children and a host of friends. He was married in 1882 to Miss Jane Whisunt, and to this union were born 10 children, nine of whom survive: Messrs. L. P., G. W., K. C., N. W., of Advance, and R. W. Waller, of Winston-Salem, Mrs. Clyde Cidden, of Advance, and Mrs. Sam Fry, of Advance; also Mrs. Jap Jones and Mrs. Johnnie Jones, of Fork Church. He also leaves 27 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

He was a member of Elbaville M. P. church

PREVENT FIRES!

President Coolidge has issued a proclamation setting aside the week beginning October 7 as Fire Prevention Week. He calls upon every community in the land, through its schools, churches, and civic organizations, to turn its attention to means of preventing fires during that week. "Year by year," the proclamation says, "fire has resulted in the the destruction of many lives and much material wealth. In 1927, property loss alone in the United States due to fire is estimated to have totaled more than 475 million dollars, while loss of life from the same cause was likewise heavy."—Current Events.

MARRIED

Eaker-Beam

A very pretty but simple wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Beam, of Cherryville, N. C., Route 3, Saturday morning, September 22, 1928, at sunrise when their daughter, Essie Virginia, became the bride of Mr. Connie Plato Eaker, of Cherryville, Route 1.

The home was beautifully decorated with ferns and fall flowers. The bride wore a dainty gown of white crepe de chine with touches of silver. The ring ceremony was carried out. The ceremony was performed by Rev. M. C. Henderson, pastor of the bride.

The bride is the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Beam, and now holds a position as primary teacher at Northbrook High School.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Weaver College, Weaverville, N. C., and at the present time is a teacher in the Northbrook schools.

Immediately following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served, after which Mr. and Mrs. Eaker left for a trip to Washington, D. C.

The friends of the popular couple wish for them many years of marital bliss and happiness.

After September 28 they will be at home at Northbrook, N. C.

LONGER DAYS THAN LABOR UNIONS ALLOW

"Let me mention one day in the life of a circuit rider that is a little more than typical," writes a Western Congregational home missionary pastor. "It had been thawing for some time. Main roads were terrible. Side roads were impassible. I had called up to postpone the services but was called back and was asked whether I would come if they found a way for me. I said that I would. So after morning service and a hurried dinner I drove through nine miles of mud, which might be more nearly described in some places as soft soap, and in others as soft tar. Two miles from my destination I was met by a boy who had an extra horse for me. I then had a slow, hard ride up mountain roads in mud that no buggy could get through. The horses had to rest several times. After a more than usually successful meeting, I was asked to go farther on to visit an old man who had been bedridden for almost a year. He had sent word for me but had given up hope of my coming because of the weather. I never before saw so much help given to another just by the short talk we had together. I went back on horseback to my car, had a late supper in one of the homes, and just reached by next appointment in time for the evening service. This was a long day—longer than that allowed by labor unions—but it was one of the greatest days in my ministry."—Congregationalist.

—M. S. Rudisill continues to win renown as a good wheat grower. His final report is 1,207 bushals of grain on 40 acres of land. On one field where he had plowed under a clover sod, he produced on average of 40 bushels on 16 acres.

Wanted—a Good Substitute for Bridge

We do not know how to play bridge. We do not know how other people play it. We infer from newspaper reports of social events that many people are indulging in the game in these passing days. In a recent sermon to which we listened we heard the preacher say that he had inspected reports of many social gatherings and in about seven out of ten bridge is played. Why ask for a substitute for a game so popular? It is perhaps unreasonable to do so, but we are moved by the fact that this preacher declared most emphatically that there is nothing in bridge. We believe that he knows pretty well what he is talking about, and on the ground of his judgment we are moved to ask whether some occupation can be found for ladies of leisure which will leave them with the feeling that they have been doing something worth while. Or is that preacher wholly wrong in his verdict? Is bridge a necessity in these strenuous days upon which these ladies have come? Does it relieve their overwrought nerves and make them fit for the work they are doing when not playing bridge? We ask because we wish to know. We insist on either a substitute for bridge or a justification of bridge.

Be Honest With Your Pastor

Honestly is so generally recognized as a fundamental requirement of morality that it seems to be almost an insult to remind people of the obligation to be honest. Yet this primal virtue does not always manifest itself in full force in dealing with ministers of the Gospel, and we therefore feel that a few words on the subject may be admissible. We have specially in mind pastors and their pastoral charges. There are several ways in which a charge may treat a pastor dishonestly. Perhaps the most common way—and more common formerly than now—is to fail to pay him all his salary. Sometimes charges rashly promise more than they can easily pay, but after they have agreed to pay, they are under obligation to pay. There are some nice questions involved as to the way to raise the money. The best-paying members may have paid more than their share, and many members may have failed to pay their share and may be unwilling to pay it. It then becomes a serious question how the deficit is to be made up. But this is the charge's problem, and honesty to the pastor requires that the balance be raised somehow.

Another way in which a charge may treat a pastor dishonestly is by making on his mind the impression that his return for the next year is desired when the fact is otherwise. Some charges have been reported as instructing their delegate to the Annual Conference to ask for the return of the present pastor and then have been represented by an informal deputation of leading members to impress the stationing committee that a change of pastors is very much desired if indeed not imperative if the charge is to be saved from utter ruination. No one can defend such tactics as that. No charge has a right to treat its pastor in any such way. It is a delicate matter to inform a pastor that it is believed best for the charge that there can be a change of pastors. It is the more delicate because in some cases those who hold this opinion are mistaken. But when the time comes that there is a strong general desire for change, whether based on reason or on mere prejudice, it may be that a new pastoral supply should be sought. In the absence of the pastor the delegate is instructed to seek another minister. Should the pastor be kept in ignorance of this action and allowed to go up to conference with the expectation that he is to be returned? Surely not. Some discreet brother should be deputized to inform the pastor of the fact in the case.

Preachers are men with human feelings and should be treated fairly.

Asheboro Church Dedication

A large congregation assembled in the Asheboro church last Sunday to take part in or witness the dedication of the house of worship. The ritual of the church for such occasions was followed, the choir and the minister alternating in the reading of parts. Dr. R. M. Andrews, president of High Point College, delivered an appropriate sermon, after which Pastor Pritchard announced that R. R. Ross had been unanimously selected by a committee to present the church for dedication. Bro. Ross arose and asked the other trustees to stand up with him, whereupon Hon. W. C. Hammer, Dr. Swaim, and Arthur Ross arose. Brother Ross then made a brief speech of presentation. The ceremony was concluded, and the members of the congregation were asked by the pastor to inspect the building.

The church is a more elaborate structure than one realizes on entering the auditorium. It is compactly built and contains many rooms. There are nearly twenty rooms for Sunday school classes besides large rooms for assemblage purposes. One has to go down into the basement to realize how much space there is there. The primary department of the Sunday school holds its meetings in the basement, and there is provision also for social meetings of the congregation. It is really a three-story church and the upper floor has six or eight class rooms.

The church is equipped with modern heating and ventilating plant. It is furnished with comfortable and handsome pews and has stained glass windows. It is one of the best located churches in Asheboro and has a growing membership. It has one of the most capable pastors in our Conference, and we hope for its continued growth and prosperity.

The congregation last Sunday included quite a number of visitors from a distance who came to rejoice with the Asheboro people in their brightened prospects.

Two former pastors sent their congratulations, Rev. T. M. Johnson by letter and Rev. L. W. Gerringer by telegram.

THE OLD SOAK

By Ernest H. Cherrington, LL.D., Litt.D.
Director of Department of Education, Anti-Saloon League of America

Have you ever met the Old Soak? He is fast vanishing. He will soon be as extinct as the carrier pigeon, the dodo, the great auk or Sinbad's roc. It almost seems a pity that science could not preserve him by the vitaphone or some other device that would let us see and hear him as he is. Yet, even then much of the peculiar flavor that made him unique would be lost. Don Marquis placed him on the stage as Clem Hawley, probably the very best picture of this disappearing species which has ever been given.

The Old Soak was lovable, but a total loss to any community. He was well meaning, but as unreliable as a bootlegger's word. He was a "good fellow" when with the boys down at the corner saloon, but his wife had a different opinion of him. His sons usually viewed him as a horrible example and became teetotalers themselves, while his daughter blushed with shame if he met her while she was in the company of her friends.

Possibly there can be no stronger indictment of the beverage liquor traffic than some of the Old Soaks whom we have known. Many of them were men of culture, men of exquisite refinement, men with the perfect courtesy of the old school. Even in the ultimate degradation to which they had fallen, they still had an air. One felt that they had been, even though they weer not, gentlemen. The contrast between what they were and what they had been and the still more tragic contrast between what they were and what they might have been, constitutes an indictment which the liquor group can never answer.

The Old Soak never planned to be an old soak. He merely planned to be sociable. All he sought was a little agreeable color and fragrance in life. He believed he could "take it or let it alone." Like Joe Jefferson's "Rip Van Winkle" he often said, "I won't count this one," but nature counted it and the uncounted steins of beer, the uncounted glasses of wine, the uncounted pints of whiskey soon changed the careless laughing good fellow into the hopeless Old Soak.

The Old Soak did not want to reform. With Omar Khayyam he might say:

> "Though wine hath rent my robe of honor, well,
> I often wonder what the vintners buy
> One-half so precious as the stuff they sell."

All that ambition meant to him, all that life held out of promise in his glowing youth, all his dreams of achievement, of fame and honor, all these he has bartered for his glass of wine. After a time that glass of wine became the strongest, most influential spirits which the malignant ingenuity of man could devise.

The Old Soak was not really old. He merely looked old. His gray hair, his uncertain walk, the trembling of his hands, his lack of consecutiveness when he talked did not make him venerable. His life had not ripened into mellowed years of fruitage but had been blighted into premature decay. Unlike Browning's Rabbi Ben Ezra, he could not say:

> "Grow old along with me,
> The best is yet to be."

The Old Soak would never invite youth to a pilgrimage that companioned his. He knew that his old age was "unwept, unhonored and unsung." Like Shakespeare's Wolsey he had felt "a frost, a killing frost," and "honors, friends and all he hoped to have" had been swept away. Like Cleopatra, he had dissolved a priceless pearl in a glass of wine. He knew it, but he knew it far too late.

Among the ancient Hebrews, slaves were freed in the Year of Jubilee. Some slaves, however, declined to accept manumission and the law directed that as evidence of that refusal these were taken to the door posts where an awl was driven through their ear into the portal. Unseen by the physical eye, that stigmata of unbreakable slavery marked the Old Soak. His fetters had become so great and so much a part of himself that he had lost even the will to cast them off.

As a nation, we do not sanction the making of Old Soaks any more. Instead, we are emphasizing the making of leaders of the world's dreams, for the raw material of an Old Soak is also the raw material of a great statesman, a great poet, a great leader of mankind. Tht easy accessibility to liquor which made possible the development of a Clem Hawley has passed away forever in this nation. There may be a few, who because of some diseased appetites or depraved tastes, may crave the fiery draughts of liquor, but the wholesale production of the Old Soak has been abandoned. One might reverse the application of the epitaph Shakespeare wrote for a dead king, "Take him for all in all. We shall not look upon his like again."

AFTER

After the darkness and storm
Cometh a radiant light;
After the winds and the rain
Cometh the sunshine bright;
After the gloaming and night
Cometh the glorious dawn;
After the toiling and cares
Cometh the victor's song.

After the turmoil and strife
Cometh a wondrous peace;
After the doubts and the fears
Cometh a sure release;
After the sorrow and tears
Cometh a heavenly strain;
After the prayer and praise
Cometh His blessing again.

—The social element in amusement is a very Christian element, for brotherhood is a Christian attribute. Playing together aids us to work together. If we cannot get along with others in our games, we cannot get along with them in our business. "Team play" teaches co-operation in getting large affairs of life well done. Christians are to live helpfully with others, and to that end they will play charmingly with others.—C. E. World.

—Some really great Bible characters get only small mention in the Bible. There is Enoch, for instance. All that we know about him is that he "walked with God," and Hebrews 11 tells us that he pleased God. The big fact is that "he was not, for God took him." His life was spent in intimate communion with God, so that he did not taste of death. He is great because was was a man of prayer.—C. E. World.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEETING

Resume of the Minutes of the Executive Committee Meeting of the Board of Missions Held in Baltimore, Md., Sept. 20, 1928

Those present were G. H. Miller, J. C. Broomfield, S. W. Rosenberger, G. W. Haddaway, Mrs. Henry Hupfield, Mrs. A. G. Dixon, Mrs. Marie Thompson, J. M. Sheridan, J. H. Straughn and J. W. Hawley.

A communication was read from Miss Mable Shaffer stating that it would be very difficult for her to keep an engagement at the Eastern Conference and at her suggestoin the Executive Committee authorized Mrs. Thompson to fill the engagement.

Miss Shaffer was employed for promotional work at $75 per month.

Rev. J. F. Minnis and Rev. Clyde Auman, our missionaries on furlough, were present and addressed the meeting concerning their work, making very helpful suggestions.

J. W. Hawley reported his conferences with lawyers and his negotiations with the Executive Committee of the W. F. M. S. concerning the method of affecting the union of our missionary interests.

On motion G. W. Haddaway was authorized to draw a voucher for $170.00 as a refund to Mrs. East, and J. H. Straughn was asked to send her a statement of the monies received from the W. F. M. S. Branches.

J. W. Hawley was asked to continue his negotiations with the W. F. M. S. and the W. H. M. S. for the purpose of arriving at a satisfactory plan by which we can carry out the directions of the General Conference and unite the missionary work of the church as soon as possible.

A report from Mrs. Larsen, the treasurer of the China mission, was read and approved.

A letter from Dr. Edith Lacy with recommendations concerning the hospital in India was read.

A letter was read from Miss Hodges in which she pledged her full co-operation with the Board of Missions.

The repairs on Chandeker's house in India amounting to 123 rupees-4-9 were ordered paid.

A letter was read from Mr. and Mrs. Soderbaum in which they inclosed their medical certificates.

A letter was read from Mr. Cassen making certain suggestions concerning missionary pensions. G. W. Haddaway was asked to ascertain what other denominations are doing for their retired missionaries in India.

The India Mission was authorized to proceed with the building of the Girls' School according to the plans already approved, with the request that Rev. Cassen be made the chairman of the building committee. Mrs. Thompson was asked to notify Mrs. Neer, treasurer of the Ohio Branch, of this action so that she might forward the money which the Ohio Branch has raised for this purpose.

It was decided to send $125 to India for boys' clothing, and to approve the use of $111 out of the reserve fund for the same purpose.

The report of Dr. Woodford, of Pine Ridge, Ky., was read.

The report of Miss Bessie M. Eiss, Home Missionary worker at Dillonvale, Ohio, was read. G. W. Haddaway and Mrs. John Feth, president of the Ohio Branch of the W. H. M. S., in company with Rev. John Sharp, Presbyterial Superintendent of Missions for the Presbyterian church in Ohio, from whom the suggestion came, were asked to visit Dillonvale and survey the work there with a view to recommending to the Board of Missions any change in policy that will better serve the interests of the Kingdom.

An architect was employed to supervise the erection of a church at Rochester, N. Y.

The Executive Secretaries were ordered to secure bond for the official force of the Board of Missions in the sum of $10,000.

It was decided to confirm the agreement entered into by the committee sent to visit the First Church, Detroit, whereby the funds due to the Board of Missions from the Michigan Conference shall be applied to the obligation of the Board to the First Church, Detroit.

A letter from Rev. M. L. Matthews, president of the Fort Smith-Oklahoma Conference, was read relating our opportunities about the Mazzard Church in Arkansas. The matter was referred to the Executive Secretary with instructions to visit the conference.

On motion it was decided to accept the bid of the Stockton Press of $220 for 4,000 copies of the Missionary Record delivered at the post office for mailing; and that Mrs. Thompson assume the editorship of the Record with the January issue.

Mrs. C. S. Kidd was elected to represent the Board of Missions in the National Council of Women for Home Missions.

The next meeting of the Executive Committee will be held in Pittsburgh, Pa., November 13, 1928.

J. W. Hawley, Secretary.

RALLY DAY POSTERS

The Department of Educational Institutions of the Board of Christian Education has sent to most of our churches a special Rally Day poster. This is a plan never before adopted by the Board, but the drawing and printing is of such a high order we are sure our people will appreciate it. If properly placed it should advertise the coming Rally Day service in a manner to attract attention and to increase the attendance and offering.

This poster has been prepared and distributed at no little expense. This money will be wasted unless our pastors and leaders see that it is placed somewhere in the church where it will speak its message. It is a real bugle call to remember Rally Day and our New Century Service. If any more are desired, a line to this office will be promptly answered.

The number of orders received for the Rally Day supplies is close to the high record of last year. But many of our churches have not been heard from yet. If you believe in the work being done by this Board in behalf of our colleges and seminary, in behalf of our young people, in behalf of a better trained leadership for every department of the local church, if you believe in the cause of Christian Education, you will not fail to hold a Rally Day service. And certainly if you wish to give to the work your church is trying to do in its local field an impulse and inspiration which will be felt throughout the year you will put forth an extra effort to have a real rally day. The program prepared by the Board of Christian Education costs you nothing. You are welcome to all the supplies needed. Drop us a line and the material will be in your hands within a few days.

This is your first opportunity to do something definite and generous in support of the New Century Service. Send your orders to Frank W. Stephenson, Board of Christian Education, 613 W. Diamond St., N. S., Pittsburgh, Pa.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

The chairmen of the various appointive conference committees are announced below. The full membership of each committee will be added as soon as the full conference roll is in hand. If each chairman can have the report of his committee well formulated before the meeting of conference, the work will be greatly expedited.

The committees follow: Credentials, C. W. Bates; Fraternal Relations, George R. Brown; Literature and Education, Paul S. Kennett; Methodist Protestant Herald, T. O. Pender; Missions, J. F. Minnis; Official Character, J. D. Williams; Pulpit Service, J. H. Moton; Ordinances, R. M. Andrews; Parsonages, J. H. Allen; Pastoral Work, N. G. Bethea; President's Message, J. A. Burgess; Rural Church Life, George L. Curry; Social Reform, T. M. Johnson; Superannuates, B. M. Williams; Young People's Work, L. W. Gerringer.

The following obituary committees are hereby announced, with the first named as chairman: In honor of Bro. D. A. Braswell, W. F. Ashburn, A. G. Dixon, N. G. Bethea, G. H. Hendrey, D. A. McLaurin, R. S. Garmon. In honor of Bro. J. F. Dosier, W. F. Kennett, W. F. Ashburn, E. C. Harris, Wm. H. Neese, W. M. Pike, J. H. Moton, John Lamb, Kelly Coltrane.

RECEPTION OF THE FRIENDSHIP SCHOOL BAGS

The great stadium in Mexico City was crowded on September 15 with 65,000 participants in the patriotic program celebrating the 118th anniversary of Mexico's declaration of independence from Spain. On the tribunal sat President Calles, his cabinet, and representatives of the diplomatic group. The Mexican Committee on World Friendship among Children, with Mrs. Emrich as their guest of honor, sat immediately behind the President.

One part of the very remarkably staged, three-hour program was particularly significant for Americans—the section given to the presentation of the Friendship School Bags. Boys and girls—3,000 of them—each carrying a Friendship School Bag, marched four abreast down the field between the cheering thousands seated in the stadium, while the presentation speech was made by Mrs. Emrich, and two Friendship Bags, one for the boys and one for the girls of Mexico, were presented to the First Secretary of the Embassy, acting for the Ambassador. He in turn, speaking in Spanish, presented the bags to the President. In front of the President's chair stood a Mexican boy and girl representing the school children of the Republic. With a quick smile and greeting the President put into their hands these symbols of friendship and goodwill from the children of the United States, while the strains of the "Star Spangled Banner" were heard from one end of the great stadium to the other.

The task of receiving, recording, classifying and allocating the Bags among Mexico's million and a quarter primary school children proved to be a much more exacting one than had been anticipated.

"You will rejoice to know," writes Mrs. Emrich from Mexico City, "that a course on international friendship has been written into the curriculum of the primary schools of Mexico, due entirely, so Mr. Moises Saenz, Acting Minister of Education, told me, to this friendship project from the United States."

"In one school that I visited this morning the teacher said they are studying about the United States, its history, its accomplishments, its people, and all in a friendly way. 'This,' she said, 'is a new thing, and strange, but we are happy in doing it!'"

Another teacher said: "We have heard a great deal about our enemies in the United States, but we had not heard before of the friends we have there."

An American long resident in Mexico observed: "I heard the Mexican band playing the 'Star Spangled Banner' in the stadium, saw the American flag waving while the thousands of Mexican children, carrying their Friendship Bags, marched down the field, and watched the packed crowds standing and cheering. I realized that I had never seen anything quite like this in Mexico before."

After a conference with Dr. Moises Saenz it was decided to continue the project until the first of December in order that as many Bags as possible might be available for distribution in the primary schools. The 26,000 Bags already in hand have assured real success to this enterprise. But many American schools and churches heard of this project too late in the spring to have a share in it and it is felt that if it is continued until December 5 (the last date for mailing Bags) many thousand additional Bags will be sent and many more schools and pupils in the United States and in Mexico will be brought into the circle of this beautiful program. Full information of this friendship project may be secured from the Committee on World Friendship among Children, 289 Fourth Avenue, New York. A beautifully illustrated folder pictures the sending of Friendship Bags from the United States and their reception by the Department of Education in Mexico City.

DYING GRACE

John Wesley said upon one occasion, "Our people die well." That is true of all good Christians. Interesting and inspiring are these dying declarations of some of God's children who were the world's great servants. Here are their last words:

Richard Baxter: "I have pain, but I have peace."

Edward Payson: "The battle is fought, the victory won."

John Wesley: "The best of all, God is with us."

Charles Wesley: "I shall be satisfied when I awake in thy likeness."

Susannah Wesley: "Children, I am going; lift a song of praise."

John Fletcher: "I am like a bird escaping from its cage."

Prince Albert: "Rock of Ages, cleft for me."

Lady Huntington: "I am going to my Father tonight."

Philip Melanthton: "Nothing now but heaven."

John Bradford, to his fellow-martyr: "Be of good comfort, we shall sup with Christ tonight."

Edward Perronet, author of "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name": "Glory to God in the height of His divinity! Glory to God in the depths of His humanity! Glory to God in all His sufficiency! Into His hands I commit my spirit."—N. C. Christian Advocate.

SLOGAN

for the Closing Quarter

No Charge Without an Honor Roll Church

We trust that this goal is being kept before the people, and that it may be pushed with fervor and faith from now until the end. We can't hope to accomplish it unless this is done. If we fail, let us not fail in the "try." A pushing pastor, and one or two daring laymen, or laywomen, and somebody will go up to conference happy.

Pageland

Sept. 24-25.—On this date we were with Bro. Phillips and his people of the Pageland charge. The first appointment was at New Hope, on Monday night. We were there for the first time, as a "boy preacher," just a few years ago. This church is located about six miles south of Monroe, and seems to be favorably known in that section. Pastor Phillips told us that the attendance at the regular services usually fills the house, and that the attendance on special occasions is very large. An arbor, 40x65, has recently been built on the church grounds. It is well constructed and well seated. The natural incline of the land gives it an elevated floor. This provides a commodious place for revival meetings and other special occasions, and must be a very comfortable place in hot weather. The attendance on the occasion of our visit was good, we thought, for a Monday night service, and the reception of our message was pleasing. We trust that our visit to them was mutually helpful.

On Tuesday night we were at Pageland. This church is in South Carolina, a short distance across the state line, and twenty miles southeast of Monroe. Pageland is a nice little town of one thousand population. Our church membership at this place is not large, though loyal and interesting. We were there in a meeting a few years ago, assisting Bro. Quick in a meeting. We missed him and others who were there at that time, but who now have their places, we trust, in the church triumphant. We were pleased with our visit to each of these churches, and shall watch their future with renewed interest. Bro. Phillips has the full confidence of his people, and is doing a good work. We hope for a gratifying conference report from this charge. The pastor and people have our grateful thanks for kindnesses shown us while on the work.

Methodist Co-operation

Sept. 26.—The Commission on Methodist Co-operation met on this date, with three members of each church present. Some advanced plans, looking towards the realization of the purposes of this commission, have been worked out, and will be submitted to the respective conferences of the two churches in their fall sessions. We believe that some plan should be agreed upon by which there may be a better co-operation, in form, in many communities where there are small groups of Methodists and other kindred bodies.

Midway Church (Guilford Charge)

Sept. 26.—It was our privilege to be here in one of the very best attended quarterly conferences. Each of the five churches was represented, and some with large delegations. The reports of the various Sunday schools of the charge showed marked improvement in interest and attendance. Practically all, we believe, contribute to the Children's Home. Hickory Grove reported an active Aid Society of 20 members and $100 raised this year. They show a fine enthusiasm in this work. Finances were found to be considerably in arrears, both on pastor's salary and on budgets. However, the conference manifested a hopeful interest in this phase of their work, and we believe that they will have a report that will be to their credit when the end comes. Pastor Ashburn has been zealous in promoting the spiritual and the material interests of the charge, and has done a good year's work. He is esteemed and loved by his people. We are still saying that Guilford should be one of our choice charges.

Creswell

Sept. 30.—We were with this charge on this date, visiting two churches, Mt. Hermon, 11 a. m., and Creswell, 7:30 p. m. The attendance was not large at either place, probably interfered with by rain. Since we were on this field a few years ago the Creswell church has been removed from its original location to a site hard by the parsonage. We think the change is a decided improvement. The church here, and also the Mt. Hermon church, are neat and well-kept buildings. However, a coat of paint is needed on the exterior of the Mt. Hermon church. We were glad to find the major part of pastor's salary already paid, and we trust that the full amount promised will be paid by the close of the conference year. We are hoping, also, that the charge will make an encouraging showing on the budgets. We are sure this can be done if a few laymen at each church will rally to the pastor in a persistent effort in this direction. Creswell charge should be on several conference honor rolls. We trust they will not let our faith be without their good works. Pastor Hethcox is serving his tenth year on this charge. His people speak in high praise of him, both as to his standing with his charge, and with the people, in general, throughout the county. He is encouraged over developments that have marked his ministry. This charge has the disadvantage of being remade from other fields of the conference. However, there are many good people here, and it is gratifying to find hopeful signs on the work. The contribution to the Children's Home last year was next to the largest in the conference. We were glad to see again old friends on the charge, and to pastor and people we are indebted for transportation and the hospitality of their homes.

Pastoral Supply

This matter is at the front now, and logically so, with pastors and charges alike. We would be superhuman, I think, if it were otherwise. However, it is not a matter that needs to be attended with undue concern. Throughout the history of the church we have depended upon God to direct in this; and He is still with us. What we need to do is to pray that He may be so in our hearts, and so in our deliberations, that His will may be done in every assignment. Let us so pray, brethren.

We suggest that where changes seem necessary that pastors go right on with their work, as though no change were expected. Officers should be notified, at least the delegate; but it is our opinion that it is best to have very little to say publicly about a change. The people need to have their minds kept on a fit closing of the year's work, and not on a change of pastors. And let us see to it that in the change love abound, that there may be no lingering sting.

Interesting—Encouraging

From the 51 charges returning budget questionnaires the following facts are gleaned:

Forty-four charges will pay salary in full; 27, A. C. B.; 38, college assessment; 31, superannuate assessment; 39, representative's expense; sixteen charges will pay all claims in full. Several charges that we think can be counted on for liberal payments have not yet returned the questionnaire. We believe that the figures above will be still more interesting and encouraging when the reports are all in. The only thing about this showing so far that is at all disparaging is a seeming shortage in pastors' salaries. We most earnestly hope that no charge will permit that to occur. No charge will want that record, we are sure, and certainly no pastor can afford that loss.

The reports of pastors that have not yet been received will be appreciated.

Special Herald Number

This will be run week after next. Pictures, and the brief word about church or parsonage, must be in my hands not later than Friday, October 12. The cuts will cost about $3.00 each. If we can get pictures of all of our church and parsonage building during the year, we would have a very interesting and pleasing number of the HERALD.

PROHIBITION ENFORCEMENT

It is asserted that prohibition cannot be enforced. Yet the records show that 36,546 liquor dealers were convicted in the Federal courts last year—an average of 100 for every day of the year. Of these 11,818 were sent to prison. The others paid fines of $4,143,040. Now, in 1928, let the fines be doubled, and especially the jail sentences be tripled. The law-breakers will move heaven and earth to try to keep out of jail. A stiff dose of incarceration might help enforcement mightily.—The Presbyterian, of Philadelphia.

GETTING CHURCH MEMBERS BY BY HIGH PRESSURE

The one great task of the Church is to add new members to its fold, but this is not the chief end of the Church. There is a vast difference between a member added to the Church and one added to the Kingdom of Christ. A church that has a good number added to the church roll may not be so much entitled to praise as one that has worked on the members already in the church, but added no members at all. It might be better to get some drones out of the hive before we add more new ones. It might be well to get our members to church and shut the front door before we start a revival meeting for the general public.

Surely it is the wrong ideal to make our first aim that of getting new members unless, first of all, those members are spiritual members before they add their names to the roll. Some high-pressure methods of adding members are certainly subject to criticism. We know one church that required the preacher to add so many members to the roll each week. We have met members whose names were on church rolls when they had never entered the church. The pastor in his zeal got their names when they did not have interest enough to go to church when they were received or at any time after. We met a woman a few weeks ago who declared that she had learned with surprise that her name was on a church roll when she had had no intention of removing her membership from the home church.

It would be a good move to be more careful when members are sought for our churches and to be sure they are in heart prepared.—Richmond Christian Advocate.

THE MOST NEEDED SERVICE

There are far more famishing souls in the world than there are starving bodies. The former are all about you; and the noblest service known to earth is to feed them upon the bread of life. Are you, as a professed disciple of Jesus, faithfully endeavoring to do this? Or are you insistent upon spending your strength in the easier and more superficial ministries of a physical kind? The missionary who carries effective help to immortal human spirits in whom sin is enthroned and working its awful ruin is the missionary that mankind most needs. This is the work that the Apostles counted of such vast importance that they appointed others to "serve tables," that they might give themselves unremittingly to it. It is a sacred duty to do good to the bodies of men and we dare not neglect it; but as Christ's representatives in the world, that is not our highest obligation to our fellow-creatures, and woe be unto us if we make it so!—Selected.

Asheboro Church Dedication

These communications were read to the congregation by Pastor Pritchard.

Rev. N. M. Harrison was present to preach at the evening service. It was regretted that Mrs. J. S. Lewis and her daughter, Mrs. N. M. Harrison, were kept from attendance by Mrs. Harrison's illness, and the more because this occasion was meant to honor the memory of Brother Lewis, whose liberal bequest to the church made possible the dedication at this time.

PROHIBITION NOT A FAILURE

We are hearing a great deal these days about the failure of prohibition in our country. The preachment to that effect is, in our opinion, without justification. To be sure, the law is not perfectly enforced. No law is. We have had laws against theft and murder ever since our nation existed; yet we still have much stealing and many killings. But nobody is proposing to strike from our statute books the laws against these crimes. Such a proposal would be regarded as absolutely preposterous.

There is a considerable amount of illicit liquor-selling going on and intoxicants are yet consumed to a considerable extent; but the selling and the drinking are small compared to what we had under the saloon regime.

The benefits of prohibition to the American people have been manifold and far-reaching. It has contributed to their betterment financially. This is shown by the increased deposits in saving banks and in the larger number of laboring people who own their homes. It has, furthermore, been of immense moral benefit. The improvement of conditions in this respect constitutes one of the most outstanding achievements of modern times.

There should be no weakening of our national prohibition laws, nor abatement in the effort to enforce them effectively. That any kind of state regulation of liquor-selling would prove satisfactory, we do not believe. South Carolina tried experiments of that sort years ago and found them impracticable; and the reports that now come to us from Canada, where such a system is in operation, are to the effect that many results attest the failure of the scheme. All the history of the past in dealing with the liquor traffic warrants the assertion that nothing but its complete suppression gives any hope of riddance of the direful evils which everywhere attend its existence in any form.—Southern Methodist.

PRAYER

Prayer is communion with our God;
A whisper in His ear,
To tell Him of our needs and wants,
With faith that He will hear.

We go to Him with all our cares,
And all our griefs make known;
Our weaknesses and secret sins
Lay bare before His throne.

For He has told us in His Word,
Although our sins are great,
That with the Father evermore
We have an Advocate.

And blessings for the ones
Whose lives are dearer than our own,
Whose prayers have been neglected
Since they have older grown.

And for the ones that we must love,
Although they love us not;
Help us to plead for them, Dear Lord,
Lest they should be forgot.

—Mrs. C. W. Millner.

STEPS IN STEWARDSHIP

The earth did not belong to my ancestors; they could not give it to me.

It will not belong to my children; I cannot bequeath it to them.

It does belong to God. He entrusts a share of its care to me. I am His steward.

Stewards are not required to be wealthy or brilliant; but they are required to be faithful.

The tithe is an acknowledgment that all I have belongs to God. I am His debtor. The tithe is not a free-will offering. It is a debt to God for His work. To withhold it is to rob God. By carefully observing stewardship in financial matters, I become a faithful steward of God's property. Stewardship includes the use of all talents for God.

One-tenth of the income received by each 100 Christians will equip for Christian service and adequately maintain at least ten who are called to devote all their time to God's service.—Exchange.

CHRIST ALONE

The world, I thought, belonged to me—
Goods, gold, and people, land and sea—
Where'er I walked beneath God's sky,
In those old days, my word was "I."

Years passed: there flashed my pathway near
The fragrance of a vision dear;
My former word no more sufficed,
And what I said was—"I and Christ."

But, O, the more I looked on Him,
His glory grew, while mine grew dim;
I shrank so small, he towered so high,
All I dared say was "Christ and I."

Years more the vision held its place
And looked me steadily in the face;
I speak now in a humbler tone,
And what I say is—"Christ alone."

THE GREAT DISCOVERY

"What is the greatest discovery you ever made?" asked a young man of the celebrated Sir James Y. Simpson, the discoverer of the use of chloroform as an anaesthetic. He replied: "The greatest discovery I ever made was that I was a great sinner, and that Jesus was a great Savior."

The person who has never made the discovery that he is a sinner, and who considers he has no need of a Savior, is a person in peril. Jesus "came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance."—Exchange.

THE GREAT BATTLE

Ever and everywhere a mighty battle is raging around us, a battle in which we are all volunteers, aye, and enrolled soldiers on either side—the great silent internal battle of lust and purity, of truth and falsehood, of right and wrong. It needs no splendid occasion, no stately amphitheater, no pomp and prodigality of outward circumstances, for its seat is the human heart. But its effects and issues are in the world.—Selected.

OUR STORY PAGE

THROUGH A KNOT HOLE

Little James played contentedly in his sand pile for quite a while. Then he became tired of digging wells, and building sand houses, and it occurred to him that he was thirsty and wanted a drink.

It was shady by this time on the smooth pavement in front of the house, and it would be fun to ride his bicycle up and down the street. So James opened his mouth quite wide and very loudly called to Ellen who had lived with them ever since he was a weak baby.

"Ellen! Oh, El-l—en!" he called again and again, growing rather provoked that he received no answer. Surely Ellen might come and see what he wanted!

So he began to cry for he didn't like the idea of going after what he wanted himself. Still to his surprise no one came near, though he made more and more of an outcry. From time to time he would stop and listen and look around, and perhaps say aloud—for James sometimes talked to himself—"I don't believe Ellen is going to come. She's a mean old thing or she'd come to the door anyway to see if I am hurted!"

The more he thought about it, the more he was certain that he was being very badly treated. Then it dawned on him that Ellen might have gone to the grocery for something. The grocery was just down at the corner. He knew his mother was out.

Well, if there was no one to hear him, there wasn't any sense in crying any longer! So James got up, brushed the sand off his clothes, and trotted up the steps and into the kitchen where he was able to get a drink of water quite easily by climbing on a chair.

It was only a step from the back door to the small garage where his father kept the family car and the velocipede had a place of its own in one corner. He might as well go and get that himself too! He could open the door just as well as not by standing on tiptoes.

Just as he came in front of the door, James stopped, for there right in the middle of a round knot hole near one of the hinges was an eye looking out at him. It made James feel decidedly queer to know that somebody had been close all the time, and hearing him call, and even hearing him talk to himself without his knowing it.

He stopped for he wasn't quite sure whether he wanted to go into the garage now or not, and while he was thinking about it, the latch clicked and the door swung open from the inside, and there stood his own Daddy smiling at him.

"Well, son," remarked his father, "you didn't know that I was home this afternoon, did you, and right in here working on the car! I've been watching to see what would happen, for I am quite surprised that you should expect Ellen to do things for you which you are entirely able to do for yourself. Ellen has her own work to do, and I know she's perfectly willing to leave it, to help you when it is necessary, but you are not a baby any more, and why should she trot around and wait on you as if you were?"

James hung his head. When he came to think about it, it had been kind of silly to work himself all up like that, and besides it hadn't done any good.

"I have been watching you through this knot hole," went on his father, "and do you know, James, that you have wasted about ten times as much energy trying to get out of going after what you wanted as would have served to get those things in the first place. And think of how unhappy you have made yourself. Your face is all streaked with dirt from crying, and you are red and out of sorts.

"Besides, I am wondering what the neighbors would think to hear such a racket from a lad who ought to be much too big for that sort of thing. Perhaps some day when you are really in trouble and want help, they will hear you but will just say to themselves: 'Oh, that's only James Brown. He is always screaming about something, and usually that 'something' is really just nothing at all.

"You know that once there was a boy who liked to cry 'Wolf! Wolf!' to get people to come to his aid, but one day the wolf really came and he was much frightened and in actual danger. But this time when he screamed 'Wolf! Wolf!' no one believed him, and he had to get away himself the very best way he could.

"We should not expect other people to help us nor yet to believe us unless we are truthful and sincere, and ready to do our best on our own account. Now there's your velocipede, and when you get through with it, don't ask anyone to take care of it for you, and don't leave it out in the driveway, nor on the front walk, nor in the garden. Put it back here in the garage where it belongs, and even take pains to stand it snugly up in one corner where it will be out of the way. To wait on yourself and to be independent is one way to learn to be a real man."

James felt quite ashamed of himself, for he didn't like to feel that his father had overheard him making such a fuss. He took the velocipede out of the garage, but he left it at the foot of the back steps for a few minutes while he went into the house and washed his face and combed his hair. He was quite surprised to find how nicely he could do this, for usually he waited for Ellen or his mother to do it for him.

Then he remembered that he wanted another drink of cool water. It really tasted better, he thought, when he got it himself than when some one else got it for him. He hung the cup up by the sink, climbed down from the chair, and started toward the kitchen door.

Then he paused a moment, turned around, looked at that chair and went back. It only took a minute to put it back by the window where it belonged, and he knew it would please Ellen to come back and find her kitchen as tidy as she had left it.

As he turned around, there stood Ellen in the door with some parcels in her arms. She was smiling.

"Well, well!" she exclaimed cheerfully, "what a big boy you are getting to be to wait on yourself so nicely!"

James nodded happily.

"I'm going to ride my velocipede," he said. "I got it out of the garage my own self!"

* * * * * *

There were times when James opened his mouth ready to call to somebody to come and do something for him, but usually he remembered in time to stop and wonder if he couldn't do that very thing himself. And after a while he learned that it's lots more fun to start and finish a thing nicely and to know that one can do a good many things on one's own account, rather than to wait helplessly for some one else to come and do it for you.—Selected.

CULTIVATING THE HABIT OF KINDNESS

The game started when mother overheard Alice and Tommy discussing how fervently they disliked Johnny Randall.

"He's a bad boy," Tommy said. "He comes over to play with me and breaks my toys."

"Let's chase him home next time," volunteered Alice.

Right here mother stepped in. "Why, children," she said, "what makes you say such unkind things? You know Johnny is very fond of you both and that he loves to come over. And I'm sure you'd miss him if he stopped coming. He's a bit rough, but if you asked him to be more careful, I think he'd try to be more careful. He is a brave little fellow. You have both noticed it and told me about it. You cry sometimes when you hurt yourselves, but I've never seen Johnny whine or cry about anything. Have you? He's always smiling and always cheerful. I'm glad he comes to play with you, and I think it would be a fine thing if you're talking about him to think of all the nice things you can say of him and forget the bad ones. We all have faults, but it isn't kind to talk of them."

So it started. That was several years ago. Whenever Tommy and Alice talked about anyone they thought of the nice things to say. "If you can't say something pleasant," mother counseled, "don't say anything."

The habit has grown. The two children really look for the pleasant side of every one, and it is a long time since they have said unfavorable things about anybody, old or young, thoughtlessly or as a pastime. And since they are looking for pleasant things in people they always find them, while every one remarks what sweet children they have grown to be. This does not mean, however, that the attitude of critical-mindedness so necessary for personal growth and right choice of associates has been neglected. Historical and fictitious characters have been discussed freely but always with charity and an attempt to get more than one point of view. This helps them to see their neighbors and friends in their true characters and to say about them only those things which are worth saying.

Not long ago a new boy joined Tommy's class at school.

"Gee, he looks like a sis!" growled one of the children.

"Let's haze him a bit," suggested another.

"I think he looks all right," promptly offered Tommy. "I bet he's just a regular guy feeling terribly shy and lost here, and he's all dressed 'cause they've just moved here and his mother wants him to make a good impression. Let's be nice to him and see."

They followed Tommy's advice and found he was right. Charlie was a "regular fellow" and soon was a favorite. He was spared many unhappy moments owing to one mother's thoughtful method of training her children always to think the best of the other fellow.—Zion's Herald.

WELL-SAID

The idea of a progressive Gospel seems to have fascinated many. To us that notion is a sort of cross-breed between nonsense and blasphemy. After the Gospel has been found effectual in the eternal salvation of untold multitudes, it seems rather late in the day to alter it; and since it is the revelation of the all-wise and unchanging God, it appears somewhat audacious to attempt its improvement.—Selected.

TAINTED SPEECH

We hear much in these days about tainted food. Cold storage unquestionably does arrest decay, and enables us to preserve many food-products in a wholesome state for a much longer time than was supposed possible in former years, but cold storage has been overdone to such an extent as to create an even greater suspicion in our minds concerning the wholesomeness of what we buy in the markets than was entertained in other days. A fuller knowledge of the noxious character of tainted foods doubtless has added to our dread. We have learned that the tainted food is not only unpalatable, but positively dangerous to health and life. We have enacted pure food laws for our protection. We forbid the placing of adulterations and noxious products upon the market.

The ancients were not unfamiliar with the fact that various substances decay, become putrid. They have words to describe such a condition. St. Paul found a Greek word with such a meaning and he wrote about "corrupt speech"—words which have become tainted. There must have been a great many such words in common use in that old morally rotten world in which he moved about. When he wrote to the saints at Ephesus he said: "Let no corrupt (tainted) communication proceed out of your mouth"—make no tainted speech; for even good words may be used in such a connection as to carry a taint with them. The fact is, that words get their taint as they proceed out of the mouths of men whose imaginations are polluted. Jesus taught that it is what comes "from within," out of men's hearts, which is morally defiling.

How much of the speech we hear is tainted! Many many irreverent words are uttered! How prevalent is profanity, and how insidiously it poisons the spirit of reverence! How common are the vulgar and indecent stories which men tell, and how often is it plain that their words have lingered in the chamber of an unclean imagination before they have emerged from their lips! But words that are neither unchaste nor profane may carry with them the distinct taint of insincerity.

Fresh, pure speech is just as necessary to the moral and spiritual life as fresh, pure food is to the physical life. St. Paul understood this also, and his admonition is positive as well as negative. Speak such words as will build up, such as will supply the manifest need of knowledge, encouragement and hope which you may easily see in the lives of those about you.—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

DEATH AN UNMASKING

Today the world is like a masquerade. High carnival is being held, and men wear their masques and dominoes, and strut about, and we think that man a king, and this a mighty prince. But the time is over for the masque; daylight dawns; strip off your garnishings; every one of you put on your ordinary garments! Who goes to the unrobing room with the greatest confidence? Why the man who feels that his next dress will be a far more glorious vestment. If any reader of this page seems to be what he is not, let him be wise enough to think of the spade, the shroud, and the silent dust. Let every one among us now put his soul in the crucible, and as we shall test ourselves in the dying hour, so let us judge ourselves now.—Charles H. Spurgeon.

NOTES

—The perils of air travel are exemplified by the experiences of Johnnie Kytle last Saturday night in trying to deliver the mail at Greensboro airport. He lost his way in the storm and wandered about until he got out of gasoline and had to descend. He found a place to land with little injury to the plane and none to himself. But where was he and how could he get away? He did not know. He went to a house to ask for help. The farmer must have taken him for a burglar, for he responded with a load of shot from an angry-sounding gun. Fortunately Johnnie was not hit, but he was not helped. He left a light in the plane that he might find it in the dark; but when he returned to it he found that the plane had burned up with all the sacks of mail he carried. Fortunately for Johnnie he can never know how much trouble will be caused by the failure of those letters to arrive.

—The rains last week left 175 people in Pender county surrounded by water but with no food supply. Fortunately for them their friends knew of their plight and came to the rescue.

—Miss Lacky, a granddaughter of Rev. W. D. Reed, is a student in High Point College.

—The 11-year-old son of Bro. Dwight Davidson, of Gibsonville, was operated on for appendicitis at Long's Hospital last Sunday night. He stood the operation well, though the case was urgent.

—J. C. Coe, Jr., was kicked in the head by a mule which he was trying to catch last Sunday night. He went to a hospital for treatment, but was able to return home. It is hoped that his injuries will not prove to be serious.

—Miss Marion Hunter, daughter of the late T. A. Hunter, will be married next Saturday night to Mr. E. E. Lindsay, of New York City.

—In his address at West End Sunday afternoon Dr. Andrews referred to the changes and improvements in church work during the last 30 or 40 years and asked all who would like to go back to the old custom of having sermons two and a half hours long to hold up their hands. Only one hand went up—that of Brother Herndon.

—In his West End address Dr. Andrews compared the progress of the church at that place to the journey of the Israelites through the wilderness across the Jordan into the Promised Land. Bro. Bethea, who followed and who has always an eye open for the ludicrous, remarked that the members of West End church, many of them, came out of Grace church, but he presumed their condition in that church was not to be compared to Egyptian bondage.

—One of life's shocking tragedies developed in our city recently. Leslie Wilmoth and Mrs. Duke were married about two weeks ago. In the midst of what is ordinarily the honeymoon, trouble came to them and both were shot and killed by one or the other, the coroner is unable to determine which.

—Rev. J. E. Pritchard's Buff Orpington chickens attracted much attention at the Randolph Fair and won a number of valuable prizes.

—Rev. J. E. Pritchard keeps tab on the weather changes in an official capacity. He received a number of telegrams giving information as to the progress of the late hurricane in Florida and other parts.

Orange is the "honor roll" charge in the report this week. Their remittance of $40 pays their college assessment in full. It is cheering to place this responsive charge in the Paid in Full list. First church, Charlotte, has the distinction of being on the college honor roll. This delayed information has just reached us. We are very happy to give to this vigorous church its merited place. Bethesda church, North Davidson charge, goes this week in the list of churches paying college assessment in full. This payment was made some time ago, but we learned only this week that it was "in full" for this church. We are glad to list this splendid church where it belongs, and we trust that this is only a beginning of North Davidson honor roll churches.

Brown Summit and Fairgrove churches, Haw River charge, also have paid their allotment on college assessment, and are entitled to promotion. Graham, Reidsville and Asheville go into the list of charges paying college assessment in full.

Brethren, let's make this list grow rapidly. There should be no charge in the Conference that fails to pay the college assessment. Let's do one fine thing, brethren, and make this assessment 100 per cent. "Aye," everybody?

We are grateful for the four charges that remit this week—Orange and Vance on college; and Bess Chapel and Welch on A. C. B. The list is not large, but this is only the "lull before the storm." We are in "pay time," now, and surely this list will grow each week. We trust that collections will not be held back until they can be augmented. Send in what you have, whether the amount is large or small, and let us have the inspiration and the encouragement of a large list each week.

We are reporting, in this edition of the Herald, the full amount that has been paid to date, including all credits due from missionary societies. If errors are discovered in this report, please call our attention to them promptly, so they may be corrected at once. We do our best to be accurate, but even then mistakes will sometimes occur.

Let us call attention again to the importance of details when remittances are made, especially if the amount sent pays some assessment in full. When that is the case, please do not fail to indicate it.

With full appreciation of all that pastors and people are doing in these busy closing days to bring the year to a happy ending, and with constant prayers for God's blessings upon our labors, I am,

Fraternally,

S. W. TAYLOR.

GRATITUDE

Father,
I thank
Thee!
For Faith to walk, my hand in Thine,
For Truth to know Thy Law divine,
For Strength to work with voice and pen,
For Love to serve my fellow-men,
For Means to give to those in need,
For Grace to help in thought and deed,
For Light the goal ahead to see,
For Life to use alone for Thee,
Father,
I thank
Thee!

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC

Oct. 7: WORKERS TOGETHER WITH GOD
I Cor. 3:1-9

(A Consecration Service)

By F. L. GIBBS

The Aim: Sunday, October 7, is Rally Day. Last Sunday the new work of the society was discussed and many new plans were made for the fall and winter months. This Sunday is a call, not only to a great rally, but a call to "work with God." As the society members answer the challenge to a greater work endeavor to impress upon each member that the work will be done in so far as each member is consecrated to the tasks confronting each one. Let consecration be the central aim in this service.

Try This Service

1. Worshipful prelude.

2. Silent prayer followed by a series of sentence prayers.

3. Hymn, "Take My Life and Let It Be Consecrated, Lord, to Thee." (Read by the leader, then sung prayerfully by all).

4. Scripture, by the leader, and comments on the topic.

5. Hymn, "Take Time to Be Holy."

6. Presentation and topic discussion.

7. Special music.

8. Talk on consecration, by pastor.

9. Reading of Christian Endeavor Pledge and roll call.

10. Silent prayer of consecration ending with C. E. benediction.

Questions for Discussion

1. What is the workers' equipment? (See II Tim. 2:15).

2. Does one have to be in all-time Christian work to be a "Worker With God?"

3. Are you a "worker" or a "shirker?" What is the difference?

Points for the Leader

A successful life must be a life of activity. One must work! There is no place in a constructive civilization for the "shirker." Not only work for the sake of being actively engaged in doing something, but we must work with some goal in view. One must cease aiming at "nothing" and hitting "it," but aim at those worthy ends that will bring joy and success to oneself and friends.

Our members should "work together." Cooperation must be evident in any successful organization. It must be the spirit in our Christian work. The new plans and task set by the society is the task for each member.

We must "work together with God." "Trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ I promise I will strive to do." These familiar words of our pledge show that close fellowship must be sustained with our Father and His Son, Jesus, if one is able to know what to do and how to accomplish it.

So it is the desire of your leader and of your officers, even of our Heavenly Father, that each one of us be consecrated to the tasks ahead, and to "work together with Him" in all we do.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

October 14: SPIRITUAL GIFTS

Scriptural basis: I Cor. 12:14.

Golden Text: Now abideth faith, hope, love, these three; and the greatest of these is love. I Cor. 13:13.

Diversities of Gifts

(Chapter XII)

A gift, as Paul states it here, is similar to a talent, as stated by Jesus. It is that God-given ability for service, such as prayer, singing, teaching, etc. "These gifts are diverse, but all are equally honorable because bestowed by the same Spirit, administered under the same Lord, and energized by God." In verses 8 to 10, these gifts are enumerated.

Today there may be slight differences in the gifts bestowed upon men because not all of the same gifts are necessary as in the days of the early apostles. But all have them. None can rightly refuse to apply themselves to the Lord's work for lack of ability.

Dependency for Growth

Dr. Amos R. Wells declares that "verses 12 to 30 constitute one of the most eloquent passages in Paul's writings, and, indeed, in the entire Bible." It is a very comprehensible metaphor, in which is described the relationship of the members of the church of Christ by the illustration of the human body.

How dependable each part of the body is upon every other part! One cannot say to the other, "I have no need of thee." And if one part suffers, the other parts are affected to a greater or lesser degree. How true it is of the church of Christ! Members cannot wrangle with each other and expect the church to grow. There must be harmony and sympathy.

Desire for Greatest

The chapter ends with an admonition to "desire earnestly the best gifts." What a pity it is that so many professed followers of the Lord Jesus are satisfied with that which is much short of the best. No sensible man would eat at a weinie stand when a sumptuous meal was awaiting him in the banquet hall. And yet, that is what we are doing spiritually. The desire for greater things is lacking. God grant that that desire may be created in many of us!

Seriousness of Love

Now follows the sublime "Love Chapter" of the Bible. Men, women and children should know it from memory. Better still, all should know it by heart. In the beginning, the writer points out the folly of the use of gifts without love. Oratory may be used, great understanding may be had, marvelous faith may be exercised, benevolence may be practiced, and even martyrdom may be submitted to—all these are commendable, but without love, they amount to nothing.

Do we find such practices in our church activities today? Are there preachers of the gospel who depend upon their eloquence to save sinners and edify saints? Are there teachers of the Word who use their knowledge alone to inculcate sacred truths in the lives of children and young people? Are there men and women of wealth who try to buy their way into heaven by gifts of large sums of money? O, fools these be! Let love be the motive, the dynamic, that prompts all Christian service.

Substance of Love

Love is long-suffering, is kind, is not envious, is not conceited or vain, is courteous, gracious, polite, seeks others' interests, opposes evil without becoming angered, holds no grudge, rejoices with truth, patiently bears buffets, sneers, etc., is quick to believe the truth, is hopeful, and is enduring. What a list of noble characteristics!

Read over these few verses carefully. Think of each separately and strive, by the help of the Spirit, to obtain the full meaning contained therein. Ask yourself if the motive of your services measures up. Then determine that love shall be the dominating force in prompting you to do service for your Master and your fellowman.

Supremacy of Love

Concluding the chapter, Paul declares the supremacy of this great virtue. He states that other things may vanish, but love will remain. "Earthly knowledge is partial, but heavenly love will be complete, doing away with all in our present lives that is fragmentary and unsatisfying. Our life here is like the crude beginnings of childhood; the perfected life in which love reigns will be the life of a full-grown soul." Faith and hope are so essential to our spiritual welfare. We can do without neither. But above them both, stands out love as a beacon to draw the earth-attracted, carnal-minded and self-centered from the ways of death.

Prophecy Not Trivial

(Chapter XIV)

Paul was a "prophet-preacher." "The New Testament prophet is not ordinarily a fore teller, but rather a forth-teller, one whose gift enabled him to speak 'to edification, and exhortation, and comfort.'" Hence, he could conscientiously and consistently emphasize prophecy above speaking with tongues. "Whatever may have been the exact nature of that ecstatic form of utterance, Paul knew that it required interpreting, and held that without interpretation it could not move the consciences of unbelievers, or win them to Jesus Christ." "Tongues and the sign gifts are to cease, and meantime must be used with restraint, and only if an interpreter be present."

Propriety in Temple

It has been previously observed in these columns that Corinth was a licentious city, a place "where so many women are shameless." They were therefore instructed to keep silent in the temple of God, and show modesty and retirement. It was required of them in those days. Narrow-minded and antiquated is he who declares that this law prevails today in our enlightened age.

We may well couple together verses 33 and 40 in support of this argument. As God in a perfectly orderly manner brought the world out of chaos, and likewise operates the great solar system, so must the church practice this essential requirement toward perfectness in worship. How many church bodies are careful about this today? How is it with the church on whose register your name appears? What do you do to help to maintain it?

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Liberty-Siler City.—Rally Day and Home-Coming Day will be observed at each one of these churches in October; the first Sunday in Siler City and the second Sunday in Liberty. Rev. F. L. Gibbs is to be with us in these services in Siler City, and we are inviting him to meet with our Christian Endeavorers at the parsonage in Liberty on Saturday night, October 6.

We are also inviting a special speaker for the Rally-Home-Coming Day in Liberty on the second Sunday.

At the suggestion of the treasurer of the church we are asking our people in Liberty to make the second Sunday in October Pay-Up Day, and will also ask Siler City to make the third Sunday in October Pay-Up Day. We are confidently expecting a good financial report for Conference. Mr. W. E. Sharpe, of Siler City, is delegate to Conference.

Miss Eva Spencer and Miss Nettie Stewart, of Liberty, have returned to High Point College. Miss Lebus Stone, of Siler City, has entered the freshman class in High Point College. Miss Helen Long Hanner, of Liberty, is in a business college in Greensboro. and Miss Pauline Elkins, of Liberty, is in a business college in Richmond.

Mr. Frank Shepard, Mr. Charles Elkins, and Mr. Paul Butler recently entered the freshman class in the University of North Carolina, and Mr. Ralph Frazier entered the freshman class in Wake Forest. All four of these young men are from Liberty.

All these young people were faithful workers in our Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor societies and we shall greatly miss them. We pray heaven's rich blessings upon them in their preparation for larger service for the Master.

Funeral services for Mrs. Beach Cooper will be held at Pine Grove church today. An obituary will appear later.

A. G. DIXON.

Burlington, First Church.—The offering taken last Sunday for the sufferers of the storm-stricken area amounted to $19. The regular offering of the Sunday school today amounted to $18.42, and the attendance was 271.

Bro. Gerringer brought a splendid sermon at the morning hour on the text: "Follow me and I will make you fishers of men." As this was the beginning of our special meetings, this subject was especially appropriate. Bro. G. F. Millaway, who is to do the preaching in our meeting, has arrived and preached his first sermon at the evening services to a particularly full house. His discourse was very appealign and full of the old-time gospel." We are expecting a great meeting and hope the entire membership of the church will attend as much as possible.

The attendance of the Baraca class was very good today and Lawyer John R. Huffman taught the lesson in a very helpful and forceful way. We were indeed glad to have him with us and invite him back again.

The second Sunday in October with us will be Pay-Up Day, and we trust that each member will do his or her best to pay up, if they are behind with their dues. This Sunday will also be the time to make a new pledge for next year's work, so come prepared to furnish your steward with your pledge for the new Conference year.

The fourth quarterly conference will be held October 17th and plan now to attend this meeting.

Sunday, the 14th of October, will be Rally Day and a special program will be rendered in the evening and an offering taken.

Mrs. J. G. Rogers, who was injured in an auto accident some weeks ago, is able to be out some now, we are glad to report.

We kindly request your earnest prayers for a great meeting during the next two weeks. Best wishes.

L. A. BRAXTON, Reporter.

Grace Church, Greensboro.—The congregation enjoyed two very worth while sermons Sunday. The topic for Sunday morning was "The Importance of An Attitude," and Sunday evening on "The Light of the World," the second of a series of "I am's."

The ladies of the church gave a very delightful Brunswick stew. They served lunch from 12 till 2 and dinner from 6 to 8.

The Senior Christian Endeavor Society is starting a contest next Sunday. The society has been divided into two sides with John Taylor and Dorothy Haltom as captains. The score will be based on points, ten for a new member, five for a visitor, five for attendance, and five for attending church twice Sunday. The society thinks that this contest will greatly help the attendance. The losers are to give the winners a party.

The Sunday school is beginning to get back to normal again after the summer vacation. The famous star classes of last year are getting together again. Last Sunday morning the Baraca class had charge of the closing exercises. They had a well known negro quartette sing for us. The music was enjoyed by every one. REPORTER.

Orange Charge, Chestnut Ridge Church.—The revimal meeting began here Sunday, September 23rd, and closed September 30th. Rev. G. F. Millaway did all the preaching except one sermon by Rev. D. R. Williams, one by Rev. M. Ivey Crutchfield, and two by the writer. Other ministerial brethren attending and rendering service in these meetings were Revs. O. B. and T. A. Williams, Rev. F. L. Gibbs. Brother Gibbs delivered a splendid address the fifth Sunday afternoon. The sermons by Revs. D. R. Williams and M. Ivey Crutchfield were faithfully delivered and well received.

Bro. Millaway was at his best and delivered a splendid series of sermons. These made a profound impression. The church was revived, about 40 were converted and reclaimed, 25 new members were received into the church. The offering for Bro. Millaway was $30. We are grateful to all these brethren for services rendered. To God be the praise for the results. B. M. WILLIAMS.

Greensville Circuit.—The revival meetings are all over for this conference year and my reporters have all gone dead or fallen in waste-baskets or something has happened to them. They may be busy getting ready to get married; so I'll come into print again.

My meetings at Matthews Chapel, Wesley's Chapel, and Ebenezer were good. These three churches were greatly revived. A few conversions, a few additions. She pastor was assisted at the three churches by Rev. A. D. Shelton, Pleasant Hill, N. C. Bro. Shelton did some great preaching. It was well received by the three congregations. Bro. Shelton won a place in many hearts and his sermons will be long remembered and the influence of these gospel messages will live long in the years to come. Bro. Shelton is a welcome guest on Greensville charge and may be the next pastor, as the present pastor is now rounding up his fifth year and someone will be sought to serve this faithful people another year.

The meeting has been reported from Hobbs Chapel. Rev. Glen Madison was my help and did all the preaching from the first to last. Bro. Madison is one of our promising young men and won his way socially as well as showing himself a skilled workman for the Master. Seven additions to the church. The church was greatly revived. All were glad to have this young man and servant of Christ with us.

The second Sunday in September we were in our revival at Philadelphia. Rev. C. L. Spencer, pastor of Halifax Circuit, was our help. Bro. Spencer did all the preaching and did it so well that he completely captured the people from the start and grew as a master builder to the close of the meeting. The Lord gave us an old-time revival. It reminded one of days of old; many backsliders were reclaimed. Bro. Spencer is popular with this people and they will be glad to see him return.

There has been some progress on this charge this year. Philadelphia has put in a modern heating plant at retail cost of $125 and carpeted the aisles and pulpit at a cost of $120. Matthews Chapel has painted inside and out at a cost, if it had been contracted, of $175. Wesley's Chapel has been recovered, painted inside and out at a cost of $350. The above improvements have been made and paid for.

My fifth year is closing with progress along all lines. This people has been loyal and faithful to their pastor through the five years of my stay with them. We have some great Methodist Protestants on Greensville Charge and my long stay with them has been pleasant and I have enjoyed the work. I regret I have not been able to do more for them. I trust some good man can and will be secured to carry this work on far beyond what I have been able to do.

May the good Lord bless them and all the Conference. REV. H. L. POWELL.

Pleasant Grove.—The pastor of this church wishes to thank the good people who made it possible for him to enjoy a two weeks' vacation. We appreciate the rest and the time, we trust, was profitably spent.

All services of the church for the latter part of the summer have been held under conditions not favorable because of repairs being made on Highway 10. This work has now been finished and if we could get out of the mud from the higway to the church—a distance of only a few hundred yards—we would be in fine shape for more aggressive work.

The new Hasty High School has had a fine opening and bids fair to be one of the best in the county. Our new parsonage is now being built just off the highway towards the high school. When complete, this will be one of the best parsonages in the Conference so far as workmanship and material are concerned. We do not approve of the interior arrangement, but have been powerless to prevent it. As it is being built, you enter the parsonage from the driveway through a large outside door in the dining room. Instead of a breakfast room adjoining the dining room, there is one large room supposed to be used by pastor and family as living room, cook room, and breakfast room. Instead of a closet in each bed room there is to be one large closet adjoining the bath room. This, I suppose, is to be used by the entire family. The pastors who follow us here will certainly have a good home beautifully located. We are now asking that all who like the arrangement please give the trustees all the honor, and if any dislike it, please do not blame this pastor, who has done all in his power to get it differently arranged. Contractor J. R. Beasley is building it exactly according to contract and is doing extra good work.

Mrs. Alvan Kennedy has been right sick for several days, but is now able to be out again.

We wish to thank Bro. I. A. Teague for a bushel of potatoes, and Bro. Noah Charles for apples. Mrs. Teague has also given us vegetables, for which she has our thanks.

The Philathea class has purchased on organ for their class room. This is commendable. The class, with Mrs. J. R. Meredith as teacher, is doing fine work.

The outlook now is that the Grove will make the best financial record this year since its organization in 1828.

Pleasant Grove Brotherhood.—A meeting was held Saturday evening in the home of Bro. F. H. Clark. Owing to bad weather, all the members were not present. The president, Bro. Burton, presided over the meeting. After the business was transacted, Bro. T. W. Kennedy, of English Street church, made a talk. We enjoyed very much having him with us, and the encouragement he gave for our church and Brotherhood.

Bro. J. M. Kennedy was able to be at our meeting. He has been confined at home for quite a while with eye trouble. A speedy recovery is our wish for him, as he is missed very much in our church services.

After the meeting refreshments were served.

Enfield.—Rally Day services at our church have been postponed until the second Sunday morning in October. The program is expected to be very good; we hope the attendance will be large. We are expecting President Taylor to speak at the evening services the second Sunday of this month; we hope many of our members can hear him.

Our Sunday school is doing well; the attendance holds up exceedingly well. We are also glad to have visitors in the various classes most every Sunday.

The Intermediate C. E. re-elected officers the fourth Sunday in September, as follows: Miss Frances Ernest, president; Mr. Luther Parker, vice-president; Miss Patty Ruth Neal, secretary; Miss Ellen Maddry, treasurer.

Mrs. J. Clyde Auman was the leader in charge of the Senior C. E. last Wednesday night. Her topic was "How Missionary Interest Broadens Our Knowledge." Having been a missionary, Mrs. Auman gave us very helpful and interesting knowledge concerning the above topic.

Mr. J. B. Davis has been elected delegate to the Annual Conference.

Girls leaving recently to resume their work in college are Misses Louise Wallace, Gladys White, Ruby and Elizabeth McGwigan. We will miss these girls from their class in Sunday school and church service. We hope they will attend church in their various college towns.

The Ladies' Aid met last Monday afternoon, September 27, in the home of Mrs. Sam Pierson. The assisting hostesses were Mrs. E. E. Stallings and Miss Mary Collins.

The meeting was presided over by the regular president, Mrs. R. C. Rives. The devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. Sam Pierson. Various committees made reports on work which had been assigned them. Plans were made to send a box to the Children's Home about Thanksgiving. An order has been sent to Japan for articles appropriate for Christmas gifts; these will reach Enfield in November, and be put on sale soon after their arrival.

Mr. B. R. Kimball, Sr., and Mrs. Cecille Matthews were mentioned among the sick; we wish for both a speedy recovery.

Miss Mary Collins and Mrs. Lloyd Matthews were appointed to keep flowers in the church during October; Mrs. Arthur Vick and Mrs. Eli Bellamy were asked to visit the sick during October.

The hostesses served delicious rolls, hot coffee, chicken salad and grapes.

Halifax.—We have just finished our revival meetings. We have reported for the first four churches. Rev. A. D. Shelton assisted us at Harmony the week following the third Sunday in August. We continued this meeting for only two days on account of the heavy rains and high water. We may hold for a few days following the third Sunday in October. We began our revival at Ringwood on the fourth Sunday in September. The weather was good and the attendance very good. Rev. W. H. Neese, of Randleman, assisted us here and the people were well pleased with his messages.

We want to thank Mrs. S. A. Whitley for a nice ham, Frank Thomas, G. B. Rice, and others for gas, Mrs. Peggy Lee for six nice chickens, and others for other good things for the pantry. We are closing the fourth year on this charge and have never lived among a more faithful, loyal people than we have on this charge. They have always paid every cent they promised the pastor and given him so many things besides during the year.

Our fourth quarterly conference will meet at Bethesda church on Friday, October 19, at 2 p. m. We want all of our officials to be present, and we want each official or chairman of each board to bring a written report.

Our charge is right much behind on salary and budgets, but we are expecting them to come up in October and make just as good or better report than they have made in the past few years. C. L. SPENCER, Pastor.

Asheboro.—Yesterday was a day to be well remembered by Asheboro Methodist Protestants, as it was an important day in Sunday school as well as the church. The day started off with Rally Day and Promotion services in the Sunday school. A number of children were promoted from one department to another, which made it a great occasion for them, as they were looking forward to this day. New officers were elected for the coming year. We feel that great work is going to be done in the Sunday school this year.

At the 11 o'clock hour Rev. R. M. Andrews, of High Point College, preached the dedicatory sermon, which was inspiring. Mr. R. R. Ross, being one of the charter members of this church and chairman of the board of trustees, presented the church for dedication. This service was also in memery of the late Mr. J. S. Lewis, who made it possible to dedicate the church at this time. A large congregation, including a good number of out-of-town members and friends, was present to witness this scene, which was the first service of this kind for a great many people. The choir rendered splendid music. Messages of congratulations and good wishes from Dr. T. M. Johnson and Rev. and Mrs. L. W. Gerringer were read and much appreciated by the congregation.

At the evening hour Rev. N. M. Harrison preached on "Consecration," which was very helpful. The program for the entire day was a wonderful success, and, we feel, will help greatly in the future growth of our church.

Greer's Chapel.—On September 2, 1928, Rev. R. S. Troxler began his revival meeting at our church. He delivered many wonderful sermons which were heard by large crowds. Several people were converted and 12 joined the church. Words can't express how much the meeting meant to the people, not only in our community, but in other communities also. The week of the meeting God was so near us until everybody was happy and sweet.

One of the greatest sermons we ever heard was delivered Sunday, September 30, when Rev. R. S. Troxler filled his appointment with us. We were glad to hear this good sermon and were glad to receive two new members into the church.

Our church is increasing in faith, number and work. REPORTER.

Asheville.—We are all eagerly awaiting the return of Bro. Paschall with his bride. They will arrive the latter part of this week, and he will preach at both services next Sunday. In the pastor's absence the pulpit has been filled by Rev. Homer Casto, Rev. F. L. Gibbs, Rev. Lex Klutz, Rev. R. E. Lineberger, and Mr. Fred Willis. Bro. E. C. Fawcett conducted the prayer meetings. Every speaker gave us splendid messages. A visitor said: "Your church certainly always has a good supply in the absence of your pastor."

The district meeting of our missionary societies will be held at Union Chapel October 26. Mrs. C. W. Bates, of Greensboro, and Mrs. George R. Brown, of Reidsville, will be with us and we are going to have a good meeting.

Our C. E. Society seems to be growing in numbers and also in interest. We have had an average of 51 present for three Sundays. Mrs. Owen Edwards led Sunday night and she divided the members into two groups—with Prof. Holt Hunter as score-keeper. This made the meeting very interesting.

Since our last report the oldest member of our church has passed away. Mr. Mark Woodlief was called home August 14, 1928. He was 88 years old and had been in declining health for some time. He was laid to rest in the family cemetery near the home.

We regret that Mr. H. A. Finch has not been able to attend services for several Sundays. We hope that he will be with us again soon.

Friends of Mr. S. U. Floyd will be glad to learn that he is improving after having undergone an operation four weeks ago at the Maria Parham Hospital. We hope that he will soon be able to return home.

CALVARY CHURCH NOTES

—Captain A. M. Rankin, of High Point, recently visited Calvary M. P. church in Greensboro. He has this kind word of comment: "Calvary has the finest church site in Greensboro."

—The following new members were welcomed into the church recently: Mr. and Mrs. Sistrunk and their daughter; David Glass, wife, and son. Bro. Sistrunk came from South Carolina and settled on Randolph Avenue to fill the position of general manager of the Swift Fertilizer plant. Bro. Glass and family have long lived among us and are well and favorably known by us.

—Evangelistic meetings to continue ten days will begin next Sunday. Rev. R. A. Hunter, of Henderson, is to come next Monday and do the preaching till the close. There will be a morning service and a night service. We are praying and hoping for good results.

—The C. E. Society recently elected officers. Bro. Reynolds succeeds Bro. Wagner as president. There were twenty present last Sunday evening and there was manifest a disposition to go forward into greater activity.

—Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk was in attendance at services last Sunday night. He takes a deep interest in all work for the church.

—Last Sunday was called "Loyalty Day" by Pastor Bates. One expression of loyalty called for was the making of pledges for next year's budget. A committee at church in the afternoon waited on those who came to make pledges. The aggregate of pledges encourages the hope that when all have been heard from the budget will be underwritten.

—A supper of savory chicken pie was recently served by the Ladies' Aid Society in the Hut. This Friday evening they are going to vary the menu by serving Brunswick stew.

NOTICE TO PASTORS

Report blanks will be sent out the last of this week, and ought to be in your hands by the time you read this. If you fail to get them by the first of next week, notify me, and I will send another set.

There are two blanks of each sort in the envelope. Practice on one, and make the other out carefully for the conference officers. There are no changes in the blanks this year; so practice ought to make perfect. There has been a noticeable improvement in this matter, but we haven't reached perfection yet, as the Statistical Secretary can testify.

Credential cards were sent out the first of September. At this writing, 24 charges have failed to make return. Carelessness, perhaps, but both the President and the Secretary are greatly delayed in their work. Won't you please return the card, or if you have lost it, please send me the information.

Some of the brethren have sent me the name of the alternate on the card with the delegate's name. The election law says that "the alternate delegate shall be elected at the fourth quarterly conference." I do not need the name unless the delegate cannot come. C. W. BATES, Secretary.

—Mr. D. M. Sullivan and Mrs. Annie Breeden were recently married in Richmond, Va.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

McQueen

William Calvin McQueen departed this life September 4, 1928, aged 65 years, three months and 11 days. He was a member of the Rockingham M. P. church. For some time he had been in failing health.

The funeral service was conducted at the M. P. church on Wednesday afternoon, September 5, by his pastor, assisted by Rev. T. W. Hearne, pastor of the Baptist church, after which his body was laid to rest in the Wortham cemetery to await the resurrection.

Brother McQueen leaves to mourn their loss a widow, two daughters, four sons and a host of friends and loved ones. Our sympathy goes out to the bereaved ones. May the good Lord bless and comfort them.

Preacher in Court.—A Presbyterian minister in eastern North Carolina was brought into court charged with running down a cow with his automobile. The judge asked: "Have you a lawyer to defend you?" The minister replied in the negative. Then the judge said: "Have you anything to say in your own defense?" "If it please your honor, I have," said the clergyman. "I was driving on the public highway when this cow rushed in before me without blowing her horn or displaying her tail-light, and I ran over her." Brethren, get busy! There will be only about eight days left till we will start to Annual Conference. Do your best before the quarterly conference. H. L. POWELL.

Preacher in Court.—A Presbyterian minister in eastern North Carolina was brought into court charged with running down a cow with his automobile. The judge asked: "Have you a lawyer to defend you?" The minister replied in the negative. Then the judge said: "Have you anything to say in your own defense?" "If it please your honor, I have," said the clergyman. "I was driving on the public highway when this cow rushed in before me without blowing her horn or displaying her tail-light, and I ran over her." The general laugh that ensued was too much for the gravity of the court. He dismissed the case and called for the next on the docket.

—Mrs. W. B. Cooper, of Siler City, died last Sunday. Bros. Dixon and C. G. Isley assisted in the funeral service on Monday. Pneumonia was the cause of death.

—Land on which lespedeza has been grown will produce twice as much corn as where there was no lespedeza, according to J. D. Whitley, of Oakboro, in Stanly County.

Also, we received some clothing for boys from Mrs. Johnson, Siler City. About three bushels of pears, but do not know to whom credit is due. Nice quilt from one of the societies in Birmingham, Alabama.

For all we are very grateful indeed.

On last Sunday, September 23, one of our boys, Herbert Garmon, underwent an operation for appendicitis. We are glad to report that he has gotten along unusually well, and will soon be home again.

This being our last report before leaving the Home, I wish to take advantage of this opportunity to express our sincere appreciation to the many friends whom we have met, and learned to love, and others whom we have not had the pleasure of meeting, yet have had their fine spirit of co-operation. Had it not been for the loyalty of our good people this work could not continue. May you all be richly rewarded, and may we continue to have your prayers.

We hope Dr. A. G. Dixon, as he enters upon his new field of labor, may have your loyal support.

Needless Alarm—A Randolph citizen not noted for his general intelligence but whose wife was very much noted for her extreme homeliness went to mill one day and was much exercised over the signs of the times. He especially feared Roman Catholic domination. He said: "If they get in power it won't be six months before they will burn all our churches and take our Bibles from us and then their next move will be to rob us of our wives." With more force than politeness the miller replied: "Just wait till they see that woman of yours."

The Holy Spirit's Part and Ours

Some confusion exists as to the relationship of the Holy Spirit and the members of the church in the work of extending the Kingdom. Both are agents in impressing the truth of the gospel on the minds of men. But since the Holy Spirit is so infinitely superior to us in power and effectiveness, it is natural to feel that our efforts are incomparable to His and may therefore be omitted in favor of His. Or we may conclude that our duty is completely done when we have prayed the Holy Spirit to bring conviction to the persons whose salvation we desire. But in the view of Christ, the great Captain of our salvation, we cannot thus escape the responsibility and duty of our personal work. In John 15:26, 27, Jesus declares, "The Spirit of Truth shall testify of me, and ye also shall bear witness because ye have been with me from the beginning." Jesus might have committed the whole work of evangelization to the Holy Spirit, but He did not do so. Men also, the men who had been with him from the beginning, were to give their testimony. From that day to this those who have had experience of Jesus' saving power have been called upon to add their testimony to the witness of the Spirit. Human testimony would amount to little if it were not confirmed by the witness of the Spirit, and on the other hand the work of the Spirit would not have complete effectiveness without the supplement of human testimony. We cannot put off our work on the Spirit of God, but we can further and facilitate the work of the Holy Spirit by moving and acting in the line of His suggestions and promptings.

Fountain of Perpetual Youth

Ponce de Leon sought it in Florida, but failed to find it. Perhaps he thought in this land of ever-blooming flowers human life would be perpetually rejuvenated. But he did not find it so. Recently the would-be-young-again have had their hopes aroused by the announcement that a diet including certain glands of animals would restore lost powers and bring back youth. But these hopes have been dashed. There will probably be other advertised restoratives of youth, but all will no doubt prove disappointing. Decay and death are in the order of nature, and much as we may dislike to contemplate such an end for ourselves and our friends, we might as well make up our minds to accept our fate without protest. But we can do a better thing than that. We can believe that nature's way which is God's way is best. We can believe that every stage of our life in this world has its divine purpose to fulfil. The functions of life vary with its periods, but every period brings us to new duties while it releases us from some of preceding stages. Aged and aging people need not feel useless unless they voluntarily make themselves so. God has no superannuates, He gives to all an honored part in His service. How gracefully some old people grow old! It is because they cheerfully accept the changes of life as divinely ordained means to spiritual development. With them decreasing physical power is accompanied by increasing spiritual power. Infancy, childhood, youth, manhood, old age—all have their place in the plan of God and all may be made to contribute to the grand total of spiritual growth preparatory to the immortal state that God has planned for us. If we regard ourselves as mere animals, mere creatures of the earth, then old age has but little of value to offer. But when we see and feel the undying, the immortal in us, we find life increasing in interest and value. We take up again the forgotten dream of unfailing youth, project it into the glorious world of the future, and look forward to its sure realization in our own experience. This dream becomes more than a dream to us as we cherish it. It becomes a splendid reality and we with patience and yet with ever-increasing desire await its coming.

Great Peace Conference in 1930

A conference was recently held in Geneva to plan for a great peace congress of one thousand members representing all the religions of the world. The object of the great meeting is to prepare the world for universal peace. In this preparatory meeting just closed there were representatives of the Hindus, Buddhists, Confucians, Parsees, Jews, Mohammedans, Jains, Shintoists, Brahmans, Zoroastrians, as well as Christians. Two-thirds were of non-Christian faiths. In the great conference of 1930 three topics are to be discussed: what is each religion doing to promote peace; what can each religion learn from others as to the best way to bring about enduring peace; and how can the various religious communions co-operate to create sentiment for peace and goodwill among men. There was enthusiasm in the meeting and it is to be expected that the program adopted will be carried out, and that the conference two years hence will be an eventful one in the history of the world.

—"Take my name off the church register!" That is easily said in a moment of petulance or provocation, but it involves so very much that a man should be very slow to make such a demand. It sounds too much like saying to Jesus Christ, "Strike my name out of the Lamb's Book of Life." No man should join the church without serious thought, and no man should hastily give up his church membership. It is too sacred a matter to be trifled with or dealt with in anger or any kind of ill feeling.

—Successful Farming, Des Moines, Iowa, says that "Prohibition of alcoholic liquors is the outstanding issue in the world today. The liquor interests are fighting every inch of the way because it deprives them of enormous sums of money and great political power."

—A stone cast into a pond changes the centre of gravity of the earth. You never know what a loving act will produce.

THREE HEROES OF FREEDOM

The sixteenth century was an age of great men who towered far above the common level. The masses, notwithstanding the new spirit of learning brought in with the Rennaissance, were densely ignorant and superstitious. There was no open Bible and, if there had been, the majority could not have read a word of it. It was an age of notorious social laxity. Kings, popes, and priests not uncommonly practiced an immorality so open and constant as to excite little surprise and no comment. Scarcely possible is it for the mind of the twentieth century by the best aid of the imagination to reproduce the sixteenth. The picture presented by reputable historians is by no means appealing. The dominant church, though professing to voice the law and will of a Supreme Righteousness, was directed in the spirit of human calculations and expedients worthy the most worldly and unspiritual of worldly kingdoms. Who dared to say them nay? Men opened their mouths at the peril of their lives. Autocracy in its worst form, an ecclesiastical autocracy, held sway. Such has always been opposed to human liberty.

Among kings and popes and reformers appeared towering personalities. Charles V, the most powerful monarch of the sixteenth century, reigned for full half a century; Francis I, 37 full years. To know their bloody record in the Low Country read Motley. These were men of force and devout Catholics. The Medicean popes had among them men of wonderful ability and not one of them had any sympathy with the Protestant Reformation. But for the fact that each of the sovereigns of that time was really more interested in his dynasty than in the welfare of the church, the Reformation would have been strangled in short order. Luther would not have lived out half his days. However, in these days as set against the liberty of the individual, his influence over the German populace proved to be a factor for kings and popes to reckon with on the chess board of European diplomacy. So, in the desperate game of emperor, king and popes to protect, perpetuate or enlarge their respective temporal dominions, Luther was spared to do a work of world consequence.

Luther is the supreme historical character of the times and the best hated of them all. The papacy raved and issued a bull of excommunication against him. For 400 years he has been excoriated and held up as a monster in human history. At times the papacy simply grits its teeth in silence, bewailing the fate of the day following Luther and those of his day. We are in a freer world, for the day he nailed the theses papal absolution was doomed. He announced the right and privilege of the individual soul to find its spiritual birthright by approach to God through Christ without the intervention of any priestly or human agency. This struck a deadly blow at the very center of the whole priestly system of the papacy. It was a fight for freedom. Religious autocrats are still set against this doctrine of liberty, but the mighty currents of the world's life are running full and strong in favor of the ultimate overthrow of the last autocrat.

A child of poverty, struggling for a liberal education, Luther's father designed him for the law; but suddenly he changed direction and entered a convent. There he gave himself unremittingly to prayer and fasting, to a study of the classics and of the Scriptures. He made a visit to Rome, as to a holy shrine, full of reverent and devout anticipation; what he saw under the sanction of holy pretense filled his righteous soul with revolt. What he had learned amid vigils and prayers, in his convent study of the Bible, now clarified his vision and accentuated his convictions. He went to Rome a devout Catholic; he returned a Protestant.

In Wittenburg University thronged classes to hear his brilliant expositions of the Scriptures. Ordained to the priesthood, he suddenly flamed out as an eloquent preacher. His influence went far and near.

Pope Leo X authorized John Tetzel, a Dominican monk, to sell indulgences in Germany. This aroused all the opposition of Luther's religious convictions. His theses stirred to the core the heart of the nation; and aroused all the ire of the papacy. Luther burned the pope's bull of excommunication publicly in the market place. His superb courage was further shown in his going to appear before the Diet at Worms. Warned of his peril, he replied: "I would go to Worms if there were as many devils there as tiles upon the roof of the houses."

Luther gave the Scripture in the vernacular of the people which wonderfully influenced the German language as well as put the truths of the Bible within reach of the common people. In this work, he did for the German tongue much the same work done for the English by the King James Version and by Shakespeare.

Wonderfully human, filled with many weaknesses, dogmatic to a degree, leaving large fields of error and abuse untouched, Luther must be judged in the light of the times of which he was a product. It was a corrupt age, even among many religious folk, and no one expects him to be a paragon of perfection. But notwithstanding the abuse and villification heaped upon him by the minions of Rome, he holds and will continue to hold peerless a merited rank as the dauntless soldier whose strokes shattered irretrievably the papal despotism. Should one who opened the barred gateways through which spiritual thought and civilization itself could pass to larger liberties be forgotten?

The Reformers have been abused because of their differences and divisions. They were fighting for the right to be free to differ. No man has the right to speak the last word, not even an infallible pope. Authority, ultimate and dogmatic, rests not in any institution, dogma or book. There is but one unto whom all power in heaven and earth is given, and by the principle of the priesthood of believers for which Protestantism stands all are free to approach him. This is fundamental and we would do well not to allow any casting of dust into the air to blind our eyes.

Zwingli, a devout and exhaustive student of the Bible, quite independently formed his own conclusions and announced doctrines at variance with those of Luther. Zwingli having been reared under other conditions and in an atmosphere of intellectual liberty, the Swiss reformer went several stages beyond that of Luther, reared in the suffocating atmosphere surrounding his early days. His mind was independent, buoyant and free. He was the greatest Protestant of the two, though not such a leader of the forces arrayed against the tyranny of the times.

Zwingli made a triumphant fight against the sale of indulgences and contended stoutly for liberty of conscience which is not duly sanctioned by the Word of God; that Christ alone is our salvation; that the mass, in which Christ is offered for the sins of the living and the dead, is contrary to Scripture; that we should not pray to dead mediators and intercessors; and that marriage is lawful to all, clergy and laity; that purgatory is not taught in the Scriptures and that the Sacrament is a memorial supper, were some of Zwingli's contentions. Zwingli and Luther fell far apart on many questions. This was inevitable. For, from this on, internal forces and conviction of soul were to have priority over external constraints and the edicts of earthly absolutism.

Did space permit, Calvin and the work he did should be noticed at length. His extraordinary intellect, the system of doctrine he formulated, the work he did for civil liberty and else, deserve the fullest recognition. But this would require a volume.

However, the work of Calvin and of Calvinism in behalf of civil liberty should be kept prominently in the public mind and well in the fore these days so filled with empty pretention on the part of some. Calvin proved most effective in his day and he is not yet exhausted.

The exalting of an Almighty Ruler in the presence of whom all earthly potentates dwarf into insignificance; the drawing of a sharp boundary line between church and state; and the formulation of a democratic church organization, tended to make Calvinism potential in promoting civil liberty. This system of Calvin remains a mighty bulwark against pretentions and the thunders of John Knox reverberate still. Rome detests the name of John Calvin.

To the hardy, heroic men of might, such as Luther, Zwingli, Calvin and Knox, the world owes a debt of gratitude for the larger liberty which has come because they were the embodied foes of certain ecclesiastical pretentions in a day less free.

Though we may differ much about many things, the facts of history—and facts are at times stubborn and most severe—tell of a mighty struggle in the days of the Reformation and make to live the doings of the marvelous men whom the world will not willingly let die.

A great boulder, roughly squared, marks the place of Zwingli's fall, and bears the inscription: "They may kill the body, but not the soul." So spoke on this spot Ulrich Zwingli, who for truth and the freedom of the Christian church died a hero's death, October 11, 1531. But better, he and those like him live in grateful hearts still. Let their memories with us be fresh and green.—N. C. Christian Advocate.

A PRAYER FOR THE DAY'S BEGINNING

O give thanks unto the Lord, for he is good, for his mercy endureth forever. O Lord, I beseech thee, look down in thine infinite pity upon this, thy world; for lo! day is at hand, and thy children must soon awake to life, and toil, and temptation. O thou who art the Lover of men, let thy Holy Spirit wait to meet with each one of us upon the threshold of the dawn, and lead us through this coming day. Like as a father pitieth his children, so dost thou pity all the woeful and heavy-hearted. Look down upon all those who must so soon awake to their griefs, speak comfortably to them; remember those in pain who must so soon take up their weary burdens. Look down upon the hungry, and the rich, and the evil, and the good, that in this new day, finding each something of thy mercy, they may give thanks unto the Lord, for he is good, and his mercy endureth forever.—Jeffery Farnol, in The Broad Highway.

IN DEFENSE OF BRIDGE

Editor HERALD:

From editorial in last issue I take it that you have invited expressions as to the merits or demerits of bridge. You admit you do not have knowledge of the game and seem to base your opinion largely from the denouncement of bridge by a preacher who "has inspected reports of many social gatherings." I do not doubt the sincerity of this preacher's conclusions. However, before I admit his competency to judge, I prefer to know that he can play bridge and can play well. It is not enough that he "has inspected reports of many social gatherings."

I do not believe any one, even a preacher of the highest ability, who can play bridge expertly, will condemn bridge per se. I was brought up in a home, as was the editor, in which playing cards were not kept. I reached my majority with a prejudice against cards. Since, I have had many experiences—my knowledge has increased—my ability to pass judgment has enlarged. I have learned to play bridge, not expertly, but so well that my prejudice against cards has vanished. Now I am decidedly partial to bridge.

Bridge is an opportunity for four or more persons to have a pleasant evening in a quiet way at home. Bridge is a fine exercise for the memory. Bridge increases the power of concentration. Bridge develops the faculty of decision, and helps keep the mind active and nimble. Bridge diverts the mind from business cares and sends away disturbing causes and affords opportunity for rest and recreation. Bridge is one of the pleasures left to those of advanced years.

I commend bridge to all who have the mentality to grasp. I would think no less of a preacher should he play bridge, and if he plays well would have a higher regard for him on account of this accomplishment.

C. E. McCULLOCH.

Wilmington, N. C.

[We would like to hear further on this subject from people who know whereof they write. If the game is a good one, is it indulged in immoderately? Eating is a good exercise, but it does not justify gluttony. Are people wasting precious time on bridge? Or are they just indulging in needed and wholesome diversion? It is a serious and important question to those who play and who wish to spend life to best advantage.—Editor.]

NORTH CAROLINA ANNUAL CONFERENCE, METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH

The 101st annual session of the North Carolina Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant church will be held in the First Methodist Protestant church, Winston-Salem, N. C., Rev. J. H. Moton, pastor, beginning Wednesday, October 31, 1928, at 10 o'clock in the morning.

All delegates and ministers are expected to be in their places at the opening session; and it is hoped that they will plan to remain until the close. Much of the important work of the conference cannot be finished until the latter part of the session, and it is important that such matters should have the earnest attention of the entire conference membership.

May the Lord bless us as we meet in this session, and may we come with an earnest desire to glorify him in all that shall be done.

S. W. TAYLOR, President,
C. W. BATES, Secretary.

FOUNDERS DAY

We are planning to observe Founders Day at High Point College on October the 25th, at which time we hope to have a visiting speaker of more than state-wide reputation and to observe in a becoming way the founding of the college. This is to be a day observed on the college calendar every year, and at which time we are very eager to have as many of the friends of the college present as possible. Please co-operate with us in this matter by giving as wide publicity to the day as possible. The program begins at 10:30 a. m.

SLOGAN

for the Closing Quarter

No Charge Without an Honor Roll Church

We do not know how nearly this slogan is to be realized when the year is up. We do know, though, that it is worthy, and that if we try to make it good, and fail, we will not have tried in vain. There is time enough yet for a real effort to make this goal good. Last year there were seven churches that did this. They follow: Shady Grove on Moriah, New Hope on Why Not, Spring Valley on Vance, Mizpah on Haw River, Bethel on Alamance, Whitaker's on Whitaker, Mt. Carmel on South Lexington. Of course we are expecting these to do this again this year. They are our leaders; they have set the pace for other churches. Why not make this number grow until an entire page in the Journal will be required to list these honor roll churches? Pastors, please put this to the front. Get one or two interested leaders at your churches to help you push this matter, and amaze us with the results.

Winston

Oct. 3. On Wednesday night of this date we were with this church in their fourth quarterly conference. A goodly number of the officials were present, and all business was promptly and harmoniously transacted. A noticeable fact of the meeting was the absence of women. However, the Aid Society sent a written report to the conference, covering their activities during the year, and the church has missionary organizations that are doing good work also. The report of the Sunday school superintendent indicated that the school is in an encouraging condition and growing. All special days were reported held, we believe, to date, and the Rally Day program was in preparation. The church contributes monthly to the Children's Home. The finances, which pile up with most churches at this time, were about normal, and if any difference, the showing was a little more favorable than in other years. The pastor's salary and budgets will be paid in full, we are confident. This is a "Paid in Full" church. Bro. Moton has been faithful and zealous, since he was assigned there as pastor in the early spring, and has endeared himself to the people. All phases of the church appear encouraging, and the pastor will have a gratifying report to make to the coming conference. Bro. R. L. Hopper will represent the church in the conference. Bro. R. N. Hauser is the alternate delegate. Preparations for entertaining the conference are under way, and everything will be in readiness when the conference meets. A committee was appointed to secure a home for the pastor for next year. We enjoyed being with our friends again in this old church, and Bro. and Sister W. V. Hutchins have our thanks for entertainment in their home during the night.

West Forsyth

Oct. 4. From Winston we went to Harmony Grove church, on this charge, to attend their fourth quarterly conference. We preached at 11 a. m. and the conference followed. All churches were well represented except Tabernacle. No one was present from that church. A pleasing spirit prevailed, and the usual business of a fourth quarterly conference was transacted without discord. Plans had previously been made for some repairs on the parsonage, and three churches reported their allotments of the cost in hand. The desire is to have this work done in advance of the winter weather. We trust that it may go forward without delay. Bro. C. G. Hunter was elected as the alternate delegate for the charge. Bro. John W. Doub, for many years a licentiate of the charge, is the duly elected delegate, though he thinks he will not attend, owing to his physical condition. If he can not represent the charge, we trust that he may be able to visit the conference. Bro. Hunter, no doubt, feels quite at home in an annual conference; he has attended so many. His friends will be glad to see him again. At this time the charge was slightly behind in total amounts paid on budgets last year. Practically the total amount for college assessment was in hand. The charge will go on the honor roll again here. And we are hopeful that at least one church will be on this roll on all assessments. We shall be surprised if this is not true. The pastor's salary was in the category of many other charges at this date—only about half paid. We trust that every dollar of it will be forthcoming. It is small at most, and surely the charge will allow none of it to be unpaid. We suggest that the stronger church on the charge be scriptural, and help the weaker ones, that there may be no shortage in salary. Bro. Whitaker is closing his third year here, and has done constructive work during his pastorate. His infirm physical condition has hindered him during recent weeks, though his zeal for the work has been unabated. He has arranged to hold his revival meetings, and reports some good results. He will not be available for a work so heavy as this next year, owing to his physical condition, and so announced to the conference. The sympathy and interest and esteem of his friends on the charge will follow him when he leaves the work. We trust that rest may restore his strength, and that his years of usefulness may be lengthened. It is our faith that West Forsyth charge has latent possibilities, and we trust that in no remote future the charge may show signs of marked growth.

Anderson

Oct. 7. We were here on this date, and visited each of the two churches, with pleasing results. In the morning we were at Fairview, arriving in time to share in the Sunday school, and then preaching at 11 a. m. At night we were at Liberty Hill. The distance between these churches is about thirty-two miles. The pastor travels, in serving them, about twenty-five hundred miles a year. Since we were on the work, as a "boy preacher," many changes have taken place. Several who were active in the work then have been given their places in the church triumphant. Many who were very young then are home owners now, and active leaders in the church. We were glad to find some still in the churches who were leaders during our first experience with them, twenty-seven years ago. The old Fairview church that we knew has been replaced by a more modern building, and plans are now in the making for brick veneering it, and adding Sunday school rooms. This is very commendable, and we trust that it may soon be done. Liberty Hill has also been improved by paint and other changes. We have at these two churches splendid Methodist Protestants, and it is gratifying to find them hopeful and progressive. Pastor Ferree is doing good work; the people are pleased with him and are anxious for him to be returned to the charge. The conference programs were presented at each church, and it was gratifying to find the people responsive. We believe that the charge will make a good financial showing, and we are hopeful that they will increase the conference honor roll. This work should provide more salary for the pastor, and if matters continue as they are now, we believe this will be done before long. Helpful meetings have been held at each church, and the spiritual condition of the charge seems good. Our visit to this field gives us gratifying impressions. We are grateful to pastor and friends for their kindness, and for comforts provided for us while on the work.

Salaries

We appeal again to all church officials and to every member in behalf of pastors' salaries. Let us make this a record year by having every charge in the conference report pastor's salary "paid in full." Come on now, brethren, and let us do this. It will be a credit to your charge to do it; and a failure will entail hardships on your pastor. We are sure no charge desires that. Make "pay in full" your purpose, brethren, and let no charge fail.

Supply for Next Year

Is there to be a change of pastors on your charge? Please let that be decided in a friendly and Christian manner before pastors and delegates go to conference. Pastors sometimes deem a change advisable; so do charges. This is to be expected, and it is in perfect keeping with the itinerant system. Frankness will help much to make these changes easy, and will leave no grounds for misunderstanding. To let the best interests of the charge and the Kingdom be dominant will help much also. What every pastor should want is a charge where he can do the most good. And what every charge should want is a pastor who will be given the largest measure of co-operation by the people. With these conditions maintaining, a happy pastorate follows.

WHEN AGE STEALS ON

When we step on the downgrade of life, and see that it dips in the verge of the cold river, we want to behold some one near who will help us across. When the sight loses its power, we need that faith that can illumine. When we feel the failure of the ear, we need the clear tones of the divine voice. When the axe-men of death hew down whole forests of strength and beauty around us, and we are left in solitude, we need the heavenly dove to sing in our branches.—T. D. Talmage.

OUR STORY PAGE

A WONDERFUL DAY

A rainy morning can disarrange a good many things. This morning it was only drizzling, but it had rained in the night, and as Esther looked out on the dripping trees and gray sky she counted up her disappointments on her fingers.

" 'Twon't be a nice Memorial Day for any one, that's sure to begin with, and it won't be any at all for me. I couldn't wear my new summer dress and hat into Rockford if I went, and I can't go, because I know Uncle William won't come for me. He'll never bring his new car out a day like this. He's had it just long enough to be a good deal surer about skidding than he is about driving."

Having thus stated the case, Esther gave her long braid of hair an impatient twitch, and completed its dressing by tying it with a dark ribbon instead of the fresh pink ribbon that she had intended to wear. From below came 'Hetable's voice in the words that, for some unknown reason, almost invariably accompanied her beating up waffles for breakfast:

"Whatsomever yer lot,
If ye have, or have not,
'Tain't never made better by frettin'."

"It's a good thing her waffles are better than her singing," commented Esther in the safe privacy of her own room. "It's a shame to feel cross at good old 'Hetable, but I do wish she'd learn another tune; this is one of the times I can't stand that tune. I did so want to go to Rockford today!"

Downstairs mother gently sympathized with the disappointed girl, but so gently that it presently stirred the usually sunny Esther to laughter.

"You needn't try any more, mother," she said. "I know you're aching to tell me 'When it rains, let it rain.' I've heard that ever since I was four years old, and now I am thirteen, and it doesn't sound a bit more comforting now than it did the first time."

Mother smiled, but she added neither advice nor reproof.

"The good thing about mother is that when you have found your text she always leaves you to preach your own sermon," Esther's father used to remark.

Breakfast over, Esther donned raincoat and rubbers and ran out into the garden to look at the flowers she had meant to gather. They, at least, were not disappointing. Heavy peonies of crimson, pink, and white drooped their beautiful heads, but lifted them again as Esther shook away the moisture. The lilacs still held fragrant clusters of blossom, and the pansies smiled up at her brightly. It was while she was busying herself among them that she caught sight of a queer little figure moving along the walk outside the garden fence. At first it seemed nothing but a faded, flopping umbrella that in some mysterious way was drawing a small wagon covered by a shawl, but as the wagon drew nearer a pair of sturdy legs showed beneath the umbrella. Esther stared for a moment and then recognized the outfit.

"Why, Tommy Stebbins! What do you think you are doing?" she demanded.

The wagon halted, the umbrella was tilted sideways so that it revealed the boy who carried it, and small Tommy viewed his questioner with serious eyes.

"I'm a Dec'ration Day," he announced.

"A—what?" asked Esther, not sure that she had heard aright.

"A Dec'ration Day," repeated Tommy patiently. "Don't you know about them—a big girl like you? My grandfather was a soldier, and he's buried in that little graveyard over on the hill. Folks don't go there any more, and most every one that used to be there's been took to Rockford cemetery, but my grandfather he was a soldier, and I'm takin' flowers. Gram-mother put 'em in the wagon for me. She couldn't go 'count of her rheumatism, but I'm plenty big 'nough to go. We wouldn't let gramfather be forgot when he was a soldier."

"No, indeed!" said Esther heartily. "I'll go with you, Tommy. Come in here a minute, and we'll fill up the wagon with flowers that I was going to pick today."

She could understand the situation very easily—the lonely little burying ground, unused and seldom visited now, its scant space almost overgrown with rank grass and wild rose-bushes. The three or four mossy stones remaining there bore names of those whose kindred had long removed from the neighborhood, and the honor due the solitary veteran might well have been overlooked.

"I'm glad I can go too," said Esther, "I had nowhere to carry my flowers today."

She hastily gathered the choicest of them, and laid them beside the sparse array in the wagon where a small flag kept them company. Then the children took hold of the wagon together and started down the country road. The drizzling rain grew less and less, stopping altogether after they had traveled for half a mile, and with some difficulty Tommy succeeded in lowering his umbrella and shouldering it for the remainder of the walk. They made their way through the mat of heavy, wet grass until they reached the desired corner—a deserted corner it seemed until the children's hands carefully and skillfully deposited their treasures, and thus turned it into a mound of beauty. Esther exclaimed over the completed work, but Tommy did not seem quite satisfied.

"Did you ever see the folks do it at Rockford?" he demanded.

"The Memorial Day eexrcises? Yes, once or twice," Esther admitted. "They put up the little flag markers like this flag, and they strewed the flowers, and then they had singing and—observances."

"I want some of them beservances," said little Tommy with the air of one who was asking no more than belonged to him. "My gramfather was a soldier, too. He come in from the field and he said—my grammother told me—'Wife, I feel like my country needs me.' And she said, 'I don't know how we'll ever get along without you, Amos, but I feel just like you.' So he went, just like that, and his name's here on this stone—Amos Stebbins. My gramfather was a good soldier."

"So he was!" agreed Esther heartily.

"Well, then, why don't he have some beservances, too?" insisted Tommy as if his companion were in some way responsible.

"We—we might sing," suggested Esther a trifle uncertainly. "We know 'My Country' and 'Battle Hymn.'" The young voices were not very strong but they rang out clear and sweet on the quiet country air.

"In the beauty of the lilies Christ was born across the sea,
With a beauty in his bosom that transfigures you and me."

A car rolling along the road came to a halt at the sound,

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Siler City.—Immediately following the Sunday school hour last Sunday morning the Primary children rendered an excellent Rally Day program, which consisted of a number of recitations and a short play, entitled, "Rallying for Christ." We wish to thank Miss Sallie Smith, Mrs. Duncan Welch and Mrs. C. E. Brady, who made such a program possible. Under the auspices of Mrs. A. G. Dixon and Miss Sallie Smith the Christian Endeavor Society gave a beautiful pantomime Sunday evening, after which Rev. F. L. Gibbs delivered a very interesting message on the subject, "The Challenge of the New Century."

We were glad to have worship with us last Sunday Mr. Jerry Sykes, of Durham.

It is with regret we learn that Rev. and Mrs. Dixon will not be with us the ensuing year; yet we rejoice with those at the Children's Home to know they have secured the services of such agreeable and faithful people. We know our loss is their gain.

Our hearts reach out in sincere sympathy to Mr. Brack Cooper and family because of the death of Mrs. Cooper. Although a member of Piney Grove M. P. Church, Mrs. Cooper has been a regular attendant of our church since their moving here, which has been a number of years ago. The funeral service was conducted at Piney Grove M. P. church Monday, October 1, by Rev. Mr. Isley, assisted by Rev. A. G. Dixon, also Rev. W. L. Maness, of the M. E. church, Siler City.

PEARLIE MOORE, Reporter.

High Point.—An interesting Rally Day service was observed at 9:30 o'clock last Sunday morning by the Sabbath school. Miss Myrtle Davis was chairman of the program committee, with additional members as follows: Mrs. Minnie P. Harrell, Misses Lucille Pickens, Dennyce McAdams, and Grace Koontz. The attendance at this service totaled 475, and the offering amounted to $52.50.

At the hour for morning worship Mrs. J. H. Allred and Clarence Schultheiss sang a lovely duet, "I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say," by Rathbun, and the choir rendered a beautiful anthem, "Fear Not, O Israel," the solo parts being taken by Mrs. J. C. Whitesell, Mr. William Mason, of Greensboro, Mrs. J. H. Allred, and Clarence Schultheiss. Professor Stimson played the ever popular and lovely Sextette from Lucia. Rev. Roy I. Farmer delivered a very touching and comforting message on "The Art of Burden-Bearing" from that matchless text in Matt. 11:28, "Come unto me, all ye who are weary and heavy laden, and I will give you rest." There is no explanation for sorrow in our lives but faith in God. There is some burden of sadness, sorrow and heartache in every life. Hands that labor, brains that think, or hearts that ache must find release or help. When burdened ones hear and believe these words of Jesus, the invitation becomes music to the soul. He said, first of all, "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ." What is a burden? Anything pressing down upon the heart so that occasion is given for another to provoke, or some temptation to be overcome. We are our brothers' keepers. If one falls, another is under obligation to lift him. The thought of Christ's yoke making easier our burdens is divine. No one who lightens burdens for others is useless. The Word also states, "Every man shall bear his own burden." In the march of life some kits or packs are individual, and some burdens of sorrow, wounded conscience, or spiritual anxiety cannot be shared. The Christian rejoices that when burdens cannot be shared nor borne alone, he may accept that gracious promise, "Cast thy burden on the Lord, and He shall sustain thee."

"To every man upon this earth
God gives a burden to be carried down
The road between the cross and crown;
No lot is wholly free,
He giveth one to thee."

At the evening service the first of a series of sermons on texts of great churchmen was delivered by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Farmer, on "Martin Luther's Text."

The members of the Ladies' Aid Society were delightfully entertained Monday afternoon by Mrs. W. P. Pickett at her home on North Main street. There was an attendance of 40, and after the business session delightful refreshments of sandwiches, tea, pickles, and date-bars were served by the hostess, who was assisted by her daughters, Mrs. Harrell, Mrs. John H. Walker, and Mrs. John S. Pickett. We were delighted to receive one new member, Mrs. L. H. Zimmerman, who we feel will prove a most valuable addition to the society.

The topic discussed at the weekly C. E. Society meeting Monday evening was "Workers Together With God." This was a consecration service and was led by Miss Dennyce McAdams.

The Life of Christ is the subject to be studied by the Teacher Training Class on Wednesday evenings in conjunction with the mid-week prayer meeting. Our pastor will be the instructor.

Next Friday evening the First church will be at home to the faculty and students of High Point College, and the Methodist Protestant teachers in the city schools in the assembly room. Committees from the Christian Endeavor Society, Sabbath school, and Ladies' Aid Society have been appointed to make plans for this reception, which is an annual affair, and will, no doubt, prove a pleasant social occasion.

On Sunday morning the pastor took occasion to call attention to the campaign for the Methodist Protestant organ of our denomination, which has been so successfully edited by Dr. Frank T. Benson in Baltimore, Md., for a long period of years. He was successor to the late, lamented, and greatly beloved Dr. Francis T. Tagg. This paper is full worthy of the patronage of all our members, and it has contributed in no small degree to the growth and advancement of our denomination.

We are delighted to announce that Capt. A. M. Rankin, who has been ill again, is much improved.

Many friends here were greatly interested to hear of the birth of a son to Mr. and Mrs. Lewis White, of Greensboro, on Friday, October 5. Mrs. White is pleasantly remembered here as Miss Margaret Whitaker, who spent part of her girlhood here, she being the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. C. L. Whitaker, and Mr. White was also reared here, being the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. White.

Zoar Church, Mecklenburg Circuit.—We have just paid the A. C. B. in full, also the superannuate fund and delegate's expenses to General Conference. They go on roll for three items.

W. C. HALL, Pastor.

Midway, Haw River Circuit.—Our revival meeting began the third Sunday in September, continuing through the fourth Sunday and closing the following Tuesday night. Dr. and Mrs. A. G. Dixon came to us on Monday and did the preaching. They did some wonderful preaching that will bring fruit in years to come; the church was greatly revived. Eight professed faith in Christ; one reconsecrated her life to God, and five joined the church.

We were glad to have Dr. and Mrs. Dixon with us and have them in our homes. This is his home church and it seemed good to have the privilege of worshipping with him once more.

Our Sunday school is moving along nicely and we think it is doing a wonderful work. Rally Day was observed last Sunday; the children were trained by Mrs. R. P. Butler.

The C. E. Society is moving along nicely; the meeting was led last Sunday night by Frank Chambers. These young people are faithful and we hope they will grow up to be useful in our church.

MRS. G. W. APPLE, Reporter.

October 8, 1928.

Cid, Denton Charge.—The lovely autumn breezes are affording some of us good health, while some others are on the bed of affliction, but all feel thankful it's no worse.

Rev. E. A. Bingham, accompanied by wife and children, filled his appointment at Cid yesterday at 2:30 and gave us one of his inspiring sermons. May his words find way into some sin-sick soul and bring forth good fruit, as we are promised that from our labors. Communion was served. Had a good-sized congregation.

The Sunday school is getting back to normal since special meetings are about over with.

Bro. Bingham will preach at Cid next Sunday night for the last time this Conference year. We are in arrears, but hoping to come out in the minister's salary.

The church officers elected were: Trustees, Mr. A. F. Wright, Mr. Ben Parrish and Mr. M. L. Wright; stewards, Mr. C. W. Craver, Mr. M. L. Wright, Mr. A. F. Wright; Herald reporter, Mrs. N. W. Lanier. Sunday school officers: Mr. C. O. Leonard, superintendent; Mr. C. M. Craver, assistant superintendent; Mr. Walter Lambeth, secretary and treasurer; Mrs. Bessie Hedrick, organist.

We are sorry to say that Miss Bessie Hedrick is now in the High Point Hospital for an appendicitis operation. On Thursday her condition was reported as being favorable.

Mr. Allison Leonard, father-in-law of Mr. C. O. Leonard, has been real sick, but is convalescing now.

Best wishes for a good Annual Conference.

MRS. N. W. LANIER, Reporter.

Concord, Saxapahaw Circuit.—Mr. Loy last Sunday gave us one of his good sermons. As this was his last appointment at our church the officers for the coming year were elected, as follows: Trustees, Messrs. J. F. Woody, M. S. Guthrie, T. H. Moore, M. T. Hargrove and C. W. Johnson; tewards, J. C. Guthrie, B. S. Curl, R. S. Woody, L. E. Moore and H. G. Hargrove; class leader, L. E. Guthrie; reporter, Mrs. H. G. Hargrove; S. S. superintendent, H. G. Hargrove; organist, Mrs. R. N. Roberson.

The young people of our community are planning to give a play, "The Fruit of His Folly," at Whitney High School on Saturday, October 20th, at 7:30 p. m. The proceeds from this play will be used to start a fund for a new piano. The play is being directed by our pastor.

The Woman's Missionary Society will meet with Mrs. J. C. Guthrie Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

REPORTER.

Orange Chapel, Saxapahaw Charge.—Our reports have been few, but we have been moving a little since our last report. Our meeting began the third Sunday in August with Rev. J. Clye Auman, of Enfield, pulpit help. He came on Monday and remained until Friday. He did some splendid preaching we trust much and lasting good was done. Rev. H. L. Isley, of Tabernacle charge, was also with us part of the time. The church was revived and eight new members were added.

Mr. Auman was no stranger among us as he was our pastor before going to foreign field. We enjoyed having him with us.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society held its annual thank-offering at Orange Chapel the fifth Sunday in September with all-day service. We were very fortunate in seeuring Mr. J. Norman Wills as our speaker. He gave us a very inspiring missionary lecture. Come again, Mr. Wills.

We were very sorry that owing to the inclemency of the weather and muddy roads the congregation was small. We feel that those that failed to get there missed something.

Our pastor, Mr. Loy, has filled about all his appointments and we all like him and are hoping for his return for the coming year.

A READER.

Haw River Tidings.—At Midway the revival began on September 16 and continued for ten days. The discourses rendered by both Dr. and Mrs. Dixon were strong, elevating and impressive. To say the least, they were appreciated by all. It was a good revival. There were eight conversions and reclamations. Five joined the church. Dr. Dixon is a native of Rockingham County and for a number of years was a member of Midway church. His many relatives and friends who live in this community showed every sign of their great pleasure at having him and his good wife to mingle with them these few days. The pastor and his family shared this good pleasure. We were glad to have them in the parsonage a part of the time and we hope for their return to our midst on some other occasion.

The revival is now on at Brown Summit, beginning September 30. Rev. R. S. Troxler is doing the preaching and is conducting the singing to the delight of all present. Already there have been a number of conversions and reclamations. Seven have presented themselves for membership. The meeting will continue during a part of this week.

Our good people have learned that our Chevrolet does fine service as an auto-grocetaria. Twice during the Midway meeting when the pastor and family started for home it was found that someone or ones had been meddling with our car. These meddlers were of the very thoughtful sort, for out of their kindness and good thought they had filled the good old "Chevvy" with the best old good things that have proved to be so very serviceable in the parsonage. On September 16 when we were about to leave the Mizpah church we again found that the old faithful "Chevvy" had been again drafted into service and again converted into a auto-grocetaria. This is the second time this has happened at Mizpah. So it is getting to be the order of the day on Haw River charge that the preacher's car at almost any good old time is converted into an auto-grocetaria. But the latest is that another man's car was so instructed that it did fine service in this capacity. Bro. Walter Maxwell, a member of Friendship, was an attendant at one of the evening services at Brown Summit. At the close of the service he invited the pastor to accompany him to his car. There we found one-half barrel of fine flour. This gift of Bro. Maxwell is certainly appreciated. Bro. Maxwell is one of the leading members of Friendship church and we understand that it is one of his customs annually to remember his preacher as this preacher has just been remembered. Thanks to Bro. Maxwell and all the other good people who have had to do with these recent donations. I would like to give you all special mention if I could. May God bless you. Four out of the five churches have remembered the pastor by one or more regular "poundings," and the one church that has not pounded in a concerted way has done it individually in that the parsonage has at some time during the year received some nice gift from almost every family in this church. Surely we are serving a good people who are interested in the pastor's welfare.

For the Master's cause,

GEO. L. CURRY.

Winston.—The Philathea Class of the First Methodist Protestant church met Monday evening at the home of Mrs. W. D. Coble, with Mrs. E. M. Routh as joint hostess. Eighteen members and two visitors were present. Devotionals were conducted by the president, Mrs. W. C. Tise. Committee reports were made and various business discussed. The class voted to have a weinie roast Thursday, October 27.

Those having birthdays in this month were delightfully showered during the social hour, after which the hostesses served a delicious ice course.

Lexington, State Street.—Last Sunday was "Go to Church Sunday" in Lexington and all the churches had unusually large attendance. Bro. Bethea brought us splendid sermons morning and evening.

The special revival services at Yadkin College closed Friday night after about a week of good preaching.

The meeting at West Lexington, which closed the middle of week before last, was one of the best at that place for many years.

The Missionary Society held the regular monthly meeting in the church last Thursday afternoon, Mrs. A. H. Evans, president, presiding. A good program was given and all business on hand was satisfactorily disposed of.

Thursday night the City Christian Endeavor Union met at the First Reformed church. Our society was well represented. Mrs. F. J. Cox and Mrs. H. S. Lanier, of State Street Society, were on the program.

REPORTER.

Mocksville Charge.—Mary Ann Myers Haneline, a sufferere of rheumatism for several years, passed from this earthly life October 1, 1928. She was 72 years, 10 months and 14 days old.

On November 10, 1878, she was married to George Kimbrough Hauteline, and to this union were born 12 children, nine boys and three girls. Her husband and three of the children passed from this earthly life before her. She leaves seven of her boys and two of her girls to travel the rest of the way without a mother. She was the grandmother of 31 children, 22 of which survive.

She professed faith in Christ in early childhood, and lived a true Christian life to the end. She joined Elbaville M. P. church later in life.

Mrs. Haneline knew what it was to suffer, becaue she was confined to her bed for three years before her death. She said that she felt that her earthly task was done and she was ready to go home to the Master where there would be no pain and sorrow.

Funeral services were conducted at Elbaville church on Tuesday afternoon, October 2, by her pastor, Rev. J. W. Braxton, after which the body was interred in the church cemetery.

Little Mama Myers, the two-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ollie Myers, died October 1, 1928, and was buried the same day in Elbaville M. P. cemetery. The disease which caused the death made it necessary to bury the body immediately, and there was no service held at the time of the burial, but special mention was made of his death at Mrs. Hanelines's funeral on Tuesday afternoon.

West End, Greensboro.—Just closed a two weeks' revival meeting. There were 12 conversions, four children of "teen" age and the remainder heads of families. Ten people united with the church, the children being received by sprinkling. Those uniting with the church were: Mr. and Mrs. Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Crowell, Misses Ruby Lee, Vera Taylor, Edna Lucas and Frances Foust.

Dr. Williams preached at each service and was at his best in his sermons, and continued well, announcing at the close that he didn't know when he had enjoyed conducting a meeting more.

A number of members were in prayer daily for the meeting. The women held a prayer service at 9:30 in the morning and the men at 7 o'clock in the evening. It was a refreshing revival and closed Sunday, observing the Lord's Supper at the morning hour.

The Ladies' Aid Society met Monday night in the church in regular business session with a good attendance.

The Intermediate Christian Endeavor Society met in business session at the church

Monday at 5 o'clock. They plan another rummage sale in the near future to raise some money. The officers for the next six months are: Frances Foust, president; Leonard Routh, vice-president; Mary Hinton, secretary, and Douglas Kime, treasurer.

The teaching of church music will continue with Mr. Foust directing, Mrs. Holden, pianist, and Miss Gladys Routh, superintendent of the society.

The Junior society meets in joint session with the Intermediate Society and has abandoned a separate organization, and will be under the direction of the Intermediate superintendent.

The church business session will convene Wednesday evening, at which time the officers for the ensuing year will be elected.

High Point.—At the hour for morning worship last Sunday a program of beautiful music was rendered, with Mr. E. B. Stimson at the organ; Mr. William Mason, of Greensboro, sang "There's a Beautiful Land on High," by Taylor, and the choir sang Nevin's charming anthem, "Jesus, My Saviour." For the offertory Mr. Stimson played the lovely old favorite, "Ah! I Have Sighed to Rest Me!" from Il Trovatore, by Verdi. A large and attentive audience greeted the pastor, Rev. Roy I. Farmer, who brought a forceful and inspiring message from John 1:38; "Rabbi, Where Dwellest Thou?" The first public utterance of Jesus after His baptism by John and his entrance upon his ministry was "What Seek Ye?"—a question addressed to the two disciples who followed Him. They in turn asked Him a question: "Master, where do you live?" These were the disciples, Peter and Andrew, his brother. They went home with Jesus, and abode there that day. A customary question heard on all sides at the present day is "Where do you hail from?" or "Where do you live?" To know where one was born and reared gives an insight into his character and personality; colloquialisms of speech often proclaim one's identity. The long drawl and the omission of the final "r's" and "g's" identify the Southerner to all strangers, while the sharp, quick speech designates a Northerner. Walter Malone says: "At sunrise every soul is born again." What is your chief interest in life? What is your attitude to great things? Two sets of eyes gaze on the Sistine Madonna. The world is full of people who look upon the material side of things, who devote most of their time to barter and exchange, buying and selling. An artist and a lumberman were standing in a forest; the artist said with sparkling eyes, "Isn't that a beautiful picture?" The lumber dealer answered, "That lumber ought to net about 80 cents per foot." He was dwelling in a world of commodities alone. A lot of other people live in a world of doubt, suspicion, distrust, and insinuation. Today there is too much distrust in the economic world and too much suspicion in the political world. A matter of far greater importance than the election of Smith or Hoover is the creation of distrust for the leaders in the political war now raging in our country, when friendships are being broken, and brother is arrayed against brother. God help us to live in a world of dreams of better things, of a better day, in a sense of divine companionship, a world of brotherhood, confidence, and trust. Sam Walter Foss, who in the quaintly beautiful little poem, "House by the Side of the Road," expresses human brotherhood in such a charming manner, has given the world another fine verse:

"Despise not any man that lives,
Alien or neighbor, near or far;
Go out beneath the scornful stars,
And see how very small you are.
The world is large, and space is high
That sweeps around our little ken;
But there's no space or time to spare
In which to hate our fellow-men;
And this, my friend, is not the work for you,
Then leave all this for smaller men to do."

At the evening service Rev. Mr. Farmer chose for the subject of an able discourse, "Grinding by Hand at Waterfalls."

The three circles of the Woman's Missionary societies met Monday afternoon, as follows: Circle No. 1, Mrs. L. J. Diffee, chairman, with Mrs. J. B. Spencer, on Lindsay street; Circle No. 2, Mrs. John Walker, chairman, with Miss Mary Lyndon, on West Russell street; Circle No. 3, Mrs. H. A. Moffitt, chairman, with Mrs. W. M. Crouch on Winston road.

The Christian Endeavor Society met in weekly session Monday evening, and the topic, "Goals for Our Society," was discussed by the leader, Miss Lalah Shepard.

An increase in attendance at the mid-week prayer meeting was seen last Wednesday evening. Rev. Mr. Farmer yill lead next Wednesday, and Prof. C. R. Hinshaw, of the college faculty, will teach the last lesson of the teacher training book.

Next Sunday will be observed as Rally Day in the Sabbath school, and a pleasing program has been prepared by the committee. A special offering will be taken, which will be credited to our General Conference budget. A record attendance is earnestly desired as well as a generous offering.

A meeting of the Brotherhood will be held Thursday evening, and supper will be served to them in the assembly room of the church.

A music recital will be given by the members of the faculty of High Point College on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in the college auditorium.

Captain and Mrs. A. M. Rankin went to Asheboro Sunday to attend the dedicatory exercises of the church and the memorial service for the late Mr. J. S. Lewis, whose generosity by his will made it possible for the church debt to be cancelled, thereby making it ready for dedication according to the rules of the Methodist Protestant denomination. Captain and Mrs. Rankin were former members of the Asheboro church. Dr. R. M. Andrews, president of the college, delivered the dedicatory sermon.

The fourth quarterly conference will convene Wednesday evening, October 17th, when reports of all the phases of church work will be made by the officers of societies.

Rev. E. Lester Ballard is assisting Dr. George R. Brown in a revival meeting at Reidsville this week.

We are sorry to note the removal of Mrs. Elizabeth Gibson to her old home at Three Rivers, Michigan. Her son, Vergne Gibson, has a position in a town in Canada.

Mrs. June A. Gray is having his residence on Lindsay street improved and remodeled by brick veneer.

Chestnut Ridge, Orange Circuit.—Our revival meeting began the fourth Sunday in September and continued on until the fifth Sunday. Our pastor had for his pulpit help, Rev. G. F. Millaway, from Mount Pleasant Circuit. Pastor Williams filled the pulpit Sunday morning and Rev. D. R. Williams Sunday afternoon. Both brethren delivered messages enjoyed by all.

Rev. G. F. Millaway came on Monday and was called home Saturday night to conduct a funeral Sunday afternoon; sorry that he could not remain with us until the meeting closed. Our people learned to like Mr. Millaway and enjoyed his stay among us. He has a warm welcome in our hearts and we wish for him to come again. He delivered some wonderful messages. There were 40 converted and reclaimed and 25 united with the church. The church was greatly revived and much good accomplished.

At the close of the meeting a purse of $30 was presented Mr. Millaway. As Mr. Millaway had to leave Saturday night, our pastor filled the pulpit Sunday morning. Sunday afternoon Rev. M. Ivey Crutchfield delivered a very helpful and interesting sermon.

Rev. F. L. Gibbs made an interesting talk to the young converts which was enjoyed by every one. Come again, Mr. Gibbs.

The fourth quarterly conference will meet here Saturday before the four Sunday in October at 2:30 o'clock. There will be some business of special interest to come before the conference.

The Lord's Supper will be observed the second Sunday in October.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

REPORTER.

October 4, 1928.

Davidson Circuit.—Our meeting at Pleasant Grove Church began the fourth Sunday in August with Rev. J. B. Trogdon, of Why Not Circuit, as pulpit help. The interest was good and our congregation kept increasing until the close. The sermons preached by Bro. Trogdon were helpful and inspiring. He has helped in meetings here before and his service was all that could be desired. Much and lasting good was done but the visible results were not what we had hoped for.

Our meeting began at Lineberry church on the first Sunday in September with Rev. E. W. Jones, of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, High Point, as help. Rain interfered very greatly with our plans, but the meeting continued on and came to a close on the second Sunday night; three professed faith in Christ and five joined the church. Brother Jones is a good preacher and he has made many friends on this charge. The camp meeting at Chapel Hill church began the third Sunday in September. The first camp meeting, according to the best information I can get, was held at this place on the third Sunday in September, 1870, with Rev. Jack Loflin as pastor. There has been a camp meeting every year since and the time has never been changed. I think there were 12 families that moved out to the meeting this time. One new tent was built, so it seems that the folks expect to continue the camp meeting. Rev. J. R. Anderson, of Albemarle, and Rev. H. W.

Bell, of Democrat, did the preaching throughout the meeting that closed on the following Friday night. These brethren seemed to be at their best and their preaching was all that could be desired. Wind and rain almost paralyzed the meeting for two days and nights, but we had two clear days at the close, so the congregation gathered again and we closed out in fine shape. Fourteen professions were made, and eight gave their names for church membership.

The church did a fine thing in buying a light plant for the church at Tabernacle, and they have it paid for.

Our special meetings are over, but we are still busy in these closing days of the Conference year. C. E. RIDGE.

Charlotte, First.—We regret that our reporter has been ill for some time. She goes to the hospital this evening. Several of our church members and their friends have been subjects of recent illness. We can report that several have been able to get out again. We hope and pray that all will recuperate soon.

Not so long ago our people paid off the debt on the parsonage lot except the accrued interest, which we hope to raise very soon. This will open up the way for progress considerably. We have other things to claim our attention now, as perhaps other churches can testify to this also.

The election of church school officers was held September 23rd and the new group of officers and teachers were installed and began the school year last Sunday morning with Mr. C. C. Thomas as superintendent. There was a noticeable increase in attendance over vacation times. Taking the entire year into consideration, the attendance and offering has been the largest in the history of the church. However, the have vast room for advancement.

The Ladies' Aid elected officers last week and they will be installed in the near future.

One of our girls, Miss Almett Coggins, was married to Mr. Herbert Garrison recently, the ceremony following immediately the morning service at the church. They locate here and have our best wishes for a happy life together.

The annual Rally Day services will be held next Sunday morning; the delay has been caused by local conditions which are justifiable. We hope for the largest interest yet in this particular service.

The ladies of the church will meet tomorrow, Tuesday afternoon, with Mrs. J. A. Perry, to effect a union of the two missionary societies. At this time there will be an election of officers for the coming year.

On Saturday morning, September 22, one of our faithful members of the primary department, little Virginia May Carpenter, was struck by an automobile and fatally injured. The funeral services were conducted by the pastor from the home of her parents the following Sunday afternoon. The tragic death caused a deep sorrow to fall upon our constituency. The bright disposition of the girl caused her to have many friends. The father, mother, and little sister besides a number of close relatives have our deepest sympathy. H. FREO SURRATT.

Spencer.—The material is being placed on our church lot for our church building. Our building is to be 30x40 by 14 feet high, brick veneered with red texture brick. It will be completed as soon as possible. We have commenced to build with faith, faith that we will get with what we have on hand and can borrow enough to complete our building. The little chapel was not large enough for our Sunday school work, and we wanted a building of our own. If all our churches will help us just a little now we can borrow the rest. Won't you do it that we may have another M. P. church, one in Spencer and Rowan County? Calvary church gave us $15.50. Who will be the next? All money received will be acknowledge through our M. P. Herald and appreciated.

Our pastor, Rev. T. Glen Madison, now at Westminster Theological Seminary, served here two years and did good work. We will miss him so much. The best wishes of our church go with him. We were glad to have Rev. Willie Wood, a ministerial student in High Point College, to preach for us. He brought us a helpful and inspiring message. We are glad to have Bro. Wood to fill out this Conference year, and any help you can give us send to either Rev. W. B. Wood, High Point College, High Point, or to Mrs. A. L. Moore, Box 34, Spencer.

Please pray for us in this great work of building a church. MRS. A. L. MOORE.

Fairview, Anderson Charge.—We were indeed glad to have Rev. S. W. Taylor, president of the Conference, with us Sunday at the 11 o'clock service. He gave a very helpful and inspiring talk.

We were very glad to have several of the members of Harmony church, on Yarborough charge, worship with us Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Lee Poole, of Greenville, S. C., also attended the Sunday morning service.

Misses Fannynet Freeman and Emma Lee Poole, two of the members of our church, have again taken up their work at High Point College.

The Conference year is now drawing to a close; we have had a very successful year so far, although we are some behind on finances. However, we are hoping to have all business settled before the year closes.

The third Sunday will be our last preaching service. At this service the Lord's Supper will be observed.

The fourth quarterly conference will be held at Liberty Hill on Saturday before the third Sunday, which will be the 27th of October.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.
REPORTER.

Eden, Halifax Charge.—We had a very good week for our protracted meeting in August so far as weather was concerned. We were well pleased with Bro. Cassidy and greatly benefited by his good sermons. There were quite a number of conversions and several young people united with the church.

We have been saddened by the visits of the grim reaper in our community. Eden lost another of its older members by the death of Mr. R. D. Daniel which occurred in August. Mrs. Allen Bedgood was laid to rest in the Eden cemetery on Thursday, October 4. On October 1 Mr. Tom Wynne was buried in the family burial ground. Mr. Wynne held his membership with us several years ago. We regret their passing.

Bro. Spencer has had a strenuous summer but has not failed to fill his appointments with us and on every occasion has delivered very inspiring sermons.

We hope our delegate to Annual Conference may be able to carry in a good report from our church. If our stewards have our cooperation I am sure our report will be all that can be desired. We hope to have our pointer for the church in place before Conference. The Ladies' Aid is behind this project, so I think the pointer is an assured thing.

On Sunday, October 7, the church officers were elected. They are: Class leader, Miss Blanche Hardee; board of stewards, Mr. J. W. Hardee, chairman, Miss Winnie Burt, Mr. D. W. Sykes, and Mr. E. A. Smith; trustees, Messrs. Z. A. Hardee, J. L. Bellamy, T. Billups, J. J. Burt, and R. H. Neville; Sunday school superintendent, Mr. J. W. Hardee; pianist, Mrs. Z. A. Hardee; reporter, Mrs. L. A. Williams.

Our Sunday school is still functioning, but not quite as lively as we would like, but we hope for better days ahead. Perhaps some who have been kept away on account of bad weather will be coming back soon.

Our Ladies' Aid is still on the upward trend. We are already planning next year's work, which you will hear about later.
REPORTER.

Bethesda, Halifax Circuit.—Mr. Spencer gave us a good sermon last night at our regular appointment. We were very glad to have in the congregation Misses Mary and Harriet Wills, of Greensboro, who are spending a few days here. Their many friends are glad to welcome them to the old home neighborhood, where they have always been among the "pillars of the church."

Mrs. Ernest Swearingen (nee Miss Helen Harrison) of Cleveland, Ohio, was present also, and helped with the music. She was formerly our pianist here.

Next Sunday is our last appointment at this church and, consequently, time for election of officers. People should think over a matter of this kind and be ready to nominate those best suited to office. Sometimes the subject is not given proper consideration beforehand.

The financial situation is bad, but we hope for some improvement before Conference meets. The farmers have lost by having their crops and gardens damaged by bad weather and the bean beetle.

Our Sunday school is small but still shows interest. Mr. Frank Taylor, Jr., is secretary and treasurer, succeeding Mr. Willie J. Spencer, who has gone to High Point College.

Mr. S. T. Thorne, long a prominent merchant of this section, has bought out the business interests of the late Mr. N. M. Harrison, and this frees Rev. N. M. Harrison for return to the ministerial work.

Perhaps our new reporter for the coming year will be more prompt and make more "readable" reports than this one has generally done.

M. H. STREET, Reporter.
October 8, 1928.

Concord.—There were 277 present in S. S. Sunday and the offering of $25 will go to the Children's Home. At the morning hour Mr. Hendry preached on "Keeping of the Heart," after which the Lord's Supper was observed and a large number communed. Mrs. J. R. Helms and daughter, Mrs. J. L. Sides, presented the church with a communion service tray and glasses, which was badly needed, making four trays in our service now. We greatly appreciate this gift from these faithful ones.

At the night service Mr. Hendry spoke on "The Compassion of Jesus." Special music was rendered at both services.

On next Sunday Rally Day will be observed in Sunday school with exercises at the 11 o'clock hour. Our goal for the Sunday school is 400 present and an offering of $150.

On next Sunday night special evangelistic services will begin, running for two weeks, with our pastor doing the preaching. Preparations for the meeting have been going on for two weeks in the form of cottage prayer meetings and visiting the unchurched and unsaved in our community. We are hoping and praying for a great ingathering and a genuine revival during this season.

Conference is nearly on us and we find that we are behind with our finances, but our stewards are at work and we hope that we will wind up the year's work with all claims paid in full as heretofore.

Mr. Cornelius D. Sides, who has been the efficient pianist of the Baraca class and active in church work here since his graduation from High Point College last spring, is now in Scranciseo, N. C., where he is assistant principal of a high school there.

Misses Dessie Little and Beatrice Waddell, students of High Point College, spent Sunday with homefolks here. They had as their guest Miss Lucy Nunnery, also of the college.

MRS. D. A. McLAURIN.

Randleman Charge.—Dr. R. M. Andrews preached the opening sermon at the beginning of the revival at Level Cross last Sunday. Rev. N. Brittain, the engaged helper, came for the afternoon service. The attendance was good at both services.

Three members united by letter with Mt. Lebanon church last night: Mrs. Ross Wood, Juanita and John Wood. They came from High Point First church.

The last quarterly conference will be held at Randleman Saturday, the 13th, at 2:30 P. M. All officials are urged to attend.

I suppose all maps are crooked in some respects. I am quite sure I have never seen a map that was not partly crooked. But the crookedest map I think I ever saw is one that is before me just now. I think it is the crookedest of the crooked. It is one of our maps of the North Carolina Conference showing churches, parsonage, high schools, etc. This map did not appear more crooked than the average map until it was recently revised, by drawing red ink lines around the various charges of the Conference. The crookedness was there before but not noticeable until the red lines were drawn. These red lines were drawn that the writer, a member of the boundary committee, might become more familiar with the location of different churches and charges. Now that the lines are drawn and the charges are located, the one thing that is evident is that surely there is more crookedness than is necessary. How the matter is to be adjusted is of course the question. I have served on the boundary committee but a short time, but I have served long enough to find some insurmountable difficulties. But some of these difficulties can be overcome. To do this I believe information should be in the hands of the committee as soon as possible that every possible thought could be given to it. I have concluded that during the sitting of Conference is a poor time to give the best to these things while in many cases the final word will of necessity be said there. Some requests have already been given to me and doubtless other members of the committee have such information. As a member of this important committee I would suggest that any pastor or layman having any information or suggestion that should come before this committee should at once give it to Dr. A. G. Dixon, the chairmon of this committee, or some other member, that thought might be given to the matter at once. The sooner the better. Time is short and the work is important.

Anxious to serve in the Kingdom, I am

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Friddle

Not a day passes but sorrow of the keenest sort comes to some of God's children, and in the sudden transition of Mrs. Frances Jane Friddle on September 20, 1928, a beautiful life has gone out, and a host of friends and loving relatives suffer an irreparable loss.

Frances Jane Adams was born October 4, 1863. She joined the M. P. Church when a young girl and was a faithful member of Flat Rock Church. She was married to Mr. George F. Friddle December 27, 1881, and to this union seven children were born, three of whom survive: E. C., of Rockingham County; J. C., of Birmingham, Ala., and one daughter, Miss Ethel, of this community. One son, J. F., departed this life three years ago and three children died in infancy. Also 13 grandchildren are left to mourn her death.

The funeral service was conducted by Rev. J. R. Hutton, Rev. W. F. Kennett and Rev. J. P. Pegg, Saturday afternoon, September 22, in the beautiful new Flat Rock church, after which her body was laid to rest in the church cemetery.

MRS. J. P. PEGG.

Blackwelder

On October 4 A. W. Blackwelder departed this life at the age of 63 years. He was a steward of New Salem church and a consistent Christian. He leaves a wife and two children. Funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. Mr. Garner, from New Salem church, Friday, October 5, in the presence of many sympathizing friends.

Siler

Weimar D. Siler, after many weeks of suffering, quietly passed on October 6 at the advanced aged of 82 years. He is spoken of in highest terms by all who knew him. The writer, assisted by Rev. Murray Williams and Rev. Mr. Hendrick, conducted the funeral rites from Providence church Sunday at 11 a. m., October 7. An unusually large crowd attended the final service. He leaves a wife and five children.

TO PASTORS AND CHURCH MEMBERS

The "Budget Receipts to Date" in last week's reveal some startling and shocking facts. See pages 10 and 11.

Total, A. C. B., $3,211.27; G. C. B., $3,018.28; College, $2,187.89—$8,417.39.

Total, W. H. M. S., $4,109.25; W. F. M. S., $4,663.94—$8,773.13.

These figures reveal the fact that our Women's Missionary Societies, to date, have paid $355.75 more on the General Conference budget than all the rest of us have paid on A. C. B. and G. C. B. and College combined.

There must be something wrong with our religion or with our system of giving, or with our willingness to give to these great causes. October should see some mighty stirring in the giving department of the church.

Yours for a better showing,

RUBE.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

EXECUTIVE MEETING NOTES

The second executive session of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies met on Thursday, September 20, 1928, at the home of Mrs. W. P. Pickett in High Point, with Mrs. M. P. Harrell, Corresponding Secretary of the Foreign Branch, as joint hostess.

About 25 members were present, and as visitors Rev. and Mrs. R. I. Farmer, new pastor and wife of First Methodist Protestant Church, High Point, Rev. H. W. Maier, Rev. George R. Brown, Rev. L. W. Gerringer, Rev. E. L. Ballard, and Miss Ila Stafford, of Burlington, and Mrs. R. T. Pickens, of High Point.

The foreign meeting was held first, Mrs. George R. Brown presiding and leading the devotionals. Several impressive sentence prayers were offered.

The report of the corresponding secretary showed an increase in membership since our last branch meeting of 67. Mrs. Harrell still pleads for co-operation from the corresponding secretaries of the auxiliaries. Fifteen failed to return the blanks and a number of those returning them failed to give full reports of the work being done.

It was encouraging to note that the treasurer's report indicated that more money has been paid this year than had been paid at the corresponding date last year. However, the total received to date, $1,085.25, is far short of the amount due. With almost half of the missionary year gone and a budget of $6,000 to raise, there remains much yet to be done.

A short session of the home society followed, with Mrs. W. C. Hammer, president, presiding. Every secretary of the home branch was present and every officer except three. We regretted the absence of Mrs. H. C. Nicholson, faithful and efficient corresponding secretary, who was kept away on account of her husband's illness.

Following this meeting the joint session of the two societies was opened with Mrs. C. W. Bates, chairman, presiding.

The matter of programs for the auxiliary meetings was discussed at length and because of the probability of the mission board not being able to get them out soon, a committee composed of Mrs. H. W. Maier, Mrs. C. W. Bates, Mrs. George R. Brown and Mrs. W. C. Hammer was selected to make up programs for use in the auxiliary meetings in North Carolina, have them printed or mimeographed and mailed to the various auxiliaries.

Because of a lack of definite plans to present to the auxiliaries for uniting the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies, and because a constitution and by-laws, by which the new organization will be governed, has not been definitely worked out, it was thought best not to have the called branch meeting previously planned for October at Mebane, but wait till the regular time next April. In the meantime the auxiliaries are urged to work together harmoniously, as heretofore, looking forward to uniting in the near future. The secretary was instructed to write a letter to Dr. John W. Hawley, secretary of the Board of Missions, explaining why we are postponing the unting of the two societies, and pledging the board our loyal support and co-operation.

The renewed invitation from the hospitable Mebane people to hold the called branch meeting there was read by the secretary, and xpressions of appreciation extended to the good people of Mebane church.

Th matter of having Miss Mildred Miskimen, returned missionary from India, present our work in India at the coming Annual Conference was discussed and Mrs. Brown was asked to write Miss Miskimen and make arrangements with her, and if possible, arrange with her for a tour of the state immediately after Conference. Further announcement will be made of these plans.

The meeting adjourned for lunch with prayer by Rev. R. I. Farmer and the hostesses, assisted by Mrs. J. S. Pickett and Mrs. John Walker, Jr., served a most delightful lunch.

A pleasant social hour followed the lunch period and after reassembling to offer a rising vote of thanks to the hostesses for their charming hospitality the meeting adjourned with prayer by Rev. George R. Brown.

MRS. E. LESTER BALLARD, Sec'y.

(This report has been delayed two weeks, first by a miscarriage in the mail, and second by the oversight of the editor).

PLEASE NOTICE

Miss Mildred Miskimen, who was our missionary in India, is expected to visit our Annual Conference, and to address some of our missionary societies afterwards. If you wish her to visit your society, communicate with Mrs. George R. Brown, of Reidsville, as soon as possible so she can make out Miss Miskimen's schedule.

PINE RIDGE NOTES

September 15th, Rev. F. J. Bayliss, of Bluffs, Illinois, came to us to hold a series of revival meetings. At the very beginning interest was shown, and when the appeals were made, many took a definite stand for Christ; others lifted their hands for prayer, later going to the altar and making a complete surrender. Almost every night found some, and many times quite a number, at the altar earnestly seeking "first the kingdom of God and His righteousness."

Sunday afternoon, September 23rd, Bro. Bayliss preached from the subject, "The Old-Fashioned Home." In announcing his theme, the speaker promised six months' subscription to the Methodist Recorder to the largest family in attendance at the Sunday afternoon service. Mr. and Mrs. Cud Clark, having six children at the meeting, received the subscription.

In addition to the night services, Bro. Bayliss gave interesting talks in chapel, oftentimes giving us a helpful object lesson.

During the meeting, 42 were converted or reclaimed. Thus far, ten have been received into church membership.

We are glad to have had Bro. Bayliss with us. In saying good-bye at our last chapel service with him, we all sang, "Blest Be the Tie," and, finally, "God Be With You Till We Meet Again."

September 26 was Fair Day for Alvan Drew School and Community. A splendid program of addresses by visiting speakers, music, and recitations was given in our grade school auditorium. An exhibition of field crops, garden products, canned goods, sewing, etc., was on hand; a number of the first prizes went on to the Eastern Kentucky Fair at Quicksand.

Work has been started on the dam. This will prove a great blessing to us in furnishing our water supply. The reservoir thus created will hold over one hundred million gallons of water.

Mr. M. R. Cole, of Campton, recently presented to us a large oil painting, "The Prayer of Sacrifice." Through his study of the life of Christ, Mr. Cole gives us a very suggestive picture of the Christ in Gethesemane. This painting will, no doubt, measure three feet by five feet. We appreciate the friendship expressed through this gift to us.

GOOD CITIZENSHIP SUNDAY

Sunday, October 28, has been named Good Citizenship Sunday by the Anti-Saloon League of America. On this day all pastors, Sunday school superintendents, and other leaders of church and temperance groups are urged to take part in a nation-wide concerted discussion of the principles of good citizenship. They are asked to emphasize the importance of voting by good citizens to insure good government. They are asked to present the vital facts about the great moral question of prohibition to enable good citizens to vote intelligently on this issue.

Note the date now. Prepare to do your part. Send for a Patriotic Temperance Poster for your church. Secure complete, authoritative information about issues and candidates. The discussion of public questions affecting the moral welfare of the nation is not politics—it is patriotism. The Eighteenth Amendment is a part of the Constitution of the United States. The patriotic obligation to support, uphold and defend the Constitution in time of peace is as great as the duty to serve the nation in time of war.

Examine the lists of literature and supplies obtainable without cost from the Anti-Saloon League. Help inform good citizens. Urge them to vote on November 6th. Make Good Citizenship Sunday, October 28, count for good citizenship in your community, your state and the nation.

LETTER FROM DR. ANDREWS

Dear Brother Pastor:

As the Annual Conference approaches we are very anxious that every pastoral charge shall collect the assessment for High Point College in full. Quite a numbers of charges have already done this and many others have collected most of their assessment, but some are yet rather far behind. The purpose of this appeal is that we may through the Herald reach those who are behind in raising the assessment and to stimulate their interest in the matter. The college is very much in need of this money, since it was a part guaranteed to it by the Annual Conference to be applied on the deficit in lieu of an endowment. Please make an earnest and persistent effort to complete your assessment and send it at once to Mr. V. W. Idol, Treasurer, High Point, N. C.

Very truly yours,
R. M. ANDREWS, President,
High Point College.

MARRIED

Parker-Hammer

Friends of Miss Juanita Bryan Hammer, of High Point, will be interested to learn of her marriage on September 15, 1928, at Jacksonville, Florida, to Neil Joseph Parker, of West Palm Beach, Florida.

Mrs. Parker is widely known throughout this state. She has been active in the work of the First Methodist Protestant Church of High Point for several years. She was a member of Elon College and held an official position with that college for some time after completion of her work there as a student. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Hammer, of Steele street, High Point.

Mr. Parker holds a position with Fagg's Millwork and Lumber Company, of West Palm Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. Parker as now making their home at 439, 14th street, West Palm Beach, Florida.

Several additions to Calvary's cradle roll have been made lately. Bros. T. B. Waugh and H. W. Highfill have new daughters, the first they have had.

We thank you for these offerings for the Home. The children just now are in very great need of clothing and shoes for the fall and winter, so we are asking all friends of the Home and all the Sunday schools to be as liberal as conditions will admit.

Change of Management

Dr. E. F. Allman left the Home of October 1, and having been elected to the position of superintendent of the Home by the Board of Trustees, I took charge on that same day. My work at Liberty and Siler City must be finished up for the year, so I can only give part time here for this month. But we will try to keep accounts perfectly straight. Those sending checks and money will please designate plainly which church on which charge shall be given credit.

In Kind

Mr. Auman, of Seagrove, a nice lot of peppers.

The Flat Rock picnickers, some splendid boxes of food for the children.

The Picnic

We were glad to have the churches of Flat Rock charge picnic at the Home on last Saturday. Sorry we were not here to meet and to greet them. We hope they will come again, and that others will also come.

Please send all money for the support of the Home to the undersigned.

Faithfully yours,

A. G. DIXON.

—Calvary church experienced a disappointment in the beginning of its meeting this week. Rev. R. A. Hunter, who was expected to preach during the series of services, telegraphed from Mt. Airy that one of his sisters had been hurt in a wreck and was in a very serious condition. However, Dr. S. K. Spahr helped us out by agreeing to take Bro. Hunter's place in the evening services. His sermon on Monday night was very appropriate for the beginning, though he had only a few hours' notice. Bro. Bates is conducting the morning services.

—Bro. W. L. Spoon, who lives in Alamance County, but who does business in Greensboro as a civil engineer, has taken the stump for prohibition in the present campaign. He cannot see that any political or partisan gains would justify the moral loss that would come to the country by the overthrow of prohibition.

—Powerful loud speakers have been placed in the hall where the Prussia Diet meets, so that the voice of the chairman may be heard above any noise made by disorderly members.

—Henry Ford is to add to his village near Dearborn, Mich., an Edison museum to contain early working models of Edison's inventions, with tools, note-books, and other articles used in his experiments.

The Command to Love

The greatest of all the commandments are God's commandments that men love Him with all their hearts and their neighbors as themselves. Our ordinary conception of love is that it is won by the worthiness and attractiveness of the object of it. A king could not gain the love of his subjects by commanding them to love him, though he might punish them if they gave evidence of dissatisfaction. Does God show ignorance of psychology in these commands to men to love? Surely that cannot be. How then are we to understand the matter? We may not be able to clear up all mystery, but there is an essential difference between the command of an earthly sovereign and the command of God. The human king, no matter how virtuous and beneficent, could not demand the supreme love of his people for the reason that he would not be worthy of it. God's appeal is far different. He is worthy of supreme love and when He commands His subjects to give it, He is only demanding what is His clear and indisputable right. And no doubt He has more regard to the interests of His subjects than to His own rights. Men can realize their perfection only through the exercise of supreme love to God, the Perfect One. Then God has given proof of His love to us, and we may reasonably love him with all our hearts because He has first loved us with all His heart. With the great exaction of the first great commandment, God supplies also His divine aid to our powers in obeying the command. "He that loves is born of God," writes John the Apostle. The fact that we are commanded to love indicates our responsibility in the matter. We are guilty of sin against God if we withhold our love. Our own wills must be operative in love. Love is a product of our volition. Love and hate are both subject to human will and our human laws recognize the fact. God's infinite attractions make a powerful appeal for our love, but still we must respond with the power of our own wills. God's goodness will appeal to us in vain if we will not to give God the best love of our hearts. Love springs up not as the grass in the springtime in automatic response to the sun and the shower, but it springs up because a sentient and rational soul wills that it shall spring up. We are not automatons. We are free spirits and can choose or refuse even what God offers. God is so necessary to us that He goes the last step in the effort to bless us—He commands us to love Him with all our hearts.

As to loving our fellowmen as ourselves, that is a requirement of simple justice. Is there any reason why you should love yourself more than you love any other person? Equality of rights settles that question.

Governor McLean on Prohibition Enforcement

The Governor of our state in his speeches of the present campaign advocates a plan of prohibition enforcement which differs both from the present plan and from the plan proposed by Governor Smith of New York. Governor McLean would have the states willing to do so adopt machinery for state-wide enforcement and then he would have the federal government contribute money to help largely with the expense. He thinks this would be an improvement over the dual system now in operation. He thinks present enforcement is less effective because federal enforcement agents depend on state enforcement agents and vice versa. The governor declares that in the case of North Carolina prosecutions by state agents far exceed in number those by federal agents.

Our First Church, High Point

Through the courtesy of Rev. E. L. Ballard, associate pastor, we are able to present to our readers a view of this splendid church edifice. It is a very elaborate building, containing many more rooms than you would suspect from an outside view. It provides for all the departments of the church. We know of no better church in our entire denomination, and North Carolina has few, if any, superior churches of any denomination. Our High Point people have wrought well, and are worthy of the commendation accorded them. We congratulate them not only upon their possession of a place of worship so well contrived, but also on the good quality of the work done by both ministry and laity.

THE HISTORY OF YARBROUGH CHAPEL M. P. CHURCH

Yarbrough Chapel Methodist Protestant Church was organized by Rev. Thomas C. Hutchings in August, 1845. This was in the seventh annual conference year of the Methodist Protestant Church in this state (South Carolina).

The organization was small in number, not exceeding fifteen, but those few continued faithful. In 1860 there were 24 names on the register. The house of worship at this time was small and not very comfortable. In 1866 Hiram Yarbrough, one of the original members, made a gift of 80 acres of land to the church and built a new church on it.

The name of "Yarborough Chapel" was given by Rev. John Burdine, then president of the Conference.

In 1886 another gift was made to the church consisting of 135 acres of land adjoining the first. This was given by Lewis Yarborough, another of the original members.

Until 1874 Yarborough Chapel was included in what was then called Laurens Circuit. At a meeting of the conference of that year the name was changed to Spartanburg Circuit. It was during this year that the first parsonage was built on the lands given by Hiram Yarborough.

The annual conference of 1871 assigned Caleb Smith pastor of this station. He remained such, with the exception of one year, 1889, until the close of 1896, at which time he resigned the pastorate.

At the beginning of 1870 there were 15 names enrolled. In 1897 there were 250. In January, 1897, a revision of the register was made. After this revision 115 names remained. In 1901 the roll was again revised, 104 names remaining. Our present total is 90.

In the autumn, 1895, the erection of the present church building was begun and completed in the spring of 1896.

In August, 1901, a meeting was called for the purpose of discussing the question of petitioning the North Carolina conference for admission into that body. It was decided to offer their petition subject to the approval of the General Conference. In 1901 this church was admitted into the North Carolina conference.

The South Carolina Conference convened at this church in the years 1857, 1868, 1876, 1881 and 1885.

In the year 1907 a modern and more centrally located parsonage was built.

YARBOROUGH'S CHAPEL M. P. CHURCH

This church is located about one mile from Cross Anchor, S. C., just off South Carolina State Highway No. 56, between Spartanburg and Clinton, in a beautiful pine grove. The erection of this building was begun in 1895 and completed and dedicated in 1896. These improvements were made possible by the efforts of our former pastor, Rev. E. G. Cowan, who suggested that funds be raised by having a few acres of cotton, the proceeds of which were to be used for various improvements. Through the co-operation of our pastor, W. B. Surratt, and a greater portion of the members, the building has been painted and cement steps erected. This work has been done at an approximate cost of $200.

WEST END CHURCH, GREENSBORO
Main Entrance to New Building

WEST END CHURCH, GREENSBORO

West End Methodist Protestant Church was located just outside the city of Greensboro, but in the path of a greater Greensboro; while then a few scattered homes, now a thickly settled community.

Since its organization September 23, 1917, West End has not been an exception among new churches, but has had its struggles and made its sacrifices. Beginning with 32 members, today it has about 300.

The original church building had for some time been crowded, till it became necessary to erect a new building. The new building was formally opened September 23, 1928, exactly eleven years after the formal opening and organization of the church.

The Sunday school was organized on the first Sunday in October, 1917, with 52 members. On the eleventh anniversary there were 265 members in attendance.

Not only is found a marked growth in membership in both the church and Sunday school, but a growing interest in all the work of the church. West End with a stronger faith in its leader looks hopefully to the future.

THANK YOU

By this time most of our churches and Sunday schools have held their Rally Day service. The others will observe the day within the next two or three weeks. This means that only a few more orders for the supplies furnished by the Department of Educational Institutions of the Board of Christian Education will be received. It takes considerable time through the year to prepare, publish and distribute this material, and the response of our people remains a mystery for many months. Will they be pleased with the programs? Will the number of orders equal or exceed those received in other years? How will the offerings run? Will they be more or less than formerly? During the last quadrennium one-half of our receipts came from the Rally Day offerings. That gives some idea of their importance.

In spite of some unsettlement and uncertainty due to the changes made by the last General Conference, the orders for Rally Day supplies are as great as they were last year. At the present writing we are less than thirty of the total received a year ago. Since they usually continue to come in until the first week in November, we are confident that the present record will equal if not exceed anything in the history of the Board.

That this splendid response is appreciated hardly needs stating. It has been an anxious time but we are encouraged. Evidently the Methodist Protestant Church purposes to give to the cause of Christian Education their cordial support. We believe this attitude will be reflected in the offerings.

Just one exhortation! If you have not ordered your supplies, do so at once. In some communities November is the best time in the fall for a Rally Day service. We have enough material to supply fifty churches. We shall be glad for the opportunity to serve you.

EFLAND METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH

This church was organized by Rev. W. D. Fogleman about 25 years ago. A wooden building was erected. This was remodeled during the pastorate of Rev. Homer Casto about 18 years ago. This year (1928) seven new Sunday school rooms were built to the original building. The whole was plastered inside and brick veneered on the outside.

B. M. Williams.

MIDWAY CHURCH, HAW RIVER CHARGE

Including the little log school house in which the Midway church was organized in 1886, the present structure is the fourth building on the present location. The first church was a log house built in 1867. For 21 years this log church served the community as a place of worship. In 1888 a frame building was erected which 40 years afterward was replaced by the present building. The new church is a large brick-veneered building, well proportioned and well lighted. There is a large balcony which is used for Sunday school classes. The building is located in the midst of beautiful oaks at about 200 feet from the road. The ground is slightly elevated, sloping from the building in every direction. The church with its most beautiful outlines surrounded by the beautiful trees and on grounds most ideal has an appearance that is attractive and lovely,—most suitable for a place to worship God. The new building was erected during the early part of this year. The cornerstone was placed Easter Monday. The opening service was conducted the fourth Sunday in May, the sermon being preached by Rev. W. F. Kennett who was pastor of the congregation at the time the second church was built. The cost of the new building is between $7,000 and $8,000.

CHASE CITY CHURCH

This church was built in 1924 and Rev. M. P. Chambliss and Rev. J. H. Trollinger jointly deserve credit for the building of the present church there. Bro. D. M. Loy had begun a work near Chase City in another community some time previous, but that failed to succeed. The present church began with 28 charter members and it now has about 100 members and is clear of debt. They have painted the church this year and put in a new organ. They have a good Sunday school and prayer meetings are held Sunday nights when there is no preaching.

SLOGAN

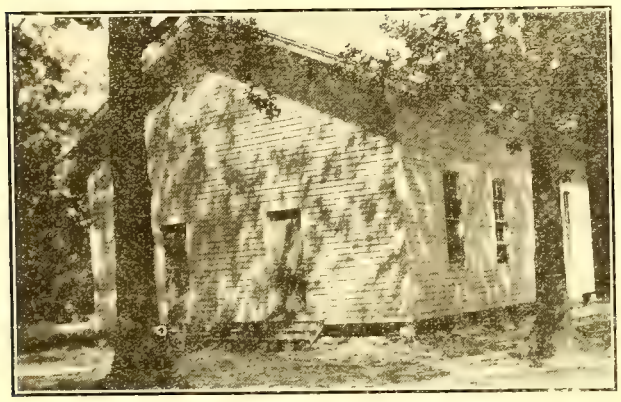
No Charge Without an Honor Roll Church

Two pastors write that one church on their respective charges is on the "honor roll," and one of these pastors says of his other churches, "I think more will be." This is heartening, and we expect from now on that such reports will be frequent. We know of two other churches on one charge that we believe will be in this group. In fact, one of them is practically ready to be entered now; the other one has a mind to work, and the goal for them is not far off. We know also of one other church that is "paid up," and that will get in the report next week. Just a little steady, persistent planning and pushing for the next two weeks, and this list of "honor roll" churches will be conspicuous in the 1928 Journal. Pastors and church members, don't let up until one church at least on your charge is in this list.

Rockingham

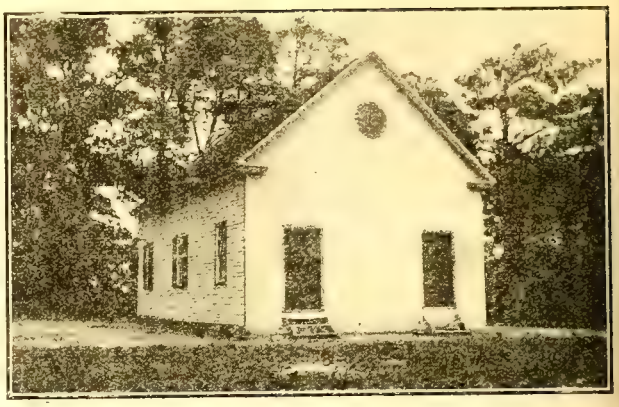
October 9. The fourth quarterly conference of this charge convened on this date, 7:30 p.m., and it was our privilege to meet with them. Several of the official members were present, and a much larger number of church members. The usual business of a fourth quarterly conference was duly transacted, and the affairs of the church found to be in normal condition. A considerable amount is due on pastor's salary, and but little has been paid on budgets. We earnestly hope that this church will join us in our effort to have no pastor go to conference with his salary unpaid. We trust, also, that budget receipts will be much better in the end than at present. Four dollars and fifty cents ($4.50) was paid to us on A. C. B., for which proper credit will be given.

We were at this church some years ago in a revival meeting. Since then a new church has been erected on a different site. The building is large, with Sunday school rooms on each side in the rear. It has not yet been painted on the inside, but we presume this will be done yet. Some improvements on the grounds at the front entranc eare greatly needed, and would add much to the appearance of the church. Pastor



FAIRFIELD METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH

Located in Lincoln County near the villages of Triangle and Denver, N. C. From the best information we have been able to gather, this church is between 80 and 100 years old. During the services one cold day last winter the roof caught fire from a defective flue and was partly burned off, making necessary some needed repairs. New ceiling and a new roof have been added, also a new coat of paint both inside and out, and new carpet for the pulpit and new rubber runners for the aisles and front. This with the new pulpit furniture and the new piano has added very materially to the comfort and convenience as well as to the appearance of the church. The grounds surrounding the church are kept nice and clean, and the little white church trimmed in green, nestling in a large grove of oak, pine and hickory trees presents a very beautiful picture. The cost of these repairs with new furniture and fixtures was about one thousand dollars. Rev. E. G. Cowan is serving this church this year.



PHILADELPHIA, GREENSVILLE CIRCUIT

Philadelphia is one of the oldest churches of our denomination—the Mother of Methodist Protestantism in this section. It is beautiful in situation; small in membership but great in works. It pays over a third of pastor's salary of a charge of five churches. It has this year installed a heating plant at a cost of $125.00, has laid down 120 yards of beautiful carpet on her floors, aisles, and pulpit, at a cost of $200.00; now running flue for heating plant. Here is a picture of the third church builded on this hallowed spot.

Rev. H. L. Powell, Pastor.

[Brother Powell says that they have put a marker—the nicest one that he has ever seen—on the highway immediately in front of Philadelphia church. On the marker is inscribed: "Philadelphia Methodist Protestant Church — One Hundred Years of Service—1828-1928."—S. W. Taylor.]

RINGWOOD METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH

Ringwood Church, located at Ringwood, N. C., on Halifax Charge, was repaired this year. A new cover was put on, and three coats of paint and some other repairs, which cost $260. This church has not a very large membership, but does have some faithful members. They have paid their pastor's salary, A. C. B. and college assessment every year since we have been on the charge.

C. L. Spencer.

WORTHVILLE M. P. CHURCH

The new Methodist Protestant Church at Worthville was begun February 1, 1928, and was completed the 12th day of May. The opening service was held May 13. Rev. S. W. Taylor preached the opening day sermon at 11 a. m. The site, hauling, paint, and painting were given by the Seward Manufacturing Company. Mr. W. L. Ward, secretary and treasurer. W. L. Ward was chairman of the building committee; A. R. Grove, chairman board of trustees, and C. F. Allred, treasurer building fund. The church was begun with only $688 cash. It has a good-sized auditorium and fine, well arranged Sunday school rooms. The plant is valued at $5,000, with an indebtedness of $1,546. There are sixty-six members on roll. The present pastor, Rev. W. H. Neese, is now serving his fourth year here.

W. H. Neese.

RANDLEMAN PARSONAGE

Built in 1924 during the pastorate of Rev. J. H. Trollinger, and painted inside. It has seven well arranged rooms, and six closets, large size. The lot is 120x300 feet. During pastorate of Rev. W. H. Neese the parsonage was screened and painted outside. The Ladies' Aid has placed $500 worth of furniture, floor covering, etc., in the building. It also has lights and phone. The location is airy, dry, and surroundings are quiet.

Wm. H. Neese.

Trolinger is closing his third year of a second pastorate here, and is devoting himself earnestly to his work. We hope there may be zealous and united effort in bringing the year to a happy ending, and that the church may go forward in an era of steady and enlarging growth. We see no reason why this should not be so. Pastor and people were kind to us and they have our grateful thanks.

Lebanon

October 10. The fourth quarterly conference of this charge convened on this date, and we had the pleasure of meeting with it. The conference was well attended, and a hopeful and progressive spirit was in evidence. The pastor's salary was found to be considerably in arrears, but we are hopeful that this will all be paid. The prospect for increase in budget receipts is encouraging. The assessment for college maintenance has been paid in full, and the charge goes on the honor roll for that this week. Unless our zeal is better than our judgment, this church will have more than one honor roll place this year. The Sunday school and the women's organizations are active, and there is a Christian Endeavor society here with about fifty members. Pastor Hutton is closing his fourth year with this work, and under his leadership the church has had a quadrennium of progress. Lebanon appears to us to be one of our most promising churches.

Tabernacle

October 12. We were with this charge, and at this church, in their fourth quarterly conference. There are two churches on this work, and each one was represented in the conference. The brethren present indicated an earnest concern for the work. The business of the conference was transacted promptly and in harmony. Sunday schools are held regularly at each church, and Tabernacle reports one active missionary society. Pastor's salary was some in arrears, but this will be paid in full. The budget reports showed considerable shortage, but we are hopeful of a good showing in the end. The college assessment has already been paid in full, and it is our expectation that other honor roll places will be taken by the charge when the reports are all in. The pastor has the confidence of his people, and they have his esteem. His report indicated faithful application on his part to the work of his charge. Tabernacle church is talking Sunday school rooms. We hope to see that done, and this point made a prominent center of religious and community activities. It appears to us that it should not be a difficult matter to develop Tabernacle church into a strong station.

Whitakers

October 13-14. It was our pleasure to be with this church on these two days. Saturday night we were with them in a business meeting, and on Sunday we preached at 11 a.m., and held the fourth quarterly conference at 2:30 p.m. The attendance at the morning service was good, and a close and

KERNERSVILLE CHARGE PARSONAGE

Our parsonage is a seven-room building. Five rooms downstairs and two upstairs. In addition to this, there is a bath room and a pantry. The cost of the building is $3,569.00; lot cost, $806.00; total, $4,375.00.

E. G. Lowdermilk.

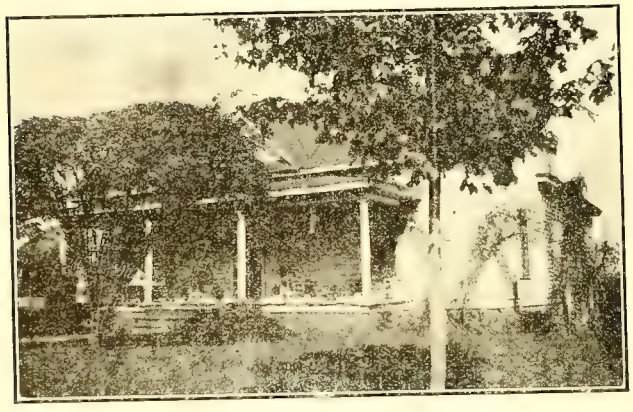
worshipful attention marked the attitude of the people. The conference which followed in the afternoon was well attended also, and was characterized by a deep interest in the work. The charge has had no assigned pastor for the year, but preaching services have been provided for two Sundays in each month. Brother Auman, pastor of Enfield charge, has given them one service on the first Sunday, and different visiting ministers have preached for them twice on second Sundays. The work has been maintained in this way during the year with some degree of satisfaction, but of course not as it could have been done with a resident pastor. Plans have been made for a full time pastor for next year, and we trust that all matters concerned may be adjusted readily and favorably to this good end.

Roseneath, which has been a part of Whitakers charge for several years, gives promise of new life and growth. Pastor Auman has been supplying for them this year, and is much encouraged with the prospects. Speight's Chapel is not so hopeful. We trust, however, that a preaching appointment may be maintained there next year. Whitaker's church has paid all conference claims this year, and will go on the honor roll next week when the report reaches us from Treasurer Idol. We think that this is a splendid record for them, not having a pastor, and we gladly extend to them our most hearty congratulations. They are very grateful to all the brethren who have preached for them during the year, and thus helped them to carry on their work.

Enfield

October 14. We were here for the Sunday night service, and found the beautiful auditorium of this attractive church well filled with interested worshipers. We were glad to find quite a number present from Whitaker's Chapel. The people were attentive and appreciative. A brief business meeting was held at the close of the service, at which time the conference programs were presented. Pastor Auman is zealous for the full program of the conference and of the denomination, and we appreciate all co-operation on the part of his people in making these programs real. The pastor's salary will be paid in full, of course, and we are hoping for an increase in budget payments. The charge is right up at the top alphabeticaly, and belongs there in all these conference interests. It is our faith that Enfield charge will be on more than one honor roll when the reports are complete. Pastor Auman has pressed the work with zeal and thoughtfulness, and has the confidence and esteem of his people. He is closing the year with a series of revival services at Enfield, the express purpose of which is to deepen the spiritual life of the church. We hope and pray that gratifying results may attend his labors, and that there may be much in these closing days of joy and inspiration to him and the people of his charge.

We enjoyed our visit to these fields and the privilege of seeing old friends; and for gracious entertainment provided for us, we give assurances of our grateful thanks.



HAW RIVER PARSONAGE

The present parsonage of Haw Rriver charge, located at Brown Summit, was purchased about 12 years ago. When bought there were only three rooms. During the pastorate of the late Dr. Swain two additional rooms were built. During the early part of this year two more rooms were built. A large porch was so arranged that it is most ideal for sleeping purposes. There are now seven good rooms and a large sleeping porch. During this year electric lights have been installed. The home has about two acres of land.

LIBERTY-SILER CITY PARSONAGE

The above is the Liberty-Siler City parsonage, located in Liberty on the Burlington end of highway No. 62. This home was built during this year at a cost of about $4,100. It is a convenient, well arranged home with seven rooms, bath, basement, hardwood floors and a good heating plant. The lot is 65 by 320 feet, and is well located.

A. G. Dixon.

Special Herald Number

It appears this week, and we hope that it may please. There are some churches and parsonages that will be missed because of the difficulty in getting pictures. This was, perhaps, more difficult than we anticipated when we began some months ago to prepare for this edition. We are greatly pleased with what we have, and our only regret is that we could not have all. A complete picture presentation of our building projects, such as we have tried to get for this special Herald number, would give us a very pleasing and gratifying conception of what we have done along this line during the year. Some of our largest building projects are lacking in this number. Our grateful thanks are extended to the editor, and to pastors and others who have helped us in this undertaking.

Two Weeks

Two more weeks and we will be meeting in our annual session. These weeks will be attended with much anxious concern both on the part of pastors and people. The year must end, and certainly all are concerned that it ends well. No pastor wants to go to conference with a poor report, and certainly no charge can desire to send up such a report. This means that much earnest, prayerful, and persistent work is yet to be done. And by such effort there yet remains time enough to accomplish much, especially in our financial obligations. Other things will concern us, as for instance, new grouping of churches. To do this may interfere with arrangements of long standing. This may, or may not, be best. There will doubtless be differences of opinion, and when agreements are reached by the local churches, the annual conference will have to make the final decision. There is one assurance for us for every problem: He has promised to be with us. It we seek His guidance, and permit ourselves to be brought under the power of His Spirit, our plannings will be in wisdom and in peace.

Let us be much in prayer that for these closing days and for the conference there may be the unmistakable evidence that His hand is upon us.

Founders Day

Announcement has been given by President Andrews that High Point College will observe "Founders Day," October 25. We urge our people to attend this occasion, and help to make it a real "boost" for the College. The program begins, according to announcement, at 10:45 a.m. We are sure that the day will be worth-while, both to those who go, and to the College. Give the College, your friends, and yourself the benefit of your presence.

Appointments

October 17. West End in quarterly conference, 7:30 p.m.

October 21. Liberty, in quarterly conference Liberty-Siler City charge. Hour, 2:30 p.m.

October 21. Siler City 7:30 p.m., for preaching service.

October 25. Founders Day, High Point College.

This will close my appointments for the year. I must have the remainder of time between now and conference to prepare my report, and to secure some much-needed rest. Some charges have not been visited. I regret this, but it has been a physical impossibility to cover the entire district. We started on our rounds immediately upon the rise of conference and have been going continuously ever since.

And now, brethren, for these few remaining days, add to your faith, works; and to your works, persistence; and to your persistence, tact; and to your tact, love; for if these be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in this harvest season.

Fraternally,

October 17, 1928. S. W. Taylor.

GOD'S WILL FOR YOU AND ME

Just to be tender, just to be true,
Just to be glad the whole day through,
Just to be merciful, just to be mild,
Just to be trustful as a child,
Just to be gentle and kind and sweet,
Just to be helpful with willing feet,
Just to be cheery when things go wrong,
Just to drive sadness away with a song,
Whether the hour is dark or bright,
Just to be loyal to God and right,
Just to believe that God knows best,
Just in his promises ever to rest—
Just to let love be our daily key,
That is God's will for you and me."

A SEASONAL AID IN CHURCH WORK

The holiday season is approaching and soon the postman's pack will be filled with remembrances sent from far and near to gladden the hearts of home-folks everywhere. It brings an opportunity for the hospitality committees of churches and Sunday schools to reach out to persons in their circle; to keep alive interest in church matters which in some instances may seem to be wavering; to show that, although it is not always possible to make personal calls, people on church lists are still kept in mind. Even so modest a greeting as a Thanksgiving or Christmas card is genuine evidence of good will, and effective testimony that the recipient has not been forgotten.

A greeting card cannot, of course, take the place of a friendly call or a personal word of welcome to the stranger, but it can supplement such calls in a worth while way. It is a gesture of friendliness which cannot fail to create an answering response, and it has just the right personal note to make it welcome as a message from the church, not only for Christmas and Easter, which are essentially church greeting days, but for more personal occasions such as births and birthdays, wedding anniversaries, school graduates, church membership anniversaries, or when some one is ill or convalescent. Whether it is sponsored by the church or done by the individual church worker, the trouble taken is always more than repaid by the interest and appreciation evoked.

The Christmas cards this year offer an unusual variety of designs particularly suitable for church use. There are new reproductions of famous old religious masterpieces, and some of the street scenes of medieval England feature the ringing of church bells or the singing of Christmas carols by choir boys. Early New England scenes, also, appear this year with steepled churches predominant in the design. Then there are the cards made especially for children and suitable for Sunday school use.

All the 1928 cards seem unusually bright and gay. The modernistic note is creeping into the designs, but shows itself chiefly in clear colors and bolder lines. Many of the cards are larger, and in place of the holly sprays which used to decorate the corners, are found large all-over designs and pictures that tell the Christmas story in themselves. There are many etchings among the new cards, and simplicity and a note of genuine sincerity characterize the best designs.

SIN

Do not trifle with a sin, even a small sin. It is like the little cloud which, as the poet has said, may hold a hurricane in its grasp.

The tiny stream from which the little sin springs may become a Niagara of evil.

The small seed of sin may become a great vine overrunning the whole house, shutting out the sunshine entirely.

Sin is not a mere act or incident; it is a storm center, a fountain, the seed germ of a wilderness.

Do not give it a start in your heart and life.—The War Cry.

—The series of meetings at Calvary church resulted well in quickening interest among church members. It is expected that several boys and girls will be received to church membership next Sunday. Dr. Spahr's sermons made a fine impression on those present.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

By F. L. Gibbs

OCT. 21: HOW DOES LAW INCREASE FREEDOM?

Rom. 13:1-8

Plan for These Outcomes

a. A correct understanding of what law is.

b. A definite regard for law in all its phases.

c. A helpful attitude toward community, city, county, state and national officials who have the enforcement of the laws in their power.

d. A proper recognition of God's law and an earnest desire to observe it in our lives.

Plans for the Meeting

Have the objects of the meeting placed before those present. Invite some young student of law in the community to make a ten-minute talk on "Laws and Their Effect on Lives," or "Law-Making and Law-Observance." Have the pastor or some Bible student to speak on the topic, "Freedom Under God's Laws." Carry out the following program, if possible:

Hymn, "America, the Beautiful."

Call to Worship, Psalm 99.

Prayer by a number of those present.

Flag recognition; story of "National" and "Christian" flags told by two Endeavorers.

Hymn, "Faith of Our Fathers" and "America."

Reading of Scripture and leader's talk.

Presentation of special speakers.

Discussion of topic, by all.

Hymn, "I'll Go Where You Want Me to Go."

Benediction.

Points on Topic

What is law? There are three uses of the word, "law:" (a) Pertaining to political and governmental affiairs; (b) Relating to tradition and common usages; (c) Resulting from cause and effect. (See New National Encyclopedia for definition).

Where law operates: Law relates itself to many phases of life. The following are due our consideration:

1. Law in the moral and spiritual realm: This phase touches every life, whether religious or not. Freedom is enjoyed, health is produced, comfort and irght uses of lives are due to observance of moral and spiritual laws. "Prohibition" is a moral law, for it directly concerns life and its protection. It is out of the realm of political law. "Child labor" is another law in the moral field. "Love" offers freedom under the law in the moral and spiritual realm. "Owe no man anything, but to love one another: for he that loveth another hath fulfilled the law."

Law touches other spheres: (2) Natural and physical world; (3) Social realm; (4) Civic sphere; and the International realm.

Questions

1. Should a Christian obey all laws regardless of conscience?

2. What nations gave our legal foundation?

3. Name the great law givers: of Israel, of Rome, of England, of America.

4. What great laws are under discussion at the present time? Point out strength and defects in these laws.

5. What are "blue laws."

6. Is enforcement of laws a solution to present day evils?

7. What is involved in "fulfilling the law of Christ?" See Gal. 6:2; 5:13, 14.

8. What is the fourth commandment? Is to obey a restriction upon liberty or an aid to one's freedom?

Poem to the Point

"I am Liberty—God's daughter!
My symbols— a law and a torch;
Not a sword to threaten slaughter,
Nor a flame to dazzle or scorch;
But a light that the world may see,
And a truth that shall make men free."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

OCT. 28: PAUL'S LAST JOURNEY TO JERUSALEM

Scripture basis: Acts 20:1-21: 17; II Cor. 11:28.

Golden Text: Remember the words of the Lord Jesus, that he himself said, it is more blessed to give than to receive. Acts 20:35.

*Paul the Faithful Preacher

Acts 20:1-21

We take up Paul at Ephesus, where we left him a few weeks ago. After the uprising of the silversmiths had ceased, the Apostle to the Gentiles departed to go through Macedonia. Going north, he came to Troas, and from there sailed across the head of the Aegean Sea into Macedonia, where he met Titus, who brought him good news from the Corinthians. He continued to collect funds for the needy Christians in Jerusalem as he went over the country, and did likewise during his three months' sojourn in Greece. While in Corinth, he wrote those splendid epistles to the Romans and Galatians. The unbelieving Jews who learned of his purpose to sail for Syria from Cenchrea, the port of Corinth, laid in wait for him, perhaps to rob him of the money he had accumulated, but he was too wise for them. He returned northward through Macedonia, stopped at Philippi, went to Neapolis, its port, and sailed across to Troas, where he met other delegates to Jerusalem, and remained there a week. Here Luke joined the party.

While preaching a long sermon in a close third-story room on a hot night a young man sitting in the window, perhaps weary from a strenuous day, went to sleep and fell down to the stone pavement below, with fatal results. It was perhaps time for Paul to end his sermon, yet he had so much to say to these beloved "babes in Christ." However, that such a sad ending might not come just prior to his departure, and that the power of God might be manifest, he hastily descended to the lifeless body of the former sleeper, fell upon him, prayed, and rising, assisted him to his feet, a restored being. Warning: Keep awake while the gospel message is being delivered. Keep the church auditorium well ventilated.

Instead of sailing with the party from Troas to Assos, Paul went by land and joined them there. Continuing, they sailed to Mitylene, the capital of the island of Lesbos, thence to the islands of Chios and Somas. As much as he would have enjoyed visiting Ephesus, he refrained from stopping there, because he was anxious to arrive at Jerusalef in time for the Passover feast. Therefore, he, with the party, stopped at Miletus, an important city 25 miles south of Ephesus. From here he sent for the elders (or presbyters), who were the heads of the Ephesian churches, and delivered to them an important message, in which he defends his conduct and preaching of the past.

*Paul the Faithful Pastor

Acts 20:22-38

He continues his message by relating unto them his plans and probable fate, as he set his face steadfastly toward Jerusalem, as did his Lord on His last journey. (Luke 9:51). He further stated that he was not so much concerned as to what would befall him as he was of doing his full duty, so that, as he said, "I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry which I have received of the Lord Jesus."

A further concern of his was the "flock," the churches over which these elders had been made overseers. "Ever since David wrote the Twenty-third Psalm, God's people have been compared to sheep and God to a wise and loving Shepherd." "Pastors, Sunday school teachers, church officers, parents, all that have to do with instructing and guiding human souls are God's under-shepherds." He warns them of the "wolves" that will enter into the flock, even some from among them, who will work destruction if not defeated. Then, he commends them to God.

In the last part of Paul's message, he humbly points to himself as an example of piety, devotion, unselfishness. "A wonderful man, who can confidently point to his own life as an example to others in all particulars, and, moreover, not seem to be boasting in doing so." He calls attention to the words of Jesus, not recorded in the sacred writ, that it is more blessed to give than to receive. This may be applied materially or spiritually.

Acts 21:1-17; II Cor. 11:28

After a sorrowful parting, Paul took ship and sailed with his party past the little island of Coos, thence to the towns of Rhodes and Patara in Lycia, thence to Tyre in Phoenecia, where they remained seven days. Some of the faithful disciples of the Lord foresaw the perils awaiting the apostle in Jerusalem, and urged him not to go, but the Spirit led him on. Continuing the journey by ship, they probably landed at Ptolemais (Acre), and journeyed by land to Caesarea, the Roman capital of Palestine. Here he tarried several days with Philip, one of the seven deacons, and his four daughters. Here, also, he was warned again about going to the great Jewish metropolis by a prophet from Jerusalem, Agabus. Taking Paul's girdle, he bound himself with it and declared that the apostle would so be bound. What courageous words, depicting his unsurpassed devotion, came from the lips of Paul, as he responded to the entreaties of his friends to remain with them when he said, "I am ready, not to be bound only, but also to die at Jerusalem for the name of the Lord Jesus!" On to Jerusalem he went with a cortege of disciples from Caesarea, including an old disciple of Cyprus, Mnason, in whose house it was arranged for him to stay. "And when we were come to Jerusalem, the brethren received us gladly."

* Sub-topics given in Peloubet's Select Notes.—Wells.

The last verse of the lesson was added to show Paul's loving care of the churches he had established in various places. He was not only a propagandist of the gospel, but an organizer as well. Besides his numerous trials and afflictions, he was burdened for the welfare of the groups of Christ's followers located here and there over parts of Europe and Asia. He was a faithful undershepherd.

"Every one who deals with others—and who does not, in some capacity and to some degree?—may well study the spirit and methods of Paul."

ANNUAL FATHER AND SON WEEK
November 11-18, 1928

For 20 years Fathers and Sons have been brought together in yearly observances of various types under the auspices of the Church and its agencies. Those who have attended such gatherings realize the great benefits derived by Fathers and Sons in bringing them in social and religious fellowship one with another.

The Department of Religious Education, Board of Christian Education, is very anxious that the leaders throughout the Methodist Protestant Church observe this "Father and Son Week," November 11-18.

The following materials are ready for distribution:

1. A General Descriptive Leaflet. This is a general six-page leaflet describing all plans, including suggestions for Father and Son Banquet. Price 1½ cents each, or $1.35 per hundred.

2. A Worship Program for Father and Son Sunday. This two-page leaflet can be used in any Father and Son Observance. Price ½ cent each or 45c per hundred.

3. Father and Son Songs. To be used at the banquet and other similar social gatherings. Price 1 cent each, or 85 cents per hundred.

Order these materials and secure other information regarding Father and Son Week from International Council of Religious Education, 5 South Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

PERSEVERANCE

All who expect to be successful must persevere. Eminent succes is reached only by patient, earnest toil. In this free country, this land favored of God and liberty, the poorest boy may rise to the highest and most respectable position in life, if he only has the will and energy to persevere. It is a fact not to be denied, that a great many of our wealthy and most influential men commenced at the very foot of the ladder and worked their way up.

Industry may, indeed, sometimes be disappointed, success may not always be to the persevering; but at the same time it is evidently certain in the ordinary course of things that without perseverance we cannot succeed. The law of our nature, the condition under which we were placed from our birth, is, that nothing good or great is to be acquired without industry and perseverance.

A price is set by kind Providence to be paid for everything; and the price of success is untiring perseverance. Never give up; though everything may look dark and seemingly no prospect ahead. The persons who have the strength of mind to earnestly persevere when all things seem to go wrong and when misfortune and failures stare them in the face, will sooner or later see their efforts crowned with success. Let your business be what it may, make it a rule to work with your whole heart in the matter; fix your eyes on the desired goal, and let nothing turn you from the path you have entered. If you desire fame, you can have it, you can place your name high upon the roll of honor, if you will only content yourself and work and wait. If you desire to be wealthy, your chance is as good, and perhaps better, than was that of hundreds of our millionaires who now are living in marble mansions, and who commenced life as poor, barefooted boys. Do not sit down and idly wait for something to turn up. Hundreds, yea, thousands, have gone to ruin by so doing who could have filled high and honored positions if they had only gone to work and persevered. Go to work—seize upon the present opportunity. Whatever that may be, never give up until you have a chance for something better. Go to work with your hands, and with the brain, also, and do not allow either to be idle for a day and you will succeed as sure as you persevere.

"Never turn back; what you attempt, do with all your strength. If the prospect be somewhat darkened put the fire of resolution to your soul and kindle a flame that nothing but death can extinguish."

As the light goes out with the exhaustion of the oil, so will fortune fail with cessation of human endeavors and perseverance. It is very common to hear people wishing they were rich, and see them waiting for an opportunity to do much at once, but such people may breathe out their lives in idle wishes and regret in their last moments their useless intentions and barren zeal.

OLD YADKIN

While the contributions to install the old Yadkin College bell in the High Point College have not been just what might have been expected, the responses have been encouraging. Some of the good words that have accompanied the responses follow:

Miss Garrett, of Pocahontas, Va., writes: "I am sending my check for 'Old Yadkin.' If every Yadkinite feels as I do about that dear old bell it will soon be installed. It is grand that that much of Yadkin College is to live on."

Mrs. Grace Holder-Speas, of Winston-Salem, says: "I am glad to have a part in anything connected with Yadkin College. It was there my life was molded for good. I feel sure that every Yadkin student who hears of the idea will be glad to help."

Mr. and Mrs. Z. M. Rea, of Charlotte, say: "We have read your call to the colors and we heartily approve of the plan."

Bro. Hanner, of Julian, says he is glad to contribute and will pay more if necessary. Bro. Snotherly, of Albemarle, sends encouraging words. Bro. Troxler, of Lexington, gladly responds and thinks the idea should be carried out. It is interesting to note that these words have come from so many different parts of the country and how the different walks of life are so well represented. It only indicates that Yadkin College has made its imprint on life in so many favorable ways.

Yadkin College is living in the lives of many a man and woman over our land, making these people more useful in the world. Because of the great good this old school has done, its memory should certainly be perpetuated.

Contributions and pledges are as follows:

Payments:

Geo. L. Curry	$1.00
Vera Garrett	1.00
Mrs. T. L. Speas	1.00
J. H. Enotherly	1.00
	$4.00

Pledges:

William Hanner	$1.00
Z. M. Rea	1.00
Mrs. Z. M. Rea	1.00
Rev. R. S. Troxler	1.00
	$4.00

Who will be the next? It is hoped that a large number of responses will be ready to report by Founders Day, which is October 25. If I do not hear from you sooner, meet me there with your contribution.

GEO. L. CURRY.

FOUNDERS DAY, HIGH POINT COLLEGE

Just a line to remind all the friends of High Point College that the program begins at 10:45 on October 25, (Thursday). President Chase, of the University of North Carolina, and Mr. J. Norman Wills are the speakers for this occasion. Music for the occasion will be furnished by the college orchestra. Make the day a picnic affair. Every one come!

R. M. ANDREWS, President.

—Rev. and Mrs. Dr. Spahr are enjoying a visit from Mr. and Mrs. Hubbs, friends from New Jersey.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Enfield Charge.—On September 26th, the Roseneath Church and Nahala Presbyterian Church, in the same neighborhood, began a union revival and closed Sunday night, last. The pastors concerned did the preaching. Mr. Yandell, of the Presbyterian Church, conducted the singing. There was good attendance throughout the meeting, but the response was not what it ought to have been. The church people seemed to be revived. Sunday night four gave their hearts to God. Our church here seemed to be helped by the meeting and to have a spirit to go ahead for bigger things. It might be added that there are enough Methodist Protestants in this neighborhood to make a strong church in the writer's opinion if they had a man to get out among them and get some of the uninterested ones interested. I am hoping that Conference can make some arrangement whereby this church may have an all-time pastor for next year.

Sunday was the writer's last appointment at Whitaker's Chapel. Following the preaching service the church had a business meeting at which time the officers for the ensuing year were elected. They are as follows:

Church trustees, Mr. C. S. Whitaker, Miss Jewel Whitaker, Mrs. S. C. Whitaker, Rev. C. H. Whitaker, Mr. Cary Whitaker, Mr. Robert Whitaker and Miss Roberta Pittman; stewards, Mrs. S. C. Whitaker, Mr. Cary Whitaker, and James Lewis. Class leader, Mrs. Sarah D. Harris; Sunday school superintendent, Mr. W. B. Baker. Plans for the coming year were discussed. The spirit of the meeting was optimistic.

Next Sunday will be a big day for Enfield. The Sunday school is planning to have a Rally Day service at the regular preaching hour. Besides the regular Rally Day service, the service of Prof. E. J. Coletrane has been secured. He will address the church and Sunday school on the subject of Christian Education. I do not know of anyone who is more capable of handling such a subject. Every one wants to hear Professor Coletrane. Professor Coletrane is superintendent of schools in Roanoke Rapids. An offering will be taken for Christian Education. Come prepared.

Sunday night President Taylor will preach. This is equally an important service. Let all make next Sunday "go to church Sunday."

Last Saturday the funeral of Mr. Spier Bellamy was conducted by the writer. While not a member of our church, he had ancestors who were members. His father, Dr. John Bellamy was a member. I am told that his grandfathers on both sides of the family were preachers in our conference. He was the only remaining member of the immediate family with the exception of Mrs. John Hall, of Scotland Neck, a niece. He had a great feeling for the Methodist Protestant church, expressing it many times by substantial gifts to the church and her pastors. He spent his last days in the home of Mrs. Annie May McGwigan. His earthly life came to an end on October 5, 1928. His age was given as 69 years.

Blessed be God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies, and the God of comfort, who comforteth us in all our tribulations. II Cor. 1:3, 4.

J. CLYDE AUMAN.

Pine Grove, Kernersville Charge.—A good congregation was present at the 11 o'clock service Sunday, October 7, and our pastor gave us a splendid sermon on "Temperance." "Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging; and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise." The congregation joined in responsive reading from the Hymnal in reference to the text.

"Be not drunk with wine, be not among wine bibbers; among riotous eaters of flesh. For the drunkard and the glutton shall come to poverty; and drowsiness shall clothe a man with rags."

He who fools with strong drink will be fooled by it. The watchword ought to be "Touch not, taste not, handle not."

As Christians he urged us to be courageous and stand for the right.

We were glad to have the pastor and his good wife with us at the Sunday school hour.

It was announced Sunday that Rev. Mr. McCulloch will preach for us at the next appointment, the third Sunday in October at 3 o'clock.

We are hoping for a large congregation, as it will be the last regular appointment before Conference. REPORTER.

Orange Charge, Notice.—The fourth quarterly conference is called to meet at Chestnut Ridge church Saturday, October 27th, at 2 P. M. Please be on hand promptly. Important business.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Tabernacle Charge.—Rally Day exercises will be held at Tabernacle church on the fourth Sunday in this month, beginning at 11 o'clock. A splendid program is being arranged. It has been suggested that every member of the Sunday school endeavor to bring a new scholar with him.

Tabernacle church is very fortunate to have live Home and Foreign Missionary Societies. These societies will meet next Saturday afternoon in the home of Mrs. R. L. Jones.

Mrs. Charles Sizemore, one of our faithful Tabernacle members, is in a Greensboro hospital taking treatment. We hope she will soon be restored to health.

Miss Ezda Deviney and Miss Elizabeth Hanner are missed from the services at Julian. They have gone back to their school work.

The people of this charge continue to remember the pastor with gifts from time to time. We thank each one.

H. L. ISLEY.

Burlington, First Church.—Today the attendance in the Sunday school was 339 and offering amounted to $25.76. We are hoping to be able to report a large increase in both attendance and offering within a few weeks, as the hot weather is about past, we believe, and perhaps many old members, at least, will return to the school.

Bro. George Millaway has been with us in the meeting we have just closed, and we were highly pleased with the strong and powerful gospel messages that he brought each night. We are glad to report around 30 professions, and 16 new members were received at the morning service today, making a total of 71 new members for this Conference year.

The Rally Day exercises as observed at the evening hours were well attended and a splendid program given.

The fourth quarterly conference will be held at the church Wednesday evening, October 17, at 7:30 o'clock, and a full attendance of the officers and members of the church is greatly desired. Come one, come all! Let's close the year's work with a complete report.

Mayor Clarence Ross, of Graham, taught the Baraca class today and brought a great message on the lesson. Mr. Ross is a young attorney, and is known extenisvely as an excellent teacher. Lawyer E. S. W. Dameron is to teach us next Sunday and we can promise that those who hear him will be delighted at his explanation of the lesson. Bro. C. C. Lindley, our own good teacher, expects to be back on the job October 28. Three of our members are in hospitals, as follows: Mr. L. L. Wilson, at Oteen, N. C.; Mr. Malcolmn, at Hot Springs, Ark., and Mr. Adrian Perry in Rainey Hospital, this city. We ask that each member write the members who are away and visit the one nearby and pray for the recovery of each one, if it is in accordance with our Heavenly Father's will.

Best wishes.

L. A. BRAXTON, Reporter.

Philadelphia, Greensville Circuit.—The second week in September proved to be a great and successful week in the revival at Philadelphia church. Rev. Mr. Spencer, of Halifax charge, delivered such fine sermons that the people could no longer reject Christ, but were revived as in olden times. May God help those who were brought to Christ to hold out to the end.

Our Sunday school has been delayed for the last few months on account of the revivals, but we are now opening up again and hope to have a large attendance.

The last quarterly conference of this year will be held at Wesley's Chapel on Saturday before the third Sunday, October 20. We are expecting Rev. A. D. Shelton to preach for us at 11 o'clock. Everybody come.

We have been greatly blessed for the last five years with Brother Powell as our pastor, and we would feel glad to welcome him back as our pastor for the coming year. Should it not be God's will for his return we are glad to know that some circuit will be very fortunate indeed to have as its pastor Rev. H. L. Powell. May God bless him and his family in their future life.

BERNICE PEARSON, Reporter.

First Church, Concord.—Yesterday was another inspiring day with us here. The morning hour was given to the rendering of our Rally Day program. The Sunday school attendance was fine as was also the attendance at the 11 o'clock hour. The offering was $150.95 which goes to the Board of Christion Education. A splendid offering was also received at the other services to apply on General Conference Budget. We have been greatly behind financially but we are now sighting the goal for the year and expect to pay out by Conference.

Evangelistic services were begun with the evening service yesterday and will probably run for two weeks. The pastor is doing the preaching and the local workers are rendering fine assistance in the work. The attendance at all services yesterday was all that we could hope for. We were delighted to have Rev. and Mrs. Lawrence Little and the children worship with us in the morning service. Brother Little contributed of his splendid enthusiasm to the service in a short address appropriate to the occasion. We are always glad to have them with us.

We covet the prayers of the church in our behalf. G. H. HENDRY, Pastor.

Asheboro.—The dedicatory service September 30th was a great inspiration to our people. Dr. Andrews delivered a very fine sermon and the entire occasion was all that we could wish for. Rev. N. M. Harrison preached a splendid sermon at the evening hour.

A week ago last evening Rev. Joel B. Trogdon, the pastor of Why Not charge, preached in our church to the delight and edification of our people. The writer assisted Brother Trogdon in a meeting at Flag Springs all last week. There were several professions and a fine spirit manifested. Brother Trogdon is deservedly popular with his people and they seem anxious to have him returned to them for another year. The writer and Brother Trogdon were brought up in the same church and this was the first opportunity we have had of being in a revival together and it was a great pleasure.

Conference is so close at hand that we can hear the grinding of the wheels. Our people are far from ready for it in financial matters, but will make on effort. Wednesday evening of this week is the annual congregational meeting for the election of officers for the coming year, and Wednesday evening of next week we will hold the fourth quarterly conference.

The Sunday school officers were elected on Rally Day, September 30, and are already on the job. Practically all the old officers were re-elected. We find that with a departmentalized school and highly graded lessons it is wise to let the newly elected officers go into office on the first Sunday in October as that is the beginning of the new year of literature. Brother W. L. Ward continues as general superintendent of the school.

Brother James Bunch is the delegate to conference.

Yesterday afternoon the writer went to Marlboro Friends church to conduct the funeral of Walter Millikan, who had been sick for a long time. Mr. Millikan lived near Asheboro and was 45 years old.

J. E. JRITCHARD.

Monday Morning.

Reidsville.—Someone who has been smart enough so far to conceal his or her identity is responsible for the fact, a very delightful fact, that the pastor of this church is strutting around wearing a tailor-made suit of brand new clothes. Every strut he makes is a sincere expression of his deep gratitude to this unknown friend for this highly appreciated gift. This friend may be able to keep us from knowing who he is, but it is impossible for him to conceal his identity from a kind heavenly Father, who, out of His unbounded love and goodness, will deal tenderly and graciously with him. We hope this friend will receive as much joy out of giving as we have in receiving.

No, this is not all. Last Sunday as we were entering the pulpit a good woman handed us a small package and remarked: "A little donation from your friends." Upon investigation we found that a number of the members of the church, headed by the three "elect ladies" who reside on Main street, and who are always doing something nice for the pastor and his wife, had given us more than $50 in money; and our cup of joy ran all over once more. We tried to say something befitting the occasion, but we made a poor our at it. The tears of gratitude and appreciation drowned out the feeble tongue that was struggling desperately to do itself proud. Why is it that when a fellow needs his tongue most the thing refuses to do anything but sputter and stutter?

We all regret to lose Brother J. A. Dixon and family from our community and church. They moved last week to take up their permanent abode at the Children's Home. We shall miss them from our services. They have been kind to the pastor's family, and they shall miss very much their friendly visits, which in almost every instance brought with it a donation of something good to eat. We wish them unbounded success and happiness in their work at the Home.

We were delighted to have Brother E. Lester Ballard conduct the singing during our revival which closed last Wednesday. He and his good wife endeared themselves to the members and friends of our church. He rendered valuable service, and we are grateful. The meeting, while not accomplishing what we had hoped, was worth while. The congregations were unusually good for this church, and the interest was better than it has been since we came here. We are still of the opinion that our church has an opportunity in Reidsville, but it will take time and patience and perseverance to develop the opportunity into the kind of a church we ought to have in this city. We have some of the most loyal Methodist Protestants here to be found anywhere. May God bless them, and prosper them, and make possible the realization of their fondest hopes.

GEO. R. BROWN.

Mt. Zion, Pinnacle Charge.—Our Sunday school seems to be improving 'most every way.

The women's society met immediately after Sunday school with a good attendance.

Next Sunday at 1:30 o'clock the fourth quarterly conference will be held at Pilot church.

On next Sunday we will elect the officers and teachers for the ensuing year's Sunday school.

Mrs. R. L. Wolffe, of Guilford College, was a visitor in our Sunday school Sunday.

Next Saturday morning at 7:30 o'clock everybody that is interested and can conveniently do so is invited to meet at Mount Zion and take part in a general clean-up of the cemetery and church ground.

Our hearts have been saddened very much because of the tragic death of the beloved daughter of our pastor, Miss Blanche Hunter. The entire membership shares the bereavement and extends to Mr. and Mrs. Hunter and all members of the family their heartfelt sympathy. Such untimely deaths as dear Blanche encountered are hard to understand, and almost make our hearts bleed with sorrow, but "sometime we shall understand," and it could have been worse. Such things do happen in families where those that are left behind don't know anything about the meaning of that Scripture: "The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away; blessed be the name of the Lord." Not so with Bro. Hunter and family. May the Lord add His blessings to the family in such a way that this great sorrow and bereavement will be easier to bear, is our prayer.

Rehoboth, Creswell Circuit.—We had a very large crowd at preaching Sunday at 11 o'clock. Pastor Hethcox delivered a fine sermon.

In the afternoon the convention was held at Rehoboth church; had quite a large crowd present, also had a fine program.

The Christian Endeavor Society held its regular meeting Sunday night at 7:30 o'clock. A large crowd was present.

Since my last report our young people are taking great interest in prayer meeting. The following have led: Mr. J. B. White, Mr. Tom Curles, Mr. H. L. Swain. We are looking forward to a fine talk from Mr. Wilson Phelps Friday night, October 19.

Mrs. G. L. Davenport is still confined to her bed.

Mr. Sam Tarkington has returned home from Portsmouth, Va.

NORMA TARKINGTON.

Winston-Salem—There was good attendance at all services last Sunday. The Sunday school had its Rally Day program and interesting messages were delivered by the pastor, Rev. J. H. Moton, at the morning and evening services. Special music was rendered by the choir under direction of A. W. Davis.

The new officers and teachers of the Sunday school, recently elected, were installed. The officers are: Superintendent, C. H. Smith; assistant superintendents, S. E. Kelly and R. H. Shouse; secretary, Miss Pauline Tise; assistant secretary, W. D. Coble; treasurer, W. G. White; librarian, N. F. Carroll; music director, A. W. Davis; pianist, Miss Pearl Sapp.

Departmental superintendents are: Beginners, Mrs. J. A. Gwyn; Primary, Mrs. J. E. Kirk; Junior, Mrs. W. N. Pegram; Intermediate, S. E. Hauser; Adult, R. N. Hauser.

The teachers are Mrs. J. A. Gwyn, Miss Helen Voss, Miss Pearl Sapp, J. W. Hester, F. D. Voss, W. W. Weatherman, W. N. Pegram, R. N. Hauser, Miss Nannie Watson, C. H. Smith, Mrs. R. H. Shouse, Miss Pauline Branson, S. E. Hauser, D. D. Vroom, Miss Thelma Smothers, Mrs. R. N. Hauser, Mrs. W. N. Pegram, Mrs. W. D. Coble, Mrs. G. A. King, Mrs. J. E. Kirk.

On next Sunday the nominating committee for church officers for the coming year will make its report.

At a recent meeting of the Board of Stewards, a canceled note for several hundred dollars was presented to the church by R. N. Hauser, the note having been issued before the last Annual Conference in order to take care of the finances for that year.

Our church is prospering and will close this year with a good record. The finances will be paid in full and no indebtedness carried over. The president was with us at the last quarterly conference and his letter in a recent issue of the Herald gives a detailed report of conditions as he found them. We were glad to have Brother Taylor with us and our only regret is that he cannot come oftener.

We are looking forward with keen interest and pleasure to the Annual Conference which meets with us on October 31st. All committees, working on plans for the Conference, were appointed some time ago and their work is well under way. We are working hard to help make the coming session the best in the history of our denomination in this state. Rev. R. C. Stubbins will act as associate hostess to our pastor, Brother Moton.

Pleasant Grove.—Yesterday was a good day for us at the Grove. Attendance at church and Sunday school was good, but our night services were not so well attended. Next Sunday will be our Rally Day and we are expecting an increased attendance.

Our new parsonage is nearing completion. The defects in arrangement referred to in a former letter have nearly all been remedied and we will have one of the best parsonages in Conference. All the bed rooms have closets and the large breakfast room will meet all demands along that line. The entrance from the driveway through the dining room remains unchanged, but each pastor can manage that to suit himself. If he does not like it as it is, he can close the door and enter at the front or rear, just as he likes.

We will have cold and hot water, bath, sewer, electric lights, and all modern conveniences. A basement has also been added. In short, nothing has been left off that a city pastor would need. The church is to be congratulated on this new addition to their church property and I now feel that the church is getting in better shape to do real aggressive work along spiritual and educational lines. A great spiritual awakening is our greatest need at the Grove at this time, and the pastor sees no reason why it should not come. We have good people here—intelligent and interested in the church. Our most difficult problem now is the location of a road from the highway to the church. The county has promised to build this at once if the property owners will agree on the location. Not to do this will keep us in the mud and keep some from attending church who otherwise would come.

Our last quarterly conference for the year will be held Saturday, October 20th, at 2 P. M. We are expecting good reports. It took only a few minutes of our time last Sunday morning to go over the top on our superannuate collection. This is highly gratifying to the pastor and shows how easily folks can do their duty when they see it and have a willing heart and hand.

Bro. Noah Charles, one of our shut-in members, is not quite so well at this writing, but we hope soon to see him better.

We thank Mrs. R. J. Kennedy for a nice lot of corn -roasting ears. We also thank Mrs. Hilton, mother of our highly esteemed bass singer, Mr. J. M. Hilton, for some fine potatoes. Mrs. Hilton is one of our oldest citizens and yet she moves around easily and appears to be much younger than she is.

Bro. J. M. Kennedy, who has been suffering a great deal with his eyes for the last two months, is getting better. Bro. Kennedy is one of our best choir members, and we have greatly missed him.

GEO. L. REYNOLDS.

Porter Church.—Pastor Hill filled his regular appointment here yesterday, and as usual preached an excellent sermon, after which communion was held. Bro. Hill will preach for us again the fourth Sunday in this month, which will be his last time for this year. He has given us the fourth Sunday extra just as much as he possibly could all the summer; this we appreciate very much.

We are expecting Conference to return Bro. Hill to us for the coming year; otherwise we will be greatly disappointed. We feel he has done so much here this year and he and Mrs. Hill have endeared themselves to us so much we cannot have them leave.

Our work is moving on smoothly, everything in harmony. We have not done wonders this year, still we feel much good has been accomplished and considering our membership we have done fairly well, and we hope to do even better the coming year.

Our fourth quarterly conference will be held next Saturday afternoon at 10 o'clock. This is a very important conference and we hope every member that possibly can will be present. We want to finish paying the pastor's salary. Other claims are paid and we must not let our good pastor, who has served us so faithfully, go to Conference not paid up in full. We feel sure it will be paid, though, and everything put in shape for Conference by then.

We elected our new officers for the coming year yesterday. Not very many changes were made. Class leaders are Mr. G. H. Thompson and Mr. Solomon Simpson. The same stewards were elected, Mrs. Hattie Marbry and W. H. Mabry. Mr. J. L. Cauble is still our Sunday school superintendent, with Mr. Pearson Poplin assistant.

MRS. W. T. BRASWELL.

Orange Circuit, Hebron.—Our reports have been few, but we have been moving on. Our meeting began the second Sunday in August with Rev. H. L. Isley as pulpit help. His sermons were helpful and inspiring and were enjoyed by all. The visible results were not what we had hoped for, but trust much lasting good was done. Bros. T. O. Pender and A. K. McAdams led the singing and many thanks are due them for their work, which added greatly to the singing.

Bro. Williams preached yesterday afternoon, after which the Lord's Supper was administered and church officers were elected for the coming year. All the old ones were re-elected with the exception of stewards. Some new stewards were elected.

We hope Conference will send our present pastor back to us. We have all learned to love him, and feel that he is the man for this work.

We are somewhat behind with our pastor's salary but hope to pay out by Conference.

The fourth and last quarterly conference will be held at Chestnut Ridge Saturday before the fourth Sunday. It is important that all the official members be present.

MRS. LELIA GILL, Reporter.

Chestnut Ridge, Orange Charge.—The congregation was fine last Sunday and Brother Williams preached a good sermon. After the sermon the communion service was held. We were glad to see the large number partake of the Lord's Supper. New officers were elected, or the old ones re-elected, rather, for the next Conference year. They are: Class leaders, J. S. Faucette, J. F. Holmes, W. A. Pender, Mrs. C. A. Sykes, W. S. Sykes, G. P. Sykes, G. W. Sykes; trustees, W. S. Dodson, S. N. Hayes, P. F. Tapp, D. M. Pender, C. A. Sykes, D. M. Sykes, J. E. Thompson; stewards, J. C. Dodson, S. E. Holmes, C. H. Jones, A. F. Jones, J. M. Minnis, W. A. Moore, D. A. Pender, Mrs. Annie Bell Sykes, E. C. Sykes; Sunday school superintendent, J. T. Hobbs; church secretary and treasurer, C. H. Jones; assistant secretary and treasurer, Mrs. C. A. Sykes; reporter, Annie Squires.

The fourth quarterly conference will meet at Chestnut Ridge on October 27 at 2 o'clock.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

ANNIE SQUIRES, Reporter.

October 15, 1928.

Enfield.—The fourth quarterly conference will convene at the Enfield church Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock before the fourth Sunday. We are especially anxious to have a good attendance at this conference. Every voting member of the church is invited. The official members of the conference will be prepared, of course, to make their quarterly reports.

J. CLYDE AUMAN.

High Point.—A delightful Hallowe'en party was given last Friday evening in the assembly room of the church in honor of the faculty and students of High Point College and the Methodist Protestant teachers of the city schools. The room was beautifully decorated with black and yellow, witches, brooms, autumn fruits, corn, and a huge witch-pot in the center, from which punch was served. A number of games were played at different tables, and fortunes were told. A large number of young people appeared in masque costumes appropriate to All Saints' Day, and clowns, witches and ghosts were much in evidence. Mrs. J. H. Allred and Mrs. C. R. Hinshaw sang, and little Miss Sirull gave several humorous recitations in a piquant manner. Mrs. L. R. Johnston impersonated the Queen of Witches very admirably. Delicious refreshments of ice cream and small cakes were served by a bevy of young girls from the C. E. Society and matrons from the Aid Society. A large number of students and dignified professors from the college, as well as young and old members of the congregation, participated in the fun and youthful jollity of the evening. This occasion has come to be an annual affair when the church members are at home to the college people in order to become better acquainted. The students look forward eagerly with rare pleasure to this happy occasion.

At the 11 o'clock service Sunday morning we were delighted to have Dr. S. K. Spahr, of Greensboro, worship with us, and give the invocation. The congregation feels much attached to this venerable and saintly servant of God, who in the evening peace of a long, useful life "looks back on duties well performed and days well spent." At this morning worship Mrs. J. C. Whitesell sang in her beautiful contralto voice the ever-popular "Crossing the Bar," and the choir rendered the lovely anthem, "I Will Lay Me Down in Peace," with Prof. Ernest B. Stimson at the pipe organ. The pastor, Rev. Roy I. Farmer, brought a very practical and forceful message on "The Sin of Being Too Busy," the text being taken from I Kings 20: "As thy servant was busy, he was gone." He said, in part, that inconsistency is one of the sins of which we must all plead guilty. We are all interested in big business, but Christ was the biggest business man of all time. What a gay deceiver are the pleasures of life and the prosperity of the world! You cannot feed your soul with money or pleasure, and the excessive pursuit of worldly things is dangerous. Whatever prevents you from doing your Christian duty, whether social affairs, the pursuit of wealth or selfish pleasure, is dangerous. We leave the dregs of time and service to God and His work, and while we are preoccupied with matters of our own inteerst, the man or woman whom we should have won for Christ is lost and gone from us. Mr. Farmer deplored the fact that insidious sins are sapping our home life today. The homes from which came Jane Addams, Florence Nightingale, Abraham Lincoln, Gen. John J. Pershing and Robert E. Lee were Christian, and the parents were not too busy to give them Christian training. The major sin of today is dodging our duty, and trying to leave it to the other fellow, not only in training our children, but in our obligations to our church and neighbors.

God grant that we may all take heed from this timely warning, and be up and concerned "about our Father's business." Benjamin Harrison, while a lawyer of Indianapolis in the midst of a busy campaign, went to a young man's room one evening to talk to him about the salvation of his soul. The time flew by until he looked at his watch and saw that it was 2 A. M., but he had won his young man. Mr. Harrison afterward became president of the United States.

At the evening service Rev. Mr. Farmer delivered the second of the series on "John Knox's Text." Mr. William Mason, of Greensboro, sang "One Sweetly Solemn Thought," by Ambrose, and the choir rendered "Holy Father, Cheer Our Way" very beautifully.

The general meeting of the Women's Missionary societies convened Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Philathea class room. The Foreign Society had charge of the program for the day, and rendered a most interesting one. Mrs. C. H. Whitaker presided, and gave a beautiful talk on "Tact, or Oiling the Machinery." Twenty-eight members were present. Circle No. 2 reported that they held a food sale on the preceding Saturday, from which approximately $40 was realized, one-half of which was given to the Home society. An excellent paper on "Our Educational Institutions" was read by Mrs. E. L. Ballard, which gave the history of Adrian College, Western Maryland College, at Westminster, Md., the Theological Seminary, at the same place, Yadkin College, old Jamestown Female College, the Junior College at Tehuacana, Texas, and our own High Point College, besides Nagoya College, Japan, the girls' school at Hamamatsu, Japan, and Eiwa Jo Gakko, at Yokohama. Mrs. E. L. Douglas read a splendid article on Pine Ridge, Kentucky, School, and the salutations of the new secretaries of missions, Rev. G. W. Haddaway and Mrs. Marie Thompson, from a recent issue of the Methodist Protestant was read by Mrs. R. M. Andrews. The thank-offering service, which is held annually near Thanksgiving Day, when a group of children from the Home present the program, was discussed, and Mrs. Pickens was asked to consult the superintendent of the Children's Home about the time of this service and program. We were very sorry to receive the resignation of Mrs. R. M. Andrews as superintendent of the Junior Mission Circle, but Mrs. John C. Whitesell was appointed in her stead, and she is allowed to select her own assistant. Mrs. Andrews has been faithful and efficient in her work with the children for three years, and her resignation was accepted with great reluctance. The circle contributed $8 to be equally divided between the foreign and home work.

The Christian Endeavor Society held an interesting meeting Monday evening and Misses Irene and Inez Reynolds discussed the timely topic, "The Christian's Duty As a Voter."

The Young Women's Auxiliary will hold a meeting on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock with Mrs. George Haltom at 824 Montlieu avenue.

Wednesday evening the fourth quarterly conference will be held, when full reports in writing from all the different societies and organizations for the year are expected. There is much activity among the officers and heads of the branches of church work in order to render the best report possible before Annual Conference.

A social for the newly organized Senior department of the Sunday school will be given at the church Thursday evening. This department is for young people of high school age, and the social is planned to provide a good time for the young folks and to get them better acquainted with each other as well as to interest others who ought to be members of our Sabbath school.

The first Founders Day will be observed at High Point College on October 25th, when Dr. Harry W. Chase, president of the University of North Carolina, will be present and deliver an address. An excellent program has been prepared, and the exercises will begin at 10:30 a. m.

Mebane.—We held our fourth quarterly conference Tuesday night, the 9th. The attendance was splendid. Reports were encouraging, and we are hoping to close the year with all claims paid in full. The salary was increased $250 for next year. We think this an indication of a desire to go forward.

Officers for the coming year have been elected and were installed last Sunday morning. The stewards are making the canvass and taking pledges for the coming year. We think this better than to wait till after Conference to take the pledges.

One of our members, Mr. Will Sykes, is in the hospital at Durham in a very critical condition. He has just had a very serious operation. Will every one who reads this pray that he may soon recover and be back in his place at church. We miss him very much in the service.

All of the churches of this town are now engaged in a revival. Rev. Mr. Stephens, pastor of Green Street Baptist church of High Point, is doing the preaching. Large crowds are coming out to hear him and we are sure his preaching will mean much to the town. EDWARD SUITS.

Alleghany, Davidson Charge. — Brother Ridge preached the second Sunday on the kind of foundation to build on. It was a good sermon, and was the last before Conference. We expect our pastor back. He has been with us four years and we hate to give him up.

Our hearts were made sad on the ninth when death claimed Brother Bunch Lanier, one of our best members. He was about 37 years of age. He leaves a wife and five children, the oldest about 12 years old. He was well respected, as shown by the large crowd that attended the burial, the largest crowd I think that ever was at a burial at Alleghany. Pray for the bereaved; they need our sympathy.

F. M. Cook was re-elected superintendent of the Sunday school. We have a good crowd of young folks and a good Sunday school.

ABIGAIL COGGIN, Reporter.

Mount Pleasant.—All the Sunday school officers were re-elected for another year at our last preaching service. Miss Ruby Smith was elected as secretary of the cradle roll department, and Mesdames J. T. Shoffner and J. E. Stafford were elected as her assistants.

Rally Day services will be held here next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock.

A number of people from the Monnett School community gathered at the parsonage Saturday evening and gave Rev. and Mrs. Millaway a genuine pounding.

The Baraca and Philathea classes presented the play, "A Prairie Rose," at Nathanael Greene School Saturday evening, October 6. The performance was highly praised by the audience. This play will be given in the auditorium of Pleasant Garden High School next Saturday evening, October 20. The proceeds are being used to finance a singing school and to aid in the erection of new Sunday school rooms some time in the future. LILLIAN SHOFFNER, Reporter.

Enfield.—Sunday was Rally Day at our church. The Sudnay school was the largest in some time. The rally services, which began at 11 o'clock, were also well attended. The address for this occasion was delivered by Professor Coletrane, superintendent of the schools of Roanoke Rapids. His subject was "Christian Education;" the keynote of his address was "loyalty." Professor Coletrane is a magnetic man. The address he gave was worth while to every hearer; it was educational, it was enjoyable. His address put into practice by the people is the need of today.

At the evening services Rev. S. W. Taylor was with us and preached a splendid sermon.

Our revival services start Monday night and continue through the week. We hope all members will attend and invite their friends and neighbors to attend.

Best wishes to every reader.

REPORTER.

West End, Greensboro.—At the regular monthly business session of the church on Wednesday night the officers for the ensuing year were elected. The conference roll numbers 24. C. F. Johnson is chairman of the board of trustees, F. S. Stockard, chairman class leaders, O. F. Stafford, chairman board of stewards, L. M. Foust, general Sunday school superintendent, with Miss Gladys Routh, assistant general Sunday school superintendent.

Other church officers are O. F. Stafford, treasurer; V. C. Stockard, secretary of business session; C. W. Huffines and P. A. Burns, chief ushers; L. M. Foust, chorister; Mesdames J. R. Holden and V. C. Stockard, pianists, and Miss Nellie Eldridge, reporter. Other officers of the Sunday school are S. E. Ratledge, general secretary, and F. S. Stockard, general treasurer; Mr. Black, of the Baraca class, adult superintendent.

Messrs. Black and Routzen recently installed a system of bells for use in the S. S. in signaling time to the departmental rooms, to be operated from the general secretary's office. Officers and teachers are well pleased and grateful for the timely gift of these two members.

A joint session of the Women's Missionary societies convenes Monday night, and on Wednesday night the fourth quarterly conference will convene.

An opportunity will be given at the morning service next Sunday for the baptism of infants.

Asheville.—Brother Paschall and his bride are now in the parsonage. We are all very happy for the presence of both of them.

On Monday night, October 8, our membership surprised them with a lovely reception. The decorations and the program and the refreshments were most delightful in every way. Miss Verdie McIntyre was general chairman and had the support of a competent committee. One of the participants declared: "It was the greatest party our church ever pulled off." The attendance was the largest of any social gathering in our church here.

Next Sunday will be Rally Day with us.

Our Missionary societies and Ladies' Aid recently held a joint meeting in the beautiful home of Mrs. J. A. Bell, and reorganized on the plan adopted by the General Conference. The new name will be the Woman's Auxiliary. The new officers are: Mrs. C. C. McNeil, president; Mrs. Fred W. Paschall, vice-president; Mrs. J. S. Williams, secretary; Mrs. E. C. Fawcett, treasurer, and Mrs. H. L. Hanner, assistant treasurer. All enjoyed the hospitality of Mrs. Roberts. The auxiliary will meet this Thursday with Mrs. L. M. Joyner. Mrs. Julia Bedinger, returned misionary from South Africa, will be the speaker.

Other activities this week are the Brotherhood meeting, a chicken supper by the Christian Endeavor Society, and a cake and rummage sale by our Ladies' Aid.

REPORTER.

English Street.—The revival meeting began here October 7 and closed October 14. Rev. N. G. Bethea was the pulpit help during the week and our pastor preached on Sunday. Brother Bethea did some great preaching in his pleasant, simple way. He has won a place in many hearts, and his sermons will be long remembered by those who heard. I am sure the influence of these gospel messages will live long in the days to come. Some for whom we have been praying were reclaimed and we trust people's hearts were much revived, while there are other on our Sunday school roll who are out of safety yet. There's much work to be done. Bro. Bethea, his wife and the friends he brought from Lexington last week will always be welcome guests at English Street church.

The three Misses Leonard, of Lexington, sang for us Saturday night, and all those who were there to hear these splendid singers just missed listening to one of heaven's greatest gifts—good singing.

The different Sunday school classes held their business meetings a week sooner so that would not be an excuse for not attending the revival services.

Pastor Garner preached on "Excuses" last Sunday night. He says there are many, many excuses, but very few real reasons for not attending church services.

The Christian Endeavorers held their business meeting at the home of Miss Dot Michael Friday night, October 5. After the business was looked after the society members and some visitors went in a truck to Hayworth Springs, carrying with them different things to be roasted. A fire was built, then the cooking, eating, and fun had full sway for a while.

It has been announced that next Sunday is pay-day at our church, and we trust that this announcement will not be in vain.

We request the eraders' earnest prayers that we may close this conference year as God would have it done.

MRS. J. A. LEE.

Pleasant Hill, West Forsyth Circuit.—Our Sunday school is moving along nicely. We have very good attendance every Sunday.

We are looking forward to the special meeting which will begin Sunday, October 21. The pastor will have for his pulpit help Rev. J. D. Williams, of Greensboro. We are hoping to have a good meeting. We will be glad to have any visitors come and worship with us during the series of the meeting.

Prayer meetings are held at the church every Thursday night.

The monthly business meeting of the C. E. Society was held Sunday night at the church. Plans for making money were discussed. The society also planned to have a social very soon.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies met for their monthly meeting at the church Tuesday night.

MRS. ARZIA DAVIS.

Pleasant Grove.—The attendance at the Sunday school and church services is increasing since the vacation season is over. The Sunday school superintendent has on a special devotional exercise for the month of October. A different class conducts the opening exercise each Sunday. All have had splendid programs so far and we feel the other two will have as good.

Brother Reynolds brought us splendid sermons Sunday. At the close of the morning service the church officers for the coming year were elected.

The Ladies' Aid Society met last Wednesday with Mrs. W. L. Kennedy in High Point. At the close of the business sessions the officers were elected for the next year, as follows: Mrs. Vivian Cecil, president; Mrs. J. R. Meridith, vice-president; Mrs. Ralph Kennedy, secretary; Mrs. Clyde Payne, treasurer.

The attendance and interest of the Junior C. E. Society has not been quite so good since their leader, Mrs. L. F. Honeycutt, has the mumps. We hope she will soon be able to be out again.

Mr. Noah Charles, who has been shut in for for time, is very sick. We hope for these a speedy recovery.

The fourth quarterly conference will be held next Saturday, October 20, at 2 o'clock.

REPORTER.

Pine Hill, Davidson Charge.—Bro. Ridge preached a wonderful sermon on the second Sunday night in October, this being his last time until Conference. We hope to have him back again. He has served us four years and he has been so faithful to us we would be sorry to give him up. We must watch and pray to keep our church alive.

Our last quarterly meeting will be held at Chapel Hill October 20 at 2 p. m. We hope all the official members will be present.

We must not forget our delegate to make him up a little mite to pay his expenses to Conference.

Our Sabbath school will begin next Sunday at 10 o'clock. Our prayer meeting will begin Sunday night. We are praying that we will have great success. Pray for us that we may do more for the Lord in the future than in the past. F. L. SMITH, Reporter.

State Street, Lexington.—A large audience heard Brother Bethea in a fine sermon Sunday morning. His subject, "Growth in Christion Life," was impressively presented.

We had in the morning service Mr. and Mrs. O. V. Warlick and their two daughters, of Shelby. Mr. Warlick is a brother of Mrs. Bethea. Their son and daughter are students of High Point College. Young Miss and Miss Warlick came down from High Point and joined their parents and younger sister here and all enjoyed a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Bethea.

The revival services in the Concord church are in progress this week. Bro. Hendry has invited us to worship with them on Thursday night. A good many are planning to go. Mr. Hendry requested that we bring some special music from Lexington, so we have engaged the Crescent quartet of Lexington to go with us and feel sure all who hear them will be delighted and helped by these fine singers.

Next Sunday will be the time for election of new church officers and the Sunday school superintendent. In the afternoon from 1:30 o'clock to 5, the stewards will be at the church to receive pledges. All are expected to come some time during this time to make their pledges for next year on the church budget. This plan of going to meet the stewards instead of having them hunt us up has been found very satisfactory the past two years and has become a fixed custom.

Bro. Bethea did some good preaching at the English Street M. P. church of High Point last week. Much interest was manifested. The meeting closed Sunday night.

Much favorable comment is being made on the work of our C. E. Society. Mr. Homer Evans is the efficient president of this society, and also secretary and treasurer of Sunday school.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

TABERNACLE MISSIONARY SOCIETIES

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies of Tabernacle met at the church Sunday afternoon and held their regular monthly meeting. This being the home meeting our president, Mrs. E. T. Coble, was in charge. She read for our devotional the fourth chapter of Proverbs, followed with prayer by Rev. T. F. McCulloch.

No literary program was rendered as we had Mrs. Bates and Miss Pearl McCulloch, of Calvary church, with us to explain the merging of the boards. We were very glad indeed to have these good women with us. They gave us splendid explanation on our new work. We thank them very much for coming. It gave us new inspiration.

We will hold our next meeting on Saturday afternoon, November 17, at 2:30 P. M. at the home of Mrs. R. S. Jones.

We were not able to get in the financial report last week so we are combining two reports this week. Eighteen charges are included in these two reports. Calvary leads on A. C. B. with $70.00; Divodson follows with $29.58. The others range from $2.56 to $17.00. On the G. C. B. Forsyth leads with $44.23; Liberty-Siler City follows with $37.68; Chatham is next, with $28.00, then Asheboro, with $27.33. Haw River Mission takes the next lead with $20 IN FULL for this budget. Hats off to Haw River Mission! The remaining charges range in amounts from $9 to $13. Liberty-Siler City stands alone in remittance on superannuate assessment. Seven charges remit on College assessment. Calvary leads, with Grace and Welch tieing with $25 each. Lebanon and Chatham pay this assessment in full, and thus share with Calvary the place of honor this week on this claim. West Forsyth is so near out that we can hardly refrain from listing them in full, too. This is to be reserved for a later pleasure.

Among the individual churches for honor roll recognition, Union Grove, Orange charge, holds the distinction in this report. The remittance this week pays all claims in full for this church. Hats off again

This is the best report that we have been able to publish for weeks, and it is but an indication—and a very encouraging one—of what lies ahead for these budgets. Thank you, brethren, thank you!

Now for next week: More honor roll charges and more honor roll churches!

And once again: Please say "In Full" when you remit to Treasurer Idol. Only one charge that we have found to be in full this week was indicated on the report.

We are "champing the bit" for the report next week. Please make it big!

Fraternally,
S. W. TAYLOR.

October 17, 1928.

P. S.: Since writing the above I have learned that the remittance this week from Mocksville pays College assessment in full for Dulins. Also that Byerly's Chapel has paid in full. We congratulate these two churches and gladly give them their rightful places in the "Paid in Full" list.

SUPREME COURT IS IN SESSION

The Supreme Court of the United States is now in session. The new term of court began October 1, and will continue until next June. The judges have been on vacation since last June.

William Howard Taft, of Connecticut, is Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. There are eight Associate Justices, as follows: Oliver Wendell Holmes, of Massachusetts; Willis Van Devanter, of Wyoming; James C. McReynolds, of Tennessee; Louis D. Brandeis, of Massachusetts; George Sutherland, of Utah; Pierce Butler, of Minnesota; Edward T. Sanford, of Tennessee; Harlan Fiske Stone, of New York. The Chief Justice receives a salary of $20,500 a year; each Associate Justice, $20,000 a year.—Current Events.

—President A. N. Ward, Western Maryland College, Westminster, Maryland, says: "Conditions among college students at the present time as compared with pre-prohibition times are incomparably better. The change over the past is amazing. Of course, colleges have some difficulties, but they are nothing as compared with former conditionsc. To go back to the saloon or modification of the present system looking toward liberalizing the 18th amendment or the Volstead act is unthinkable, in my judgment."

In Kind

The Philathea Class of Reidsville sent a box of clothing for the little girl they care for. Thanks for this.

This is a splendid showing this week, and we sincerely thank all those who have contributed. Since fall weather is upon us, and since the children had only their old summer clothing, which in most cases was badly worn, we have been compelled to purchase clothing and shoes for a goodly number of our family of 77 children. Any father and mother knows what this means, if you have had to purchase clothing and shoes for even four or five children. So it will prove a great blessing to the Home if each Sunday school and church will just lay emphasis upon your next monthly offering for the Home, and thus help us to pay for these purchases.

Mr. G. J. Cherry, a splendid friend of the Home, has also set a good example for many more of our business men. God has blessed him and he is liberally sharing with the Home.

Thanksgiving is about here, and we are hereby asking all our people to get ready to make a liberal offering to the Home. The Home needs your financial help right now a bit more than you think. Knowing this, I am sure you will respond with that help.

The Boys' Dormitory

Many of you will be glad to know that my brother and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Dixon, have moved back into the boys' dormitory and will have charge of the farm for the next year. This, we think, insures the raising of much more produce on the farm.

The Need of Chickens

We found not more than 50 chickens on the entire Home farm upon taking charge, and this is a scrub lot. Just as soon as we are through sowing wheat we will be glad to send a car into any nearby community where the ladies will get together and give as many as a dozen or more chickens to the Home. We trust the ladies of several of our country churches will talk this over, agree to give the chickens, and let us know where to get them. We thank you for your gifts and for your prayers for this splendid institution.

Faithfully yours in His service,
A. G. DIXON.

God's Unspeakable Gift

"We praise Thee, O God! for the Son of Thy Love,
For Jesus who died, and is now gone above.
Hallelujah! Thine the glory, hallelujah! Amen!"

Paul was caught up into the third heavean and heard unspeakable things. There are also unspeakable things on earth. Who can describe the glory of the sunlight? Who can tell how comes the flaming beauty of the full-blown rose? Who can explain the rise of thought in the brain of man? Who can measure the depths of sorrow or the heights of joy in the human breast? But the most unspeakable of all on earth in all its mysterious ages is the Unspeakable Person of God's Only Begotten Son. What mysterious powers showed forth themselves in His life! He was subject of all and yet master of all. He was servant of all and yet lord of all. He was lowliest among the lowly, and mightiest among the mighty. He was cast down and yet He was not destroyed. He was subject to death and yet He had immortality. Men hated Him with a cruel and mighty hatred and yet He loved them with a mighty, unfailing love. He outmeasured men in every attribute of goodness and nobility. He called Himself the Son of Man, but we must call Him the Son of God. In Him dwelt all the fullness of the Godhead bodily. We cannot find the limits of His powers: we can only fall down before Him in worship. Before the world was He was. After the world passes, He will abide. He was and is and ever will be. Because of Him the mystery of the world ceases to pain us. Because of Him we have an everlasting and everliving hope. He brings to us present peace and joy. He satisfies our longings with good things. We shall be fully satisfied when we awake in His likeness. Thanks be unto God for His Unspeakable Gift!

—It is a serious matter to have the privilege of voting in an election to choose our rulers. Few peoples in the history of the nations have had the privilege of choosing their own rulers.

The Lofty Position of the Citizen

In this country the people are supreme. We do not all realize the responsibility involved in this fact. We think of our lawmakers and judges and governors and presidents as bearing responsibility, as bound to a righteous course of action, but we do not think of ourselves as individual citizens equally bound by the moral law. We think and say that we have a right to do as we please. In particular, we insist that we have the right to vote as we please. It is true that no other individual has the right to tell us how we shall vote. But that is true because we are under moral obligation to think for ourselves and decide by the light of reason and conscience how we shall vote. We have no more right to vote as we please than the governor of a state or the president of the United States has to rule as he pleases. These officials are held in check in their administration by laws. Human laws do not prescribe the manner of our voting and therefore we seem to be absolutely free. But we are bound by moral law more sacred than the constitution of our state or nation. Our lofty position as individual citizens lifts up in the exercise of suffrage above the restraint and constraint of human law, but we are still subject to the moral law of God. On the sixth of November when we come to vote, we will not be free to vote for our own worldly advantage. We will be bound in honor to vote a righteous vote. But it should be our pleasure to register such a vote. It is only thus that we can prove ourselves worthy of the high privilege conferred upon us in giving us the supremacy in our American system of government. If the people, the fountain head of government, turn from righteousness, what will become of our nation?

—Don't vote without first praying for divine direction, but be sure that you pray earnestly and honestly. A dishonest prayer and a dishonest vote will not recommend you to God.

—Your vote may turn the scale in the presidential election November 6th. Vote, but vote right.

DENOMINATIONAL ENTERPRISES

PRESIDENT BROOMFIELD'S REPORT

Baltimore, Md., October 16, 1928.

To the Executive Committee of the General Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church.

Dear Co-Workers:

Since our last meeting, held in this city on July 10th, fifteen of our conferences have held their annual sessions. I have been able to attend nine of them in the following order: Missouri, Onondaga, Illinois, Ohio, Michigan, Pittsburgh, West Virginia, Maryland, and Eastern.

In all of them I was enthusiastically received, and was assured of their hearty co-operation in carrying out our denominational program.

Overlapping of dates made it impossible for me to visit the other six. Each of the fifteen has ratified the overtures sent down by the General Conference.

During July I visited High Point College, and conferred with the college authorities concerning a campaign for the liquidation of the college debt.

While there I made two addresses at the Ministers' Summer Institute at the college and spoke at Burlington, Enfield and Henderson—all in behalf of the college campaign.

In harmony with the request of the Board of Missions I visited the Lexington and Albemarle churches, and reviewed with the trustees their applications to the board for help.

During the quarter I have preached twenty-four times and delivered thirty addresses.

These sermons and addresses were delivered in Greensboro, High Point, Lexington, Burlington, Enfield and Henderson, North Carolina; in Pittsburgh, Beaver Falls, Castle Shannon, Waynesburg and Uniontown, Pa.; in Fairmont, Morgantown, and Weston, West Virginia; in Midland Park, Lapeer, and Lansing, Mich.; in Toronto, Cambridge and Sabina, Ohio; in Canton, Foosland and Chicago, Ill.; in St. Louis and Ionia, Missouri; in Atlantic City and Ventnor City, N. J.; in Lynchburg, Va., and in the Camp Ground of the Onondaga Conference, near Oswego, N. Y.

I attended a meeting of the Board of Publication, since my last report, called to consider the steps to be taken whereby the order of the General Conference, directing the consolidation of our church papers, may be carried out.

An entire day was spent going over the matter, and a committee was appointed, consisting of Rev. G. W. Haddaway from the Baltimore Directory, and Mr. W. C. Perkins, of the Pittsburgh Directory, along with the president of the General Conference, to continue the investigation, and present a plan of consolidation, to a meeting of the board to be called if possible during the month of December.

I also attended a meeting of the Commission on Evangelism, and three meetings of the Executive Committee of the Board of Missions.

During the past three weeks, in company with Drs. Straughn and Haddaway, I have attended and addressed district meetings in Lansing and Lapeer in the Michigan Conference; and in Chicago and Foosland in the Illinois Conference.

We are planning to hold similar meetings throughout all the conferences.

During the quarter I have travelled nearly 15,000 miles, and my expenses have been $213.40. In the same period I have assisted in raising over $10,000 for indebtedness.

Since the adjournment of the General Conference, five months ago, much of the time has been spent in making the adjustments demanded by the new legislation.

With a new Board of Missions and two secretaries new in the work, and the vacation season intervening, it has not been easy to get under way as rapidly as we had desired. However, every indication points to a better understanding in this department of our program, and to sincere co-operation on all sides.

Because of the slight adjustments required in the creation of the Board of Christian Education, the two departments of its work have functioned freely and efficiently.

I regard the outlook for the year as exceedingly hopeful.

J. C. BROOMFIELD.

REPORT OF THE MEETING OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

The Executive Committee of the General Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church at the call of the president met in Baltimore, Md., on October 16, 1928.

The meeting was called to order by Dr. J. C. Broomfield, the president of the General Conference. Devotionals were conducted by Dr. Broomfield. Prayer was offered by Mrs. W. C. Hammer. The following members of the committee were present: Chairman, Dr. J. C. Broomfield; secretary, Dr. Charles H. Beck; Mrs. W. C. Hammer, J. A. Pugh, Dr. E. C. Makosky, and Dr. Alden J. Allen, being the entire membership of the committee.

The minutes of the last session were read and approved as correct. The report of the president was presented and approved. This report showed that the president of the General Conference has attended nine of the fifteen conferences which have already met this fall, the other six being impossible because of overlapping dates.

During the quarter the president has traveled nearly 15,000 miles in the discharge of the duties of his office. He has preached twenty-four times, and delivered thirty addresses in ten states. He was present at important meetings of the Board of Trustees of the High Point College, and attended and made addresses at the Ministers' Summer Institute in North Carolina. At the request of the Board of Missions, he visited churches in North Carolina to make some investigations with reference to applications made to that board for assistance. He has attended an important meeting of the Board of Publication, called to consider special business referred to this board by the General Conference. He has attended a meeting of the Committee on Evangelism, and three meetings of the Executive Committee of the Board of Missions. Within the past three weeks President Broomfield, in company with Dr. Jas. H. Straughn, promotional secretary and treasurer, and Dr. G. W. Haddaway, executive secretary of the Board of Missions, has attended and addressed district meetings in Lansing, and Lapeer, Michigan, and in Foosland and Chicago, Illinois. Immediately upon the adjournment of the Executive Committee meetings, Dr. Broomfield and Dr. Straughn left for a series of group meetings in the Onondaga Conference. Similar group meetings are to be held in all of the conferences.

The president presented a communication from the executive secretary of the Board of Christian Education, calling attention to a possible misunderstanding as to the final percentages to be in the distribution of the budget, and inquiring as to the preparation of a Christmas program to be used by the Sunday schools of the denomination.

President Broomfield was requested to prepare a suitable statement concerning the budget matter and publish it in the church papers at his earliest convenience. Dr. Jas. H. Straughn, the secretary for promotion and treasurer, arrived at this time. Dr. G. W. Haddaway, the secretary of the Board of Missions, and Mrs. Marie Thompson, associate secretary of the Board of Missions, arrived a few minutes later, and were invited to participate freely in all discussions. It was decided to issue a Christmas program, and the matter of its preparation and distribution was referred to the secretary of promotion and the New Century Service Commission. It was noted that no programs had been issued by the Woman's Home Missionary Society, and that no programs had been provided for the newly organized Women's Auxiliaries of the Methodist Protestant Church. Mrs. W. C. Hammer presented a copy of a program which had been prepared for use among the women in North Carolina. The general scheme of this program was approved, certain suggestions were made, and the whole matter was referred to the secretary of promotion for its final form. These programs are to be known as the New Century Service programs, and are to be prepared in consultation with the secretaries of the Boards of Missions and Christian Education. It was also directed by the Executive Committee that these New Century programs shall be ready for delivery at the earliest possible date.

Informal reports of their work were presented by the secretary and the associate secretary of the Board of Missions. Mrs. Thompson presented a Prayer Calendar as a part of her report, which was approved. This calendar will be printed and distributed by the Board of Missions at an early date.

A question proposed by Rev. J. E. Pritchard, of Asheboro, North Carolina, as to Quarterly Conference membership was answered as follows:

Membership on a Board of Parsonage Trustees does not

constitute one a member of the Quarterly Conference, under the provisions of the Constitution of the Methodist Protestant Church, Article VI, Section 1, page 21.

The Executive Committee took recess at 12:40 for lunch, reassembling for business at 2 o'clock. There was an informal discussion of plans for the annual meeting of the General Boards of the church, and of the 50th Anniversary Jubilee meeting of the women in recognition of the goodness of God in leading them safely through the first half century in foreign missionary work. The Jubilee meeting will be held in First Church, Pittsburgh, and the board meetings in places to be announced later. This will be the outstanding event of the year in Methodist Protestant circles. It is expected that there will be one thousand women in attendance. The report of Dr. Straughn as promotional secretary was approved. His report as treasurer was also approved. It was noted that the treasurer and all the employees of his office were properly bonded, as required by the General Conference. The bonds were submitted to the Executive Committee and approved.

The meeting closed about 4 o'clock, after a very busy day. All of the reports of the day were very optimistic, and every program had the forward look. The closing devotions were led by Dr. E. C. Makosky, of Baltimore. The next meeting of the Executive Committee will be held in January at a place to be announced.

CHARLES H. BECK, Secretary.

HOME MISSIONS

MRS. F. J. COX, Lexington City C. E. Union

The command of Jesus to be witnesses in Jerusalem, Judea, Samaria and the uttermost parts of the earth shows how intimately connected are all phases of the life of the church and its membership.

We are all the product of missions, beginning at Jerusalem. While all phases of missions need to be studied, I want to confine my paper to Home Missions, for that is just as necessary to the life and growth of the church as any other. In fact, this is one link in the chain that is absolutely necessary.

We all know that one link out of the chain destroys its usefulness so far as connecting that which is to be drawn with that which draws. So we cannot skip Home Missions and jump to Foreign Missions without disaster to the whole fabric of our church life.

What then in Home Missions is so vital to our existence as a church—any church? Take the work among foreigners. Some one has said that because we have neglected foreign missions that God has sent the foreigner to our door. But when they are here they are to be worked with through the Home Mission Boards. We must study their need, to make them Christian, to keep them from making us heathen, if for no other reason. Then that greatest of all reasons—the love of lost souls that lives in the heart of all God's true children. We find many bright gems among them and often they become interested in their own people back home and become foreign missionaries.

Then our slum work among our own people in the larger cities should be studied. For there we find many "diamonds in the rough" that become great workers in the Kingdom, notably men like Jerry McCauly, and men of like type who have become great workers. In the Methodist Protestant Church, in the Illinois Conference, one of the most brilliant men of our church came to this country a drunken Englishman, converted in the Bowery Mission, New York City, has been honored as president of his conference, and is often on chautauqua circuits today. Then there is that sturdy class, the pure blood of America, the mountaineer. Whose heart is it that does not thrill as the work and the rich results from this class begin to shine as ministers and workers for the Master as they are given opportunity for training through the Home Mission Boards? A study of this particular work will be found interesting. It is encouraging to know that many of our brightest and best young people are giving themselves to this great work in bringing this class to their rightful place in making America great.

Summing it all up and seeing the needs are so great, let Christian Endeavor have as one of its goals, "More information about our Home Missionary work, a greater interest in what they are doing, a greater support given this important work, by giving of our means, our workers and our faith and our prayers." —Vote as you think you ought, but vote. Your vote will be needed to kill the vote of the man who votes wrong.

OPTIMISM | The President's Letter | EVANGELISM

SLOGAN

for the closing quarter

No Charge Without an Honor Roll Church

We are still saying it, and with what results we shall soon know. The course will soon be run, so far as this conference year is concerned; and I earnestly trust that we may all feel that we have "fought a good fight." If that is true, we have won, though we may not have realized the full purpose of this goal. But much can yet be done in these closing seven days. And much will be done. Believe it, pastor! Believe it, people! and put that church of yours on the Honor Roll.

Quarterly Conferences

For the past week our chief work, aside from increased office duties, has been in quarterly conferences.

On October 15, we started with Vance charge. The conference was held at Flat Rock church, and a large delegation of officials and church members was present. Each church on the charge was represented, and the business of the conference was transacted with promptness and zeal. The reports from the various churches and organizations pleased. The Aid Society of Flat Rock church reported 15 members, and amount raised during the year, $220. The three missionary societies of the charge have raised during the year $138. Their enrollment is 32 members. The total raised by the women's organizations for the year is $358.79. All the churches contribute monthly to the Children's Home, with, perhaps, one exception. Pastor Chambliss is popular with his people, and is doing a good work on this charge. We trust that his salary will be paid in full, and we are glad to know that his charge will help us realize our slogan. One church, and we hope, two, will be on the honor roll. Flat Rock church has been greatly improved, and is now one of our best rural churches. Two Sunday school rooms have been added on the sides in the rear, the interior walls done over, and the exterior painted. They have our hearty congratulations—pastor and people. We trust that they will complete their work, now, by underpinning and putting a nice marker on the highway, running immediately in front of the church.

Our next conference was at West End, October 17. Here again we met with a large and enthusiastic conference. This church is well organized, and the organizations were ready with good reports. The church has an active C. E. Society. The Aid Society, with 23 members, has raised during the year $103.69; the two missionary societies, $252.80. We were told that the Home Society of this church is the only one in the North Carolina Branch that meets the 100 per cent efficiency requirements. Congratulations! The Sunday school is growing, and the new building facilitates the work greatly. The present enrollment is 325, and the school has raised during the year $887.27. Pastor Williams has just conducted in his church a successful revival meeting. He is highly esteemed by his people, and the work is prospering under his leadership. All claims will be paid in full.

On Friday night, October 19, it was our good pleasure to be with Calvary church in their fourth quarterly conference. The attendance here was not so large, but nevertheless, a full conference. The pastor's carefully prepared report, and the reports of the officers and various organizations, evidenced wise planning and zealous and persistent endeavor; also, a full and progressive program for the coming year. A special meeting just closed contributed to the spiritual life of the church. The Aid Society reported 45 members, and $387.49 raised during the year. The goal for next year is $500. The Sunday school has an enrollment of 307, and has had the best year in the history of the church. Monthly contributions made to the Children's Home. The amount raised by the school for all purposes is $558.64. There are three active C. E. Societies in the church, and the new order of women's work has been instituted, with three circles, and 30 active women. The amount raised by the missionary activities during the year is $223.48. This church has the largest and most attractive bulletin board to be found in the city of Greensboro—the gift of the C. E. Society. We congratulate them upon doing this splendid thing. The finances of the church were found to be in good condition. All claims will be paid in full. Pastor Bates is winning his way to the hearts of the people—has won it—and shares with them the satisfaction of a good year's work. It is our faith that this church will find its way to the front in our conference. We should add that they are now erecting a seven-room parsonage which will cost about $4,500, including the lot.

Saturday night, October 20, we were with St. Paul's church in their conference. Here, too, we found a well attended conference, and the minds and hearts of the people set for work. Local industrial conditions have hindered the church considerably in the matter of finance. We believe, however, that the church will make a faithful effort to bring up the finances as much as possible, and it is our hope that the final showing may be much better than the conference accounting revealed. The church has a large C. E. Society; the Sunday school for the year has averaged 108 in attendance, and has raised $406.05. The church has an Aid Society, also, that renders helpful service. A meeting held by the pastor during the year resulted in about 50 professions. This church has a place of usefulness in this community, and we trust that it may have an enlarging service with each succeeding year. Pastor Brittain is faithful in his work, and holds the esteem of his people.

Siler-Liberty charge marks our closing work in this capacity for the year. We were with this charge Sunday, October 21, at 2:30 p. m., at Liberty. Here again we had the delight of meeting with another full conference of thoughtful and earnest workers. Each church was well represented, and all business was transacted promptly and unitedly. The various reports showed that good organization work had been done, and that the organizations were being well fostered. The Liberty church reported three active C. E. Societies, and the church at Siler a senior and junior society. Each church has an encouraging Sunday school, with an average attendance of about 100. During the year the Siler school has raised $255.24. We did not get amount raised by the Liberty school, but, judging from their report of this department of their work, we are sure that it was a good amount. Siler contributes monthly to the Children's Home. This church has just elected a woman to superintend their Sunday school. We commend them for this innovation, and shall expect continued growth for the school under her management. Each church has an active Aid Society and missionary societies. At Liberty the new order of women's work has been inaugurated. The women spoke pleasingly of it, and expect more satisfactory results than were secured from the old order. The Liberty auxiliary has raised during the year $133. The Siler societies report $49.30. A parsonage has been built during the year at a cost of about $4,300, with an indebtedness of $2,000, half of which is already covered by pledges. The parsonage is located at Liberty. At night it was our privilege to preach in the Siler church, and to attend, also, the meeting of the C. E. Society, held just prior to the preaching service. Pastor and Mrs. Dixon have won a place of esteem in the hearts of the people, and the charge greatly regrets to give them up so soon. But they show a fine spirit, and will look to the conference in confidence for other pastoral supply.

Our visit to these various fields was enjoyed by us, and we are grateful to pastors and people for every kindness received at their hands.

"Now the Collection"

For pastor's salary. We refuse to believe that any charge wants the year to close with a deficit here; and we are sure that no pastor can afford to have it so close. Now, brethren, one final effort to pay your pastor in full. This will be to your credit, and to his comfort. Do it!

And, of course, the budgets, too. "Every dollar possible on the budgets, and more," has been our watch word during the year, and we are still saying it. The college, A. C. B., G. C. B., Superannuates—all of these causes—need every dollar possible. Please do not stop pressing these budgets until the utmost has been done.

Quarterly Reports

Only 44 have been returned up to the time of this writing. We have not had time yet to tabulate the results, but in the main the reports indicate encouraging progress. We shall have something to say about these reports in our message to the conference, and probably later through the HERALD. We trust that the remaining reports may reach us before our message to the conference has been completed.

Moving—Staying?

Do it graciously, and let there be no hurts. The world is too big, and we have too many charges to be filled for any serious lack of harmony in pastoral relationship. I know that no pastor can please all the people, and some people do not please the pastor. However, there can, and should be, a maximum of harmony and good will. Where this is lacking, there is but little hope of success. Moving or staying should be determined largely, it seems to us, by this test. If you go or if you stay, let us say again, do it graciously, and let there be no unnecessary hurts. And above all, let us pray that God's hand may be upon the stationing authority of conference, and upon every pastor and every charge.

Finally

This will be our final message to reach the field before conference meets. We wish here to extend to pastors and to people our grateful thanks for courtesy, kindness, and co-operation during the year. We shall hope to meet you in the conference, happy in the consciousness—all of us—that we have been faithful to the work committed to our hands. The conference will be a time of reckoning; it will likewise be a time of planning for more work. The time, wisdom, and consecration of all of us will be needed for this task. As we have been faithful through the year, so let us be faithful in this conference, and go prepared to put our best into it, and to stay until the benediction is pronounced in the closing session.

Our last appointment for the year will be at Graham Sunday night, October 28.

The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Ghost, be with you all. Amen.

Fraternally,

S. W. TAYLOR.

THE QUIET HOUR

(Read by Mrs. H. S. Lanier, Lexington City C. E. Union)

No doubt some of us here do not know exactly what the Quiet Hour is, so we might ask the question, "What is the Quiet Hour?"

A comrade of the Quiet Hour is one who has signed the following pledge: "Trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ for strength, I will make it the rule of my life to set apart at least fifteen minutes every day, if possible in the early morning, for quiet meditation and direct communion with God."

The value of a pledge of this kind is that it makes very definite the promise of the Christian Endeavor pledge to "read the Bible and pray every day."

More than 200,000 Endeavorers in all parts of the world have signed the Quiet Hour covenant. Experience has shown that it greatly aids in forming habits of daily devotions. In these days when the family altar is practically extinct in the homes of America a movement which establishes an altar in the heart is a great boon to young people.

The roots of Christian service must strike deeply into the devotional life if service is to be carried on with the enthusiasm and conviction that come from consecration. We can never dispense with reading the Bible, prayer, and meditation on the great themes of life. The Quiet Hour attempts to start young people on this path. It is a standard set for them, a goal to be achieved. Sometimes they fail, but if they make it a "rule of life" to devote some time each day to the interests of the spiritual life, the habit of communion will gradually be established and they will come to look forward to these quiet moments of fellowship with God with feelings of real joy.

The value of daily devotions has been proved by their place in the lives of the great Christian leaders of all the centuries. When we become better acquainted with the inner, private life of the men who have made Christian history and have been the leaders in the great work of the church, we find that they gave much time to daily devotions when they could be alone with God.

Christ made much use of prayer and frequently left His most intimate human friends to be alone with God in prayer. Christ sought the Quiet Hour before life's great decisions, in the midst of life's great tasks and in life's great crises, and must have made it a regular practice, according to Luke, who says, "He went out, as his custom was, unto the Mount of Olives." If He who came from the Father found it necessary to seek these Quiet Hours, it must be much more necessary for us who are merely human.

The Quiet Hour gives time for Bible reading, meditation and prayer, which we are sometimes tempted to put off for lack of time. The Quiet Hour also brings peace and gives strength and power to accomplish great things in Christian work. Christ said to His disciples, "My peace I give unto you." We can gain some of that peace from Him in the Quiet Hour.

The real source of all the value of daily devotions is the fact that through them we allow the power of God to come into our lives and work through us. His power is infinite, but our capacity is limited. By the practice of the Quiet Hour we keep ourselves in condition to receive and use more of His power.

The best time for the Quiet Hour is in the morning when the mind is fresh and free from the cares that haunt the day. If necessary, it is worth while to rise fifteen minutes earlier than usual in order that we may prepare ourselves through communion with God for the duties that lie before us, but if this is impossible the next best time is at night. Of course, what one does in one's Quiet Hour may be greatly varied according to one's mood or the amount of time one can give to the exercise, but it will usually include the following: (1) The realization of the presence of God; (2) prayer, including thanksgiving as well as petitions; (3) Bible reading; (4) meditation; (5) closing prayer.

Our Quiet Hour may also include the reading of devotional books, but we should not try to crowd in too much. It is essential that our Quiet Hour be quiet. We must learn to be unhurried, calm, poised. Our attitude in this hour should be maintained as far as possible during the entire day. In the Quiet Hour we relax, we lean upon God, we draw strength from above, we see Him by faith, we take Him with us, but we can never appreciate its value fully until we have developed a regular and systematic use of the Quiet Hour.

Lay Members of the Annual Conference

The lay members of our Annual Conference cannot be justly charged with "magnifying their office." They have been content to act a minor part. They have all the privileges that ministers have in debate and in voting; in initiating reforms and proposing better means of accomplishing the legitimate purposes of the Conference, but as a rule they have not been forward in availing themselves of these privileges. If they realized how the laymen of some other churches have striven in vain to gain the vantage ground our laymen have, we wonder whether they would not make more of their "lay rights." Our Methodist Protestant polity recognizes laymen as men indeed, and it looks to them to perform a manly part. With the privileges conferred on our laymen go corresponding responsibilities. Laymen are under equal obligation with the ministers to attend to all the business of the Conference. They should be faithful in attendance and should give earnest attention to all matters presented for consideration and action. It is not too much to expect that sometimes laymen will take the initiative and lead on to better things. The judgment of laymen is needed in many matters that come up in conference. The combined judgment of ministers and laymen is better than the judgment of either class alone. May we remind our lay brethren who are to meet with us in Winston of these things, and express the hope that they will be fully alive to their privileges and obligations in the high office to which they have been elected by their fellow-church-members.

A SKEPTIC'S TESTIMONY

Lord Bolingbroke, a man of giant intellect, of great political influence during his life, but an avowed infidel, declared that "the doctrine of rewards and punishments in a future state has so great a tendency to enforce the civil laws and restrain the vices of men that though reason would decide against it on the principles of theology, it will not decide against it on the principles of good policy."—Selected.

OUR STORY PAGE

A GIRL TO BE REMEMBERED

Mother came into the playroom and found Mary in tears. "Why, daughter," she exclaimed, "whatever is the matter? Why aren't you out in the garden playing with Howard and Rob?"

"They—they d—on't w-w-want me," cried Mary, sobbing all the harder. "They're p-playing soldiers, and—and they s-say g-g-girls are not good—"

At that moment two little boys appeared in the doorway and mother called them into the room. "What's this I hear about girls being no good?" she asked.

"We meant they were no good as soldiers," exclaimed Howard.

"Girls can't fight," added Rob.

"Can't they?" said mother. "Well, you sit right down here, and I'll tell you about a girl I want you always to remember."

This sounded like the beginning of a story, so the boys took off their soldier caps and Mary dried her tears and they all settled themselves to listen.

"The girl's name was Molly," began mother. "Molly Pitcher, and she and her husband lived happily on their farm near Monmouth Court House when the War of American Independence was declared. Molly was a brave woman and her husband was a brave man, so when he suggested joining the American forces, Molly urged him to defend his country. She helped him make ready; she helped prepare his uniform and she filled his remaining days at home with comforting thoughts and promises to carry on the work of the home in his absence. Then followed anxious days for brave little Molly Pitcher. Days of fighting; days of hunger; days of fear. Whenever her husband's regiment was in the neighborhood of their home he would try to get word to her or even to see her.

Molly's husband had charge of a large cannon and often on short visits to his home he would tell her of his part in the fighting and explain the working of his cannon to her. Now he told her of his position in the line of fight and explained how important the cannon was to the success of the battle. Molly listened to all this, her heart swelling with pride mingled with fear for the safety of her husband; and she bade him good-bye with a heavy heart. Then she began to wonder why she could not be of some aid in the battle. Other women had marched to the defense of their country —Joan of Arc, notably; why couldn't Molly Pitcher do something? Then the thought came to her that while she could not fight she might at least help the fighters.

June 28th, the day of the battle of Monmouth Court House, was blazing hot. Molly was up bright and early, the sound of her husband's cannon booming in her ears, and, unmindful of her own danger, she walked up and down the lines of fighting men carrying buckets of cool water to wet parched throats. Many grateful hands reached out to her. Dying men blessed her as she stopped to relieve their last anguish. Her name was breathed with reverence by the brave soldiers who watched her passing on her deeds of mercy. And then a fatal shot from the enemy lines and Molly's husband fell dead beside his cannon. The cannon was silent. Without the cannon, what could the soldiers do? Quick as a flash Molly dropped her buckets and rushed to the cannon. She was thankful now that she had listened so well to her husband's explanations of this machine. Throughout the day of battle Molly stood at her husband's place beside the cannon and aided in the fight. Word of her bravery and patriotism was passed along the line. News of her finally came to the ears of General Washington. He sent for the brave woman and recognized her heroism by giving her a commission in the army. Do you think girls are no good as fighters? Remember brave Molly Pitcher and reverence her name." —Selected.

STAINS

One day Ruth came home from school with three stains on her pretty dress. When mother saw them, she said:

"You may get them out yourself. I'll tell you how."

So Ruth rubbed the cocoa stain in cold water. That disappeared. Then she poured boiling water through the strawberry stain. The red turned to pink, then faded away. The ink stain was hardest of all. Mother gave her something in a bottle that banished the ugly black. Some drops from another bottle kept the acid from eating the cloth.

It is easy to take stains out of cloth, but do you know how to take stains out of thoughts?

There is a quarrel stain. Your playmate does something that you do not like. Soon is an ugly, brown stain on your friendship. You can make it disappear by pouring on the water of remembrance. Think of all the fun you have had together and of all the kind things which your playmate has done. Away will go the quarrel stain.

Some stains are very hard to get out that if you keep thinking about the words or even repeating them. Take them out at once. Make yourself think of last Sunday's Golden Text or your favorite stories whenever bad words want to say themselves over.

Whenever you make a thought stain, see if you can remove it as quickly as the boiling water faded the strawberry stain. —Dew Drops.

THE HYPOCRITE

The hypocrite, of all men, is the most destitute of noble sentiments. He can shed crocodile tears while robbing a corpse. His promises cannot be relied upon, for he is a stranger to honor. His best friend is the devil, who is always ready to give him employment. Beware of the hypocrite! His honeyed words are impregnated with poison! . . . .

The rattlesnake gives the alarm before he strikes the deadly blow, but the hypocrite steals upon his victim with noiseless step and stabs him while he smiles. Where he is known, he has no standing, though others like himself may seem to be his friends.

When he dies the world is better off and only the doctor and undertaker are profited by his having lived.—J. J. Dickey, in the Fleming Gazette, of Kentucky.

Benediction.

Hints for Leaders

Stewardship is a term which is inclusive. It takes in all of life. The topic under discussion merely takes in the right use of our talents.

A talent in New Testament times is estimated to have been worth $1,200. Today talents means a power of mind or body. A natural aptitude one possesses as a gift. The possessor does not create or originate the talent. It is God-given. One comes into full possession or realizes the gift by the price of using or developing it. It is not in misuse of talents that cause unprofitable lives, but in the failure to use that brings regret.

Very few young people in Christian Endeavor circles have been overlooked by the Heavenly Father in the distribution of talents. So far these talents may be hid. Let us examine our lives and seek to discover and develop our every talent; and, better still, seek to find talents in other lives and encourage their development could this be a new talent for oneself?

"Buried Talent"

A youth, leaving his aunt's home after a visit, found it was raining outside. Noticing an umbrella neatly placed in a corner proceeded to use it. The elderly lady, seeing the act exclaimed: "That you shall never do! I've had that umbrella 23 years and it has never been wet and I'm sure it will not be wet now."

Some people treat their talents the same way. They guard them, keep them hid, fail to use them until the time of usefulness is passed.

Phillips Brooks told the story of some savages to whom was given a sun-dial. So desirous were they to honor and keep it sacred that they housed it and built a roof over it. O, Youth! Do your talents seem so valuable that you carefully cover them up instead of blessing the world with their daily use?

Note the truth of the following lines:

"I saw a farmer plow his land who never came to sow;
I saw a student filled with truth to practice
never go;
In land or mind I never saw the ripened harvest grow." —Selected.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

NOV. 4: WORLD'S TEMPERANCE SUNDAY

Scripture Basis: Romans 13:1-14.

Golden Text: Love worketh no ill to his neighbor; love therefore is the fulfilment of the law. Rom. 13:10.

Loyalty to Law

"Let every soul be in subjection to the higher powers." That is the first declaration of this chapter. That is the summary of the first seven verses. That is the first essential to good citizenship. This is true because, as Paul states, "the powers that be are ordained of God." Who could have power, temporal or spiritual, if God did not will it? From him comes all human authority.

But how can this be true, when some of the most godless, tyrannical, inhuman rulers have held sway? What about Nero, who reigned during Paul's day? Of course, he was not ordained of God, but the authority of the position he held was of divine origin. And a good citizen must honor the ruler for the sake of the office he holds. It is better to be in subjection to a bad king and wait patimely for the opportune time to dethrone him, than to be among those who cause rebellion and bloodshed in the nation. "All things work together for good to them that love God." (Rom. 8:28).

The purpose of the law is not to make men fear. Who does fear the law, anyway? Is it that man who tries to live peaceably within the bounds of the law? No! It is the murderer, the thief, the gambler, the bootlegger—these men fear the law, because thy know they are acting contrary to law. And it sometimes seems that these are predominant in our country today, since the newspapers seem to be delighted to flaunt the acts of the criminal group in our faces. But they do not tell of the thousands who have showed forgiveness instead of resorting to murder to redress wrongs; they fail to relate the hundreds upon hundreds who are placed in positions of trust over the gold and silver of the country, yet never yield to the temptation to steal; they have no space for the myriads of good citizens who are living upright Christian lives. "Render to all their dues," and the law will exert no binding effect upon you.

Law of Love

After all, there is only one law to be obeyed, and that is the law of love. In answer to the Pharisee's question, Jesus declared that the greatest commendments were loyd toward God and love of man. "On these two commandments," said he, "hang all the law and the prophets." (Matt. 22:40). And he was quoting from the laws of the Old Testament, (See Deut. 6:5; Lev. 19:18). It is this second great commandment that Paul deals with here.

Consider how the Decalogue is summed up in these two great commandments of Jesus. We find that the first four of the ten deal with our attitude toward God, while the last six relate to our attitude toward our fellowman. A man may claim that he may do as he pleases and not do injury to his neighbor, but his claim is wrong. There is hardly anything that we may do without directly or indirectly affecting our relatives, friends, or acquaintances.

Again, love does not merely seek to refrain from doing evil against one's neighbor, but it seeks to do good. Love is not passive, it is active. The Decalogue and the civil law are chiefly negative, but the law of love is positive. "Love, therefore, is the fulfilment of the law."

Loving the Light

Quoting Isaiah (60:1-2), where the prophet records the coming of the Deliverer out of Zion, Paul admonishes the Ephesians (5:14), "Awake, thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light." To the Romans in the last part of this 13th chapter, he speaks similar imperative words. The salvation of the Lord is at hand; the night of sin through which you have been passing is about over; the day of righteousness is upon you; arouse you; get you up; be about your Master's business! is the substance of the apostle's injunction.

Jesus declared, "men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil;" and, "Every one that doeth evil hateth the light." (John 3:19, 20). Most of the evil committed is done under the cover of darkness. Therefore, darkness is a symbol of wickedness. Paul urges the Roman Christians to "cast off the works of darkness" and "put on the armor of light," which is the Lord Jesus, who declared himself to be the Light of the world. With him as our shield and defender, our example and guide, no evil will befall us, whatever betide.

Now, apply this to the prohibition law, or any other law for that matter, and very clearly you will see the wisdom and duty of followers of Christ to keep the whole law.

AN UNLIMITED AUDIENCE

It is announced that Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, president of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, is to resign his Brooklyn pastorate and devote himself to radio audiences. The "hook-up" for these audiences is to include 40 radio stations, reaching an audience of millions each Sunday over an area from Florida to Alaska. Dr. Cadman has bene pastor of Central Congregational Church, Brooklyn, since 1901 and has built up a membership in that church or more than 3,500, which is said to be one of the finest religious organizations in the country. He is to be known in his new field as the national radio pastor, and is to receive a salary of $25,000 a year. His services are to cover an hour and a half each Sunday from 4 to 5:30 P. M. eastern standard time, and he is to be assisted in the services by a special symphony orchestra recruited from the best of New York's musicians and from a vocal ensemble of the best radio singers. Among other features of the services will be Dr. Cadman's answers to questions propounded from various quarters as has been his custom for some time past.

—Colvard Brothers, of Ashe County, will secure 9,000 bushels of certified Irish potato seed from 30 acres of land, according to present estimates.

—Self-feeders number 46 and 47 have been built by hog growers of Person County.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Wesley's Chapel, Greensville Circuit.—Wesley's is situated in a beautiful oak grove on the public highway, and in the beautiful little village of Valentine. This church has been made new this year. The interior and windows have been worked over, new roof put on, a good job of painting, inside and out, new steps clear across the front; a number of new song-books have been purchased. These improvements have been made at a cost of $350. The membership is small and scattered. If the people of the village holding membership at a distance would join our church here it would soon be one of the strongest churches in this section.

H. L. POWELL, Pastor.

Matthews Chapel, Greensville Circuit.—Situated on a beautiful hill some 200 yards from a good sand-clay road. This church is well heated. This year the ground has been improved by trimming up trees and clearing out a large opening from church to public highway and putting up a marked. The church has itself been newly painted inside and out at a cost, if contracted, of $175. The membership has some painters. They bought paint and painted it themselves. No finer co-operation could have been found in any membership.

A large number of song-books have just been purchased.

The church has a splendid Christian Endeavor society.

H. L. POWELL, Pastor.

Hope, Chatham Charge.—We had good attendance at Sunday school last Sunday and also at preaching service, as this was our pastor's last appointment before Conference meets. Bro. Isley certainly brought us a good sermon on "Life and Death." At the close of the service the Lord's Supper was taken and a large number communed.

Church officers for the coming year were elected.

Several of our people attended quarterly conference at Piney Grove Saturday, October 13. The quarterly conference called Bro. Isley back for another year, and we are hoping that the Annual Conference may see fit to send him back to us, for he certainly has done splendid work among us.

Fifty-two members have been added to our church during his pastorate.

R. R. Brewer is our delegate to Conference and Claude Teague is alternate.

We are planning to have a community sing on the fourth Sunday night. Several choirs are expected to participate and we are hoping for a profitable as well as an enjoyable time.

Mrs. J. J. Andrew and Mrs. J. G. Hanner have been on the sick list. We hope that both will soon be better.

KARA ANDREW, Reporter.

Piney Grove, Denton Charge.—Pastor Bingham filled his appointment Sunday with a fine message. We were very glad indeed to see so many out, and hope that the congregations may continue to grow.

We have started painting the church, and have the first coat on the outside. We have already done some painting inside, and want to do some repair; it will cost about $100 in cash. The good brethren of the community have given their time and service free of charge on painting. Pray for our faithful little band that we may continue to grow and do something worth while for our blessed Savior, and be faithful to the end.

Mr. J. F. Delk, who has been sick for over a week, does not improve. Hope for him a speedy recovery. REPORTER.

Pageland Circuit, New Hope Church.—Greetings to the Herald in Jesus' name. We have an interesting Sunday school. We as a church are fighting sin. Brother Phillip, our good pastor, preached two good sermons last Sunday morning and Sunday evening.

Our Conference is drawing near and we hope to pay our pastor up; also all other church expenses. We will be glad to get our same pastor back. He and his good wife are good, consecrated workers. Every church of Jesus Christ needs good clean ministers. We as sheep need good shepherds. Dear people, let us fight sin and try to retain our freedom that our forefathers fought and died to win.

Today our country is undergoing some terrible struggles between right and wrong. So much sin and wickedness over the coming election. Let us defend the rights of our children and grandchildren. Let us resolve we will not have liquor placed before them. Let's not vote for Al Smith, whose great desire is to nullify the 18th amendment. Dear brothers and sisters, the fight is on. Let us pray and vote. I want to ask our ministers everywhere to direct the people on this great subject. Someone will advise the people ,and I feel as if it should be our ministers who know God.

People, let's pray to God earnestly, who is the director of the destiny of our nations, that He will intervene as He has done in time past.

I suppose I had better stop or someone will say I am mixing politics and religion. "When the wicked rule the people mourn." "Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it."

State Street, Lexington.—Coming close to the end of this Conference year reminds me that there are some things that have not been mentioned that should have been reported some time ago; but a good reporter causes many a pastor, perhaps, to neglect writing.

This has been a very busy year with this writer and the question often comes up like this: Are the demands greater or do we slow up as we grow older to such a degree that we cannot get in as much work as formerly Anyway, I think that we all agree that there is much to do these days if one keeps the interests of the Kingdom going committed to his hands.

Our work here is encouraging and there has been some progress made this year that is noticeable. Our Sunday school is going well and there has been an improvement in every way, as we see it.

Christian Endeavor has not been as largely attended recently as the first past of the year, but the class of work being done seems to be of a better grade and we are very proud of our workers. Two of them recently made a fine impression in our City Union held with the First Reformed Church. These papers read by Mrs. F. J. Cox and Mrs. H. S. Lanier are being sent to the Herald for publication, if the editor sees fit to do so.

The Sunshine Circle under the leadership of Mrs. C. L. Koontz is doing fine work and won and holds the state banner at present for their points of efficiency. We are proud of our children as well as their leader.

Many deeds of kindness that cannot be mentioned have been done for us during the year and things that have been pleasing to the taste as well as to the mind have been given us. From Yadkin College we have been remembered by Mrs. Yountz, Mrs. Dale, Miss Cora Totten, Miss Sallie Taylor, Mrs. Ernest Walser—these have given us many good eats.

State Street folks have not been behind in this, either, for Mrs. Harkey, Mrs. W. J. Lindsay, J. B. Hayworth, Dr. Brannock, Mrs. Wooley, Mrs. C. L. Koontz, Mrs. Stanley Owen, Mr. and Mrs. Luther Koontz, have brought us good things to eat. Last, but not least, Mrs. F. J. Cox and Mrs. A. H. Evans have almost kept us in fresh eggs. They have given us so many that I told them that pounding may come and pounding may go, but their eggs come on forever. Thank you, good folks.

Another good deed: You know that two years ago this preacher suffered from an attack of sciatic trouble. The Christian Endeavor Society learning that cramps still bothered as an aftermath of the first attack bought a Vim Ray and gave it to me and this has largely eliminated the trouble. They furnish the machine and the church pays for the current that it takes to run it, also. This gift is greatly appreciated.

Conference is nearly here and we are expecting to have all moneys in hand before this gets into print.

Let us pray that this may be a progressive and harmonious session and that greater prosperity may come to our Zion in the years to come. N. G. BETHEA.

Asheville.—The last two weeks of our Conference year are very full. Last week we had something doing every day. The Rally Day exercises Sunday culminated in a beautiful play in the evening. Those taking part were Bro. and Mrs. Paschall, Richard and Miss Arline Hanner, Miss Clarice Younginer, Messrs. Bevans and Charnock. The title of the play was "The Call to Prepare."

It looks now that Pastor Paschall and Delegate G. M. Foster will go to Conference with the budget paid in full. The fourth quarterly conference this Wednesday night, and the installation of officers next Sunday are two leading features for the week.

Miss Gladys Boling spent the week-end with her parents here, Bro. and Mrs. J. W. Boling.

Our congregation has voted to go in with other churches in the city for a city-wide personal evangelistic campaign next March. Our pastor is continually praying and working for a revival.

Last week Mrs. L. M. Joyner entertained the new women's organizations. Mrs. Julia Beddinger was the speaker. She told of her experiences as a missionary in South Africa.

Mrs. J. S. Williams and her committee entertained the Brotherhood. The meeting was well attended. Rev. E. R. Lineberger, pastor of St. Marks Lutheran church here, was the speaker. A program of music was given by Messrs. Crawford and Officer.

The chicken supper by the Christian Endeavor Society and the cake and rummage sale by the Ladies' Aid were both successful.

REPORTER.

Denton Church.—We had a very large crowd at preaching Sunday at 11 o'clock. Pastor Bingham delivered a fine sermon, after which the Lord's Supper was held.

At the Sunday school hour the officers of the Sunday school for the new year were elected as follows:

Superintendent, Mr. W. A. Johnson; assistant superintendent, Mr. A. R. Morris; secretary and treasurer, Sallie Mae Frank; assistant secretary and treasurer, Blanche Hoover; pianist, Marvin Sexton; assistant pianist, Sallie Mae Frank; choir leader, Mr. J. U. Lanier; assistant choir leader, Mr. W. E. Hill; church reporter, M. Marvin Sexton.

Church officers follow:

Stewards, Mr. N. V. Johnson, Mr. D. M. Sexton, Mr. R. C. Powell, Mr. A. L. Hill, Mr. W. E. Hill; class leader, Mr. A. G. Cranford; assistant class leader, Mr. R. C. Powell; trustees, Mr. C. A. Hoover, Mr. Charlie Cranford, Mr. W. J. Frank, Mr. W. E. Hill, Mr. C. G. Loftin; church treasurer, Mr. M. C. Cranford.

The church is having a supper on next Tuesday evening at 6 o'clock on the church grounds. After the supper the various officers and teachers have been asked to make a detailed report of the work done the past year in the different departments of the church. Denton church is closing a very successful year's work, and Pastor Bingham is popular with the people.

We are expecting our present pastor to return for another successful year's work.

The C. E. society is doing splendid work with Miss Kathleen Frank as leader of the society.

Today marked the last preaching service of the conference year.

Ortober 21, 1928.

Dulins, Mocksville Charge.—We have had several up-downs during the year which we hope to avoid hereafter. Some of our members have been absent almost a half year. The death angel has come into our midst and removed both old and young.

Our former pastor saw fit to resign in the early spring and Rev. J. W. Braxton, a young man of High Point College, came to us in this great disaster. I have heard him only once, sorry to say. He preached a very interesting and helpful sermon yesterday. I have just known Rev. J. W. Braxton for a few days. I think he is very interesting in young people's work. He left us yesterday. We are in hopes that Annual Conference will send him back with us. He organized a Christian Endeavor Society, which I believe every member enjoys to the fullest extent. Since this society is very new, the people and the members of the church helped us get one lamp, which is going to help us a great deal. We are planning to get two before long—if possible, before the year is gone.

The death angel came into our midst last Monday morning and removed Master Theodore Foster, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Foster, 15 years of age. He joined the Dulins M. P. church this year. He leaves to mourn their loss, father and mother, three sisters, three brothers, and a host of relatives and friends.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

LEONA HENDRIX, Reporter.

Mocksville, N. C., Oct. 22, 1928.

First Church, Burlington.—Our efficient reporter has kept the readers of the Herald so well informed of the work of First church, Burlington, that it has not been necessary for the pastor to write many times. This has been a very busy but happy year with the pastor. The work has moved along smoothly all the year. There has been a fine spirit of co-operation manifested in all the work of the church. The degree of harmony that prevails in so large a membership is rather remarkable. This spirit of co-operation and harmony is as it should be. No church can do its best work without it.

There has been a substantial gain in membership for the year. Seventy-three new names have been added to the roll, fifteen lost by death and transfers, leaving us a net gain of 58. This gives First Church a membership of more than 700. What a responsibility upon pastor and lay-leaders! And yet what a privilege and opportunity to lead these in religious service and develop them in Christian character!

Because of depressed business conditions finances have been a bit difficult. Many of our people have been without work a part of the time. However, we are expecting First Church to live up to her record and pay all obligations.

Brother Millaway did splendid preaching in our revival meeting. As a result of the meeting there were something like 30 decisions and to date 18 have united with the church. Pastor and church enjoyed having Brother Millaway with us in the meeting.

I appreciate the co-operation that has been given the pastor in all the work of the year. I appreciate also all favors done the pastor and his family, and these have been many, though I have not always taken space in the Herald to tell about them. The vote of confidence given me in the fourth quarterly conference is especially appreciated. I think I can see something of the wonderful opportunity that our church has in this city, and I am keenly conscious of the great responsibility that is upon the pastor of this great church.

With a prayer that God may bless all of our pastors and churches in these closing days of the Conference year, and that His Spirit may lead and His grace be upon us when we meet in annual session in Winston-Salem, I am, one of you in service,

L. W. GERRINGER, Pastor.

Henderson.—Since our reporter has been so faithful this pastor has had little to say through the columns of the Herald this year. However, we would like to say in this, the last issue of the Conference year, that it has been a good year with us. While our report will not show the increase in church membership that it showed last year, due to the fact that in revising the church roll many names of members who cannot be heard from have been dropped, we feel that the church as a whole is in a very prosperous condition. As has been stated before, the church has been painted outside and inside during the year and only last week an electric motor for the organ was installed.

The people have been good to the pastor and family, remembering us in many substantial ways. One thing we wish to mention especially. During that "rainy week" in September one of our good members seeing our need remembered us with one of the best raincoats that could be bought in Henderson. Many other expressions of kindness have been shown throughout the year for which we are grateful.

The congregations have been good and the work in every department of the church has been normal. We hope to close the year in good shape and meet our brethren at Conference with a good report.

R. A. HUNTER.

Hollister, Halifax Charge.—The attendance at Sunday school Sunday was very large. The officers for Sunday school were elected as follows: Superintendent, Mr. E. T. Ellington; assistant superintendent, Mr. Leslie Lee; secretary, Mr. Ollie Knight; treasurer, Mrs. E. T. Ellington; janitor, Mr. Tom Alston, pianist, Miss Mary Davis Alston; assistant pianist, Miss Kathleen Shearin. The teachers are as follows: Class No. 1, Miss Kathleen Shearin; Class No. 2, Mrs. Henry Tidwell; class No. 3, Mr. W. J. Galloway; Class No. 4, Mrs. E. T. Ellington; Class No. 5, Mrs. T. C. Williams; assistant teacher, Mrs. W. D. Wood.

Next Sunday will be our last appointment before Conference. Mr. and Mrs. Spencer have served us faithfully for the past four years and we will be glad to have them return to us for another year if it is God's will.

Our Missionary Society held its monthly meeting in the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Hardy on Tuesday afternoon, October 16. Mrs. J. L. Alston led the devotional, after which the roll was called by the secretary and the minutes of the last meeting were read. Miss Kathleen Shearin had charge of the program. The main topic was "Our Educational Institutions at Home and in the Foreign Field." Special prayers were made for our educational institutions. The treasurer was instructed to pay the Home budget in full and to pay $25 on the Foreign budget. We want our societies to have a good report at the Annual Conference.

REPORTER.

Union Grove, Orange Circuit.—Brother Williams brought us another one of his good sermons Sunday. A good congregation was present and the services were enjoyed by all. This was our last appointment before Conference meets.

We are hoping Conference will be so kind as to send our present pastor back. He has served us faithfully four years. We would be very sorry to give him up.

Our Sunday school is moving on very nicely under the leadership of Mr. Thomas Snipes.

All the old church officers were re-elected for another year.

Prof. Charles W. Davis and family, of Rosemary, spent the week-end with Mr. Davis' parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Davis.

We were glad to have Mr. and Mrs. Thompson, of Efland, worship with us Sunday; also Mr. Sam Minnis and family, of University.

MRS. LUTHER DAVIS.

Concord.—A congregation that filled the church was present Sunday and heard an inspiring sermon by Mr. Hendry on "The Advantage of Accepting Christ Early in Life." Several young girls came forward, giving their hearts to Christ, and their names for church membership.

The special services that have been in progress for a week will continue possibly until Wednesday night of this week. A special feature of the Sunday morning service was a trombone duet, "Give Me Thine Heart," by Messrs. Widenhouse and Swanner, accompanied by Mrs. Ernest Litaker at the piano.

On last Thursday night a large delegation from State Street church, Lexington, accompanied by the Crescent Quartet of that city, attended the service, the quartet singing several numbers to the delight of all present.

Our members held a prayer meeting at the County Home Sunday afternoon. The meeting was in charge of Miss Maggie Mann. Short talks were made by Mrs. J. W. Ritch, Mrs. F. C. Garmon and Mrs. G. H. Hendry. Several of those aged people held up their hands asking for prayer. This was a very helpful meeting and our folks, as well as the inmates, enjoyed it.

Miss Adelaide Reed, of Mitchell College, Statesville, spent the week-end with home-folks here, coming home to be with her grandmother, Mrs. R. O. Atwell, who has been very ill with pneumonia.

Miss Lois Helms, one of our faithful Sunday school teachers and church workers, is also ill at this time.

The condition of Mr. L. C. Little, who has been sick for a long time, is not improved. His illness is causing the absence of all his children from all services. We trust that all these sick members may be restored to health.

MRS. D. A. McLAURIN.

Orange Charge.—Yesterday was a good day. We held final services at Efland and Union Grove. Union Grove is out on all claims except balance on pastor's salary. Efland is in fairly good shape to pay all claims. Everything will be paid here with the possible exception of some on G. C. B.

Next Sunday will wind up the work at Hebron and Chestnut Ridge. Hope to make a considerable payment on budgets at these places then.

It now appears likely that we are going to make a better showing on all claims than in any previous year. Will also show a greater increase in members. To God be all the praise.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Why Not Circuit.—As this Conference year is drawing to a close perhaps some of our friends would like to hear from us. We have not made prograss by leaps and bounds but feel that the good Lord has blessed our feeble efforts and we have made some progress. We have had 75 professions and reclamations and 43 have joined the churches. The fourth Sunday in September we started our camp meeting at Love Joy, Rev. C. E. Ridge and Rev. J. W. Hulin did the preaching through the meeting. It was a great revival and 43 were converted and reclaimed as a result of the power of the gospel preached. The first Sunday in this month we began our special meeting at Flag Springs. Rev. J. E. Pritcherd came Sunday afternoon and did the preaching throughout the meeting. His messages were much enjoyed by all and nine professed faith in Christ and on yesterday eight joined the church as a result of the meeting. I am sure great good was accomplished and it seems there is a spirit of unity throughout the entire circuit. There is some of the salt of the earth on Why Not Circuit. The circuit is too large for any one man to do the work that ought to be done to develop the work. The people of Love Joy will probably have their new church enclosed before we start to Conference. They are building a solid brick church with Sunday school rooms and it will be modern in every respect. They expect to have it ready to worship in this winter.

I must close for this time and before I write again we will meet in Annual Conference, and I pray that the spirit of Christ may lead throughout the Conference and direct in every assignment.

JOEL B. TROGDON, Pastor.

Salem, Saxapahaw Charge.—As we are beginning a new year in our Sunday school work, our superintendent, Bro. H. G. Paris, is planning for greater things than ever before. He has been doing great things in Sunday school work and is going to do even more than he has done before.

How? Because he is interested in Sunday school work. He has been a worker practically all his life in Sunday school work, and knows a lot about the work, and he is still learning about it. Then this new knowledge, plus the old knowledge, enables him to do greater things, and he is doing it.

The church has great faith in his ability and integrity of the superintendent; therefore, his unanimous election to succeed himself.

With the co-operation of the whole Sunday school with superintendent you will see Salem Sunday school as good if not better than the best. A lot depends on you, as to what our Sunday school will be for the next 12 months. Also, your work now, good or bad, will have an influence on the boys and girls of our Sunday school in the years yet to come.

The church officers elected were: Trustees, J. R. Minor, W. T. Payne, W. G. Cranford, and James Pair; stewards, J. M. Crutchfield, Jessie Smith, Charlie Greeson and G. W. Paris.

Sunday school officers: H. G. Pair, superintendent, with Wililam Overman as assistant; P. S. Overman, secretary and treasurer, with Edwin Payne, assistant; Miss Sallie Pair, organist, with Mrs. Ola Crutchfield, assistant.

Don't forget who our stewards are, and don't wait for them to hunt you up. Let's go see them and pay our preacher, (and we have a good one, too).

Our Sunday school officers need our help to push the Sunday school work forward; so let's all do our best, and then, knowing that we have done our best, we will have ease of conscience, which is so essential to happiness. Happiness leads to long life, so let's all try to inherit this happiness brought about by doing our best at whatever we undertake to do.

Therefore, let's try to do our very best and see greater results.

REPORTER.

Gibsonville.—The year's work has been pleasant for the pastor and has produced some gratifying results. The three Christian Endeavor societies, the two Missionary societies, the Ladies' Aid, and the Sunday school have each done good work, though neither of these organizations has been able to reach and interest as many of our people as desired.

Nine persons, all adults, have joined the church on professions of faith, though our report of membership may show a loss when the class book has been properly revised.

Our special meeting was characterized by strong sermons by Rev. L. W. Gerringer and impressive spiritual services to the edification of those attending.

The service of the preaching hour Sunday evening the 14th, inst., conducted by the class leaders, was deeply spiritual and impressive. One was led to feel when it was over that the office of class leader if properly filled is not a defunct part of our church organization.

The church officers for the next year have been elected and duly installed at an eleven o'clock church service. The newly elected Christian Endeavor officers and the committees were installed at the preaching hour on a recent Sunday evening, making an impressive service.

The every-member canvass has been made —almost completed—for next year by the new board of stewards. Collections for the current year have not been completed.

F. G. Hammer is the delegate-elect to the Annual Conference and Samuel Whitesell is alternate.

Rally Day service will be held Sunday evening, the 28th. The other special day services have been held.

T. M. JOHNSON, Pastor.

Burlington, First Church.—The fourth quarterly conference held its session last Wednesday at 7:30 o'clock with a very good attendance of officers and others. Matters of importance were brought before this body and among the business matters attended to, motion was carried unanimously for the delegate, Mr. Floy Rogers, to ask the Conference stationing committee to return Bro. Gerringer to us for the new year. We feel that our pastor has really just begun his work here, as our membership numbers 714 and it is certainly a real task to learn the faces and residences of such a host. We have received to date for this year 73 new members and lost by death and transfer 15, giving us a net gain of 58 for the closing year. The last addition to the church is Miss Evelyn Black, who united with us at the 11 o'clock hour today.

The officers for the coming term were installed by a short but appropriate talk by Bro. Gerringer at the morning preaching service. Among the new list of officials Mr.

W. E. Smith is the Sunday school superintendent, succeeding Bro. J. G. Rogers. Mr. Rogers has served our school in this capacity for many years, and has proved very efficient as a leader. We feel that in Mr. Smith we have a good leader and we should each one work with him in the building up of our Sunday school.

Offering last Sunday night at the Rally Day exercises was $58.37, which is right much under what we expected to raise.

Offering at the Sunday school today amounted to $19.55, with attendance standing at 322.

A little more than a week until our pastor and delegate will leave for Conference and we are hoping that this session will be the best yet.

L. A. BRAXTON, Reporter.

Mt. Hermon, Mt. Hermon Charge.—On October 21st the people gathered at Mt. Hermon to hear their pastor preach the last sermon at this place for this Conference year. In his impressive style he read I John, 1st chapter. After the scripture lesson he has made it a rule to talk to the children a short while. This morning he talked to them about filling their lives with love; love for God, for their parents, Sunday school teachers, teachers, brothers and sisters and playmates. He then preached a very good sermon on "Reality," from I John 1:5, "God Is Light."

Mrs. Mamie Sharpe was received into the church. Five infants were baptized. The church roll was revised. The officers for next year were elected as follows: Stewards, Haywood Crabtree, June Coble, L. P. Holt; trustees, G. M. Holt, J. A. Sharpe, J. H. Wood, John P. Loy, George Payne; superintendent of the Sunday school, James Thompson; class leader, H. G. Sharpe.

The fourth quarterly conference will be held at Cedar Clic Saturday afternoon, October 27.

Mr. J. A. Sharpe is the delegate to Annual Conference. Of course he is expected to bring the present pastor back. He has been with us two years and the people love him. He is a good preacher, a good pastor and a good mixer. He is an enthusiastic, but patient, worker. He has work started here; he is needed to help push it to a finish.

Since there are plenty of song-books and singings are being held in the homes occasionally, the music has improved.

REPORTER.

Haw River Tidings.—The Brown Summit revival was the best for years at this place. The meeting began on the fifth Sunday night and continued for 11 days. Rev. R. S. Troxler, pastor of the North Davidson charge, came on Tuesday night and, as usual, proved himself to be master of the situation. His sermons were of the highest order and his musical talent was used for great inspiration. In the personal work and at the altar Bro. Troxler was a great power. The church was greatly revived and a number of the young people were converted and joined the church. At the closing service 15 were receivd into the church.

Last Sunday communion services were conducted at three of the churches and officers elected for the Conference year 1928-29 were installed. Officers have been electd at all of the churches and all have been installed except at one church and at that church this service will be attended to on next Sunday.

As the year draws to a close, financial conditions are more encouraging. All pastor's salary will be paid and payments on the budgets are improving.

An adjourned session of the fourth quarterly conference will meet at Brown Summit church on next Saturday at 1:30 p. m. It is hoped that at that time it will be found that the year will have closed with credit.

GEO. L. CURRY.

Mount Pleasant, Mount Pleasant Circuit.—Rally Day services were held Sunday morning at 11 o'clock at our church. The program was directed by Misses Georgie Amick and Lillian Shoffner. Collection amounted to $22.70.

Fourth quarterly conference met here Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

An all-day singing is being planned for next Sunday, October 28, under the direction of our choir leader, L. L. Bowman. The public is cordially invited to attend.

The play, "A Prairie Rose," which was to have been given in the Pleasant Garden High School auditorium last Saturday evening was postponed on account of a political speaking at that place. The Baracas and Philatheas will present this play next Saturday evening, October 27, at 7:30 o'clock in the Pleasant Garden auditorium. The public is cordially invited to attend this play, which is full of mystery and humor, yet teaches a good lesson. The proceeds will be used for the benefit of the Sunday school.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Delano Millaway and daughter, Mary Ellen, moved last week to Greensboro.

The social committee of our young people's C. E. society is planning a social for some time near Hallowe'en.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely, with good attendance each Sunday. Two hundred and sixty-two were present last Sunday.

Services will be held here next Sunday evening, at which time church officers will be elected for the ensuing year. Communion services will also be observed.

LILLIAN SHOFFNER, Reporter.

Liberty Hill, Anderson Charge.—We reorganized our Sunday chool yesterday. Mr. B. A. McClimon, who has been our superintendent for a number of years, was re-elected. The C. E. officers were also elected yesterday. Miss Ruth Parson was re-elected president. Church officers for next year will be elected next Sunday.

President Taylor was with us the first Sunday in this month. His message was enjoyed by all present.

The fourth quarterly conference will be held at this church next Saturday afternoon.

Our pastor, Rev. G. B. Ferree, will fill his last appointment for the Conference year next Sunday. It is hoped that he will be returned to us for another year.

REPORTER.

Pine Grove, Kernersville Charge.—At the 3 o'clock service last Sunday we were delighted to have with us Rev. T. F. McCulloch. We enjoyed listening to the inspirational message he delivered on "Christian Stewardship." Most all little children are taught to say "Thank you" when someone gives them something. How much more thankful ought we to be to the Heavenly Father, who gives us the air we breathe, the water we drink, the food we eat—everything.

"For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." As it is written, He has dispersed abroad; He hath given to the poor; His righteousness remaineth forever.

Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly or of necessity: for God loveth a cheerful giver.

Thanks be unto God for His unspeakable gift.

Brother McCulloch related that he had been preaching over 40 years. He was once pastor of this charge many years ago, even before a church was built at Pine Grove; the school building was used then.

We were glad to have present at the service Sunday Mrs. Alta Vance and three children, and Mrs. Hill, from High Point.

REPORTER.

Siler City.—In his last message before Conference last Sunday morning our pastor left some very interesting facts with us, which will be of help to us in future years.

Immediately following the preaching service the following church officers were elected for the ensuing year: Sunday school superintendent, Miss Sallie Smith; assistant superintendent, Mr. E. D. Woody; treasurer, Mr. L. L. Wrenn; class leaders, Mrs. Emma B. Siler and Mrs. Will Teague. The officers were installed at the close of the evening service.

The fourth quarterly conference of the Liberty-Siler City charge convened at the Liberty church last Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Our president, Rev. S. W. Taylor, presided over the meeting. Both churches were represented by a large number of people, and very good reports were made by the different departments of each church. Mr. W. E. Sharpe was elected delegate to the Annual Conference to convene at Winston-Salem on October 31st, with Miss Clata Andrew as alternate.

We were very glad indeed to have Rev. Mr. Taylor with us Sunday evening. He brought us a wonderful message.

PEARLIE MOORE, Reporter.

North Davidson Charge.—It has been some time since you heard from me; but we have some good reporters, so it is not necessary for me to report. Nevertheless, we are still here on North Davidson charge, and it is still in Davidson County. We have had some hard work to do, and have had some real good revivals on the work; some as good as I have ever seen. Bros. Moton and Suits have been my help this year; both did good work and real good spiritual preaching.

We held our last quarterly conference last Saturday; had a good conference, all churches were represented, and with encouraging reports from all churches.

The outlook for our Sunday school is good.

We have had 60 accessions to church membership this year, which will give us a fair gain to report to our Annual Conference..

We had a good conference, harmony, good will, good feeling toward each other, that we had to sing "Blest Be the Tie That Binds our Hearts in Christian Love" before we adjourned, and everybody went home feeling good.

We are serving a good people. All through the year they have been mindful of pastor and family. De are debtors for special donations to Bro. Jeff Berrier, Mrs. Jeff Berrier, Miss Emma Berrier, Bro. Ed Waitman, Bro. James, the ladies of Shiloh church, Bro. James Byerly, Mr. and Mrs. Coats, and on last Friday night a car of our Christian Endeavorers from Shiloh church drove up and dressed this preacher up in a real nice suit of clothes. I have one of the finest C. E. societies in North Carolina.

I have sowed my turnip patch and am getting ready for Conference.

Yours for a good Conference,
R. S. TROXLER.

Bess Chapel.—Pastor Henderson filled his appointment here yesterday and, as usual, preached an excellent sermon. Bro. Henderson will preach again next Sunday, which will be his last sermon before Conference.

We are expecting Conference to return Bro. Henderson to us for the coming year; otherwise we will be greatly disappointed. We all feel that he has done so much here this year and that both he and Mrs. Henderson have endeared themselves to us so much we cannot have them leave.

Our work is still moving on in harmony. We still have fairly good attendance at Sunday school.

The Ladies' Aid Society will give a play Friday night, October 25.

We haven't quite finished paying the pastor's salary yet, but we feel sure it will be paid in full and everything will be in good shape for Conference.

Bro. Lum Heavner, one of our shut-in members, is very sick, but we hope soon to see him better.

We elected the church officers and teachers of the Sunday school and they were also installed.

Not many changes were made. Mr. D. P. Beam was elected Sunday school superintendent, Mr. Guy Heavner, assistant. The latter was formerly superintendent and has served faithfully for two years. Many thanks are due him for his work.

REPORTER.

Moriah News.—Last Sunday was our annual election of church and Sunday school officers, and although the officers for this year were very efficient there were some changes, as 'most always happen.

Sunday school convened promptly at 10 o'clock by singing, "There Is Power in the Blood," after which our superintendent led in prayer. Then followed another song, "Will There Be Any Stars in Hy Crown?" The responsive reading followed.

The classes were in their rooms by 10:15, with all teachers present but two. At 10:50 the school reassembled. The choir sang "When Love Shines In." The secretary then made her report: Total enrollment of 127; 90 were present. The superintendent then made the announcements for the day, one of which was next Sunday, October 28th, the Rally Day exercises would begin promptly at 10:45 and all branches of the church would take part.

Immediately after Sunday school was dismissed our pastor took charge and announced song No. 256, "Revive Us Again," which was sung by the congregation; then followed a prayer by the pastor, and the Scripture reading was followed by the regular offering for the day.

We then went immediately into the election of officers for the ensuing year, with the following results:

Trustees, E. P. Sharpe, John McLean, Julius Sharpe, Cecil Moser, J. C. Coe, A. V. Kirkman, Sr., C. G. Dorsett; stewards, J. F. Jobe, John Sharpe, Jr., Charles F. Scott, Charles Sharpe, Sr., J. S. Wood, E. P. Sharpe, A. V. Kirkman, Sr.; class leader, A. L. Plunkett; pianist, Mrs. N. N. Coltrane; assistant pianist, Miss Dezier Moser; Sunday school superintendent, Charles F. Scott; assistant superintendent, J. S. Wood; secretary-treasurer, Miss Mary Kirkman; assistant secretary-treasurer, Mis Maude Curtis; church reporter, Mrs. J. S. Wood.

Immediately after elections our delegate to the Annual Conference, Mr. E. P. Sharpe, asked for instructions from the congregation in regard to a pastor for another year, and the result stood without a dissenting vote for the return of our present pastor, Rev. H. C. Carmichael.

We hope to have a splendid report for our paper on our Rally Day for next week.

A MEMBER.

Flat Rock Circuit.—Our Sunday school continues to go on. While our attendance is not as large as last fall, the interest in good and the superintendent is always present. The school sends a monthly offering to the Children's Home.

Our pastor has filled all his appointments since coming to this work. Brother Pegg has only been with us one year, but he has endeared himself to us, not only him, but his dear wife and sweet baby also. We were made to feel glad Saturday evening when our last quarterly meeting voted unanimously for the return of Pastor Pegg. Brother Pegg is a young man and has not the long experience of the older pastors that have served us, but where's a better place for a young man to start than on Flat Rock circuit?

We feel our church has been greatly blessed this year in many ways, yet we can look back over the past year and see some mistakes we have made.

Our pastor's salary is paid in full; did not get statement from other claims.

A short while ago one of the dear beloved members of our church passed to her reward, Mrs. Thomas Moore. Funeral was held and she was laid to rest in the cemetery at Palestine.

GRACE R. TUCKER.

Corinth, Littleton Circuit.—Rev. N. M. Harrison filled his appointment here on the first Sunday at 11 o'clock. He gave us a very inspiring message, after which Rev. H. S. B. Thompson assisted him in observing the Lord's Supper.

Our Rally Day service was held the second Sunday at 8 p. m. The children did their parts well, considering the fact we never could get them together to practice. After the children were through with their part of the program Mr. Harrison gave us a fine talk, which we all enjoyed.

At our last appointment the church officers were elected for the coming year. They are: Class leaders, Bonney Morris and Sol Insco; board of stewards, M. J. Morris, chairman, B. F. Morris, G. M. Johnston, E. D. Day; trustees, D. A. Insco, W. E. Carter, Whit Harper, W. R. Carter, M. J. Morris; superintendent, B. F. Morris; pianist, Mrs. Hettie Carter; reporter, Dasie Lee Carter.

The Conference year is near a close. We are somewhat behind on finances, but hope to have all business settled before Conference. We hope the Conference will send our pastor back for another year. We have enjoyed the four months he has been here and he has won the love of all.

Our C. E. Society still meets every Sunday night at 7:30. The president, with most of the members, went on an opossum hunt Friday night. They captured two fine opossums and all reported a good time.

The fourth quarterly conference will be held in Littleton Saturday, October 27, at 2 p. m. All officials please take notice and come.

Several of our members attended the Rally Day service at Weaver's yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Morris, Bonney, Henry and Vera Morris and Miss Virginia Insco spent yesterday at Richmond, Va., with Mrs. C. T. Hardy.

Perhaps the new reporter will be more prompt and make more readable reports than this one has.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

MRS. B. F. MORRIS.

Enfield.—The Enfield church has just closed what may be considered a very successful revival. The church was revived and nine converts were some of the visible results. The writer did the preaching.

ZIONISTS TO CONVENE IN GOLDSBORO

A state convention of North Carolina Zionist leaders will be held in Goldsboro, North Carolina, Sunday, November 18th, 1928. A call for this convention has been issued at the instigation of the administrative committee of the Seaboard Zionist Region with headquarters in Baltimore. The convention plans will be supervised by an arrangements committee, consisting of the most prominent leaders in Goldsboro. The convention will deal with a number of important problems affecting work in Palestine.

North Carolina has for many years evidenced a great interest in the upbuilding efforts in Palestine. The progress noted in Palestine in recent years not only reacts beneficially to the Jewish inhabitants in the holy land, but has had a marked effect upon the living conditions among all classes, races and creeds residing in Palestine. The Zionist organization which sponsors hundreds of schools, hospitals, agricultural as well as other institutions of learning, does not discriminate between the inhabitants of the land in admitting them to these institutions although practically all money raised to maintain them is realized from Jewish sources.

A Doubtful Compliment

An eminent gentleman was the guest of honor at a dinner party in one of our cities. The mayor presided, and when the dessert was being served he leaned over and touched the gentleman, saying: "Shall we let the people enjoy themselves a little longer, or had we better have your speech now?"—Exchange.

CHARGES PAYING ALL CLAIMS IN FULL

Fifteen charges report this week, with Whitaker's church taking the lion's share in honor rolls. They pay in full, and take their usual place on all the Conference honor rolls. First Church, High Point, follows with $145, which places them on the College honor roll. Liberty, of the Liberty-Siler City charge, with a payment of $90.00 goes on the A. C. B. honor roll. Concord, with a check for $32, goes on the College honor roll. Remittance this week of $69.58 from Fallston nearly puts them out on the College assessment; just $5.17 more will do it. We are sure they will not let that stand between them and a perfect finish. Letters from several of the brethren this morning bring gratifying news. Bro. C. E. Ridge says Chapel Hill has paid A. C. B. in full, $42.00; College assessment in full, $14.25. H. L. Isley writes that Julian church has paid everything in full, though does not give amounts. Bro. Bingham writes that Denton has paid A. C. B. in full, $86.40, and that Mt. Ebal church has done likewise, $11.43. Bro. Burgess writes that Sapling Ridge and Center churches have paid A. C. B. in full, though does not give amounts. Center church will send up a substantial payment, he says, on the G. C. B., perhaps the best in the history of the church. Good! Bethel has paid both budgets in full. He expects Rock Creek to go on the A. C. B. honor roll next Sunday. Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk writes that Kernersville charge has paid in full representatives' expense assessment, $10.00, and that the Kernersville church is entitled to honor roll recognition, having paid the College assessment of $19.00 in full. When did we ever receive so many nice letters all at once. And that is not all: from Bro. Bates comes the good news that Calvary is out on A. C. B. and College. They are nearly $100 plus on the G. C. B. I move that we reduce the Conference period to six months, so we may have more frequent endings. We are grateful, indeed, to these brethren for all of this good news. We know that it has meant a great deal of hard work, and we rejoice with them and their people in the cheer that we are sure comes to them in the results. The prospects for good reports brighten every day. All over the Conference the brethren are working faithfully to bring the year to a good closing. Our hearts and prayers are with them. We hope that when they come up to Conference, bringing their sheaves with them, that they may come with glad hearts because their labors have been rewarded.

A final, "God bless you," pastors and people, in these last of the last days.

Fraternally,

S. W. TAYLOR.

Oct. 24, 1928.

P. S.: In the report of last week the remittance from Chatham charge paid Hickory Grove's assessment for A. C. B. in full. We learned this after the report had been published, and are glad to give this church its rightful place in the list this week.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Braswell

A tribute of love from the C. E. Society of Matthews Chapel Church to the memory of Miss Lillie Braswell, who fell asleep in Jesus October 4, 1928.

Lillie was one of the charter members of our C. E. Society, one of the most devoted Christians, always loyal to her Master. He came first in all her walks of life. We have lost a dear friend, but be not grieved, for sooner or later we too must cross the silent river never to return, but in the golden summer of another life we shall all meet in that sweet reunion where parting is no more.

Therefore, be it resolved, that we, the members of the C. E. Society, ever remember her beautiful Christian character, and that we emulate her example in our lives by manifesting her sweet spirit and obedience to the Father's will.

Second, that we extend our sympathy to her loved ones left behind and commend them to the care of One who doeth all things well.

Dear Lillie, we had to give you up.
Though sad our hearts indeed.
We little thought when last we met,
The parting was so near.

Your earthly trials are over,
No more you'll feel a pain,
No more you'll know a sorrow,
But with Jesus ever reign.

One by one we are called away,
And our bodies return to clay.
One by one we shall see Jesus,
And dwell with him for aye.

MRS. C. E. ELLIS,
MISS ODELL BOWEN,
MISS LOTTIE EDWARDS,
Committee.

Woodburn

Mrs. Meda Woodburn, wife of R. Roy Woodburn, died last week and was buried at Winston-Salem. A number of relatives and friends from Tabernacle attended the funeral.

Bro. Woodburn will be remembered by all of our people, having preached at Tabernacle church recently. He and his children are now spending a few days with his aged mother, who is in her 90th year, being one of the oldest members of Tabernacle church.

Hanner

Mrs. Martha L. Hanner was born November 26, 1860, and departed this life October 8, 1928. For several months she had been in failing health, yet during all her illness she looked to her Father for comfort.

The funeral was conducted at Tabernacle M. P. church, where she had been a faithful member. Mrs. Hanner leaves to mourn their loss six boys, three sisters, one brother, and 17 grandchildren.

To her dear family circle we tender our deepest and most loving sympathy, and pray that the beautiful, shining example of faith and trust may enable them to look up and press forward along the same path which leads to immortal joy in a final reunion which shall know no breaking, but be forever with the Lord.

MRS. H. L. ISLEY.

Resolutions of Respect

Whereas, our Heavenly Father in His infinite wisdom has allowed the death angel to visit the home of Brother and Sister Hunter and take away their beloved daughter, Blanche; and whereas, we bow our heads in humble submission to His righteous will, therefore be it resolved:

1. That we, the members of the Home Missionary Society of Mt. Zion church, do hereby extend to the bereaved family our most sincere sympathy, love and respect.

2. That this dispensation of His providence may draw us closer together and closer to God, realizing more fully the greatness of His holiness.

3. That we keep the memory of dear Blanche fresh in our hearts and prepare to meet her in that happy home where we know she has gone. There we will part no more, neither will there be any sickness, nor sorrow, nor pain; but all will be joy and gladness. What a happy meeting that will be!

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent, one to the bereaved family, one to the Methodist Protestant Herald, one to the Missionary Record, and a copy retained in the minutes of our society.

MRS. W. E. JONES, Pres.,
MRS. F. G. FOWLER, Sec.,
MRS. C. W. ALLEN, Cor. Sec.

Woodburn

Died at the Clinic Hospital in Greensboro, N. C., on the 19th of October, 1928, Miss Vera Woodburn, of 1602 Asheboro street. The funeral was held from Centenary M. E. church, of which she was a member, in the presence of a large concourse of people, after which the remains were carried to Pleasant Garden for interment.

She was known and warmly admired for her many virtues by the writer. She was indeed a queenly woman—ennobled by all womanly virtues, with affections as tender and true as Godly faith was pure and holy, with manner and speech adorned by the grace of inherited refinement; with an intelligent, cultured and unclouded mind, deeply sensitive in thought and feeling, which makes in our lamented friend a character of rare excellence and beauty.

She might be considered in the prime of young womanhood, being only about 32 years of age. But death loves a shining mark and our beloved friend has been laid away in silent slumber, and eyes which once gleamed with soul-lit radiance are lusterless now in the grave's deep sleep; hands which never gave a treacherous clasp are folded in nerveless clasp across a bosom which we trust never cherished a thought that was not pure and noble. Her voice, so sweet and bird-like, is dumb and noteless now—its music has flown. Yes, our beloved friend is dead, and not until the belfry of eternity shall toll out the funeral of time shall we behold her again. "In this sad thought there is an ocean of grief whose dark and bitter waves engulf the heart in everlasting gloom, and before whose surging billows sympathy herself stands mute and bows the head in voiceless anguish." And yet, despite all this, upon the lowering clouds there is seen a rainbow of comfort glistening on the inky flood of sorrow, for truly we believe that our departed friend now roams the sweet fields of Aiden and sips with angels the nectar of blissful immortality. We would say to the grief-stricken father, brother, sisters, and relatives. 'Tis sad to part with loved ones; but we should not murmur, for truly the Triune God doeth all things well.

"Better to smile when such a life
Gives up the battle of earthly strife;
Better to know that her tasks are done,
Trials ended and glory won;
Tears are vain when a soul so bright
Wings it way to the gates of light.

"She passed away, but her sweet good will Like fragrant odor lingers still;
The tender lesson that memory brings,
The mantle of patience o'er us flings,
We strive to follow the path she trod
To be more like her, who has gone to God."

D. C. ALDRIDGE.

Dickson

On last Thursday evening, October 11, 1928, about 4 o'clock, our hearts were made sad indeed when the life of our good neighbor, Mrs. Nannie Dickson, was released from a body of pain and carried to that home beyond the skies where the weary find rest and suffering is no more.

Her husband preceded her to the glory world seven years ago.

We feel deeply the loss of her going, but hope it is her eternal gain. Her age was 80 years, nine months and 11 days.

Mrs. Dickson had been in declining health for several years, but had been confined to her bed only eight weeks when the summons came. We shall never see her anymore on earth, but when our stay on earth has ended we hope to meet her in heaven.

She is survived by three sons: Messrs. Barlet Dickson, of Macon, Ga.; Alex and Robert Dickson, of Mebane, N. C.; two granddaughters, Misses Mamie and Frances Dickson, of Murphy, N. C.; one brother, Mr. D. A. Mebane, of Mebane, N. C.; three sisters, Mrs. Hattie Tarpley, of Spartanburg, S. C., Mrs. Ed Holt, of Mebane, N. C., and Miss Bettie Mebane, of Mebane.

The funeral was conducted Friday afternoon in her home by Rev. D. B. Greene, pastor of the Presbyterian church of Mebane. Interment was made in Oakwood cemetery.

The sympathy of the community goes out to the family in their sad bereavement.

ANNIE SQUIRES.

AN APPRECIATION

Since the departure from this life of our dear daughter and sister, Blanche, so many expressions of sympathy have come to us from our brethren and other friends of the Conference we wish to use this means of expressing our sincere thanks to every one of you. Your messages have been a great source of comfort to us in these days of bereavement. May God bless you all.

CONFERENCE FACULTY MEETING

The Conference Faculty will meet in executive session in First Methodist Protestant Church, Winston, N. C., Tuesday, October 30, 1928, at 2 o'clock P. M. This session will last for about one hour, after which any who have business with the Faculty or any of the examiners will have the opportunity to be examined.

Members of the Faculty will please be on hand at the time called, for it is not fair to members of the class to have them come and no one to examine. Neither is it fair to have the members of Faculty come and then members of the class calling for examinations after the work of the Conference begins. So let each one do his part in fairness.

A GREAT TRIBUTE

If you are ever so fortunate as to visit our National Capitol at Washington, you will find many things there to thrill you.

But none, perhaps, as stirring as one picture that hangs as a permanent gift to the American people and a fitting tribute to one of the most glorious deeds in all our nation's proud history.

This wonderful picture bears the simple title, "WE," and as its name suggests, depicts the gallant flight of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh from New York to Paris—the flight that thrilled the world, and gave it probably its most loved hero of all time.

And the best part of all this is, you can have a handsome copy of "WE," printed in twelve colors and measuring eighteen by twenty-four inches, to hang in your own home.

You cannot buy the picture at any price. It may be had only through The Youth's Companion as its free gift to you with a year's subscription to the magazine.

In its new form as a monthly magazine, The Companion itself has more to offer than ever before—a full book-length novel complete in each issue; serials and short stories; feature articles, editorials, contests, puzzles, poems, recommendations of books and motion pictures, and special departments for both boys and girls covering their own favorite activities.

In order that every American home may enjoy the inspiration of the famous picture, "WE," we make the following liberal offer:

1. The Youth's Companion, 12 big monthly numbers, and

2. Two extra numbers to new subscribers ordering within 30 days, and

3. A copy of "WE" in 12 colors, framing size 18 x 24 inches. All for only $2.

JOURNALS WANTED AND JOURNALS TO GIVE AWAY

If anyone has copies of Journals prior to 1914 I would be glad to purchase same. In my move to Seattle my Journals were in some way misplaced. I would be glad to replace this file if such could be found. I have extra Journals of the following years: 1914, 1916, 1919, 1920, 1921, 1924, 1926. If anyone would care for any of these Journals they may have them for the asking. Delivery is also free provided the asking is done before my leave for the Annual Conference.

THE PRESIDENT LOSES A FRIEND

President Coolidge is sad these days. He has lost a real friend. Rob Roy, his white collie dog, is dead. Boys and girls who have lost their favorite pets know just how the President feels. Rob Roy (his master called him Robert) was the President's companion for nearly five years. They took many long walks together. When the President was busy in his office, Rob Roy would nestle under the desk and wait patiently until his master was ready to leave. When Rob Roy became ill, the President sent him to a hospital for treatment, but all to no avail. The doctors could not save the President's faithful and devoted friend.—Current Events.

"The Gospel of Work"

Dr. Chase, President of the University of North Carolina, made a notable speech at High Point College last Thursday. It was the first observance of Founders' Day, and Dr. Chase was the chief speaker. He described the conditions of successful student life in college or university. He laid especial stress upon the necessity of work, real work, proclaiming the "Gospel of Work." The young man who expects to derive prestige from a course of four years' loafing on a college campus will find himself sadly disappointed. Employers do not care about one's ancestry or family; they do not ask who was your father or grandfather: they simply want to know what you can do. And in the age which we are now living nothing will take the place of the ability to do first rate work. Those satisfied with half-way preparation for their tasks will find themselves rejected in the strenuous competition of the time. Students must acquire the habit of work, good work, earnest work, persistent, effective work.

Of course Dr. Chase did not make the impression that the chief purpose of college education is to prepare men to be mere tools in the processes of the economic world. He did not overlook the higher goals of education in intellectual, moral and spiritual life, but he emphasized what students often overlook—the necessity not only of being something but also of doing something. A student is uneducated or miseducated if he is unprepared to contribute his part to the world's well-being. True education is education for service as well as preparation for the enjoyment of the highest and best things that appeal to man.

This Conference—A Prediction

When our Conference last met in Concord, N. C., we published a dream concerning the conference which was not fulfilled in every detail. Now we are going to venture upon the prophet's role, trusting that our predictions will all be verified. We are not asleep or even sleepy, but wide awake.

First, we predict that Brother S. W. Taylor or some other capable minister will be elected president. In this year in which so many men are running for president with qualifications so diverse, you may imagine that our conference will elect a layman for its president, but we predict otherwise.

Secondly, we predict that the conference will elect a capable layman to serve with the president as stationing committee.

Thirdly, we predict that these elections will be held without bloodshed or strife or stuffing the ballot box or miscounting the ballots or misrepresentation of the number of votes cast. We further predict that there will be no attempt to intimidate voters or deceive them as to the qualifications of candidates. We go further than that: we predict that there will be no fear of any of these things in the mind of any member or spectator of the conference.

Fourthly, we predict that the conference will be characterized by a spirit of harmony and yet a spirit of earnest devotion to the work of the conference and the church. Debaters will be respectful to those who differ from them and all will prefer to see the truth rather than their own individual views prevail. Majorities will have respect for minorities, knowing that they may be right, and minorities will have respect for majorities, hoping that they will prove to be right.

Fifthly, there will be a number (we do not say what number) of changes in pastoral relations, but we predict that the report of the stationing committee will be received with an unusual degree of satisfaction. We cannot predict that there will be no appeal from the report of the stationing committee, but we do predict that a committee on appeals will be elected to be prepared for such a contingency.

Sixthly, we predict that the members of the conference will go home with pleasant recollections of their associations in Winston, especially with their entertainers in their homes, and with a heightened interest in the work of the church.

Seventhly, we predict that all members of conference will so conduct themselves that our people in Winston will not be sorry that they invited us to come.

Mark these predictions and see if they are not all fulfilled.

The Eastern Conference

This conference was formed some years ago by the combination of three conferences: namely, Pennsylvania, New York and New Jersey. It does not include all of the states of New York and Pennsylvania, only the eastern portion. It closed its annual conference session on October 15, a good account of which is given by the Methodist Recorder of October 27 and by the Methodist Protestant of October 24. The session was featured by a series of lectures by Dr. T. H. Lewis on the reasonableness of divine revelation. Rev. Roby F. Day was re-elected president. There are about 65 pastoral charges. Six charges were left to be supplied and six ministers were left in the hands of the president.

Dr. C. D. Sinkinson, of the Eastern Conference, has been serving Christ Church, Atlantic City, New Jersey, for over thirty years continuously. He was re-assigned to that church. We know of no longer term of pastoral service in the entire denominational life.

—Don't allow yourself to be carried away by any current of ill feeling. Stand true to your conviction and at the same time make charitable allowance for those who differ from you. Opinions are the result of experience and no two persons have precisely the same course of experience. When we all know more we will agree more closely. Hold the friendly attitude toward all, and this will greatly help to overcome the opposition of the prejudiced. Remember the apostle's injunction that prayer be made for all men.

WHAT THE WORLD OWES TO THE QUAKERS

By Henry Alfred Porter

"The term Quakers was applied in derision by an English judge when George Fox called on him to tremble at the word of the Lord." At first they had called themselves Children of Truth, Children of Light and Friends of Truth. Finally they became the Religious Society of Friends.

The Society of Friends sprang up in England in the middle of the seventeenth century. This movement was "the last wave of the reformation in England." It was the most advanced of all. It sought to reform the reformers. The Friends banished liturgies and music from public worship. They refused to follow the changing fashions in dress or to doff the hat to social superiors. They insisted upon the use of the singular pronoun when addressing a single person. These peculiarities, however, were not of the essence of Quakerism and most of them have been outgrown and abandoned.

"The Greatest of the Moderns"

Fox, the founder of the society, was a truly great man. Carlyle calls Fox "the greatest of the moderns." And a recent English writer says, "Of four great characters of the seventeenth century Cromwell, Milton, Bunyan and Fox, the last named has had the greatest influence upon the world and has been the least recognized."

The first of the Quakers was a man of heroic mold in body and soul. I see him racing from Cromwell's stage coach when the grim Protector rode through Hyde Park, warning him to prepare for the final tribunal. Cromwell gave testimony to the sturdiness and sincerity of Fox and his followers when he said, "There is a people risen that I can not win either with gifts, honors, office or place, but all others I can win."

Fox left a shining record of noble daring and of fearless devotion to righteousness and truth. A contemporary once said of him that "he was as a tree and as pure as a bell, for we could never stir him." It is estimated that before he died he enlisted one hundred thousand followers, among whom were some of the strongest characters of the day.

Quakerism has never been wanting in strong characters. There was that beautiful prison angel, Elizabeth Fry, who, following the footsteps of John Howard in prison reform, visited fearless and alone the frightful "women's ward" of Newgate, though warned beforehand that its savage inmates would likely tear her limb from limb. There was John Bright, the Quaker statesman of Great Britain, who for a whole generation battled heroically for the rights of the people, and left the world better than he found it, both morally and socially. There was John Greenleaf Whittier, our Quaker poet and politician, who wielded with one hand the sword of national reform and with the other a pen from which flowed songs of liberty and reverence and faith. And there was Neal Dow, the temperance reformer, and John Woolman and Lucretia Mott and Susan B. Anthony. Sir Walter Scott came of Quaker ancestry as did Abraham Lincoln. Outstanding among the Quakers of today are Rufus M. Jones, Elbert Russell and Herbert Hoover.

Quakerism was one of the streams of life which watered the early garden of our American commonwealth. In the autumn of 1682 the ship called Welcome sailed up the Delaware bringing a band of Quakers under the leadership of William Penn. The territory of Pennsylvania had been given to Penn by Charles the Second and there he set himself to build a commonwealth founded on the principles of complete toleration and perfect democracy.

The world owes the Quakers an immense debt for their consistent advocacy of the doctrine of the "inner light." They proclaimed that God speaks directly to each human soul through a present living experience of Christ. With the Roman Catholic the ultimate authority is the church. The reformers substituted for this the authority of the Bible. The Quakers substituted an inward for an outward authority. The ultimate authority with the Quaker was the "Inner Light" or the "Christ within." This does not mean that he discarded the revelation of God in the Bible. No man of his time was more saturated with the teachings of the Bible than George Fox. And the simple creed of William Penn was, "The grace of God within me and the scripture without me are the foundation and declaration of my faith and religion." The Quaker recognized in the Bible "the inspiration of the same Spirit who is known in the inner consciousness as the Inner Light." But he could not be content with a "God they took from a printed book." His religion was grounded in personal experience. The truth in the Bible became living truth for him only as it was verified in actual experience.

Believing that God and man have direct dealings with each other, the Quakers would allow nothing to come between —no liturgy nor creed nor any ecclesiastical mediation. They held that God is a living presence revealed within the soul, that "the only shekinah in the world is within," and that there God and man actually meet.

The Authority of the Soul

This Quaker doctrine of the authority of the soul was a return to primitive Christianity. They were anticipated in it by the Baptists. And there is not wanting evidence that there were numerous points of contact between the early Baptists and the early Friends.

Laying such stress upon mystical experience it is not strange that Quakerism went to the extreme of setting aside even baptism and the Lord's Supper. And it did not escape other perils of the mystic way. On the one hand there was a tendency to develop cranks and fanatics and on the other to crystalize into a set of observances in dress and speech and worship. And the Friends have seldom been noted for missionary and evangelistic zeal.

But in its insistence on religion as a direct and personal experience of God, possible to every one, Quakerism emphasized certain truths of incalculable value to the world, such as human dignity, freedom and brotherly love. A man, any man, who would open the windows of his soul might have the Inner Light and possess the peace and power of the indwelling Spirit of Christ. One with such infinite possibilities within him was sacred and to be treated with respect. So the Friends gave no place to class or caste or any form of social tyranny. From the beginning they have stood for equal rights for women in the ministry and in worship. And they have been pioneers in work for the abolition of slavery and of capital punishment, for temperance, prison reform, education, the equality of the sexes and the fair treatment of submerged races. The language of Masefield's "Everlasting Mercy" was the language of the Quaker:

"I know that God has given me birth
To brother all the souls on earth."

To the Quakers the world owes a debt unpayable for their contribution to peace. The friends have been against every institution and practice that struck at Brotherhood. And the head of the offending of this regard has been war. Against war they have borne their historic testimony. Even in the seventeenth century Fox challenged the militarists as blind leaders of the blind. "I told them," he said, "that I lived in that life and power which did away with all occasion for all war." When William Penn and his associates came to Pennsylvania they brought no gunpowder. They brought Bibles and the implements of industry. On these they established that great commonwealth. They believed that "soldiers are as unfit to build the temple of freedom as the warrior David was to build the temple of God."

The Making of Peace

"Blessed are the peacemakers." Peace must be made. It is one of the hardest jobs in the world. It is a stupendous enterprise. It must literally be made. It can not be attained simply by lying down and refusing to take arms. The Quakers understood that. They were not passivists but pacifists. They sought peace and zealously pursued it. They practiced peace and brotherhood. Their ambition was "to live in such a way that if everybody lived like them war would be impossible."

For their loyalty to their high ideals the Quakers endured hardship and affliction. The suffering of individuals was frightful. But theirs was the strength of the martyr nature, and they did not suffer in vain.

These cruel persecutions, and the imprisonment of most of their ministers, confirmed the Quakers in their way of worshipping God in silence. Charles Lamb writes of the stillness of the Quaker meetings: "I have seen the reeling sea ruffian who came with the avowed intention of disturbing the quiet, from the very heart of the place receive in a moment a new heart, and presently sit down in peace among the friends to let God talk to his heart." This practice of silence undoubtedly tended to quicken and deepen the inner life. Would it not be well to have something of it in our public worship? Would it not keep our spiritual life more wholesome? "My soul, wait thou upon God."

The Friends have gained in vitality and power and reputation since the Great War. They proved themselves no shin-warming pacifists. While they bore their historic testimony against war they organized an active relief program in the war-stricken countries of Europe, sending out from America alone over a thousand workers and twenty-five million dollars. Many accepted some form of hospital service. Nor did they keep out of the zone of death. "They followed the conflict and mopped up its fearful debris."

The Friends are not a numerous people. Throughout the world they count less than one hundred and fifty thousand members, mostly rural. But by their cultivation of the inner life, their sincerity in word and deed, their simplicity in manners and in worship, their superior family life, their industry and thrift, and their devotion to Christian education, they have exercised a spiritual sway altogether disproportionate to their numbers. And by their long and venturesome experiment in brotherhood and positive goodwill they have at last focused the attention of mankind. And when the angel anthem of the Nativity rings around the world and peace broods over all the earth, the Quaker shall not be without his honor and his glory.—Christian Index.

THE CALL WILL COME

The hour is approaching when the message will come to us, as it comes to all, "Arise and go forth from the home in which thou hast dwelt, from the city in which thou hast done thy business, from thy family, from thy friends. Arise, and take thy last journey." And what know we of the journey? And what know we of the country to which we are bound? A little we have read thereof, and somewhat has been revealed to us by the Spirit; but how little do we know of the realms of the future! We know that there is a black and stormy river called "Death." God bids us cross it, promising to be with us. And, after death, what cometh? What wonder-world will open upon our astonished sight? What scene of glory will be unfolded to our view? No traveler has ever returned to tell. But we know enough of the heavenly land to make us welcome our summons thither with joy and gladness.

The journey of death may be dark, but we may go forth on it fearlessly, knowing that God will be with us as we walk through the gloomy valley, and therefore we need fear no evil. We shall be departing from all we have known and loved here, but we shall be going to our Father's house—to our Father's home, where Jesus is—to that royal "city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God." This shall be our last removal, to dwell forever with Him we love, in the midst of His people, in the presense of God.

Christian, meditate much on heaven; it will help thee to press on, and to forget the toil of the way. This vale of tears is but the pathway to the better country; this world of woe is but the stepping-stone to a world of bliss.

"Prepare us, Lord, by grace divine
For Thy bright courts on high;
Then bid our spirits rise, and join
The chorus of the sky."

WELL EXPLAINED

Two pastors' wives were spending the day together. They had each brought their sewing. One had a round, plump, smiling, happy face; the other a long, solemn visage. She looked as though she was preparing to go to a funeral or drive a hearse or something of that kind.

Finally she of the long face said with a groan: "I don't see how it is; over at your place everything seems to be kept up. The salary is always paid, repairs are made and everything moves on so nicely, while with us everything is always behind."

She of the smiling face laughingly repiled, "Well, I don't know; maybe our work would explain it." Then they both looked down, and strange to say, each was mending a pair of her husband's trousers. She of the smiling face was putting a patch on the knee, while she of the long and solemn visage was putting a patch—well, it was not on the knee, for, as she said, everything at their house was always behind.—M. B. Williams, in Baptist Argus.

OPTIMISM | The President's Letter | EVANGELISM

Today has been a day of good tidings, and I dare not hold my peace. Bro. Bates had a good day yesterday (Sunday) and tells us this morning that everything is in readiness for an "In Full." Bro. Pritchard called this morning on long distance to say another pleasant "In Full" to us. That word is certainly music to our ears and joy to our heart. We believe, too, that when all the "In Fulls" are in, the list will be no mean one. We shall not be surprised if Kannapolis, one of the youngest in our family, finds that place of honor. Just a few days ago Bro. Cowan, the pastor, wrote to say that they were "planning to raise every penny of every claim, if possible, and we think it is." Of course such news sounds good! We want to say again how grateful we are to all of the brethren, ministers and laymen for all that they have done in their efforts to raise these budgets. We trust that they may find a full reward, both in the consciousness of faithfulness, and in the fruitful results of their labors.

Sunday was a good day for us, too. We worshipped with Bro. Bates and the Calvary congregation in the morning, and enjoyed the service and the fellowship of the people. At night we were at Graham with Bro. D. R. Williams and the people of his church. A large congregation was present, and we were pleased and helped by our worship with them. We tried to preach, and we trust this was not without helpful results to the people. Bro. Williams is closing his fourth year with this church, and has done a good work. He and his wife hold a place of high esteem with the congregation.

Today—Monday—"Blue Monday"—but we don't know whether it has been "blue" or not. Been too busy—too busy—too busy—to find out. The best remedy in the world for the "blues" is to get busy, real busy. Try it! Well, I trust that no pastor has had the "blues" today; but I'll venture the guess that about a hundred have been very busy. Just so many things to be done, and conference right on us. Say, brethren, was it ever so that you were not rushed in the last days? Well, these are busy days, but I trust happy ones for every minister and every delegate, and I hope that nothing may happen during our annual gathering this year to mar the peace of any of us. The Lord grant unto us this benediction.

There will be no weekly report from Bro. Idol this week. However, we are running a full statement of all money that has been reported to us during the year. This includes credits due from missionary societies. It has been our purpose to keep these reports accurate, but errors have gotten in despite our pains to keep them out. However, the charges have been patient with us, for which we are grateful. And not only so, but for every co-operation and every kindness shown us during the year, our heart abounds in gratitude.

And Now

Brethren, you are reading this in the midst of conference—our largest and most important gathering of the year. Don't forget that you have a part to perform in making the conference helpful and successful in the largest measure. Promptness is important; prayer is important; worship is important; good will is important; work is important. All together, then, for the best conference yet!

"Now, the God of peace, that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great Shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant,

"Make you perfect in every good work to do his will, working in you that which is well-pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ; to whom be glory for ever and ever." "Amen."

Fraternally,

S. W. Taylor.

Monday, Oct. 29, 1928.

P. S.—Since writing the above we have received additional interesting information. West End is out with all claims; so is First Church, Charlotte; so Asheville church; so Yadkin College; so Alamance charge on A. C. budget; Bethel Church on this charge on both budgets; so Macedonia, Hebron, and Lawndale churches on Fallston charge. Fine! Fine!! We shall gladly give these churches their rightful place of distinction.

SOUL-WINNING THE SUPREME TASK OF THE CHURCH

Soul-winning is the supreme task of the church. In the great commission Christ commands us to preach the gospel to all the world. Again He says, "As my Father has sent me, even so send I you." In these stressful days of institutionalization and intensiveness, care should be taken lest we forget the primal task, personal evangelism. We must have religion of the heart as well as of the head to cope with present-day tendencies and serve our day and generation. The world needs the gospel today in purity and power more than in any other period in its history.

The flames of evangelism are not keeping pace with other departments of our work. Progress has been greater along other lines than in the field of evangelism. The records show that we are winning one soul to Christ each year, per seventeen members of our churches, which is one for each church every six weeks. These figures are staggering when you think of our culture and equipment. You are almost compelled to question whether or not we believe in evangelism.

We should give ourselves to prayerful thoughts concerning God's purpose and program for the world, the condition of lost men, their possibilities in the Lord Jesus, and then busy ourselves in directing the forces anew in the one supreme task—evangelism. May God lead us in this great task.—Rev. E. E. Huntsberry.

AS A GREAT PREACHER VIEWED IT

How remarkable that persons will claim to be Christians when they have rejected every distinctive doctrine of Christianity. Indeed, such persons do sometimes claim that by thus rejecting almost the whole of the Bible, and all its great scheme of salvation by an atonement, they have become real Christians. Now they have got the true light. Indeed! How can such a delusion be accounted for except on the ground that the Spirit of God has abandoned the man to his own ways and left him to utter and perfect delusion?—Charles G. Finney.

THE CHURCH AND THE MISSISSIPPI FLOOD

The people of the United States have witnessed a disaster in the Mississippi Valley, which has never been precedented. The lowlands of six states have been overspread by a flood which has wiped out homes, churches, stores, factories, farms, roads, and destroyed cattle and other live stock. All conditions of people have been affected—white, black, Creole, Protestant, Catholic, poor and rich, owners and tenants. Cotton farms have been inundated, likewise sugar plantations. Many lives have been lost, several hundred, and the number may increase as the muddy waters recede, and leave their gruesome dregs.

It has been a time for heroism, self-sacrifice, and real religion. While many have fled before the waters, others who might have gone have stayed behind to work and help others. The Christian ministers and Christian people have been diligent in rescue and defensive work. The white people have been no more self-forgetful than the colored. Many a negro preacher has distinguished himself for courage and self-denial. The Manufacturers Record reprints the entire copy of a negro paper, The Cotton Farmer, edited by Rev. Ad. Wimbs, a negro minister, who gives details of the flood, and publishes the appreciation of his people for the help they are receiving.

The church has ministered religious comfort as well as physical help. White and black have held religious services on the levees, and elsewhere, to bring courage and spiritual consolations to all in their terrible hour of trial.

The whole country has been stirred to give aid through the Red Cross. Many churches have raised large sums of money for the suffering multitudes. President Coolidge and Secretary Hoover have asked for $10,000,000, but now it is seen that this will be inadequate, and $25,000,000 will not suffice the needy states in their rescue and rehabilitation work. Every church of all denominations ought to take special collections, and send them to the Red Cross agencies. We that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak and not to please ourselves.—J. G. G.

REASONS FOR STUDYING THE BIBLE

1. Our souls need nourishment as truly as our bodies, and the Bible is the best food for any soul.

2. It occupies the mind with good thoughts. It fosters reverence and earnestness of spirit. It gives volume and depth and dignity to our lives.

3. It helps to restrain wrong impulses and to purify wrong desires, to clarify and strengthen the sense of duty and to awaken and intensify the purposes of righteousness.

4. It molds the character by keeping before it the perfect example of Christ and by the influence of the truth. It reveals to us the will of God as to duty and work and the spirit and sphere of our lives.

5. The Bible has so entered into the best life and institutions of the nation that ignorance of the Bible is unpatriotic. As Justice Brewer says, "He is the best patriot who loves the Bible best and teaches it to others."

6. The Bible contains all that we know of God. There are some things that we can reason out about God, but they are all in the Bible, and a good deal more we should not know otherwise.

7. It is the most interesting book in the world. If any one thinks it is not, let him try to practice it and see.

8. If we want to do any Christian work with others and for others, we must know the Bible. A knowledge of it and love in our hearts constitute the best equipment for Christian work.—Dr. Robert E. Speer.

THE CHRISTIAN

To be a Christian is not a matter of mere words. It is a relationship; the relationship of a soul with God. It has three distinct phases. It begins with the New Birth, through which we become sons and daughters of God. It finds its consummation in the day when we come face to face with God, and our eyes open on the joys and delights of the heavenly mansions. In between these two ends lies the Christian life. It is here that we are greatly in need of a new emphasis. We have tried hard to bring people into this relationship. What we have not fully grasped is that the whole experience is one, in different stages. Without the new birth there can be no Christian life. Without the Christian life there can be no glorious consummation. Without the consummation the Christian life would lose its highest hope and expectation. Without the Christian life the new birth would be a tragically incomplete thing. It is not a matter of the length of life, but of its character. The new born soul that lives but a day, but lives that day as God would have it, has a right to the consummation. The life that has many years, but these years spent without the approval of God, will be a dread disappointment. Our aim must be to so present the message of the Gospel that men and women may come into the full and rounded and complete Christian experience.—W. E. Denham.

IT MAKES A DIFFERENCE

There are many persons who take a complacent attitude toward error in religious thinking, saying easily, "It does not make any difference what a man believes so long as he is sincere." But we do not take the same attitude in the rest of life. We do not say: "It makes no difference if a man mistakes poison for food so long as he is sincere." Why should we play fast and loose with the substance which is to nourish the intellectual life any more than with that which sustains the body? It does make a difference what a man believes. Thought exercises a powerful if subtle influence on action. "As a man thinketh in his heart so is he." If he mistakes error for truth, evil consequences are bound to result. They may not reveal themselves at once, but sooner or later it will become apparent, at some point in the social life, that the fruit of error is disaster. We have as much reason to warn men of the danger from false belief as we have to fix the cautioning label on the bottle of deadly poison. —Christian Register.

CHARITY AND JUSTICE

Ruskin contrasts charity and justice in "The Crown of Wild Olives" and then shows how they are related. "Charity you will say is greater than justice. Yes, it is greater; it is the summit of justice—it is the temple of which justice is the foundation. But you can't have the top without the bottom; you cannot build upon charity. Do justice to your brother and you will come to love him. But do injustice to him because you don't love him and you will come to hate him. Love is the last reward of good work." Splendid! for love becomes incoherent gush outside of its natural context. Faith and works are no more essential to each other than love and justice.—Selected.

THE GIVING ALPHABET

(Compiled by Dorothy Dix Porges)

All things come of Thee, and of Thine own have we given Thee. 1 Chron. 29:14.

Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse. Mal. 3:10.

Charge them that are rich in this world . . . that they do good. 1 Tim. 6:17, 18.

Do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith. Gal. 6:10.

Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give. 2 Cor. 9:7.

Freely ye have received, freely give. Matt. 10:8.

God loveth a cheerful giver. 2 Cor. 9:7.

Honor the Lord with thy substance. Prov. 3:9.

If there be a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath. 2 Cor. 8:12.

Jesus said, It is more blessed to give than to receive. Acts 20:35.

Knowing that whatsoever good things any man doeth, the same shall he receive of the Lord. Eph. 6:8.

Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth . . . but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven. Matt. 6:19, 20.

My little children, let us not love in word, neither in tongue, but in deed and in truth. 1 John 3:18.

Now concerning the collection for the saints, upon the first day of the week, let every one of you lay by him in store as God hath prospered him. 1 Cor. 16:1, 2.

Of all that Thou shalt give me I will surely give the tenth to Thee. Gen. 28:22.

Provide yourselves bags which wax not old. Luke 12:33.

Quench not the spirit. 1 Thes. 5:19.

Render unto God the things that are God's. Matt. 22:21.

See that ye abound in this grace also. 2 Cor. 8:7.

The silver is mine, and the gold is mine, said the Lord of Hosts. Hag. 2:8.

Unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall much be required. Luke 12:48.

Vow and pay unto the Lord your God. Ps. 76:11.

Whoso hath this world's goods, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him? 1 John 3:17.

Xcept your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the Kingdom of Heaven. Matt. 5:20.

Ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though He was rich, yet for our sakes He became poor, that ye, through His poverty, might be rich. 2 Cor. 8:9.

Zealous of good works. Titus 2:14.

ONLY ONE CALVARY

No one but Christ could ever be the Lamb slain. Many others have died on the cross, and may yet do so. But there is an infinite difference between their death and Christ's death. We should keep this in mind when speaking of the death of martyrs. It is regrettable to read in the public press the comment recently made by a minister on the death of a missionary in China: "If he could speak he would say he had counted it a privilege to go to the cross as Christ went." We honor and mourn every missionary life laid down in the foreign field; but only a sinless one could die the Redeemer's death. Murdered Christian missionaries die as martyrs; Christ's death was not that of a martyr. The missionary dying for his faith in Christ dies under the blessing of God; Christ died under the curse of God. "Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us" (Gal. 3:13). When the Christian takes up his cross and follows Christ, being crucified with Christ, he dies to his own sins. But when Christ died on the cross, he died not unto his own sins, for he had none, but unto the sins of the whole world which were laid on him "who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree, that we, being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness: by whose stripes ye were healed" (1 Pet. 2:24). The cross, to Christ, was the place of curse and separation from God. The cross to the Christian is the place of blessing and fellowship with God. There is only one Calvary.—Selected.

CHRIST WANTS THE BEST

Christ wants the best. He in the far-off ages
Once claimed the firstling of the flock, the finest of the wheat,
And still he asks his own in gentlest pleading,
To lay their highest hopes and brightest talents at his feet.
He'll not forget the feeblest service, humblest love;
He only asks that of our store we give to him
The best we have.

Christ gives the best. He takes the hearts we offer
And fills them with his glorious beauty, joy and peace.
And in his service as we're growing stronger
The calls to grand achievements still increase.
The richest gifts for us on earth, or in heaven above,
Are hid in Christ. In Jesus we receive
The best we have.

And is our best too much? Our loving service
For his sake? O friend, let us remember
How once our Lord poured out his blood for us,
And in the prime of his mysterious manhood
Gave up his precious life upon the cross!
The Lord of lords by whom the world was made,
Through bitter grief and tears, gave us
The best he had.

HE SILENCED THE DEVIL

If you find yourself getting very miserly, begin to scatter, like a wealthy farmer in New York State I heard of. He was a noted miser, but he was converted. Soon after, a poor man who had been burnt out and had no provisions, came to him for help. The farmer thought he would be liberal and give the man a ham from his smokehouse. On his way to get it, the tempter whispered to him:

"Give him the smallest one you have."

He had a struggle whether he would give a large or a small ham, but finally he took down the largest he could find.

"You are a fool," the devil said.

"If you don't keep still," the farmer replied, "I will give him every ham I have in the smokehouse."—D. L. Moody.

FALTER FLIES UPHILL

"It's only a mile as the crow flies," said Mr. Jenkins, in reply to a question from Walter Clemm, his nephew.

"Too bad we can't ride crows," remarked Janet Jenkins, Walter's cousin.

"Right you are!" exclaimed Walter. "It's a good two miles by the road."

He looked down the hill on which the Jenkins farmhouse stood, and could see the smoking chimney in the valley where his friends, the Barnes boys, lived.

"I guess I'll take my express wagon and ride down," he said. "Want to come along, Janet?"

But Janet did not care to ride wildly down a road which was never any too smooth, and which was now cut up by the rain and frost.

"If you'll pull me up again, I'll come," she added, smiling slyly, because she knew he couldn't do it.

"Aw, come on," urged Walter. "We may get a hitch."

Janet did not need much urging, and soon the two were on the road, clinging tightly to Walter's express wagon which bounded dangerously over the road.

"We'll have to do something about this road," said Walter between his teeth which he had to keep clenched so they wouldn't rattle out. "A cog-railroad," he muttered thoughtfully.

"Or a tunnel," suggested Janet.

They only had five spills that time and lost several patches of skin, but they soon reached the Barnes' farm and were greeted joyfully by the children.

"Kids," said Walter solemnly, "we're going to build a big tunnel."

Of course, the Barnes children were delighted with the idea. There were six of them, but only Herbie, Grace and Albert were old enough to build a tunnel. Janet thought the tunnel was not a good idea.

"I don't like being under the ground," she objected.

Still she helped with the work and by evening they had dug quite a large cave in the side of the hill. They were very much pleased with their work, but Walter remarked as they climbed home that he thought it would take too long to tunnel through the hill.

"Besides," said Janet, "we'd have to climb out awful far when we got to our house."

This had not occurred to Walter before, and it discouraged him so much that he stopped thinking about the tunnel. Instead he began thinking about ways of flying or traveling over the land.

"If I had a very long rope or cable and a strong pulley," he said, "I could rig up a thing to pull up my express wagon."

"Well, you haven't got it," said Janet. "If I had a hundred tame crows I could train them to hoist me up."

"I guess we'll have to go by shank's mare," admitted Walter. "The trouble is, we haven't anything to make things with."

Next morning, as he was at breakfast with the family, the telephone rang.

"Herbie Barnes wants to speak to you, Walt," said his aunt.

Herbie's voice quivered with excitement.

"Say," he cried, "a feller flew into our field last night. He was on his way to Boston and lost his way. Come right down and you'll have a good look at an airplane."

Walter was too excited to finish his meal, and his uncle let him go right over.

"We'll all be down later," he said. "Not every day in the week there's a chance to see an anrplane."

But when Walter reached the Barnes' farm, the pilot was all ready to go. He was just in time to walk around the machine admiringly.

Z-z-z-z! went the motor, but the airplane did not budge. Again it buzzed, but there was nothing doing, and the owner leaned out and shouted:

"One of you boys give the propeller in back a turn, won't you?"

The motor was making such a noise that Herbie and his father did not catch the words, but Walter, whose ears were uncommonly large and sharp, sprang forward eagerly and took hold of the propellers in the back and gave them a turn. Before he knew what was happening, the machine suddenly rose into the air and he found himself looking down on the top of the Barnes' farmhouse.

The cries of those below were drowned by the roar of the motor. Up soared the airplane and the boy, who was now wondering if he could hang on all the way to Boston.

The driver soon realized that something was wrong with his plane, and when he reached the top of the hill, he saw a nice wide meadow and decided to stop. Slowly and carefully he circled about like a big bird and then came gently to rest in the field. As he stepped out of the airplane, Walter ran around from the back of the machine, rubbing his wrists.

"Great Caesar's ghost!" cried the man. "How did you get here so fast?"

When Walter explained the matter to him, he was a very surprised man. Then the Jenkins family came rushing out of the house, having seen the airplane just as Mr. Barnes was telling them over the 'phone that Walt had gone up, headed for Boston.

Janet threw her arms around her beloved cousin, sobbing. Mr. Jenkins said rather sternly to the young driver: "It's a wonder you wouldn't look around before you go up." Mrs. Jenkins put a large sugary doughnut into her nephew's hand.

"Of course, I'm awfully sorry," said the pilot. "But let me tell you, I think you have a wonderful boy there. To think that he had the courage to hang on that way! And when he came around the plane, he was as cool as a cucumber. I think he's going to make a good pilot some day. It happens that I own this machine and another one besides. It's my hobby, flying is. Maybe you'll let this fellow take a real ride with me. He deserves it."

Never was a boy more happy. What a time he had soaring up in the clouds, balancing and dipping and turning, like a hawk with a sparrow after him! At last they came to rest once more in the field, and the airplane flew away to Boston. But the young owner, Mr. Crompton, promised Walter that when he was old enough and still wanted to, he would see that he got a chance to learn flying.

"Well," said Janet, as the two set off for the Barnes' farm where their friends waited eagerly for Walter's story of his adventure, "now you've come up the hill in the air, and how did you like it?"

Walter laughed.

"I wasn't much scared at the time," he said; "it happened so quickly and was over so soon. But now when I think of trailing through the sky with nothing under my feet, I get the shivers. I guess shank's mare isn't such a bad way to travel after all. But some day I'm going to take you up this hill with the stick in my hand."

And Walt looked up in the sky, dreaming great dreams of the future, and Mr. Crompton's promise was surely going to make his dreams come true.—Selected.

STICK TO IT

John Jones was eager to get a job during the summer vacation. His father had been ill and his mother had worked hard to keep John at school, and hold the little family together during the long winter months, so John scanned the list of advertisements with anxious eye and finally selecting one that he thought might be applicable to him he carefully brushed his clothes and his shoes, arranged his tie and smoothed down his hair and went forth in search of employment. He was a nice looking boy when he took his place in the long line of applicants who stood or lounged outside the door of the private office, bearing on the door the name: Frederick Gray.

At last John's turn was reached and he hurried forward. Mr. Gray looked the lad over carefully with clear kindly eyes. He asked him a few questions about his home, his parents and his schooling, all of which John answered satisfactorily and the lad's hopes rose high. Then Mr. Gray did a queer thing. He rose and taking from behind his desk a walking stick he handed it to John and said: "Do you see that nail sticking there in the wall? Let me see if you can hit it squarely on the head with this stick three times in succession. If you can, the job is yours." The nail was a small one and the walking stick was very narrow. John tried, he nearly hit it but he could not strike the nail on the head three times in succession. Chagrined he passed out of the office and the next applicant passed him on the way in. Outside stood a group of sullen, disappointed boys all speaking meanly of the man who went about engaging a boy in such a peculiar and unfair way. But John did not join them. Instead he walked home, thinking deeply as he went.

The following week the same advertisement was still appearing in the newspaper and again John Jones presented himself at the door of Mr. Frederick Gray's private office with a new lot of applicants. When his turn came he entered the office confidently, and his confidence did not waver when Mr. Gray looked at him keenly and again asked him the familiar questions. Then Mr. Gray once more reached for the walking stick and with his instructions handed it to John. John took the stick and, Whack! Again, and again! He hit the nail right on the head. Mr. Gray looked at him with pleasureable surprise.

"Aren't you the lad who was here last Friday?" he asked.

"Yes, sir," answered John.

"But then you could not hit the nail," said Mr. Gray.

"No, sir," said John, "but I got to thinking and I knew you would not have asked me to hit the nail if it were impossible to do so. I wanted the job and I made up my mind that I would try to get it. I went home and drove a nail in our back fence and I practiced hitting it with the handle of my mother's broom until I knew that I could hit it every time without a miss. Then I came back to get the job, sir. Do I get it?"

"You do," said Mr. Gray, beaming upon the boy. And I think he deserved it, don't you?—Selected.

OUR LEISURE HOURS

A boy was employed in a lawyer's office, and he had the daily papers with which to amuse himself. He began to study French, and became a fluent reader and writer of the language. He accomplished this by laying aside the newspaper and taking up something not so amusing but far more profitable.

A coachman was often obliged to wait long hours while his mistress made calls. He determined to improve the time. He found a small volume containing the writings of Virgil, but could not read it; so he purchased a Latin grammar. Day after day he studied this, and finally mastered its intricacies. His mistress came up behind him one day as he stood by the horse waiting for her, and asked him what he was so intently reading.

"Only a bit of Virgil, ma'am."

"What! do you read Latin?" she asked in surprise.

She mentioned it to her husband who insisted that David should have a teacher to instruct him. In a short time David became a learned man, and was for many years a useful and beloved minister in Scotland.

A boy was told to open and shut the gates to let the teams out of an iron mine. Sometimes an hour would pass before the teams came, and this he used so well that there was scarcely any fact in history that escaped his attention. He began with a little book on English history, and having learned that thoroughly, he borrowed of a minister Goldsmith's "History of Greece." This good man became greatly interested in him and lent him books, and was often seen sitting by him on the log conversing with him about the people of ancient times.

Boys, it will pay you to use your leisure hours well.—Young Reaper.

NO COMPROMISE POSSIBLE

The most deceptive, vicious and conscienceless apostasy that ever sought to corrupt the Churches of Christ is at work at the present time. And it does its work not under its proper guise as an enemy of the cross of Christ, but under a hypocritical cloak. Pretending to be an advanced type of Christianity, it has rejected the very heart of Christianity, which is the redemptive work of Christ and the helplessness of men in sin except as they are made righteous through the merits of His atonement.

Yet silly pacifists coddle themselves with the belief that compromise may be had with these men who reject the redemptive gospel. Our merciful God may save the churches from these devouring wolves of Modernism. We pray that He may. For as for man, how shamefully and traitorously he often fails where the honor of His Lord and Savior is the issue! Even the "best" men among God's people are not seldom leading the procession of compromise and surrender! God forgive us that we call such "best"!—The Western Recorder.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

By Grover L. Angel

President C. E. Society, High Point College

NOV. 4: IN WHAT WAYS DO WE WASTE OUR TIME?

Eph. 5:16; Ps. 90:12

(A Consecration Meeting)

Plans for the Meeting

If possible get a clock with a large second hand for the leader's desk. If desired each person may be alloted a certain amount of time for his share of the program. Ask one of the group to keep close watch on the clock while there is no one performing, tabulating the results. Multiply these by the number of members present and report to the audience at the close of the service the amount of time wasted during the program.

Suggested Program

Quiet music.

Hymn: "Work for the Night Is Coming."

Opening prayer.

Roll call, members responding with a Bible verse.

Scripture lesson.

Leader's talk.

Discussion of topics.

Special music.

Sentence prayers.

Poem.

Four-minute summary talk or essay on "The Value of Time."

Hymn: "Take Time to Be Holy."

Announcements.

Benediction.

Topics for Discussion

1. How People Waste Time in Our Community.

2. The Waste of Time in Being Too Busy.

3. Wasting Time During Our Leisure Hours.

4. Ways in Which We Waste Time in Our C. E. Society.

Thoughts on the Theme

1. Much time is wasted in the lack of concentration, reading of trashy literature, useless amusements, loafing, gossiping, and the like. Why not do things on time and in their place? "There is a time for everything," and we should not waste or detract from the better things of life because of selfish amusements and interests.

2. Each year millions of dollars are spent in installing modern time-saving devices. We are making every effort to cut the time rate. What are we doing with the time we are saving? Are we losing ourselves in the humdrum of life?

3. Surveys show that a number of years in the aferage man's life are spent in idleness. the average man's life are spent in idleness. the one who rises to the top in the world. It is said that Napolean planned one of his greatest campaigns between the acts of a play while attending the theater.

4. We have learned in our Society how to plan a budget regulating our finances. It might be well to plan a time budget for ourselves, giving the proper amount of time to the various activities of our routine, such as sleep, eating, study, recreation, work, social affairs, private devotions, etc. A good slogan is "Plan Your Work and Work Your Plan."

Appropriate Quotations

"There is nothing that we can properly call our own but our time, and yet everybody fools us out of it who has a mind to do it. If a man borrows a paltry sum of money, there must needs be bonds and securities, and every common civility is presently charged upon account. But he who has my time thinks he owes me nothing for it, though it be a debt that gratitude itself can never repay." -Seneca.

"He who cannot find time to consult his Bible will one day find that he has time to be sick; he who has no time to pray must find time to die; he who can find no time to reflect is most likely to find time to sin; he who cannot find time for repentance will find an eternity in which repentance will be of no avail; he who cannot find time to work for others may find an eternity in which to suffer for himself."—Hannah More.

"Time is the Life of the Soul."—Longfellow.

"Time is the herald of truth."—Cicero.

"Lost: Yesterday somewhere between sunrise and sunset, two golden hours, each set with sixty diamond minutes. No reward is offered; they are gone forever."—Selected.

Poetry to the Point

"I have only just a minute,
Only sixty seconds in it,
Forced upon me -can't refuse it
Didn't seek it, didn't choose it,
But it's up to me to use it,
I must suffer if I lose it,
Give account if I abuse it.
Just a tiny little minute,
But eternity is in it."

"Little Faults That Spoil Our Lives"

Scripture: Matt. 7:3-5

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

NOV. 11: PEACE AND GOOD WILL AMONG MEN

Scripture Basis: Romans 12:1-21.

Golden Text: Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good. Rom. 12:21.

Sacrifice (Verses 1, 2)

The twelfth chapter of Romans, which deals with practical Christian living, is one of the most impressive of the Pauline writings. It is a favorite of many, adopted by the Christian Endeavor organization as the expression of its principles, as well as by other organizations. Consistently following the precepts of the chapter, a man will not fall for short of a perfect being in Christ Jesus.

The first two verses deal with the surrender or sacrifice required of a Christian to come into the fulness of the life hid with God in Christ. Paul's entreaty is urgent—"I beseech you." In other words, it is absolutely necessary to present one's body a sacrifice to God, a living sacrifice. The sacrifices of old, of sheep, goats, etc., were dead sacrifices. But after the shedding of human blood for man's redemption, it became necessary for one who would be a follower of the Lamb of God to give of himself wholly, as well as holy, unto the Lord.

This presentation is brought about by being transformed from, rather than conformed to (or fashioned according to) this world. As sinners, we were conformed to the world; as Christians we are transformed from this world. And this is the only way to learn the will of God concerning us. Thus we learn that God's will is good, is acceptable (well-pleasing), is perfect.

Service (Verses 3-8)

One of the chief channels through which surrender to Christ or sacrifice of self expresses itself is service. Love begets sacrifice; sacrifice beget service. But that the service may be productive of the greatest good and merit the greatest favor of God, it must be done in humility. Humbleness of mind and soberness of thought are essential factors. Why? Because God has given to each of us the ability and capacity to serve. "God hath dealt to each man a measure of faith."

But we all do not have the same talents, nor the ability to serve along all lines. As the human body, so are we as the mystical body of Christ. Many parts make up the whole, but each part has its particular work to perform. (See I Cor., chapter 12).

Seven gifts are here recorded. Prophecy: "It is not meant of the extraordinary gifts of foretelling things to come, but the ordinary office of preaching the word." Ministry: This refers to the "office of a deacon," of which doubtless more was made than is today. "It includes all those offices which concern the outward business of the house of God." Teaching: No explanation is necessary, but how imperative it is that teachers of the Word be faithful! Exhortation: This is the work of a pastor or preacher; "to apply gospel truths and rules more closely to the case and condition of the people, and to press upon them that which is more practical." Giving: It should not be necessary to urge liberality in giving, for when one gives himself to the Lord his earthly possessions are included. The Macedonians were a good example. (II Cor. 8:1-5). Ruling: Diligence is exhorted for those who have authority in the church. Mercy: "It seems to be meant of some particular church officers, whose work it was to take care of the sick and strangers, and those were generally widows that were in this matter servants to the church." Cheerfulness was urged in this line of service.

Sincerity (Verses 9-16)

Another division of the last 13 verses of the chapter is, "The Christian and those within," (Verses 9-16), and "The Christian and those without, (Verses 17-21); in other words, the attitude of the Christian toward his brethren in Christ, and his attitude toward his enemies. However, we consider it "all our duty towards one another is summed up in one word, and that a sweet word, Love."

This love must be without hypocrisy; it must be sincere. Feigned love is false. And in order that love be the purest, the most perfect, it is imperative that evil in thought and action be abhorred, and that good be cultivated in mind and heart.

One commentator sums up the 10th through the 16th verses by giving the kinds of love that must be expressed in sincerity: "An affectionate love (Verse 10; a respectful love (Verse 10); a liberal love (Verse 13); a sympathizing love (Verse 15); a united love (Verse 16); and a condescending love (Verse 16)."

The other expressions of sincere love given here are: Diligence, fervency, service, rejoicing, patience, prayer, forgiveness, and humility. "Be not wise in your own conceits" seems to be a reiteration of verse 3, urging humbleness of mind.

Sobriety (Verses 17-21)

The clause which contains the crux of the last division of the lesson is "Be at peace with all men." (Verse 18). And to be at peace, it is necessary for one to exercise sobriety of thought and conduct. He must not practice retaliation. (Verse 17). "The reputation of the church, the honor of Christ among men, are in the hands of Christians." (Verse 17). It is not always easy to maintain peace, but the apostle exhorts that it should be done as far as possible. (Verse 18). Three interpretations of the next verse, quoted from Deut. 32:35, are given: (1) Hold your temper a while until it cools; (2) Let your opponent's anger spend itself; (3) Let God do the avenging, not you. This last seems to be the most acceptable. (Verse 19).

In the 20th verse, Paul again quotes from the Old Testament. (Prov. 25:21, 22). Who has practiced this and not received a reward that has paid for the effort a hundrel times? The reward is the humble, repentant spirit manifested by the offender, after kindness has been offered for the offense. The "coals of fire," that is, the shame for misconduct, is greater punishment than that meted out by the court. Evil cannot truly be overcome with evil; two wrongs do not make a right. Let good dominate. It is so easy to give way to the carnal nature, but it is far better to yield oneself to Christ's way.

Suppose this doctrine of peace were practiced among nations as well as among individuals, what chance would war have among the peoples of the world?

NOTICE TO ENDEAVORERS

Christian Endeavorers of North Carolina conference will be glad to know that the "Christian Endeavor Helps" for November and December will be edited by a special committee of Endeavorers of our High Point College Christian Endeavor Society.

Mr. Grover Angel, of the student body, will have supervision of the work, and we have no doubt about the success of the special committee since High Point students know how to put things over in the right way.

The Endeavorers are invited to use the "Helps" and "Notes" that appear each week in making their meetings and activities more successful.

Watch for these helps and use them.

Best wishes for all our Endeavorers.

F. L. GIBBS,
Dept. of Religious Education.

Gifts of Various Kinds

1. The first gift of fall supplies for the Home came from the ladies of our own Liberty church in the form of six splendid bedquilts. These will add comfort to our beds for children this winter. They are also getting up a nice lot of chickens.

2. The second splendid gift of a similar nature came from Bellevue Church, Pittsburgh, in the shape of two dozen splendid bath towels and 21 pairs of pillow-cases. These gifts come from near Mrs. Dixon's old home in Pennsylvania.

3. During the last week-end while we were away filling appointments in Liberty and Siler City, Mrs. J. A. Gunn, of Reidsville, sent by the hands of Dr. and Mrs. George R. Brown a box of clothing for boys which is easily worth $20.

4. About the same time Mr. John Suits, of Midway, Guilford Charge, sent a box of clothing and a chicken.

5. Mrs. W. J. Jennings, of Gibsonville, sent us several dozen lead pencils and several tablets for school work.

All these gifts are very timely, and we thank you, and may God bless you every one.

6. One day last week Mrs. P. C. Futrell, daughter of the late Rev. and Mrs. J. H. Bowman, came and presented the Home with a splendid oil painting of Miss Millie L. Bowman. This was given by the nieces and nephews of Miss Millie. She was matron and Bible teacher here for about 11 years, and she reserved the privilege of giving to the children in the Home a Bible each, as long as she lived. Some generous soul should continue these gifts.

The oil painting was contributed by Mrs. Charles A. Shoffner, Mrs. Maggie Shoffner White, Mrs. Will Bowman, Mr. Willis R. Shoffner, Mr. Roy L. Bowman, Mrs. Mana Bowman Causey, Mr. T. Grady Bowman, Mrs. Lizzie Bowman Futrell, Mrs. Bessie Bowman Sockwell, Mr. James T. Bowman, Mrs. Mary Shoffner Hornady.

These nephews and nieces have done well to honor in this way the memory of so noble a worker for God among His little ones.

Faithfully yours in Kingdom service,

A. G. DIXON.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Pilot Church.—The last quarterly meeting was held Saturday evening before Conference and a business meeting was held Sunday evening to elect the following officials for the coming year:

Superintendent, J. L. Whitaker; assistant superintendent, J. A. Allen; class leader, J. W. Watson; assistant, J. L. Whitaker; stewards, J. A. Allen, E. E. Marion, J. L. Whitaker, S. H. Marion, Jr., J. N. Dezarn, and J. F. Whitaker; church trustees, S. H. Marion, Sr., J. S. Dezarn, E. E. Marion, J. W. Watson and J. F. Whitaker; church reporter, Miss Irene Chilton. REPORTER.

Matthews Chapel, Greensville Circuit.—Matthews Chapel has not sent in a report lately, but we feel that we are receiving many blessings.

Our pastor, Rev. H. L. Powell, gave us a very interesting and helpful sermon the third Sunday morning in October, which was his last time for this Conference year. He has served the charge faithfully for five years and we are sorry to have to give him up, as we feel this is his last year with us. We pray God's blessings on him and family wherever they are called.

The fourth quarterly meeting was held at Wesley's Chapel on Saturday, October 20. The attendance was very good. Rev. A. D. Shelton gave us a fine sermon in the morning.

May we each so work and pull together that our pastor for the coming year may ever feel as one among us without fear.

Our Sunday school is very good; also the Christian Endeavor Society; yet there is still room for improvement.

With best wishes to the Herald.

(Miss) ODELL BOWEN, Reporter.

Asheville.—Brother Paschall finished his first year as our pastor this Monday night, presiding over a meeting of the Sunday school officers and teachers.

Our fourth quarterly conference last week unanimously voted to ask for Bro. Paschall's return.

Miss Eula Taylor will represent us at the Annual Conference. All claims have been paid—Pastor's salary, General Conference and Annual Conference assessments, and the local church budget.

Bro. E. H. Pratt was our volunteer "collector" three days last week, and met with a most cordial response. We are all thankful for the mercy and blessing of our Father upon us here, and we are praying for a spiritual session of the Conference.

REPORTER.

Hickory Grove.—Although we haven't been heard from in some time, this is no evidence we haven't been doing anything. Our pastor has been doing his part faithfully. He has been giving us splendid sermons all the year. We are sorry to think of this being his last appointment this year, but we hope to be so fortunate as to get him back or someone to fill his place as near as possible. Our revival meeting started the first Sunday in October and continued through Friday night. Rev. E. A. Bingham was our pulpit help. He gave us some mighty fine sermons, which everybody enjoyed hearing. We won two new souls for Christ and added one new member to our church. Although we did not win many souls for Christ, I think we all feel better and are stronger Christians. We had a large attendance at night but not so many in the afternoon, due to the busy time with the farmers. People were rather liberal with their offerings, which we all appreciated very much.

Wishing for our church a successful year's work in our Master's vineyard.

ELIZABETH GLASS, Reporter.

High Point.—A very harmonious and well-attended quarterly conference, the fourth of this year, was held Wednesday evening, October 17, with the new pastor, Rev. Roy I. Farmer, presiding. He made an excellent report considering the short time he has been with us, and gave some splendid suggestions in regard to the work, one of which was that the fiscal year be made to continue from October 1st to the same date of the following year, in order to eliminate the last-minute rush and turmoil incident to closing up the work just before Annual Conference. Another suggestion was that a special collection be taken for the poor and needy of the city on the Sundays when we celebrate the Lord's Supper. The associate pastor, Rev. E. Lester Ballard, gave a very comprehensive and encouraging report. There have been at one time 700 members, but 14 have been lost by death and removal; however, 20 new members have been added recently. As superintendent, Mr. Ballard reported that the Sunday school is in a flourishing condition, the attendance and collections being good. The C. E. Society made a splendid report through Miss Myrtle Davis. Mrs. C. L. Gray, treasurer of the Ladies' Aid Society, reported that more than $500 has been raised by this group of women during the year; the Foreign Missionary Society has contributed $562 and the Home Missionary Society, $465. Thus the women of our church have contributed more than $1,500 through these three societies, whose members are practically the same. Many words of praise and commendation were expressed for Rev. E. L. Ballard and his lovely wife for their splendid service to the church for the past two years. They have endeared themselves to all members of the congregation in no small degree as well as to many townspeople outside of the denomination. Mr. Ballard has been a very successful worker with the children through the Junior church, which holds services every Sunday morning at 11 o'clock in the Assembly room. There is an average attendance of 70 children and young people. An adjourned session of the quarterly conference is scheduled to be held this (Monday) evening. Mr. A. A. Hill is the delegate to Annual Conference at Winston-Salem.

On Sunday, October 21st, we were much pleased to receive the following new members: Mrs. Roy I. Farmer by transfer, Mary Elizabeth and Joseph Farmer, Aureal Bulla, Helen Cecil, Hazel and Louise Boyd, Marie Koonce, Polly Jenson, Vera Garmon, Leona Deal, and Mattie Ruth Guyer. May the heavenly Father bless them in our fellowship together.

The flowers in the pulpit Sunday morning were given by Mrs. Ben Moore, Miss Elizabeth Reitzel, Messrs. Richard and Brooks Reitzel in loving memory of their aunt, Mrs. Sallie B. Wilborn, who was an active and loyal member of this church for a number of years. On the preceding Sunday, Clemmons Bodenheimer, who lost his life as a result of the World War, was thus honored by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Bodenheimer.

The first Founders Day was observed by High Point College last Thursday morning with appropriate exercises. The Glee Club, under the direction of Prof. Ernest B. Stimson, with Miss Hortense Spiegell at the piano, sang two beautiful selections; Rev. Roy I. Farmer made the invocation; Dr. J. F. McCulloch gave some interesting history about the inception of the college, and told of the vigorous campaign which he waged in behalf of a college for North Carolina for 20 years, through the pages of "Our Church Record," as it was then known. His dream was realized and the boys' dormitory is called McCulloch Hall in his honor. The beloved layman, Mr. J. Norman Wills, of Greensboro, then gave a very comprehensive sketch of the history of the college, and paid high tribute to J. Calvin Roberts, of Kernersville, who bequeathed the first $10,000 by will for its establishment. This sketch was very interesting. The students, led by Charles Brooks, gave three resounding rahs for the founders. Dr. Andrews, in a well-timed talk, introduced the speaker of the hour, Dr. Harry W. Chase, president of the University of North Carolina, who in his characteristic manner delivered a forceful and timely address. He told the students to have high respect for work, and good work, too. He said it is vicious for a student to loaf through college for four years. Then he advised the boys and girls to pay respect to ideas instead of personalities such as Edison and Henry Ford have given to the world. Lastly, he stressed co-operation in living together. It was Nathanael Macon who said that he did want to live where he could see the smoke from his neighbor's chimney or hear his dog's bark, but that day is past forever. Today we live in crowded cities and thickly settled communities and the art of living together in peace and harmony is a problem. Dr. Chase made a fine impression on the large audience. Although a native of Massachusetts, Dr. Chase has become so closely identified with our state and its traditions that he seems "to the manner born," and loves North Carolina as one of her own sons. At the conclusion of his address, he left for a luncheon of the Rotary Club, where he made another address. It was a happy thought on the part of Dr. Andrews to bring Dr. Chase to High Point, for this was his first appearance here as a public speaker.

At last Sunday morning's service the pastor, Rev. Roy I. Farmer, chose for his text "For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain," from Philippians 1:21. He said that it is of little value to discover truth unless we put it to practical use. Nothing is of value in life unless we manifest Christ to others. There are several ways of attempted manifestation of Christ; by the sword or war; by the effort of sculpture; by the art of painting; by the art of song and words set to music; by sacrifice and self-denial. How do we prove Christianity? By living like Him and manifesting Him to the world. At this service Messrs. Schultheiss and Mason, of Greensboro, sang a lovely duet, "Crucifix," and the choir rendered a charming anthem, "Twilight and Dawn," by Speaks. At the evening service, Mesdames Allred and Whitesell sang "As Pants the Hart" in a beautiful manner, and the anthem was "Saviour, I Follow On." Rev. Mr. Farmer delivered the last of a series of sermons on famous texts, this having been "John Wesley's Text."

At a congregational meeting after services Sunday morning, Mr. E. L. Douglas was elected superintendent of the Sabbath school. Trustees, stewards, ushers, and different committees were elected.

The Hallowe'en social, which was planned by the C. E. Society for Monday evening, was cancelled on account of James' Hinkle's bereavement, but the usual weekly prayer meeting was held, when the topic "Making the Right Use of Our Talents," was discussed by Margaret Opal Neese as leader.

On Wednesday evening, the prayer service and teacher training class will be held. The life of Christ will be studied for the next eight weeks.

On Sunday morning, October 21st, Donald, the lovely little son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred H. Leonard, was baptized by Rev. E. L. Ballard, and it is interesting to note that the water he used in the service was brought from the Jordan river, when he made a tour of the Holy Land about three years ago.

Congratulations are being extended by many friends to Mr. and Mrs. D. Astor Dowdy upon the arrival of a little son October 24th at High Point Hospital. This young gentleman, who is also the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Perryman, will be christened James Henry Dowdy.

Asheboro.—We had a very good attendance at Sunday school yesterday. We think that we are rolling along fine.

At the 11 o'clock hour we had a large congregation. Installation of new officers who are to serve for the coming year took place at this time. This service was very impressive and will no doubt make the people feel more keenly the responsibility.

The fourth quarterly conference was held last Wednesday evening with a good many members present and right much business was transacted, and the most important of all was that the quarterly conference voted unanimously for the return of Rev. and Mrs. J. E. Pritchard. Mr. and Mrs. Pritchard have done good work in our church and community, and we hope that the Conference will send them back to us for another year.

We have had two young people to join our church recently. They are Miss Betsy Bulla and Mr. Morgan Grimes. We are always glad to see the young people come into the church.

Our pastor will leave here Tuesday for Winston-Salem to attend the Annual Conference.

Hollister, Halifax Charge.—Pastor Spencer filled his appointment here Sunday and, as usual, preached a splendid sermon. There was a very large congregation at both preaching and Sunday school. We noticed several visitors in the congregation; among them were Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Harper and three children, of Nashville, N. C. Mrs. Harper is one of our members.

The church officers were elected Sunday as follows: Class leader, Mr. G. L. Knight; stewards, Mr. Daniel Knight, Miss Kathleen Shearin, Mr. Robert Arrington, Mr. W. J. Galloway, Mr. E. T. Ellington, and Mrs. T. C. Williams; trustees, Mr. E. T. Ellington, Mr. E. L. Lee, Mr. R. A. Hardy, Mr. G. L. Knight, and Mr. Robert Arrington; pianist, Miss Estelle Ellington; assistant pianist, Miss Sallie Wood; reporter, Miss Kathleen Shearin.

Mr. Spencer and delegate, Mrs. T. C. Williams, will leave for Conference Wednesday. We are hoping and praying that this will be the best Conference ever held.

KATHLEEN SHEARIN, Reporter

Grace Church.—Sunday was communion day and a greater part of the large congregation communed. The pastor was assisted by Dr. Spahr. The doors of the church were opened and seven young boys of the 'teen age presented themselves for membership. All these boys came from Mr. F. R. Stout's class, which is composed of the 'teen age. This class, better known as the "Jinx" Class, is made up out of as fine a bunch of youngsters as can be found anywhere. Mr. Stout, the teacher, is a born leader of boys, and each one of his class is happy to be under the leadership of such a splendid character.

The Sunday before the church received into membership seven adults: Mrs. J. F. Dosier, son and daughter, from Randleman M. P. church, Mr. and Mrs. Holder from Trinity M. E. Church, Durham; Mrs. Archie Morris, Muirs Chapel M. E. Church, and Mrs. J. M. Murray.

The Sunday evening service was the beginning of a series of sermons and addresses on why the speaker belongs to a certain denomination. Rev. Milo S. Hinkle, of the Asheboro Street Friends Church, spoke on "Why I Am a Quaker." After listening to such a splendid address, those that were not Quakers went away with a deeper love for that band of great and noble Christians. The last Sunday evening in November the congregation will be addresses by Mr. R. D. Douglas, one of our city's most outstanding citizens. His subject will be "Why I Am a Catholic." These addresses will last throughout the fall and winter months and the speakers will come not only from the Protestant and Catholic, but by the rabbi and some outstanding layman of the Jewish synagogue.

These addresses are not intended to be argumentative, but that we may have a better understanding and love for other denominations.

The church has closed a very successful year and will begin the new year well organized, looking forward to a better year than the one past.

The choir, under the direction of Mr. Bynum Clapp as director, and Miss Bruton as organist, is giving splendid music at each service. The choir is very fortunate in having Miss Madge Marley, one of Greensboro's best soprano soloists. C. J., Jr.

Spring Hill.—Our revival began on October 21. Owing to the pastor being unable to be with us longer, we had only a few days' meeting, but we feel our efforts were not in vain. Six were converted, five uniting with the church. We trust others will join in the near future. Rev. D. I. Garner did most of the preaching. We enjoyed hearing him very much.

On October 24 the church officers were elected. They are: Class leader, Mr. G. J. Jones; trustees, Mr. C. O. Craven, Mr. C. L. Swaim, J. D. Collett, Mr. J. L. Craven, Mr. Colon Haynes; stewards, Mrs. H. F. Moore, Mrs. Henry Byerly, Miss Alice Haynes.

Since last writing, Miss Bessie Swaim and Miss Alice Haynes entertained the primary and junior classes with a picnic and outing, all enjoying the occasion very much.

Our new church is now nearing completion. We are thankful to the One who maketh all things possible. May God's richest blessings rest on every one that has given of their means and time. Especial mention should be given Mr. C. O. Craven, who has been so faithful in the Lord's work. We believe he is sending up good material for a home eternal in the heavens.

Please pray for us in this great work.

REPORTER.

Chestnut Ridge, Orange Charge.—Yesterday was the last regular service of the Conference year. Brother Williams preached a splendid sermon, as usual.

The last quarterly conference was held at Chestnut Ridge church Saturday P. M.; there was a very good attendance. The conference voted for the return of the present pastor, and we hope the Annual Conference will see fit to send him and his family back to us, for we have learned to love them and we feel like we can't let them leave us.

We are behind some on pastor's salary, but we hope before Conference it will be paid in full.

The Sunday school is moving along very nicely under the leadership of Mr. J. T. Hobbs, but the attendance could be lots better.

Two new members have been received into the church here since the revival meeting closed.

May God richly bless the Annual Conference, and make this the best Conference year yet. ANNIE SQUIRES, Reporter.

Tabernacle, Tabernacle Charge.—A splendid Rally Day program was given Sunday at 11 o'clock, which consisted of recitations, exercises by the children, and the play, "The Call to Prepare." Those taking part in the play were Misses Violet Hanner and Kate Garrett, Messrs. Glen Stancil, Cecil Fields, Worth Trogdon and Howard Neece. The offering amounted to $26.70.

Our Sunday school superintendent for the coming year is Cecil M. Fields; assistant, Mrs. Ed Coble; secretary, Glen Stancil, and treasurer, Henry Royal.

R. L. Jones is delegate to Conference. We earnestly hope for the return of our present pastor.

Among our church visitors Sunday were Thomas Neece and family, of Shady Grove Church. REPORTER.

Woman's Missionary Department

METHODIST PROTESTANT CHILDREN'S HOME, HIGH POINT, N. C.

Mrs. Wm. C. Hammer

(The following history of the Methodist Protestant Children's Home has been prepared for use in missionary meetings and church services for Thanksgiving, at which time it is hoped every Methodist Protestant will contribute the sum equal to one day's earnings. From this source comes the largest amount of money contributed during the year, and after 16 years there are many needs. With Dr. and Mrs. A. G. Dixon in charge of the Home, its continued success is assured).

The Children's Home at High Point, North Carolina, is a work in which the whole church has become interested. The work was begun by the North Carolina Branch of the Woman's Missionary Society, August, 1910, with less than $50 in the treasury, in an old schoolhouse at Denton, which was adjoining a Methodist Protestant high school. The reason for the location at this place was that the building might be secured free of rent and that tuition would be given to as many children as might be gathered. The Home was equipped by various churches' and missionary societies' furnishing the different rooms, and it was supported in its early days by dues from the missionary societies (special arrangements having been made with the Woman's Board of Home Missions), personal pledges, Sunday school offerings, and contributions of money on Thanksgiving.

The reason which prompted the establishment of the Children's Home was that there were more than eight thousand orphan children who were not being cared for in institutions in North Carolina.

It may be of interest to note that the plan of giving the sum equal to one days' earnings on Thanksgiving for the children which was inaugurated by the trustees of the Children's Home, was so favorably received by the people of North Carolina that the governor of the state, in his Thanksgiving proclamation each year asks that every citizen contribute to some orphanage.

It was but a short time after the establishment of the Home at Denton before the building was crowded with bright, sprightly children, and it became necessary for the missionary society to consider expanding. Consequently some of the leading men of the Methodist Protestant Church were invited to meet with them. A committee was appointed and an announcement was made that a permanent location would have to be secured. A farm of 38 acres, one mile from High Point on the national highway, was purchased, and a modern building with all conveniences was erected at a cost of $30,000.

Until the time that the Home was moved, Miss Mabel Williams as matron and Miss Etta Auman and Mrs. W. J. Page, assistants, managed the children. At this time Mr. H. A. Garrett was employed as superintendent and Mrs. Garrett as matron. Too much can not be said of Mr. and Mrs. Garrett and their splendid management and the wholesome training given the children. After 11 years of service Mr. and Mrs. Garrett resigned and were succeeded by Rev. and Mrs. E. G. Lowdermilk, who were also untiring in their efforts to care for the enterprise which has always been close to their hearts. Upon their resignation three years ago Dr. and Mrs. E. F. Allman took up the work and through their persistent conscientious efforts continued the splendid work until September 1st, this year, when they resigned and were succeeded by Dr. and Mrs. A. G. Dixon, who have been loyal supporters and interested from the small beginning at Denton. While Mrs. Dixon has for many years been a member of the board of trustees, Dr. Dixon during the five years he was president of the North Carolina Conference, by virtue of his office, was also a member of the Board of trustees, under whom the institution is controlled.

Too much cannot be said of those who have given of their time in the management of the Home and it is little wonder that the institution has prospered as it has under the guidance of such splendid, consecrated people. This has been true of all who have served in any way.

In 1922-23 a boys' dormitory was erected, largely through the generosity of Messrs. George T. and J. C. Penny, who contributed one-half the cost of the building. From time to time more land has been purchased. The farm now comprises 130 acres, most of which is in cultivation. Mr. J. A. Dixon, who was for a time in charge of the farm, has returned and will supervise the work of the boys, who will assist in all of the farm work, caring for the splendid herd of Holstein cows, the hogs and other live stock. The girls are also taught to sew, cook and do general household work, and they also operate the modern steam laundry.

Since the opening of the Children's Home, 150 children have been admitted, representing 51 families from North Carolina, Maryland, Ohio, Pittsburgh and Michigan conferences. At the age of 18 years the young people are dismissed from the Home and are assisted in securing positions for which they seem fitted. Among those who have gone out, many are filling responsible positions and are reflecting credit on the institution. While children of Methodist Protestant parents are given preference, no child is denied admittance on account of religious faith. The greater number of the children are fatherless, and many have neither parent living. It costs approximately $240 per year for the support and maintenance of each child. Ninety per cent of the Sunday schools of our denomination in North Carolina contribute monthly to the support of the Home. Many Sunday school, missionary and aid societies, and individuals outside of the state send contributions regularly. A small amount is also assigned on percentage basis from the General Conference budget.

The education of the children has at all times been carefully considered. At present a most satisfactory arrangement is employed by having the primary and elementary grades taught in the home and the high school students sent to Jamestown, only a few miles distant. For those talented in music, lessons have been arranged. With High Point College only a stone's throw away, higher education may be secured by practically all who aspire. Especial emphasis has been placed on the study of the individual child in order to develop personality.

The institutional spirit which is prevalent at the majority of orphanages is not found at the Children's Home; but on the other hand is found a splendid parental interest which follows the young people, not only to the end of their lives in the Home, but after they enter the different fields for which they are prepared.

MARRIED

Ogburn-Holland

Of special interest in Maryland and North Carolina was the wedding on September 8 of Miss Dorothy Eleanor Holland, of Marion, Md., to Richard Lee Ogburn, of Summerfield, N. C., which occurred at 8 o'clock in the morning at the country home of the bride's parents.

The home was exquisitely decorated in the colors yellow and green, tall yellow dahlias and ivy being artistically arranged to form an arch, and the scene was lighted by tall yellow candles.

Prior to the ceremony, Miss Althea Davis, a student at Peabody, sang Cadman's "At Dawning," and "I Love You Truly." Miss Betty Fiedler, of Erie Pa., who teaches music at the University of Maryland, played the wedding music.

Miss Nell Parsons, of Easton, Md., was the bride's only attendant. The bride entered with her father, Charles A. Holland, who gave her in marriage. She was met at the altar by Mr. Ogburn, attended by his best man, Marvin Chalk, of Towson, Md., and the ceremony was performed by Rev. Cronston Riggin, of Pikesville, Md.

Following the wedding, the bridal party, relatives and friends, were entertained at a wedding breakfast.

Mrs. Ogburn is the pretty and charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Holland. She is a member of an old and prominent Eastern Shore family. She is an alumnus of Western Maryland College, Westminster, Md., and since leaving school she has taught in the city schools of Salisbury, Md.

Mr. Ogburn is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Ogburn, of Summerfield, N. C. He is an alumnus of Oak Ridge Military Institute and Western Maryland College, Westminster, Md. He is in partnership with his father in the milling business.

After a motor trip to Philadelphia, Atlantic City, Niagara Falls, Canada, and other places of interest, Mr. and Mrs. Ogburn will be at their new home, which is almost complete at Summerfield, N. C.

—Bro. W. F. Grabbs suggests that all churches hold weekly prayer meetings to pray for our country. That would be a good move to make. Such prayer should be offered whether meetings are held or not. Praying would so change people that they would not be willing to vote for immoral men for public office.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Cooper

Mrs. Alice A. Cooper, wife of W. B. Cooper, died September 30, 1928, at her home in Siler City.

She is survived by her husband and children, also sisters, brothers and other relatives.

She was a consistent member of Piney Grove M. P. church; ever having the interest of her church at heart and first in importance.

Mrs. Cooper was widely known in Chatham and the surrounding counties. She gained her many friends through the true Christian spirit, her lovable disposition and her strong character.

Funeral services were conducted at Piney Grove church by her pastor, Rev. C. G. Isley, assisted by Dr. A. G. Dixon and the pastor of the M. E. church at Siler City, Mr. McManus. The large number present at the funeral and the numerous beautiful floral designs attested the love and esteem in which she was held in the hearts of her friends and relatives.

May God comfort those who mourn their loss.

C. G. ISLEY.

Foster

Thedore Foster, the 15-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. James F. Foster, departed this life October 15, 1928. Many hearts were saddened at the news of his death. Theodore was a kind and obedient boy and was loved by many. He took a great interest in his Sunday school and church, and was always there when possible. He joined Dulins Methodist Protestant church last July.

Theodore is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James F. Foster, three sisters, Leona, Sallie and Geneva; three brothers, William, Charlie and Spurgeon.

This was a sad shock to the family and we extend our sympathy to his friends and loved ones. Many friends expressed their sympathy with flowers, which made a large and beautiful floral offering.

The funeral service was conducted Tuesday afternoon by his pastor, Rev. J. W. Braxton, at the M. E. church of Advance, N. C., after which the body was interred in the Advance cemetery.

—A few days ago the death of Evangelist Torrey was announced. He died in Asheville, N. C. He was prominent in the rank with Moody years ago. We heard him preach in Winston while Rev. G. F. Millaway was pastor there and while Mr. Taft was president of the United States. He spoke of the vanity of worldly fame one day, saying that in a very few years Mr. Taft's name would scarcely be mentioned, though at that time it was on the first page in nearly every daily paper.

Little Jane—I s'pose I ought to be looking for a husband now, Auntie.

Old Maid—Why, dear?

Little Jane—I heard daddy say you'd been looking for one for 20 years, so I'd better begin early.—Pathfinder.

SONG OF THE SUDWAY

(New York, 6 P. M.)

By Grenville Kleiser

Jam them in, slam them in,
Keep the thing a-humming,
Ram them in, cram them in,
People still a-coming!
Millionaires, stenographers,
Office boys and editors,
Managers and auctioneers,
Entry clerks and engineers,
Wall Street men, optometrists,
Osteopaths and journalists,
Nondescripts and working men,
Seventeen and three-score-ten,
Crush them in, rush them in,
People still a-coming!

Show them in, throw them in,
Many more to follow,
Shoot them in, boot them in,
Don't take time to swallow!
Pretty maid and tailor-made,
Slylish maid and homely maid,
Jersey maid and ready-made,
Housemaid and old maid!
Billionaire and pauper air,
Bald head and golden hair,
Native born and foreign race,
All alert and vacant face!
Sqteeze them in, tease them in,
More and more to follow.

Bump them in, dump them in,
People should not worry.
Face them in, chase them in,
Every one must hurry.
Take a place behind the gate,
Get your clothes prest while you wait,
Grab a seat, don't give a rap
For the lady at the strap.
If your life is spared till night
You can tell you wife all right;

How the gateman pushed them in,
Piled them in, filed them in,
Backed them in, packed them in,
Coaxed them in, hoaxed them in,
Tossed them in, bossed them in,
Put them in, foot them in,
Paired them in, stared them in,
Hauled them in, bawled them in,
Drubbed them in, clubbed them in,
Poked them in, stoked them in,
Steered them in, jeered them in,
Called them in, mauled them in,
Took them in, shook them in,
Passed them in, massed them in,
Booed them in, shooed them in,
Dared them in, scared them in,
Slipped them in, tripped them in,
Talked them in, walked them in,
Drew them in, threw them in,
Rapped them in, snapped them in,
Urged them in, scourged them in,
Stacked them in, whacked them in,
Cuffed them in, stuffed them in,
Rolled them in, bowled them in,
Pitched them in, switched them in,
Brought them in, fought them in,
Hurled them in, whirled them in,
Knocked them in, locked them in,
To speed them homeward going!

A SAD AND DISTRESSING CALAMITY

The deplorable tragedy, which startled and shocked the entire city of High Point last Sunday morning, has cast a spell of gloom and sadness over our congregation. The church has lost an active and highly esteemed member, Mr. James W. Hinkle, who was a steward and secretary of the quarterly conference, and the Sabbath school and Junior church have been bereft of two dear, sweet children, Virgil, aged 10 years, and his lovely little sister, Elizabeth, who was only eight. God truly "moves in a mysterious way;" we stand appalled at this strange dispensation of Providence, and can but wonder why He permits these shocking calamities to happen. We know that always "His ways are just and His counsels wise," and "sometime we'll understand" when the mists of earthly vision have cleared away. "Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff, they comfort me."

Funeral services for the three deceased members will be held Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock from the First church, with the following ministers officiating: The pastor, Rev. R. I. Farmer, the associate pastor, Rev. E. L. Ballard, and former pastors, Dr. Geo. R. Brown, of Reidsville, and Rev. P. E. Lindley.

To Mrs. Hinkle and her son, James, the heartfelt love and deepest sympathy of our entire membership are extended, and we commend them to the gracious Heavenly Father, who has promised, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee," praying earnestly that God's grace may be sufficient for them and that they may feel His tender, loving care and protection about them, knowing that "Underneath are the Everlasting Arms."

"I know not where His islands lift
Their fronded palms in air;
I only know I cannot drift
Beyond His love and care."

High Point, October 30, 1928.

YOUTH DRINKING LESS

The widespread propaganda to the contrary notwithstanding, the records show that drinking is going out of vogue with youth, says W. G. Calderwood. Judge Mary M. Bartelme, of the Chicago Children's Court, stated recently : "In 1913, when I began to hear girls' cases, as many as eight or ten girls were brought to me every week on the charge of being intoxicated. I doubt if I now have one in three months. They have almost disappeared."

—"The school lunch is of great importance," says Miss Mary Thomas, nutrition specialist at State College. "About one-fourth of the food for a day should in the lunch-box and to balance this food so that the child will be well nourished, some planning is necessary. The well-planned lunch will contain milk in some form, a substantial food, usually in the form of sandwiches, some fruit or vegetables, a fat, preferably in the form of butter, and a sweet in the form of simple cakes or fruits."

Son: Pop, what is the difference between a dialogue and a monologue?

Pop: When two women talk it's a dialogue; but when a woman carries on a conversation with her husband, it's a monologue.

ARMISTICE DAY PROCLAMATION—1928
By the Governor

To the People of North Carolina:

Ten years ago a broken world laid aside the implements of war and turned its face toward peace. The signing of the Armistice on November 11, 1918, followed the most sanguinary struggle in the history of the human race. For four years Europe had been bathed in blood. While the actual fighting was confined for the most part to that continent, the effects of that struggle were felt throughout the realm of civilization. It was a world experience.

America's participation in the fight for supremacy, waged between autocracy and democracy, undoubtedly hastened its conclusion. We called the result a victory. From a material standpoint it was; but unless the spiritual ideals of those whose souls were dedicated to the cause of world peace shall prevail, the millions who perished in Europe died in vain.

With the Great War a decade behind us, we are confronted today with our peace-time problems. The hardships and privations of war should have taught us self-mastery.

If there remains among us a spirit of antagonism toward those who hold the diversified viewpoints that must always exist among a free people; if the spirit of brotherhood has not been promoted to a point where we can disagree and, at the same time, exercise a spirit of tolerance; if individual differences of opinion are to bring about internal strife and conflict, then selfishness is the shrine at which we worship and the blood that was spilled in behalf of universal liberty and freedom of thought has lost its spiritual significance.

Composite humanity comprised the armies that marched forth on the battlefields of Europe. Men of all nationalities, of all creeds, fought and died shoulder to shoulder. Differences of personal opinion faded into insignificance. In that great melting-pot, humanity refined its gold and discarded its dross. One purpose dominated the hearts of those who presented themselves living sacrifices to democracy and universal brotherhood.

It again becomes my duty, under the law, to issue my proclamation giving official recognition to the eleventh day of November. But this is more than a duty. It is a sacred privilege. As we approach this tenth anniversary of that significant event which took place in the fall of 1918, I urge our people to give serious consideration to what the day really means and to prepare their hearts for a fitting observance. To do this, we must banish from our minds all malice; we must forget our differences, remembering those those who left the shores of America to do battle for democracy know no creed but patriotism; that they were all moved by the same sublime motives.

Armistice Day this year falls on the Sabbath. Hence, its observance must be conducted in a dignified manner and for the most part in houses of worship. Secular and military celebrations will follow on Monday.

Where it is consistent with their order of service, I respectfully urge the ministers of the various churches to make such reference to Armistice Day as they may deem proper and that they request the congregations committed to their charge to observe a period of silence, from 11 o'clock until two minutes past eleven. This should in no way interfere with any service, but will constitute a splendid preface to regular worship. This period of silence should be spent in prayer and meditation; prayer for those in whose hearts the wounds of war have not yet healed, and meditation on the grave problems which confront this Christian nation today.

Armistice Day should not be a day of mourning but one of rejoicing; not a day of boasting but of introspection. We should search our hearts, weigh our motives, and seek to banish from our lives those unwholesome traits which tend to mar good citizenship. If we do this, we will emerge better equipped to serve humanity and fight the battles of peace with clean hands and pure hearts.

Done in the City of Raleigh, this the 1st day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twenty-eight, and in the one hundred and fifty-second year of our American independence.

ANGUS W. McLEAN,
Governor of North Carolina.

Shocking Tragedy in High Point.—Last Saturday afternoon Brother J. W. Hinkle of First Church, High Point, took his two younger children out in his automobile. Not returning at night, alarm was excited and an all-night search instituted. Early the next morning the dead bodies of all three were found in the woods near together, with a pistol lying near. It is supposed that ill health caused the terrible deed. There are left of the family Mrs. Hinkle and the older son, aged 16. How keen must be their distress, but they will have many sympathizing friends.

Looking Back to Conference

For nearly a year we have been looking forward to the meeting of our Annual Conference in Winston-Salem. Now we are looking back to it. Its work has been done, its impressions made. Its work was earnest and we trust results will prove that it was wisely directed. Changes in pastoral relations may awaken misgivings for a time, but after readjustments have been made all new relations may be found as pleasant and as advantageous to the work of the church as were the old. So may it be. New pastors and new flocks may make it so.

One of the impressions that will abide with members of the conference was the impression made by the entertainment received. The Winston people know how to entertain a conference. Without fuss or hurry or worry they entertained us in a most satisfactory manner. Their success in this matter is partly due to the capability of the chairmen of the Entertainment Committee, Bro. R. N. Hauser. In our vote of thanks for favors received most prominent in our minds were our hosts and their representative, Bro. Hauser.

Of course we were impressed with the fact that Winston-Salem, though a sort of Siamese twins town, is really a very active city, one of the most active in the state. Loafers would find its streets very dangerous and uncomfortable, for they would have to hustle to keep from being run over.

We were impressed, too, with the inspirational and devotional addresses that were made outside the special range of conference business. Dr. Broomfield's addresses on Evangelism were moving indeed. How it must have inspired the preachers to be told that a great railroad man drawing an immense salary and filling a position of great responsibility said to Dr. Broomfield: "You ministers have the greatest job in the world!" Dr. Feeman's devotional talks reached the deepest depths of the heart, and reminded one most forcibly of Mr. Gordon's Quiet Talks. Then Bishop Rondthaler, 86 years old but with mental faculties alert, inspired us all by his brief address to the conference.

We will remember the general agents, as we used to call them, and their brief appeals and reports. They impressed us with the greatness and urgency of the work of the denomination. The field work of the denomination was never better manned before. Broomfield, Straughn, Haddaway, Little made strong appeals for our co-operation in the work of our church as a whole.

Dr. Elderdice came and laid upon our hearts again the need of the school of the prophets, the seminary. His geniality and his hopefulness always secure sympathy and in the long run help. He always asks in such a way that he can ask again.

Dr. Andrews, President of High Point College, appealed for the help of our people in paying balances on running expenses. Until the college is endowed deficits in running expenses may be expected every year. These deficits with economical management will not be large enough to be alarming unless they are neglected and allowed to accumulate. A little subsidy each year from the church will enable the college to hold up its head and do its work, but the impossible should not be expected of the college. Some of our people did not vote to build the college and did not contribute toward the building fund, but that should not prevent their helping to support the college now that it has come. The child that was not wanted may become an object of great affection and a source of pleasure. Please respond to the appeal and help High Point college that it may not be interrupted in its important work for Christ and the Methodist Protestant Church.

We were impressed with the spirit of fraternity shown by several denominations through the visit of their ministers to our body. One of these at least, Dr. Barnhart, came as an appointed fraternal messenger from his church, the M. E. Church, South. His speech was most happy.

We were impressed with the unanimity of our conference regarding the prohibition of the liquor traffic. The opposition to having a wet country and wet office-holders seemed to be absolutely unanimous. The election will be over before this reaches our readers, but however it goes you may know that our preachers and our laymen generally are opposed to efforts to reinstate rum. They want John Barleycorn to stay buried.

This conference occupied all the time. In former years we frequently heard the presiding officer say, "There is nothing before conference." This year many times there were two or more members on the floor seeking recognition. Near the end of conference a motion was made and we believe passed instructing the program committee for next conference to leave more time for the transaction of business. However, this year adjournment came only a few hours later than it usually does. Certainly the extra features were enjoyable and helpful.

We publish elsewhere the report of the stationing committee and some conference notes. Next conference is to be held in Concord, N. C., beginning Wednesday after the first Sunday in November. It was deferred a week out of deference to business men who have special duties the first Saturday and the first Monday in the month.

We should at once begin to look forward to our meeting in Concord and begin to make preparation to report a good year's work. Let us make these days and months glow with the light of our good works.

Arabs say, "All sunshine makes a desert." And they ought to know, for they are familiar with vast tracts of sand on which nothing grows. Eliphaz says in Job 15:21, "In prosperity the destroyer shall come." And Solomon says even more pointedly, in Prov. 1:32, "The prosperity of fools shall destroy them." We need clouds and storms as well as sunshine.—Selected.

GOD'S ATTITUDE TOWARD US

St. Luke, 15th chapter, points out to me the great outstanding love of God, and how Christ seeks out the lost soul and how there is joy in heaven over one sinner that repents.

Jesus said He came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repent. Now it's human nature that all of our hearts reach out for love and it's also nature that from those whom we do most for, sacrifice most for, we naturally expect most love and gratitude. Now God made this body of ours from the dust of the earth, breathed into our nostrils the breath of life, gave us everything we have or hope to have, sacrificed His only begotten Son that we might have life and have it more abundantly. Surely God expects our love and gratitude.

In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth; He made the night and the day. He made the beast of the earth and the fowl of the air. God looked upon these and said that they were good. But He saw there was yet something lacking, that He hadn't yet created anything to worship Him. God is love. God desires love. So He said, Let us make man in our own image, after our own likeness, and let them have dominion over everything that is upon the earth. How honored man ought to feel that God put confidence enough in us to give us full possession of the things that He had created on the earth, and then created us to worship Him. But when God made man, they were perfect without sin. And God blessed them. And even though man fell in the Garden of Eden, God's blessings still continue to fall on us. He is long-suffering and has no respect of person. He sends His sunshine and rain on the just and the unjust. But what brings sadness to my heart is that man is the only thing that God created that has not complied with His wish. It grieved His heart to look down upon the earth and see the wickedness of His people that He thought were going to be such a pleasure. But instead of worshipping Him, they are continuing to eat of the forbidden fruit, participating in the things God has forbidden them to do, breaking the laws of God, breaking the laws of their country. But God's love was so great as He looked down upon us He didn't wish any to be lost, but that all should come to repentance. So He gave His only begotten Son as a Savior of the world. Another grief added because He had made man.

God has an all-seeing eye. He saw His Son as He lay in the manger; there was no room in the inn for Jesus. He saw Him as He grew up and began teaching at the age of twelve, and when He preached that great Sermon on the Mount trying to turn men from their sins and from darkness into light.

He saw His Son as they laid hands on Him in the Garden and led Him to be tried for His life. They spat upon Him, smote Him with their hands, made a crown of thorns and placed it upon his brow, and in the end crucified Jesus, a man in whom they could find no fault. Surely this too grieved God's heart. But He allowed all this to draw the hearts of men to Him that He had made in His own likeness. And today Jesus is at the right hand of God making intercession for us. And whosoever believeth on Him shall not perish but have everlasting life.

AMERICA SEEN THROUGH GERMAN EYES

(Review of America Seen Through German Eyes, by Dr. Arthur Feiler, editor of Frankfurter Zeitung; The New Republic, New York City)

By Ernest H. Cherrington, LL.D., Litt.D.
Director of Department of Education, Anti-Saloon League of America

Dr. Arthur Feiler, editor of the Frankfurter Zeitung, in his new book, America Seen Through German Eyes (published by the New Republic) is amazing for his voluminous accuracy and for his sympathetic understanding of this nation. One wonders how Dr. Feiler ever was able to gather all the data he has assembled in this book and, still more, how he was able to so digest it that he presents it in the most human and interesting fashion. Many Americans, even travelled Americans, can learn much about their own land from this keen-eyed, fair-minded and delightfully conversational visitor. Especially interesting are his discussions of American prosperity and our economic problems, these two themes comprising two-thirds of the book. Dr. Feiler does not adopt the common European fallacy that America's wealth is due to the war, but affirms:

"It should, however, be remembered in this connection that for the United States the war did not result in war profits only, enormous as they may have been, for at the same time America was granting loans to the allies and was spending large amounts herself for war purposes, so that she was assuming tremendous debts, which are now being redeemed. It should also be remembered that American citizens, especially those who were wealthy, were taxed very heavily because of America's participation in the war." To this he adds: "It is a fact of the utmost importance that labor, too, is participating in this general prosperity."

Many Americans will wonder at this dictum: "Spaciousness is the ruling symbol of American life: spaciousness, loneliness and emptiness." Equally curious seems his conviction that the automobile is the cure for loneliness in America, while in Germany they cure it with beer. Dr. Feiler writes: 'This inner loneliness is hard to satisfy; it is easier to bury it beneath some superficial interest than it is to cure it fundamentally. The average American (like the average European of today), at any rate, finds it more convenient to hide this feeling of discontent under some outward activity. The rapid development of the automobile industry reflects this growing demand for an interest which will at least give him something to do. . . . A little more gasoline was distributed, per capita, in America than beer was consumed in Bavaria, where the per capita consumption of beer in 1912 amounted to 238 liters, while the average German throughout the Reich as a whole was satisfied with 100 liters of liquor (beer, not gasoline) per annum. The sale of books, both before the war and after, was smaller in both countries than the sale of beer or gasoline."

Dr. Feiler pays much attention to the prohibition issue. In one place he writes:

"Prohibition, which has probably exercised a more far-reaching influence on morality than any other regulation affecting private life in America, is chiefly due to the women's efforts.

"Germans returning home after a visit in America frequently take a mischievous delight in telling about the many drinks they enjoyed in the United States, where, despite prohibition, they had many opportunities to secure alcoholic beverages. Many Germans believe, therefore, that prohibition in America has failed completely. This is the prevailing attitude in Germany, where the progress of prohibition throughout the world is either discredited altogether or ironically scorned. Soon we Germans may have the doubtful glory of taking the lead among civilized European nations, as far as our freedom in unlimited alcohol traffic is concerned. . . .

"Such negative opinions do not give a true picture of the real facts of the success of the movement. It is true, of course, that prohibition has not been entirely successful and this is only natural, for its administrators are not powerful enough to enforce it completely. Exceptional cases, in which the sale of alcohol is legal, have made it possible for many people to circumvent prohibition. Wine for medical purposes or for church sacraments, permitted despite prohibition, is doubtless more popular now than it was before the amendment went into effect. There are plenty of legitimate and illegitimate 'old' stocks of alcoholic beverages on hand in the country. Homebrew (the Italians are particularly versed in the domestic manufacture of wine) is permitted within limits and the temptation to surpass them is great. America's frontiers above all are so extensive and her ports so numerous that a complete supervision is impossible.

After referring to the bootleggers and recognizing the difficulties in enforcement of the law, Dr. Feiler finds:

"One typically American reason why prohibition will stay is the fact that it abolished saloons and suppressed this source of political and moral corruption, which had been poisoning American life. Many saloon owners were the agents and henchmen of corrupt political bosses whose campaigns were organized in the saloons themselves, which were also the recruiting quarters of all kinds of criminals. American life was tremendously purified when these institutions, which had been a real pest, were exterminated. The abolition of the saloons was a benefit to the country which none of the unfavorable effects of prohibition can counteract."

He sums up his general observations concerning prohibition in a very careful analysis as follows:

"The saloons were fatal to labor. Innumerable workers wasted their hard-earned wages and ruined their families by just 'stopping for a moment' on their way home to have 'one glass' of liquor, which so often ended with a 'round of drinks.' . . . It is the consensus of opinion in America that prohibition has greatly stimulated the progress of labor, not only because the worker has learned to save the money which he might otherwise have spent on drink, but because his general sobriety has increased his efficiency and enabled him to earn higher wages. Socially this has been the most important result brought about by prohibition and it is an achievement which other countries should consider as well.

"Some distinguished American political economists very largely attribute the recent increase of production as well as the post-war prosperity in general to prohibition, and that their opinion is shared by a great many people is indicated by the fact that some of the large employers' and workers' organizations are now unitedly supporting prohibition because they consider it a vital factor in the maintenance of the country's wealth, and the workers' efficiency; they believe that prohibition has helped to increase the country's purchasing power and has contributed towards the rise in wages and the increased productivity of industry which has continued despite these high wages. Business interests as a whole are no longer opposed to prohibition. The saloons have been replaced by shops of various kinds. The breweries have readjusted their output and are manufacturing canned goods, ice or ice cream. Even the wine-growers are satisfied, for their grapes are sold as raisins or as ingredients for homebrew at high prices, made possible because, under prohibition, foreign wines cannot be imported into America.

"Despite an extensive smuggling trade in alcoholic beverages, and despite the bootleggers, prohibition has quite evidently markedly decreased the consumption of alcohol in the United States. Even individuals who complain a great deal about this curtailment of their personal liberty are very economical with their stocks of alcohol, which is, after all, very hard to obtain, at least of good quality. The number of individuals revolting against prohibition is smaller than it was at first and is still diminishing; even in their homes these people now frequently serve only one cocktail to each guest. In other private social gatherings alcohol is no longer consumed at all, and at public dinners it is, of course, excluded, so that now most Americans drink very little. The great masses of the people will become more and more accustomed to doing without drink altogether and there are many who are already accustomed to abstinence. American life is being tamed by prohibition as well as by other things, and the women and especially children are deriving the benefits of this development. The consideration of them, and the coming generation which needs protection, is the strongest moral support of prohibition. This consideration of the children is more impressive and more important than all other economic or social factors which have supported the prohibition movement."

Those who fail to read this book will miss one of the most entertaining and informing portrayals of American life that has ever been written by a visitor to our shores.

WHAT THE AMERICAN RED CROSS HAS ACCOMPLISHED DURING THE LAST YEAR

1. In Porto Rico the American Red Cross has a half million homeless and destitute persons under its care, and in Florida there are 50,000 persons looking to it for assistance as a result of the tropical hurricane which swept out of the Caribbean Sea in September and cut a path of destruction over a 1,500-mile course. A relief fund of about $5,500,000 has been raised with which the organization is preventing intense suffering and in many instances actual starvation.

2. During the organization's fiscal year which closed June 30th it gave assistance following 88 disasters, 66 of which were in this country and 22 abroad.

3. Its workers in nearly 3,000 chapters in the United States have assisted an average of 40,500 service and ex-service men each month, helping them to settle government claims and procure hospital treatment and seeing that their families did not suffer while these claims were pending. At the same time Red Cross workers in camps and hospitals assisted an average of nearly 16,000 men each month and arranged during the year more than 22,000 recreation and entertainment events.

4. Carrying on civilian activities only where there is no other agency to do it—mostly in small towns and rural sections—the Red Cross has assisted more than 10,000 families during the year.

5. In communities throughout the United States and in our insular and foreign possessions, its 745 public health nurses have been fighting disease and suffering and improving the health standards of the nation. They have made more than a million visits to homes during the year to care for the sick and protect the well. Eight hundred and seventy-four thousand school children have been inspected and given assistance in having their physical defects corrected.

6. Nearly 60,000 women and girls have been taught, in the organization's Home Hygiene and Care of the Sick classes, how to give home care to the sick in their homes and how to prevent sickness by the proper care of the home and the family.

7. In their fight against malnutrition, the cause of many physical defects in children and adults, the organization has given nutrition instruction to 128,000 persons, of whom 122,000 were children.

8. With 90,000 persons a year dying as a result of accidents, the American Red Cross is waging a nation-wide campaign to reduce this annual loss of life. In the last twelve months it has instructed more than 150,000 persons in the United States in first aid for the injured, while the number of persons enrolled in its life-saving corps after receiving intensive instruction in methods for rescuing and reviving the drowning persons, has reached nearly 174,000. During the year it has also given more than 4,000 lectures and demonstrations for the furtherance of this campaign.

9. In addition to helping with the administrative and other phases of the work, Red Cross volunteers have during the year produced more than a quarter of a million garments and two and a quarter million surgical dressings for use in disaster relief work and other contingencies. They have also transcribed 1,316 volumes into Braille, a system of raised lettering whereby the blind are enabled to read. Practically all Braille transcribing in this country is done by Red Cross volunteers.

10. The American Red Cross makes no appeals for funds during the year except following great national disasters in which cases all funds contributed are spent for relief work in the disaster for which the appeal is made. This entire program of service is financed from membership dues obtained during the roll call. In addition to this the membership funds finance many relief operations following relatively small disasters in which no special appeal is made.

GOD'S BEST GIFTS

The blessings of God come upon all mankind, but His best gifts are to the righteous. We do not refer to wealth, fame, pleasure, or any physical possession, but to His indwelling presence, with its accompanying peace and joy, to the other fruits of the Spirit which adorn and enrich the soul, to the capacity for highest usefulness which belongs only to the Christian, to the glorious foretastes of heaven which ever and anon thrill and enrapture the heart, and to the inspiring future, made bright by the precious promises of the Divine Word. Are these choicest blessings yours? If not, they may be if you will rightly seek them. There is a path through life that all may walk with Jesus, and "it shineth more and more unto the perfect day."—Selected.

Lessons from the Late Political Campaign

The campaign has been a strenuous one and it has been an instructive one. Perhaps its strenuousness has made it instructive. The way to truth is sometimes a painful way. Light has been thrown by the discussions of this campaign upon a number of truths that were before obscurely seen. There has been evident confusion regarding the religious question. Our federal constitution provides for separation between church and state, at the same time favoring the free exercise of religion and forbidding the institution of any religious tests for office. This has been taken to mean that an individual voter or campaign speaker is forbidden to refer to a man's religion when considering his fitness for office. This is now seen to be a false position. Because a voter believes in separation of church and state he may think it unwise to elect to a high office a man who does not believe in separation of church and state. After a man has been elected to office no religious test shall be applied to shut him out of the office to which he has been chosen, but this is far from saying that a voter for officers shall have no regard for the quality of a man's religion or his lack of any religion.

Another fact that emerges into prominence from this campaign is the great moral earnestness of the American people. One of the presidential candidates mistook the American people for a liquor-loving people. He could not believe that the majority of American voters really believe in letting alcoholic liquors alone. He has learned that the American people do not regard prohibition as a "damnable affliction."

Other lessons may be read out of the events of this campaign.

But now that the contest is over, it becomes us all to accept the result with good grace and devote ourselves with earnestness to the tasks yet before us. With charity for all and malice toward none, may we gird ourselves for the battle against evil and for truth and righteousness. Let all parties become one party in zeal for the things that are honest and wholesome.

THE PRESIDENT'S THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION

The season again approaches when it has been the custom for generations to set apart a day of thanksgiving for the blessings which the Giver of all good and perfect gifts has bestowed upon us during the year. It is most becoming that we should do this, for the goodness and mercy of God which have followed us through the year deserve our grateful recognition and acknowledgment. Through His divine favor peace and tranquillity have reigned throughout the land. He has protected our country as a whole against pestilence and disaster and has directed us in the ways of national prosperity. Our fields have been abundantly productive; our industries have flourished; our commerce has increased, wages have been lucrative, and comfort and contentment have followed the undisturbed pursuit of honest toil. As we have prospered in material things, so have we also grown and expanded in things spiritual. Through divine inspiration we have enlarged our charities and our missions; we have been imbued with high ideals which have operated for the benefit of the world and the promotion of the brotherhood of man through peace and good will.

Wherefore, I, Calvin Coolidge, President of the United States, do hereby set apart Thursday, the 29th day of November next, as a day of general thanksgiving and prayer, and I recommend that on that day the people shall cease from their daily work and in their homes and in their accustomed places of worship devoutly give thanks to the Almighty for the many and great blessings they have received and seek His guidance that they may deserve a continuance of His favor.

In witness whereof I hereunto set my hand and cause to be affixed the great seal of the United States.

Done at th ecity of Washington, this 23rd day of October, in the year of our Lord 1928, and of the independence of the United States the 153rd.

(Seal) CALVIN COOLIDGE.

By the President:

FRANK B. KELLOGG,
Secretary of State.

THE ABIDING PRESENCE

In John's tender record of the Master's farewell gathering of His disciples, we find him dwelling upon the permanency of communion. In chapter 14, verse 23, we read, "If a man love me, he will keep my words: and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him." It is worthy of note that the word here translated "abode," is translated "mansion" in verse two of the same chapter. What a beautiful thought it is that while the Lord is preparing a "mansion" for us yonder, he is seeking a "mansion" for himself in our hearts. It is the realization of this fact which makes Christ real to us. Only by realizing His presence may we realize Himself.

Paul realizes that these bodies of ours are "the temples of the Holy Ghost," and beseeches us to "present our bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God." But to think that we may be actually the "abode," the "mansion" of the Living God! Truly, in this thought—

"Heaven comes down our souls to greet,
And glory crowns the mercy-seat."

Do we know enough of Jesus Christ's coming to us to desire Him not only as a frequent visitor, but as a permanent guest? If He makes His "abode" with us, we must give to Him the keys of every room. He will not wait outside on washing day, nor knock again because we are at our account books, dealing with a tardy debtor, or making up our income tax papers.

What a clean-up there is when visitors are expected! And not for casual acquaintances either. If we clean up one room it will put a good enough face on things for them. It is the visitor who knows us well enough "to come to stay a while" that brings about a "spring cleaning" in the winter time. And everybody knows it when such a visitor is approaching.

When God's Spirit comes to make ready for the divine abode in the human soul, there is a cleaning up and a clearing out. Whenever Jesus comes, "it is noised that He is in the house." And if He is to come with the Father and make His abode with us, we must be ready to let the Spirit make us ready. No one can wash down the walls and make them sweet and clean as He can do it. When He has gone over us and through us there will be no cobwebs left. Are we ready to hand Him the keys of every secret thought-recess of our soul? Then Jesus is waiting to come in, to make His abode with us.—Selected.

VALUE OF CHURCH MEMBERSHIP

"Do you think a man could get to heaven without joining the church?" asked three good men of a preacher.

"I think he could."

They laughed, patted him on the back, and called him broad-minded.

"Let me ask you a question, and I want you to answer me just as quickly as I answered you," said the preacher. "Why do you want to go to heaven that way?"

They were speechless.

"Why don't you ask me another question?" suggested the preacher. 'Why don't you ask me if a man could get to England without going on a boat?"

"Well," they said, "we will ask you that. Now what is the answer?"

"I see no reason why a man could not get to England without going on a ship, provided he was a good swimmer, tied some food between the shoulders to eat on the way, had strength to buffet the waves—if a shark did not get him. And suppose you did get to England without a ship, do you think you would get there much ahead of a man who goes by ship?"—Selected.

THE CHRISTIAN'S PRESENT INHERITANCE

Many think of the Christian's inheritance as something that entirely awaits him in eternity; but in this conception they are mistaken. Glorious indeed will be the estate into the possession of which the Christian will then come, and it is well for him to keep in mind what God has prepared in the heavenly home for them that love Him. But the true disciple of Jesus has a precious inheritance in this present life which is worth vastly more than anything that the world can give. It includes conscious fellowship with the risen Lord, the communion of saints, and all the blessed fruits of the Holy Spirit: faith, peace, spiritual knowledge, moral courage, love, joy, patience, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, meekness, and temperance. Why, with such soul-wealth within his reach, need any follower of Christ account himself poor? Let us, each and all, claim in full measure these priceless treasures which the Heavenly Father would fain bestow upon us here on earth. 'If these things be in you and abound," you will be able to sing from the heart and with the sacred poet:

"I had rather be the least of those Who are the Lord's alone,
Than to wear a royal diadem
And sit upon a throne."

WHAT WORSHIP IS

To sit quiet in a pew in the house of God is not all of worship. A man's body may be in a pew and his mind and heart be a thousand miles away. Worship is concentration. Body, mind and soul fixed on God, communing with God—that is true worship. The Spirit comes into the heart of the worshiper and brings the things of God to him. He prays, praises, and becomes conscious of God. The truth is applied by the Spirit to the individual heart, and the worshiper becomes conscious that he has been sitting in a heavenly place with Jesus Christ.—Selected.

A LESSON IN COURTESY

The other day, when the 5:30 mob of a big western city was moving homeward, a wide-trousered, jaunty youth was comfortably seated amid the throng of haggard-faced business men and working men. His dainty manicured fingernails were in evidence over the margin of his newspaper. His hair was stacombed to a queen's taste. A pair of fur-lined gloves peeped from his coat pocket at the proper angle, and his atmosphere was scented with violet and talc. He was the living exponent of the haberdasher's dream.

Suddenly a quivering hand clutched the strap above him, and a greasy lunch can with the smell of sausage and stale bread rubbed against his knees. As the youth looked up, any and all predisposition to anger vanished as he met the weary eyes of beaten age. The man was white-haired and uncertain of his ability to stand.

The youth jumped up, and at once invited him to sit, adding, "I have been sitting all day, and it will do me good to stand; are you cold?"

"Bless your life, no; I never get cold. In all the seventy-five years that I have seen, I haven't had time to get cold," he said with a laugh.

"You are just trying to joke me. You are shivering now," the youth smiled back at him.

"Well, if I were, you haven't a pair of gloves to give me," challenged the elderly one.

"Yes, I have," said the sheik, "but you are just the kind of a chap that would refuse to accept them."

As the conversation went on, they became more interested in each other. Soon the seat by the old man was made vacant, and the youth slumped down by his side, and they became chummy until the youth's station came, and he expressed his pleasure and bade the old man good-bye and walked out with light-hearted whistle.

A few moments after, as the old man instinctively put his hand in his side pocket, he tremblingly drew out an expensive pair of fur-lined gloves. He looked them over through tears and smiles. The youth had somewhere learned the habit and value of courtesy.—H. B. McKenzie, in Arkansas Gazette.

GIDEON GROVE, FLAT ROCK CIRCUIT

This church was built about 1888 or 1889 through the influence of Bro. Harris Pegram, Bro. William Pegram, Bro. Penn Angel and a few others, having branched off from Flat Rock Church. The church was organized, we think, by Rev. T. J. Ogburn, pastor, and Rev. W. A. Bunch, president, Bro. Ogburn being the first pastor. The old church served its day well, but five years ago we built it new and now we have a good building some 38 x 40 feet with raised floor at the rear, two large windows of art glass in front and two small ones in recess pulpit, two large frosted windows and eight small ones. It stands in a beautiful grove at the old Gideon Pegram place on the Stokesdale and Ellisboro soil road. We do not have a strong membership but we do have a good building with seven foot portico in front concreted.

IMMODEST DRESSING

We have been surprised and grieved the past few summers at the number of women attending the holiness camp meetings who were dressed more like the denizens of places of shame rather than devout Christians cleansed from sin and filled with the Holy Ghost. For one, I do not believe that any sanctified woman can keep peace with Christ, the comfort and witness of the Holy Ghost in her heart, and at the same time undertake to keep up with the present-day indecent fashions. I find some preachers who seem to think that dress is too small a matter to be discussed in their messages to the people. Nothing is too small that involves decency, modesty and a proper adjustment to the will of God and the good taste of high-toned Christian society. I very well understand that this is a large and difficult problem, nevertheless faithful men and women must give a word of warning, leave the issues with God and hope that there may come back to the world the spirit of true modesty and reverence for God and the human body.—Dr. H. C. Morrison, in The Pentecostal Herald.

PRAY WITHOUT CEASING

Unanswered yet, the prayer your lips have pleaded
In agony of heart these many years?
Does faith begin to fail, is hope declining,
And think you all in vain those falling tears?
Say not the Father has not heard your prayer,
You shall have your desire, some time, somewhere!

Unanswered yet? Tho' when you first presented
This one petition at the Father's throne,
It seemed you could not wait the time of asking,
So anxious was your heart to have it done;
If years have passed since then, do not despair,
For God will answer you, some time, somewhere.

Unanswered yet? But you are not unheeded;
The promises of God forever stand;
To Him our days and years alike are equal.
"Have faith in God!" It is your Lord's command.
Hold on to Jacob's angel, and your prayer
Shall bring a blessing down, some time, somewhere.

Unanswered yet? Nay, do not say unanswered;
Perhaps your part is not yet wholly done.
The work began when first your prayer was uttered,
And God will finish what He has begun.
Keep incense burning at the shrine of prayer,
And glory shall descend, some time, somewhere.

Unanswered yet? Faith cannot be unanswered;
Her feet are firmly planted on the Rock.
Amid the wildest storms she stands undaunted,
Nor quails before the loudest thunder shock.
She knows Omnipotence has heard her prayer,
And cries, "It shall be done, some time, somewhere."

THE CHURCH THAT EVANGELIZES

It has been said that there are two kinds of churches, the church whose primary concern is with itself, and the church whose primary concern is with world-wide Kingdom extension. It would be difficult to so classify denominations, but we find many local churches that represent tendencies in both of these directions in their attitudes and activities. We must recognize that our local church is a means to a Kingdom end, and not let our dominant motive be to promote ourselves as an organization. Self-seeking churches, jockeying for local dominance, inevitably invite trouble to themselves. Seeking to save their own lives, such churches are in danger of losing them. The church that is devoted to the task of extending the Kingdom at home and abroad through personal and world-wide evangelism, utilizing and directing its energies and material resources to that end, inevitably enjoys growth and overflowing life. The church whose consuming passion is the advancement of Christ's Kingdom will find its local problems largely dissipated. In this month devoted to the development of the First Department of the Progressive Program, Spiritual Life and Evangelism, let us each step in this church and prove the vitality of our spiritual resources by throwing our energies into evangelism.—Selected.

THIS BOOK

Build your great cathedrals; yes! Enlarge your great universities; yes! Extend and place everywhere your great hospitals and homes of healing; yes! Advance your vast missionary movements; yes! And endow them! Endow them richly! But do not forget the Book in which are the words, "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have eternal life."

Sow your cities down with this Book. Broadcast it in every town and hamlet and to the solitary dwellers in forests and prairies. Send it out to all peoples in all lands. Give to it of your little, or of your wealth. Endow it with millions. Where we send forth five millions of volumes a year, we ought to send fifty millions, for the healing of the world.

But, above all, trust it—hide it in your hearts! Believe in it, and in Him who is reevaled in it; and may you have the joy of the promise: "He that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life."—William Ingraham Haven.

ANOTHER RECORD BROKEN

More orders for Rally Day supplies have been received by the Board of Christian Education this year than last, which means the largest number ever. Such cordial support of the work this board is trying to do is indeed gratifying. It is an inspiration. It prompts the faith that the offerings will be correspondingly large and that it will be possible to carry out our plans for the further development of our educational and ministerial recruiting activities.

Many items have appeared in our church papers reporting successful and enthusiastic Rally Day services. This is good reading. But there ought to be more of it. Church papers are interesting to church people because of the church news they contain. When one pastor holds a good Rally Day service it should inspire others to do the same. So more than one good cause is helped.

In some sections of the church it is not too late to hold a Rally Day service. The board has a few supplies left which they will gladly send to any who will make the effort to hold a service and will send the offering taken to the annual conference treasurer carefully designating it as the "Rally Day offering for Christian Education."

—Everything which is of heaven bears the stamp of holiness, wholeness. Let us go to our Saviour with renewed consecration, asking that everything worthless and harmful in what we are and do may be consumed away. In following such a course our lives will be broadened and deepened spiritually, and our contact with our fellow men will inspire happiness in their hearts and prove a benediction to our own souls. In order for us to exert the best influence on those about us it is necessary that we ourselves shall be full of the Spirit.—Selected.

OUR STORY PAGE

HALF-WAY HOUSE

Herbert Eggleston peered sharply over the tops of his glasses. "The Spring Arbor delegates are coming," he said.

Little Mrs. Eggleston glanced up, with a smile. "I'll have to get the south room ready," she said.

Mr. Eggleston nodded. "I'd have some of those grape preserves, too, if I were you, mother," he said.

For as far back as most people could remember, the Egglestons had "entertained." Now, it was some minister on his way to another field; again, a visiting elder; a missionary from a foreign field, or merely some lay brother who chanced to pass through the little town. Everybody expected it, and never yet had any one been disappointed. "So long as I have a crock of butter and a jar full of cookies, I don't care," said Mrs. Eggleston, in reply to would-be consolers, and no one who ever partook of her bounty ever doubted her word. "The Half-Way House." That was what Mildred Thorpe had once laughingly designated the Eggleston home as, and, somehow, the name stuck.

Trouble? Of course, it was trouble aplenty. Not for worlds, however, would either John Eggleston or his wife have missed it. "Sort o' keeps us wide-awake," and, "We always get more than we give." These were the Egglestons' invariable replies to their friends. Not that either John or Maria charged—far from it—but to them the interchange of thought and feeling more than compensated them for what they gave. "Old folks who live alone are apt to become self-centered and narrow-minded," said Mr. Eggleston one day in commenting on the situation, "why, I don't know, unless it is that they shut themselves so much away from outside interests. Neither Maria nor I would think of that, though," with a chuckle.

There came a day, however, when for the old couple hospitality ceased to be a possibility. Mrs. Eggleston's fall, John's attack of rheumatism, and a succession of poor crops were responsible for that.

Disconsolately, the old man sat in his chair all day, or dragged himself painfully about. "Tell you what, mother," he said one day, "We can't keep this up much longer. Scott is getting uneasy for his money, and I don't blame him, of course, but it's tough on us. Why, this place has been in our possession for generations. It belonged to my father, and his father before him."

Mrs. Eggleston sighed. "If only John—" she said. John, however, as both knew, had troubles of his own.

* * * * *

"Girls," said Madge True, looking about the pleasant room, "the Stamfords are coming."

A thrill ran through the little assembly. The Stamfords were people of note and securing them was quite a feather in the cap of "The Willing Workers." Possessed of wealth, culture, and leisure, gladly they had devoted all to the Master's cause. Not attached to any one field, they went about lending a helping hand, now here, now there, as circumstances seemed to warrant. At home they were in great demand. "Gives one a new angle on things," said one. "Yes, and they penetrate where others do not go," said another, "and bring back something worth while."

"Whatever can we do with them?" inquired Lila Moore. Lila was a "last-minute" girl.

"The Albion House," said Mildred Thompson.

"Not to be thought of," replied Madge.

"Perhaps, Mrs. Gibson," suggested Alice Turner.

"Mrs. Gibson is already well supplied with guests," replied Madge. Every one knew Mrs. Gibson—a good enough woman in her way; one, however, so wrapped up in her own interests as to have little time or thought for others.

* * * * *

"Mrs. Eggleston," said Madge, coming in sometime later on, "we are in a quandary. Can you help us?"

"Who is 'we'?" smiled Mrs. Eggleston.

"Why, the Willing Workers, of course," replied Madge. "You see, we expect the Stamfords on the 24th and we haven't a place to put them. We might send them to a hotel, but who wants to? And we have been wondering if it were not possible for you to have them here. Oh, yes, we know you are not entertaining, but we will gladly attend to details, if only you will consent."

"I—I'll think it over, my dear," replied Mrs. Eggleston.

"John, do you suppose they know?" she inquired of her husband later.

"I hardly think so," replied Mr. Eggleston. " 'Tisn't likely Scott would say anything, and there is no one else to. It's our last chance, Maria, and we must do our best. However we are going to meet the bills, though, I don't know."

"There won't be any," replied Mrs. Eggleston. "All the young folks want of us is to sponsor their party."

"That's settled then," replied Mr. Eggleston with a sigh of relief.

* * * * *

The Stamfords came and went, and, for four never-to-be-forgotten days joy reigned supreme in the old Eggleston homestead; for, not only the Stamfords, but as well a handful of visitors from Madisonville shared its hospitality. Sadly on the morning of their departure, Mrs. Eggleston moved about. "Never again," she thought, listlessly dusting a chair.

"Maria," called a voice. Maria started. "Come here, quick," said the old man, and Maria came. "What—what is it?" she faltered.

"Good news! That's what it is," replied Mr. Eggleston, scarcely able to contain himself. "What do you think those Willing Workers have done? Bought our mortgage, and are going to give us a lifetime to pay it."

"What?" exclaimed Mrs. Eggleston, scarcely believing her ears.

"Uh-huh," replied the old man. "And all we've got to do is to act as host and hostess whenever they wish," he finished triumphantly. "However they found out beats me. Trust 'em for that, though," with a chuckle.

"John!" exclaimed Mrs. Eggleston, at a loss for words.

"And what is more," went on Mr. Eggleston, "they are coming over this very evening to clinch the bargain. Shouldn't wonder if that was them now," at a burst of merriment from without. And it was.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

NOV. 11: WHAT IS BEING DONE FOR AND AGAINST WORLD PEACE?

Romans 14:19

Plans for the Meeting

A small globe placed on the leader's desk will make the meeting more effective. If practical someone might be asked to make a brief report to the society of the proposed peace plans for the world. Another impressive feature would be to have the different speakers to wear costumes representing the different nations of the world. At the close of the meeting these would join hands, forming a circle around the globe, and sing "Blest Be the Tie That Binds."

Suggested Program

Quiet music.
Hymn: "America the Beautiful."
Silent prayer, closed by leader.
Scripture lesson.
Leader's talk.
Outline of World Peace Plan.
Answering of questions.
Piano solo.
Sentence prayers.
Poem.
Hymn: "Dwelling in Beulah Land."
Announcements.
Mizpah benediction.

Questions to Be Answered

1. What can we do as individuals to promote world peace?
2. Is the church doing her share in the promotion of world peace? If not, suggest methods to that end.
3. How do missionaries hinder or advance international peace?
4. Do you think that military training has an effect on world peace?

Outline for Leader's Talk

With so many traces of the World War still about us, our topic for this meeting is one of vital interest to every American citizen. Ten years ago today the armistice was signed. That is, the guns were silenced, but the wounded hearts and burdened souls will remain for many years.

Throughout the world there is a growing demand for peace policies. Peoples are struggling for the abolishment of the cruel and heartless trends of war. Organizations are doing their utmost to bring about peace treaties. Conferences are held for both national and international agreements, and a renewed interest is being manifested in all phases of the plans.

If we will do our part as Christians, we can be a determining factor in the promotion of permanent peace for all nations of the world. Education is the best possible solution to the problem. If people were taught the stupidity of war and its consequences, and to cherish the progress of the world at large, then this horrible monster of war would be driven from the channels of history and men could settle down to peace and happiness once more.

Appropriate Quotations

"Peace is the proper result of the Christian temper. It is the great kindness which our religion doth us, that brings us to a settledness of mind, and a consistency within ourselves."—Bishop Patrick.

"Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God."—Bible.

"Peace rules the day, where reason rules the mind."—Collins.

"Where God is, all agree."—Vaughan.

Poetry to the Point

O God of love, O King of peace,
Make wars thro'out the world to cease;
The wrath of sinful man restrain,
Give peace, O God, give peace again!

Where saints and angels dwell above,
All hearts are knit in holy love;
O bind us in that heav'nly chain,
Give peace, O God, give peace again!
—Henry W. Baker.

THE WEEK OF PRAYER

November 11-17, 1928

Daily Meditations by Robert Seneca Smith
Based on the Lord's Prayer

Sunday, November 11. "Our Father, who art in heaven, hallowed be thy name."—Matt. 6:9. Read Matt. 6:5-15. Hymn, "Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty."

Personal questions:

When I commence my prayer, what words do I habitually use?

What has hindered me from becoming aware of the presence of God?

What difference would there be in its effect upon me if I began with "My Father" instead of "Our Father?"

Let us pray:

That we may sincerely desire the prayer experience of Jesus.

That in our prayer we may be helped to visualize the needs of all sorts and conditions of men.

That in the face of the momentous tasks that confront the religious organizations of the modern world, both leaders and members may humble themselves before the Most High God.

"O Lord, our heavenly Father, Almighty and Everlasting God, who hast safely brought us to the beginning of this day; defend us in the same with thy mighty power; and grant that this day we fall into no sin, neither run into any kind of danger; but that all our doings, being ordered by thy governance, may be righteous in thy sight; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen."—Book of Common Prayer.

Monday, November 12. "Thy kingdom come. Matt. 6:10. Read Matt. 5:1-16, 21-22, 27-28, 38-39, 43-48. Hymn, "How beautiful for spacious skies."

Personal questions:

When I say, "Thy kingdom come," what do I mean?"

What can I do to help God establish His kingdom?

What is the relation between my citizenship in God's kingdom and my citizenship in my country?

Let us pray:

That we may try to comprehend the height and depth and length and breadth of the Kingdom of God.

That we may not be afraid to practice the spirit of the Sermon on the Mount in all our relationships.

That through loyalty to Christ's ideal of citizenship in the Kingdom we may become worthier citizens of our own country.

"O Almighty God, who hast entrusted this earth unto the children of men, and through Thy Son Jesus Christ callest us unto a heavenly citizenship; grant us, we humbly beseech Thee, such shame and repentance for the disorder and injustice and cruelty that are in our midst, that fleeing unto Thee for pardon and for grace we may henceforth set ourselves to establish that city which has justice for its foundation and love for its law, whereof Thou art the Architect and Maker; through the same Jesus Christ, Thy Son, our Savior."—Prayers for the City of God.

Tuesday, November 13. "Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven." Matt. 6:10. Read Matt. 13:1-9, 31-33, 44-46. Hymn, "O Master, let me walk with thee."

Personal questions:

In my prayer do I try to persuade God to do my will or persuade myself to do His will?

How is God's will done in heaven?

What is necessary before I can do God's will on earth?

Let us pray:

That we may believe that through study and meditation and obedience it is possible for us to come to know the will of God.

That as co-builders of the kingdom we may have the courage to work and the patience to wait for its coming.

"O God of patience and consolation, give us such good will, we beseech Thee, that with free hearts we may love and serve Thee and our brethren; and, having thus the mind of Christ, may begin heaven on earth, and exercise ourselves therein till that day when heaven, where love abideth, shall seem no strange habitation to us. For Jesus Christ's sake. Amen."—Christina G. Rosetti.

Wednesday, November 14. "Give us this day our daily bread." Matt 6:11. Read Matt. 14:13-21. Hymn, "Break Thou the bread of life."

Personal questions:

Do I pray for things?

Should I pray for what I can secure by personal or natural means?

How might daily prayer affect my struggle for physical necessities?

Let us pray:

That we may rightly discern what things we have need of.

That we may have the will and the wisdom to help others secure those things which will make for their well-being.

That we may daily keep a proper sense of the relative value of those things which are physical and those experiences which are spiritual.

"O God, we thank Thee for the sweet refreshment of sleep and for the glory and vigor of the new day. As we set our faces once more toward our daily work, we pray Thee for the strength sufficient for our tasks. May Christ's spirit of duty and service ennoble all we do. Uphold us by the consciousness that our work is useful work and a blessing to all. If there has been anything in our work harmful to others, and dishonorable to ourselves, reveal it to our inner eye with such clearness that we shall hate it and put it away, though it be at a loss to ourselves. When we work with others, help us to regard them not as servant to our will, but as brothers equal to us in human dignity, and equally worthy of their full reward. May there be nothing in this day's work of which we shall be ashamed when the sun has set, nor in the eventide of our life when our task is done and we go to our long home to meet Thy face. Amen."—Walter Rauschenbusch.

Thursday, November 15. "And forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors." Matt. 6:12. Read Matt. 18:21-35. Hymn, "There's a wideness in God's mercy."

Personal questions:

When another person wrongs me do I try to forgive him or to get even with him?

Can I forgive him unless he wishes to be forgiven?

What does forgiveness mean?

Let us pray:

That we may have the forgiving love of Christ.

That we may not allow any misunderstanding to go unexplained or any wrong to remain unrighted.

That we may permit the healing love of God to surround and interpenetrate our entire being.

"Almighty and most merciful Father, we have erred and strayed from thy ways like lost sheep. We have followed too much the devices and desires of our own hearts. We have offended against thy holy laws. We have left undone those things which we ought to have done; and we have done those things which we ought not to have done; and there is no health in us. But thou, O Lord, have mercy upon us, miserable offenders. Spare thou those, O God, who confess their faults. Restore thou those who are penitent; according to thy promises declared unto mankind in Christ Jesus our Lord. And grant, O most merciful Father, for His sake, that we may hereafter live a godly, righteous and sober life to the glory of thy holy name. Amen."—Book of Common prayer.

Friday, November 16. "And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil." Matt. 6:13. Read Matt. 4:1-11. Hymn, "O Jesus, I have promised."

Personal questions:

What is my most constant temptation?

What circumstances or state of mind make me most susceptible to it?

When temptation has been hard upon me have I really tried to think of Christ or thrown myself upon the help and power of God?

Let us pray:

That the presence of Christ may be clearly felt in the hour of temptation.

That men may be delivered from the evil standards and forces that would drag them down.

That we may work together to build a better world whose influences upon men may be more wholesome and ennobling.

"Strong Son of God, who was tried and tempted to the uttermost, yet without sin, be near me now with thy strength and give me the victory over this evil desire that threatens to ruin me. I am weak, O Lord, and full of doubts and fears. There are moments when I am afraid of myself, when the world and the flesh and the devil seem more powerful than the forces of good. But now I look to thee in whom dwelleth all the fulness of grace and might and redemption. Blessed Saviour! I take thee afresh to be my Refuge, my Covert, my Defense, my strong Tower from the enemy. Hear me and bless me now and ever. Amen."—Samuel McComb.

Saturday, November 17. "For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever and ever. Amen." Matt. 6:13. Read Romans 8:31-39. Hymn, "The Lord is King, lift up thy voice."

Personal questions:

Into what attitude does prayer finally bring me—self-sufficiency or submission, rebellion or peace?

How can I use my faith in God to help me in the midst of life's perplexities?

Why is it necessary for me to say, "Not my will but thine be done"?

Let us pray:

That we may submit not to blind fate but to the will of an intelligent and loving God.

That we may do our work not for our own glory but for the glory of God and His kingdom.

That our prayer life, during this week, may have been so creative and energizing that henceforth we shall not allow it to become "weary, stale, flat, and unprofitable."

"Almighty God, who hast given us grace at this time with one accord to make our common supplications unto thee; and dost promise that when two or three are gathered together in thy Name thou wilt grant their requests; Fulfil now, O Lord, the desires and petitions of thy servants, as may be most expedient for them; granting us in this world knowledge of thy truth, and in the world to come life everlasting. Amen."—Book of Common Prayer.

"Now unto him that is able to keep you from falling, and to present you faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy, to the only wise God our Saviour, be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever. Amen."—Jude.

CHINESE FACE STARVATION

More than three million Chinese are facing starvation as the result of crop failures in China this year. The greatest suffering is in the southern part of the Province of Chihli and across the border in the Province of Shantung. In those two provinces alone two and a half million Chinese are in dire need of food. In the Province of Shensi, 800,000 Chinese are threatened with famine. —Current Events.

JOIN THE RED CROSS!

The yearly Red Cross Roll Call will begin on Armistice Day, November 11, and will continue through Thanksgiving Day, November 29. During that period all true Americans are urged to become members of the Red Cross.

A BIG RADIO "AUDIENCE"

Nearly ten million families in the United States now own radio sets, which represent a total cost of more than two billion dollars. The total number of persons who "listen in" on radio programs is estimated at more than forty million.—Current Events.

Raising Rabbits for Fur

The rabbit is fast taking his place among the valuable fur-bearing animals. Few people realize how rapidly the rabbit industry is growing in the United Statess. Bulletins are now prepared by the Department of Agriculture for the instruction of rabbit breeders.

—Scotland, as well as Ireland, has a movement for separation from England. At Robroyston a movement was launched for autonomy and a parliament of Scotland. It was announced that 18 candidates for parliament had enrolled themselves under their banner.

—Rev. R. L. Hethcox was missed in the Winston conference.

—The Home Moravion Church, Winston-Salem, celebrates its 157th anniversary next Sunday.

—Flat Rock Church, Flat Rock Circuit, is shown elsewhere this issue. It is a splendid new building and its members are justly proud of it. You would probably have to go far to find its equal among country churches. We congratulate our Flat Rock people on this achievement.

—The defeat of Smith by Hoover was conceded on Tuesday night. Hoover's majority seems very large, though complete returns may reduce it.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Friendship Church, Mt. Hermon Charge.—Our Conference year came to a close on the third Sunday of October. After an inspiring sermon by our pastor, Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, the following officers were elected for the coming year:

Trustees, Messrs. J. J. Sharpe, J. Gurney Holt, T. E. Sharpe, Lacy Isley and A. M. Isley.

Stewards: Messrs. R. W. Isley, Paul M. Graves, Moody Isley, G. E. May.

Sunday school superintendent, Mr. T. F. Overman.

Class leader, Mr. H. A. Garrett.

Ushers, Messrs. Howard Patterson, Norman Johnson, Wade Isley and Clifton Sharpe.

M. P. Herald reporter, Mae Patterson.

We have made several improvements in and around the church this year, including the purchase of a Heatrola, the installation of electric lights, and a good bit of work on the cemetery.

Our Christian Endeavor Society is doing much to prepare leaders for our church and Sunday school. Some very splendid programs have been been given recently and every one is urged to attend the C. E. meetings. Your presence will be a help both to us and to you.

Our pastor, assisted by Rev. W. M. Loy, of Fountain Place M. P. Church, Burlington, conducted a revival at Alamance Mills during the latter part of October. We were glad to receive a goodly number of the converts into our church on the first Sunday in November.

We note with regret the passing of Mr. A. M. Isley, a trustee and a loyal member of our church, on Saturday, October 28, 1928. He had been ill for about ten months, his condition becoming serious about two weeks prior to his death. Mr. Isley was an humble, unassuming Christian man, known and esteemed by a wide circle of friends. The funeral service was conducted at Friendship Church Monday at 11 o'clock by the pastor, assisted by Rev. T. A. Williams, Rev. D. I. Offman and Rev. A. O. Lindley. We extend our sincere sympathy to the bereaved family.

Mr. J. A. Sharpe is our delegate to conference this year. He was instructed to bring Mr. Carroll back to our charge. He has served successfully for two years and we are hoping that he will be back with us.

MAE PATTERSON, Reporter.

Laurel Hill.—Our attendance at Sunday school is very good. We had 106 present Sunday. We are proud of our Sunday school and especially of our superintendent and good choir singing. We have good singing. We sing praise to the Lord and not just to be heard. If we would all think and feel the words of a song as we sing it we could sing much more sweetly.

Bro. Morgan preached for us Sunday, after which the Lord's Supper was administered and church officers and Sunday school officers were elected for the following year. The officers elected were as follows: Superintendent, A. A. Sain; assistant superintendent, Lois Willis; secretary and treasurer, Horace Sain; church reporter, Lois Willis. The old boards of trustees, class leaders, and stewards were re-elected.

Bro. Morgan preached us a splendid sermon as he always does. Bro. Morgan has been with us five years and we certainly have been fortunate in having a man like this with us. He has endeared himself to us, not only him, but his entire family. We are hoping that Mr. Morgan will be returned to us for another year.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

REPORTER.

Creswell.—Rev. R. L. Hethcox preached his last sermon at Creswell for the Conference year 1928 on October 21.

The fourth quarterly conference of the Creswell charge met October 23 at Creswell. All the churches were represented but Woodley's Chapel and Mt. Elmer. The conference met for a regular business meeting.

Mr. Joe White, from Rehoboth church, was elected delegate for this charge, with Miss Matilda Alexander as alternate. The Conference instructed Mr. White to bring Rev. Mr. Hethcox back. He has been on Craswell charge for the past ten years and has been doing a splendid work and we feel sure that in asking him back he will strive harder than ever to give good service.

All officers for the church and Sunday school have been elected, and we are looking forward to the best and most successful year that these organizations have ever known.

The Sunday school has started making plans for a Christmas program this year. The committee has been appointed and is carefully considering various things in the way of Christmas entertainment.

Mr. William Wiley was re-elected as class leader in our Sunday school. He is always present and ever ready to help and offer suggestions for the best of our school.

The outlook now is that Creswell charge will have a good record for the year 1928-29, both spiritually and financially.

REPORTER.

Flat Rock, Vance.—It's quite a while since we have reported, however, we have been moving forward. Pastor Chambliss continues to give us good sermons and he is endeavoring to make this year on Vance the best ever. Flat Rock finances are pretty well in hand. All of pastor's salary was paid before last quarterly conference. We hope to be on every honor roll at Annual Conference.

We were indeed glad to have Rev. S. W. Taylor with us in the quarterly conference. His visit and words of encouragement did much to inspire our people to greater effort for the church. We wish he might come more often.

Our Sunday school rooms are completed and have been in use several weeks. They add much to the efficiency of the school. Outside painting is done and we feel we have a new church.

New officers were elected at last appointment as follows: Trustees, A. E. White, J. H. Satterwhite, S. J. Satterwhite, J. L. Hester; stewards, S. W. Reavis, chairman, T. P. Hester, B. W. Jones, Roy Davis; classs leader, Mrs. S. W. Reavis; Sunday school superintendent, S. W. Reavis; assistant superintendent, Roy Davis; secretary and treasurer, B. W. Jones; reporter, Miss Mary V. White.

We are planning to send the Sunday school offering to the Children's Home one Sunday in each month. Heretofore we have taken the offering for the Home at preaching service.

The Ladies' Aid Society continues with much interest. At present they are piecing a quilt, each square to net one dollar. It will be quilted and sold. They have raised during the year $220.

The W. H. M. S. is progressing very nicely. Since last Annual Conference they have sent the Branch treasurer about $55. Plans are being made that the societies be merged and organized by General Conference standards.

The Willing Workers Mission Band meet with many hindrances; as yet they have very few stars on their chart.

Mrs. S. W. Reavis and Miss Mary V. White were joint hostesses to their Sunday school classes last Friday evening from 7:30 o'clock to 10. The games and contest, as well as decorations, carried the idea of Hallowe'en. It proved a very enjoyable evening. Cream and cake was served.

A call meeting of quarterly conference was to be held Monday evening, October 29, with Spring Valley church, to arrange complete report of finances before Conference.

We are expecting the return of Rev. Mr. Chambliss. He was the unanimous choice of the quarterly conference and the delegate was instructed to ask for his return.

REPORTER.

Friendship, Chase City Charge.—We had good attendance at Sunday school last Sunday; also at preaching service. Bro. O'Briant certainly brought us a wonderful sermon, which all seemed to enjoy. At the close of the service the Lord's Supper was taken.

We held our fourth quarterly conference last Saturday night at 7:30 o'clock. Church officers for the coming year were elected. The quarterly conference called Bro. O'Briant back for another year, and we are hoping that Annual Conference may see fit to send him back to us, for he has certainly done splendid work among us. Bro. L. L. Wilson is our delegate to Conference.

Our work here is encouraging and there has been some progress made that is noticeable. We hope to do more in the future.

REPORTER.

Albemarle.—The Albemarle church news has been in the background for about a year, but as 'most everybody knows, we have been having services in a store building since our church was burned last December, and haven't had much of interest to write about.

We have all taken on new life since we moved into our new church, and though we are only in the basement so far, we feel so grateful that we once more have a church we can call our own.

Our Sunday school has shown a remarkable growth since moving into the new building. The average attendance for the past year has been around 100, and at one time dropped as low as 85, so it was very inspiring to see 164 present the second Sunday after moving. We feel that we can really do some good work when our class rooms are finished and we get our classes re-organized.

The Men's Bible class is having a contest, trying to see which of two sides can get the most new members and most regular attendance. Each month the points are counted, and the losisng side must give the winning side a supper. J. E. Gantt and C. S. Moton are the captains, and this month Mr. Moton's side won. It surely is creating more interest among the men, causing them to almost double their membership in about a month's time. One woman was heard to remark that she didn't get to Sunday school that morning because her husband had two new members to bring in and he was afraid he might be late if he went back for her.

We are all hoping that Conference will send our pastor, Rev. J. R. Anderson, back to us, for he meets the unanimous approval of our members. He has been with us two years, and we have become so attached to him and his family we would hate to see him leave us. However we will all know next week.

MRS. JOHN U. WHITLOCK, Reporter.

Chapel Hill, Davidson.—Brother Ridge preached a good sermon the third Sunday, his subject being "Jesus." The congregation was large. We will feel disappointed if we do not get Brother Ridge back.

We have started our Sunday school again; hope we will have a good school; had a good number this evening and good interest.

Prayer meeting has been good since the revival meeting.

Sunday school next Sunday at 10 o'clock; prayer meeting at 2 o'clock.

With best wishes to the Herald readers,

LIZZIE CRANFORD.

Pine Ridge, Kentucky.—The enrollment at Alvan Drew School this year is the largest we have ever had—177. Other boys and girls are writing almost every day and wanting to come, but only as some who are here drop out can others be received, as we have already more than reached the limit of our dormitory accommodations.

Work on our dam is progressing. We hope to get it finished before hard freezing weather reaches us. If our plans work out, the dam will make a reservoir holding over a million gallons of water. Think of that much water on Pine Ridge!

We are still having an abundant supply of "roasting ears" from our own truck patch, and that means a lot of corn when you have 115 active individuals in the dining room. Frosts have not yet hurt our growing crops. We have an acre of late potatoes with vines still as green as though it were summer time.

We are delighted with our staff of teachers and workers this year. All seem interested, earnest, and consecrated. We greatly appreciate the prayers and co-operation of the church at large.

Business has been very good at our store this fall, consequently our stock of second hand goods is very much depleted. Several young people's organizations have written us that they are making children's dresses and various useful articles of clothing to send us. That is a fine plan. May their number increase! Send parcel post packages to Pine Ridge, Wolfe County, and freight or express to Slade, Ky.

We had a scare last Sunday morning. I was preparing to preach on Paul building a fire on the Island of Melita, when I heard a cry: "Green Garrett dormitory is on fire." Of course I hastened to the scene and found our boys had discovered it just in time and with a little strenuous action the fire was put out and the dormitory saved. Electric wiring too close to a hot furnace pipe seems to have caused the fire. The insurance company has allowed us $20 to cover damages.

Thankful beyond expression for the many evidences of our Father's guidance and grace.

Sincerely.

THOS. R. WOODFORD, Supt.

High Point.—At the hour for morning worship Sunday morning, Dr. J. C. Broomfield, president of the General Conference, who was in Winston-Salem attending the Annual Conference, filled the pulpit of First Church, and delivered an eloquent and masterly sermon from Isaiah 9:6: "Unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace." He said in part that the greatest abiding need of people is to know Jesus, to appreciate Him more and to love Him better. Christ is wonderful in His pre-existence; wonderful in his creative power. All things were made by Him, and in Him all things consist. Then He is wonderful in His prophecy, and in His conception. He did wonderful things to feed others when hungry, but so little to feed Himself. A prize for the best essay on Christ's first miracle at Cana of Galilee was offered, and John Milton won it by a single sentence: "The water knew its Lord and blushed." All time revolves around Him; there is not a deed executed, nor a coin of money minted that does not bear His impress. All dates are reckoned from His birth, He is wonderful in the homage He has received, and in the blessings He dispenses; we get our churches, public schools, hospitals, children's homes, libraries, in fact, everything good comes from His bounteous hand. Christ has been the inspiration of genius for all time; without Him Raphael's famous Sistine Madonna would never have been given to the world. In modern times two famous buildings have been erected, the church of St. John the Divine in New York, and the Cathedral in Washington where Woodrow Wilson sleeps. The Bible has nothing to fear from truth. When you look into the grave of a loved one, you will not expect to hear the voice of science, but the voice of Him who said, "I am the resurrection and the life." He is an interceding Christ; "He walks beside me in the way, what a wonderful Saviour!" Finally, He is wonderful in the witness of my own heart.

"O, Moster, let me walk with Thee
In paths of lowly service free;
Tell me Thy secret; help me bear
The strain of toil, the fret of care."

Dr. Broomfield will make an ideal executive, and the General Conference made no mistake in choosing him for this high office.

The Missionary Circles met Monday afternoon as follows: Circle No. 1, Mrs. L. J. Diffee, chairman, with Mrs. S. D. Shelton; Mrs. J. H. Walker's at her home on Colonial Drive, and Mrs. Moffitt's with Mrs. John C. Whitesell, 909 West College Drive. At Mrs. Shelton's Mrs. L. R. Johnston had charge of the program. Mrs. Paul S. Kennett read the last chapter of Proverbs and led in prayer. Mrs. Johnston then read a beautiful poem, "The Woman Who Understands," Jonathan Miller's famous, "The Bravest Battle," and Longfellow's "Arrow and the Song."

The topic for Christian Endeavor Society Monday evening was "In What Ways Do We Waste Our Time?" and was led by Miss Pearl Leonard.

The Workers' Council will meet Wednesday evening after mid-week prayer service and Teacher Training class.

Next Sunday morning the Lord's Supper will be celebrated. This will be the first Sabbath of the Conference year, and we pray that God's spirit may lead and direct our church through the coming year.

Our pastor, Rev. R. I. Farmer, occupied the pulpit of Grace Church, Greensboro, last Sunday morning, and at the evening service delivered the message in the Home Moravian Church in Winston-Salem.

The congregation is delighted to know that Rev. E. Lester Ballard has been returned by the Annual Conference as associate pastor here. He has done a great work with us, and we feel that the Junior church is firmly established and will continue to go forward under his guidance. High Point has been blessed with six splendid ministers by action of the Conference just closed: Rev. R. I. Farmer and Rev. E. L. Ballard at First Church, Rev. G. L. Reynolds at English Street, Rev. Geo. L. Curry at Welch Memorial, Rev. Edward Suits at Lebanon, and Dr. A. G. Dixon at the Children's Home.

Mrs. W. C. Wicker, of Elon College, is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. L. R. Johnston.

Mrs. L. J. Diffee went to Blue Ridge last Saturday to visit her grand-son, Sidney Tomlinson, who is in school there.

Siler City.—On Tuesday evening, October 23, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Dixon delightfully entertained the Senior Christian Endeavor Society at their home in Liberty. Many interesting games and contests were enjoyed, after which delicious ice cream, cake, sandwiches and lemonade were served. About 15 of our number enjoyed the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Dixon.

In addition to the regular Hallowe'en party this year, the Junior and Senior Christian Endeavor Societies jointly entertained with a tacky party. At this social gathering officers for the ensuing year were elected, which are as follows: President, Mr. Marvin Phillips; vice-president, Mrs. Duncan Welch; secretary-treasurer, Miss Clata Andrew; assistant, Mr. Cletus Whitehead; pianist, Miss Minnie Cooper; assistant, Mrs. C. E. Brady; corresponding secretary, Miss Pearlie Moore; prayer meeting committee, Miss Sallie Smith.

The death angel has visited us again and taken from us Mrs. Ollie Campbell. Besides a host of friends and many distant relatives she leaves a husband and two dear little girls.

REPORTER.

Albemarle.—The flower show and bazaar, which is sponsored annually by the Ladies' Aid Society, was held Friday, November 2nd, and was a decided success from every standpoint. Many beautiful flowers were entered from different parts of the town and county, and they were surely worth going to see. Chrysanthemums of exquisite colors, roses, dhalias, ferns, begonias, geranium, coleus, and other potted plants were on display, and the judges had a difficult task in selecting the ones that should wear the blue and red ribbons. There were 42 prizes awarded, ranging in value up to $5.00, and these prizes were very generously donated by various merchants of the town.

This is the third year this event has been staged, and each year more and more interest is shown by the ladies of the town in trying to see who can grow the most beautiful flowers.

In connection with the flower show, a bazaar also was held, and fancy-work and homemade candy and cakes were on sale at reasonable prices. This was also a success as everything was sold during the afternoon and night.

During the hours from 6 to 9 a plate supper, consisting of barbecued pork, peas in patties, slaw, candied yams, ambrosia, cake, coffee, and hot rolls, was served to about 150 people.

The proceeds derived from the day's activities, which amounted to about $135, will be used toward purchasing something for the new church.

Our church is rapidly nearing completion. Beautiful memorial windows have been placed and the finishing touches are being added, and when completed it will be one of the prettiest churches in town. If you don't believe it, just come and see for yourself.

MRS. JOHN U. WHITLOCK, Reporter.

Winston.—The Philathea class of the First Methodist Protestant church met Monday evening at the home of Mrs. J. R. Brewer. Mrs. W. G. White was associate hostess. Devotionals were conducted by the president, Mrs. W. C. Tise. Minutes were read and approved, and twenty-three members answered the roll call. Nine dollars and five cents dues and pledges were collected. Various committee reports were made.

During the social hour those having a birthday in this month were delightfully showered. Afterward the hostesses served delicious refreshments.

Haw River Mission.—Haw River Mission has not sent in a report lately, but we feel that we are receiving many blessings. Our Sunday school is very good, also the Christian Endeavor Society; yet there is still room for improvement.

Our pastor, Rev. G. W. Holmes, gave us two very helpful and interesting sermons on the fourth Sunday in October, which closed this Conference year. He has served the Mission faithfully for one year, and we pray God's blessings on him and family whereever they are called.

We are beginning the new year well organized and looking forward to a better year than the one past. May we each so work together that our pastor for the coming year may ever feel as one among us, without fear.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

Lawndale.—Lawndale is a small mill village with a population of 1,000, situated in the foothills of the mountains. It has been noted in the past for its meanness and shall be noted in the future for its goodness.

Rev. W. L. Carson (better known as Bill), of Lincolnton, has had one of the greatest meetings ever known in the history of Lawndale. Two hundred and thirty-three souls were saved and many names were added to the different church rolls. I have never seen the power of God so manifested. Old men and women, young men, boys and girls came flocking hom to God and then went out after other lost souls. The young people here surely are on the "Firing Line" for God.

The boys have organized an evangelistic club with a membership of 71. The girls have organized a Sunshine Band with 41 members. These clubs go into the different homes for cottage prayer meetings, and have had 11 conversions. By God's help we are going to do great things for our Lord.

Bro. Carson surely is a man of God and has great power with lost souls. Three young men have answered the call to preach God's word. You readers will hear from us again.

SISTERS IN CHRIST.

Stallings, Mecklenburg Charge.—Although we haven't been heard from in some time, this is no reason we haven't been doing anything.

Our fourth quarterly conference was held on Saturday, October 27. Many were present. The conference voted unanimously for the return of Rev. W. C. Hall and family. Mr. Hall has worked faithfully through the year with us and we are hoping to have him back with us. May we each so work together that our pastor for the coming year may feel as one among us. We hope to flourish more this year than we did last year. Pray for us that we may do so.

On account of Mr. Hall's baby being very ill he was called home on Saturday during the Conference week. The baby was much better yesterday.

The Ladies' Auxiliary met in the home of Mrs. A. B. Garmon. Members present were Mrs. M. L. Stallings, Mrs. P. L. Garmon, Mrs. S. A. Noles, Mrs. Paul Curlee, Mrs. A. B. Garmon, Miss Gladys Kiser and Mrs. Jesse Hartis. The busy time caused many members to be absent. We re-organized and had an interesting program. We will meet with Mrs. R. F. Kinley the first Thursday in December, hoping every member may be present.

Pray for us that we may flourish as a band of workers. We reorganized the Sunday school yesterday and much interest was taken toward helping to make this coming year more progressive.

Christian Endeavor Society meets every Sunday night; interest is taken but there is still room for improvement; also prayer meeting every Wednesday night. We wish more people present.

Wishing for our church a successful year's work in our Master's vineyard.

A CHANCE CONVERSATION

"I'll tell you that the laws about working children in mills have done lots of good."

The speaker was the police officer of a small southern town whom I chanced to meet at the railroad station—a plain, honest man. He had no more idea of who I was than the man in the moon.

"I used to see," he continued, "little fellows eight and ten years of age working all night long. They used to get so tired along about 3 or 4 o'clock in the morning that they would fall asleep in spite of themselves."

I suggested that I was glad the thing was working out so well and inquired whether or not there had been any difficulties.

"It's coming out all right," he replied. "You do not see these little-uns in the mills any more."

"What do they do?" I inquired.

"Oh, they go to school," he answered, "a good deal at first. The people seemed to think they had a right to do as they pleased with their own children."

"Did you have the parents up in court?" I asked.

"No," he answered, "we did not work it that way. When we found a family keeping its children out of school we tried to show them that the school law had to be obeyed just like any other law. In some bad cases we sent for the woman who looks after all this and had her come over to talk to them. In one or two cases, I believe, we did threaten to have them up in court, but we were able to get on without that."

"So you think," I said, "that these laws have done good."

"Why, of course, they have done good," he replied. "How can a body get on these days without an education and how can you get education unless you go to school?"

"What do you think about requiring children to go to school more, say up to the age of 16?"

"Oh, it would be all right now," he said. "We couldn't have done that eight or ten years ago, but now we could. Children ought to be sent to school until they are 16 years of age unless they get a good education before. I doubt if children ought to be put to work as regular hands too early. I am not in favor of having boys and girls loaf around, but some play won't hurt them."

"Do you think that the mills and other places could get on without children under 16?" I asked.

"Why, of course," he replied. "There are more grown-up people now than there is work for. I always say let the grown-ups do the work, the old folks rest, and the children play and go to school."—W. H. S. in the American Child.

SUNDAY AT CONFERENCE

The Sunday occasion was very great. The memorial occasion was a "means of grace." All were reminded of the fact that Bro. Braswell was a great laborer in the vineyard. The wish was that the relatives of Bro. Dosier could have been at the meeting.

The impulse was to speak a few words referring to Bro. Dosier; however, I now wish to tell his relatives and friends that I managed to read all his writings through the Herold for more than 30 years. Once he published a great article, "Salvation by Faith in All Aages;" wish the article could be published soon again. Also, wish that his article that was once published on water baptism could be published again.

Sunday I was reminded, and encouraged, by several of the distant friends to write to the paper—and this effort comes by the lively encouragement. It was a pleasure to meet up with distant friends—preachers and people. I looked (hastily) for numbers that I did not see. I looked for young Bro. Swain, the son of the late Dr. Swain, but did not get to see him. He is in the Herald office. (Did not see Bro. Garrett.) At the Children's Home is one of the locations where distant friends can manage to meet, and I want to meet Bro. Swain and his brother and sister, and tell them that I very well remember hearing their father talk prohibition more than 50 years ago at Conference at Winston. On that great occasion prohibition resolutions in favor of temperance were passed, and I heard Bro. Swain say that the more of it the better he liked it.

Hope soon to meet the distant friends, as suggested, and hear some encouraging experiences about the importance of temperance, etc.

At the Sunday school Sunday we were privileged to listen to hearty teaching in favor of temperance and prohibition.

W. F. GRABS.

THE HAPPY FAMILY

"They do have such good times together!"

Little Mrs. Turner's eyes followed wistfully the disappearing figures of the MacDougall's, her neighbors across the way. Lunch and camera and sweater-laden, with the dog bounding joyously before them, they were off—father, mother, and the three young MacDougall's—for a Saturday tramp in the woods.

"I was asking Mrs. MacDougall only yesterday," little Mrs. Turner went on, "how it is that although they all have special friends and hobbies of their own, they still manage to work and play and plan together so many good times. And do you know what Mrs. MacDougall answered? She laughed and said, 'Well, I really think more than anything it's The Youth's Companion! In fact, I'm so sure of it that I should like to order it for a year as a present from our family to yours. Six months from now you can tell me if I wasn't right.'"

The MacDougall's are just one of thousands of households where The Youth's Companion is bringing not only entertainment in its fine book-length novels, serials, and short stories, but fresh interests, new ambitions, and deeper understandings through its feature articles and many special departments. Every page offers happiness to young and old alike.

OUR GREATEST CITY

What a big city is Greater New York! The latest estimates by the Census Bureau give it a population of more than six million. The assessed valuation of its property, real and personal, for taxation purposes, is nearly 22 billion dollars. The cost of its city government is now more than a half billion dollars a year. And it has more than a million pupils in its public schools. —Current Events.

CONFERENCE NOTES

—Rev. S. W. Taylor and other conference officers were unanimously re-elected.

—Brother J. H. Allen was elected to serve with the president on the Stationing Committee.

—The younger ministers gave a supper one evening to the superannuated ministers.

—The following ministers were placed among the superannuates this year: Ashburn, Thompson, Whitaker.

—Several business men of Winston aided our people in entertaining members of conference by paying bills at hotels.

—Bros. R. M. Cox and R. N. Hauser gave a supper on Friday evening to all members of conference at Robert E. Lee hotel.

—Bro. and Mrs. George B. Harris, of Henderson, were among the visitors.

—Mr. Willis Harris, a son of Rev. C. F. Harris, now living near the western coast, was at conference one day, with his sister, Mrs. Dr. Glascock, of Greensboro.

—Rev. L. W. Gerringer was called to Burlington on Sunday afternoon to conduct the funeral of Charles Sharpe.

—Revs. G. F. Millaway and R. S. Troxler were called to Mt. Pleasant on Monday to conduct the funeral of Mrs. Mendenhall, mother of Miss Dovie Mendenhall. She had reached the advanced age of 87 years.

—The committee on group insurance was continued for a year. There were several new applicants and it is hoped the requisite number will be reached this year.

—W. F. Grabs was present on Sunday. He is a great friend of the Children's Home. The children know him and love him.

—Winston is said to have 110 churches and 110 business establishments.

—The Conference Brotherhood held its annual meeting Friday afternoon. The officers were re-elected.

—Our ministers filled many pulpits on Sunday, in Winston and outside.

—President Broomfield goes next to the Alabama and Florida conferences.

—The Winston church building is unlike any other that we have seen, but it has adaptability to large or small congregations and has quite a number of rooms for classes of the Sunday school. The transormation from an old-time to a modern church was unusually successful. It is a good plant now.

—Business of conference brought forth one or two warm debates, but out of them came substantial harmony. The spirit of brotherhood exists in our conference to a remarkable degree. We have never seen it surpassed in any conference we have visited.

—Five ministers were ordained on Sunday: Way, Henderson, W. M. Loy, O. C. Loy, and J. H. Trollinger.

—Rev. Roy Farmer, pastor of First Church, High Point, was received into the North Carolina Conference from the Ohio Conference. He is heartily welcomed as Rev. R. J. Tamblyn was welcomed a year ago.

—The following were chosen to present to our people during November the urgent need of High Point College: Dixon, Bethea, Pritchard, Harrison, Gerringer, Farmer, and Gibbs. Their charges are asked by the Annual Conference to liberate these pastors for a few weeks for this purpose.

—Dr. and Mrs. Spahr were present part of the session.

—Dr. George R. Brown was elected as Conference Treasurer and Rev. J. Clyde Auman was elected Treasurer of Special Funds.

—Missionary work was represented in addresses by J. Clyde Auman, J. F. Minnis, and Dr. J. C. Broomfield.

—Women's work had its representatives in a meeting addressed by Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Hammer, and Mrs. Bates.

—On Young People's night Rev. Roy I. Farmer made a stirring address.

—Among the visitors at conference was Miss Whitley, of Indiana. She was graduated from Adrian College two years ago and is now teaching in a Baptist institution in this state.

—Bro. Barker was called home by the sickness of his wife. Prayer was offered for her and for a brother of Rev. G. W. Holmes, also very ill.

—The matter of disposing of the building formerly used for Yadkin College was committed for recommendation next conference.

—An installation service was adopted for use in local churches in installing church officers.

REMINISCENCES

After reading Rev. C. E. Ridge's report of the camping meeting at Chapel Hill church it brought back to my mind memories of 58 years ago. I well remember that camp meeting of 1870, although I never was at Chapel Hill. The Rev. Jack Laughlin, the pastor at that time, was my father. I remember he and my step-mother going to hold that camp meeting and their having left me at home by myself to keep house and take care of things, although only a 15-year-old boy. I did my own cooking and milked the cow, pulled fodder, took care of things in general. That was a long week to me, by myself day and night, and the worst of it all I was not a Christian myself but I was willing to do this if my father could help somebody else. My father died 42 years ago last August and "I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, Write blessed are dead which die in the Lord; yea, saith the Spirit that they may rest from their labors and their works to follow them." I am glad that his work still lives at Chapel Hill. All of these years I have thought I would like to go to Chapel Hill. Ever since I have been preaching myself I would love to preach in that old church and stand in the place where my father stood. But I reckon this desire will never be realized, although as to health and strength I am fully able; otherwise I am not. I wonder if there is any member at Chapel Hill that was there when my father was pastor; if so, I would be glad to hear from you. My address is Randleman, Route 2.

G. A. LAUGHLIN.

Mr. Knutt—Look, there's something about me in the paper. It says that in June there were 15,738,526 passengers carried on the street cars.

Mrs. Knutt—Well, what of it?

Mr. Knutt—I was one of the passengers.—Exchange.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Heavner

David Columbus Heavner departed this life November 1, 1928, aged 68 years, 4 months and 9 days.

In early life he became a member of the Bess Chapel church, was an active member and efficient steward as long as his health would permit, and was faithful until death. March 30, 1881, he married Samantha Jane Bess. To this union were born eleven children, five sons, Lee and Kenneth, of this county, Claud, Thomas and Walter, of Gastonia; six daughters, Mrs. C. M. Childress, Mrs. A. B. Sain, Mrs. F. W. Baxter, Mrs. L. P. Wise, of this county, and Mrs. A. Z. Canipe, of Gastonia, one daughter having preceded him to the grave.

Besides the wife and children, he leaves to mourn their loss, two brothers, two sisters, 35 grandchildren, five great-grandchildren, and a host of relatives and friends. He was a devoted husband, a loving father, and a friend to all. He will be greatly missed in the home, in the church and in the community.

The family wishes to thank the friends and neighbors for their kindness during the sickness and death of the husband and father and brother.

M. C. HENDERSON.

COLLEGE INFORMATION

Last Friday at the college dinner in the Robert E. Lee Hotel, a committee was appointed to bring the interesting facts concerning our college before the people. This committee will endeavor to keep the readers of the Herald posted on valuable information relative to the college from week to week. We suggest that you watch for this article each week and profit by the information given.

After reading the facts, be free and anxious to talk them over among your people and thus spread the good news of our victories and progress at High Point College. We have an extraordinary outlook here and may feel justly proud of the achievements made already.

Just last night—Monday—we were honored and pleased to have a student representative among the young collegiate orators of the state in an eventful contest at State College, Raleigh. Charles Webster Pope, our representative, passed the elimination contest there successfully and was thereby called to compete with the choice speakers in the final race. And while we did not win the prize we were honored to even have a speaker able to hold out in the race with the men from the old and well known colleges and universities of North Carolina.

There are many remarkable achievements you will be happy to review and we trust you may read them with pleasure and then pass the good word on to encourage each other as we labor together for the financial support which is necessary in order that the college may continue to do its great work.

Committee on Information.

JEWISH REPRESENTATIVES TO DELIBERATE ON PALESTINE

A conclave of Jewish leaders from every part of North Carolina will take place at the convention to be held in Goldsboro on Sunday, November 18th. This will be the first gathering of such nature to be held in the state in a number of years. Matters vitally concerning Jewish affairs in general and Palestine in particular will be considered at this gathering. The convention will deal with the following important problems: Campaigns for the United Palestine Appeal in all communities in North Carolina. The U. P. A. is the fund-raising agency of the Zionist organization. Quotas for Zionist membership enrollment will be assigned to all communities. It is also proposed to subdivide the state into seven divisional headquarters with a chairman in each division to be in charge of those activities. Of great importance will be the election of officers and an executive committee to govern Palestine affairs in this state which will occupy the attention of the delegates. A special conference preceding the opening session of the convention will be held at the Goldsboro Hotel, Sunday morning, November 18th. A number of the most important Jewish leaders in the state have been asked to meet Mr. Kellman, president of the Seaboard Zionist Region, at that time to confer with him on the general situation and prepare the necessary program for the opening session of the convention, which will open at 1 p. m. at the Oheb Sholem Synagogue in Goldsboro, at which time a large number of delegates and guests are expected from all parts of the state.

Among the leaders who will attend and address the convention will be Mr. Harry T. Kellman, president Seaboard Zionist Region; Mrs. Israel Shapiro, president Seaboard Hadashas Regional Unit, and Mr. Simon J. Levin, Regional Executive Director, all of Baltimore.

"GOOD MORNING, AUSTRALIA"

The United States and Australia were connected by radio the other day. For a half hour, between 6:30 and 7 o'clock in the morning, Eastern Standard Time, October 26, persons in a broadcasting station near Schenectady, N. Y., carried on conversations with persons in a broadcasting station at Sydney, Australia.

"Good morning," began the announcer in the United States. "Good morning," came the reply from Australia. "It is a nice bright morning here and the time is 6:30. Can you hear me?" said the American announcer. "I can hear you very well; it is 10:30 in the evening in Australia," was the reply.

The test in the United States was made at an experimental station of the General Electric Company. The voices of the Australian speakers were heard so clearly in the United States that they were rebroadcast by WGY, the regular broadcasting station of the General Electric Company, at Schenectady.—Current Events.

A MORNING PRAYER

Teach us, Thou Shepherd of mankind,
Thy pastures rich to find
This day, with happy, trustful soul;
Though we may fail to see the goal
Toward which our footsteps wind.

For Thou didst guide through ages gray
Thy saints, each in his day,
Far up the mount; didst give them there
The soul's true vision. May we dare
Go with Thee all the way.

—Ralph Welles Keeler.

PREVENT ACCIDENTS!

A nation-wide campaign to prevent accidents, that will reach every community in the United States, is soon to begin. That was decided in New York recently at the 17th yearly Safety Congress of the National Safety Council. More than 8,000 men and women, from all sections of the United States, attended the meetings.

Last year, 95,000 persons were killed and ten million injured in all kinds of accidents. Among those who lost their lives were 20,000 school children. And nearly all the accidents could have been prevented by proper care!—Current Events.

The Papacy as Bunyan Saw It

John Bunyan was imprisoned for twelve years by the authorities of England because he would not conform to the requirements of the Established Church of England, but he seems to have had little fear of the Pope of Rome. Here is the picture he draws of the pope:

"Now I saw in my dream, that at the end of this valley lay blood, bones, ashes, and mangled bodies of men, even of pilgrims that had gone this way formerly. And while I was musing what should be the reason, I espied a little before me a cave where two giants, Pope and Pagan, dwelt in old time, by whose power and tyranny the men whose bones, blood, ashes, etc., lay there, were cruelly put to death. But by this place Christian went without much danger, whereat I somewhat wondered; but I have learned since, that Pagan has been dead many a day; and as for the other, though he be yet alive, he is, by reason of age, and also of the many shrewd brushes that he met with in his younger days, grown so crazy, and stiff in his joints, that he cannot do little more than sit in his cave's mouth, grinning at pilgrims as they go by, and biting his nails, because he cannot come at them."

Bunyan wrote this about 250 years ago.

"Manifest Destiny" Argument Fails Again

Some time ago we called attention to the fallacy of the "manifest destiny" argument. This argument tries to secure support for a movement on the ground that it is inevitably going to succeed. Instead of going to the trouble of convincing you that it ought to succeed, it simply declares that its success is sure and therefore you ought to favor it. This argument has been used in many great movements of history. The people of Mexico back in the days of Cortez were more easily conquered by the sword because of the fatalism that seized upon their minds. They were made to feel that supernatural powers had decreed their conquest at that time.

Religious and political movements of our own time have been promoted by the same sort of argument. People who wish above all to be with the majority are peculiarly susceptible to this argument. People who put expediency above principle may easily yield to it.

The recent use of this argument to which we refer was that which declared we ought to support Governor Smith in his presidential aspirations because he is evidently a man of destiny. The fact that he had been elected four times governor of New York did not by any means prove that he ought to be elected once for president of the United States.

Let us beware of this fallacious argument wherever it presents itself. It is not an argument that really appeals to reason, but rather one that paralyzes reason. It tries to create the presumption that we are guilty of impiety if we dare think for ourselves and try to be guided by the right rather than allow ourselves to be swept on by what seems inevitable.

The Value of Bunyan's Masterpiece

John Bunyan wrote sixty books, but The Pilgrim's Progress was his masterpiece. We have just read this great book again. We first read it in our early boyhood. It made a powerful impression then. We did not take it quite literally, and yet we did not fully comprehend its spiritual meaning. As we read the book now, we think that we do grasp its inner meaning. It is a vivid picture of the Christian life. It enables one to see clearly what is involved in this life. It thus removes from our minds certain common misconceptions. The man who thinks the Christian life begins and ends with conversion or with joining the church makes a mistake which this book may correct for him. It shows him that the Christian life involves progress, it is a journey, a pilgrimage. The man who thinks the Christian life is a life of inactivity and repose should read this book to find out the fact in the case, to learn that there is struggle and conflict and perilous adventure. The man who dreams of no opposition in the Christian life should read of the experiences of Christian and Faithful and Hopeful. The man who conceives of the Christian life as involving little in the beginning and resulting in little in the end should follow the career of Christian as he leaves wife and children and goes on through the most dreadful experiences because he is filled with a great hope; should follow him to the end of his pilgrimage and see the glorious destination to which his pilgrimage finally leads him. Yes, the Christian life is a journey, a perilous, difficult and painful journey, but it leads somewhere—it leads to everlasting wellbeing, to joys that never end.

The book is a great book because it does a great service to the honest and earnest reader: it makes him aware that he must fight if he would reign, and that he must be clad with the Christian's armor if he would fight a winning battle. The book not only presents a vivid picture of the man that wins in the battle of life, but it also presents warning pictures of many men who try for life's great prize and fail most terribly because they try amiss.

Our own time needs a more vividly realizing sense of the moral perils of life, and it would be a good thing to read again or read for the first time Bunyan's fascinating masterpiece.

"My soul, be on thy guard;
Ten thousand foes arise;
The hosts of sin are pressing hard
To draw thee from the skies."

—We will publish next week the new addresses of pastors who have moved and notified us of their new addresses. We do not change addresses of pastors on our mailing list until we are requested to do so, as we do not know just when this change is desired, even if we know the new address.

MEN FOR THE MINISTRY SUNDAY

Ministerial Recruiting

Three years ago the Board of Christian Education suggested that the church set apart and observe "Men for the Ministry Sunday." It was intended that our pastors make use of the day in any way that seemed appropriate to the purpose. A Sunday near Christmas was mentioned as suitable for such an observance. The Board was gratified to have a number of the annual conferences take action sanctioning the plan, and to know that some of our pastors followed the suggestion.

Why Such a Day

The Methodist Protestant Church has four special days. They are Rally Day, Christian Endeavor Day, Easter and Children's Day. It may seem like an imposition to burden our people with a request to add another. But this is different. "Men for the Ministry Sunday" is not to be the occasion of a financial appeal, nor is it to be for the benefit of any particular denominational enterprise. These indeed are necessary. The Kingdom cannot advance as it should without them. Christian Education, missions and certain benevolent services are essential expressions of the Christian spirit and motive. But how can these succeed without qualified leaders? How can the Gospel be preached without ministers? They must come from its own life and as a result of its own efforts.

To observe such a day is in keeping with the instructions of our Lord when He said, "Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest that he send forth harvesters into his harvest field." (Matt. 9:37, 38.) Individual disciples have not failed to obey this injunction. Occasionally church bodies have taken official action setting apart a certain season for fasting and prayer that God might raise up leaders for the great work of saving the world and building the Kingdom of Heaven. And this is as it should be.

When a definite time is thus provided it directs the attention of God's people to our Lord's command and reminds them of their personal and corporate responsibility to obey it. In this, as in church attendance, giving, observing the Lord's Supper, and other Christian obligations it is easy to become careless and neglectful. But to do so imposes inescapable penalties. In this case it means that some of our young men will fail to respond to the call of God and the church will be deprived of the power of their leadership. Innumerable forces are tugging at their hearts arousing excusable ambitions to become leaders in some other profession or vocation. Today there are more of such forces than ever. They are well nigh irresistible. They apparently offer so much more than the church. Nevertheless if they are approached in the right way they are as ready as any youth the world has ever seen to dedicate themselvs to the Christian ministry. But if the church neglects to obey her Lord's command and neglects to lay upon it the hearts and consciences of her youth she will continue to suffer irreparable loss. Is not a large part of the ineffectiveness of the church today due to a limited leadership? If so she is paying the penalty of past neglect.

The Results of Obedience

United prayer on the part of the church in keeping with this command bespeaks both interest and concern. If she is not concerned those for whom she prays will not be. Before they are moved we must be aroused. Ministers usually come from homes where the parents are interested in the church and its work. The dominant interest of parents is likely to be imparted to their children. This holds true in the church. If she is interested and evidently concerned as to her future leadership, these will be implanted in the hearts of her youth.

To set apart a special day like this makes for unity of thought and action. For a brief time at least all are thinking about the same thing. Their minds are focused upon a cause of vital importance. And being agreed they can claim the promise that "it shall be done." Unity is essential to answered prayer. It is also essential to spiritual power. Whatever therefore makes for a spirit of unity on the part of the church or contributes to that end is of value and merits support.

In the command to "pray that harvesters be sent" there is a promise which is more than implied; a promise that the laborers shall be provided. And the contrary is also true. No prayers, no laborers. Our concern is for more prayer. Because, more prayer, more laborers. On the basis of this conviction Methodist Protestant people everywhere are being asked to set apart some Lord's Day during the Thanksgiving season for this purpose. We can do so in the full assurance that it is in keeping with the Master's instructions and that its obedience will bring the results desired.

When

Because of the crowding interests at Christmas time it was found impossible for most of our pastors to give adequate attention to this plan. The idea is certainly in keeping with the spirit of the season, that of giving oneself in sacrificial service to a great Leader and His cause. But Christmas has taken on the character of a holiday and a time for merry-making. It is difficult to set our minds upon the more serious interests of life. So far as we know there are no objections to having such a day. The problem is to find the time when it will receive more general recognition.

The Thanksgiving season, either just before or just after the day, seems to be the best time. Even if observed the Sunday before, the usual Thanksgiving service occupies only one of the two. Besides there is the Sunday school and the Christian Endeavor gatherings.

It is not intended to settle upon a certain day and have the observance immovable and universal. The important thing is to observe the day! The particular time is immaterial. It would seem not only worth while but a happy thing for all to do something, doing it at a time most convenient to those concerned.

How

It is intended that each church or pastor shall observe the day in a way that suits his own liking. Some suggestions may not be amiss.

First—Let the pastor and his helpers plan a full service of worship with "Men of the Ministry" the central theme. The Scripture, hymns, special music, prayers and sermon should center upon this idea. A prayer might be prepared and distributed in which the entire congregation could join. Such a service will be found most helpful and is the plan the Board of Christian Education has in mind.

Second—A short address by the pastor, or some one equally competent and interested, to the Sunday school and Christian Endeavor. Sometimes the young folks are not found in the worship service. If they are to be reached it will be necessary to go where they are.

Third—A prayer which has been carefully thought out beforehand to be offered at one or if possible at all of the services throughout the day. Few Christian activities are more effective than an earnestly given, sincerely wrought prayer. A sermon may be well prepared and equally well delivered and yet somehow lack reality and get nowhere. It may be beautiful but not convincing. It may please and instruct but never arouse the conscience. These may be true also of a prayer. It may be as artificial and as ineffective. But if there is in it the evidence of love, sincerity, longing, and real anxiety for the Kingdom and for its future leadership it is bound to reach the heart and quicken the conscience of some one.

Fourth—Arrange for some young man to tell the life story of such men as N. D. Hillis, H. W. Beecher, D. L. Moody, C. H. Spurgeon, John Wesley, C. G. Finney, John Knox, Huss, Luther, Savonarola or some other of the numberless ministers of Christ whom he may especially admire. This young man should be chosen for the task with several purposes in view. If necessary the address should be carefully written and learned. If he is well coached he will tell it with interest and effectiveness. It will do good to more than one.

Fifth—If the local church publishes a bulletin it should be packed full of the testimonials of prominent ministers as to what the ministry has meant to them.

Sixth—If the pastor will tell the story of how he became a minister and what he thinks of the ministry as a field of service, even apart from the call of which he was conscious, it will be one of the most effective things he can do. Needless to say it should be done with due modesty and with a strict regard for the truth!

Seventh—Ask some of your more devoted people to offer special prayer for the plans you have made, especially for some of the young men of the congregation whom you may have reason to believe are thinking of the ministry or who by gifts and grace seem fitted for that work.

Eighth—If it is impossible to follow any of the above plans, make the theme the center of the thought and prayers of the mid-week service. It is surely of sufficient importance to merit this consideration.

Suggested Themes

Many pastors will prefer to choose their own topic for discussion but the following may be helpful. If these are not suitable for your particular situation, they may lead to some which are. "Planning Your Life-work." "What Shall I Do With My Life?" "Fitting Myself into God's Plans." "Life at Its Best." "The Whitening Fields." "Making Life Count for the Most." "A Glorious Church." "The Vocation Most Worth While." "Following the Gleam." "A Life-purpose Worth Choosing." "The Higher Motive." "The Opportunities of the Christian Minister." "Great Ministers I Have Known." "What Makes Life Worth Living?" "Heroes of the Cross." "Living for Tomorrow." "Woe Is Me if I Preach Not." "A Minister's Call." "The Call to Preach." "Called According to His Purpose." "A Challenging Vocation."

The Need

That there is real value in observing "Men for the Ministry Sunday" few will question. Our great need is men to fill our pulpits and man our missions, to take advantage of the wonderful opportunities God has opened for us. God has given us scores and hundreds of wonderful men. They have rendered the church and the Kingdom a priceless service. Their labors and sacrifices are the glory of the past and the light of the present. But some are passing away, others have to step out because of ill health or other hindering circumstances. We have threescore or more pulpits unsupplied. Many are filled with those who are quite unfitted for the responsibilities they are compelled to carry. Although we have approximately one hundred men in training for the ministry of the Methodist Protestant Church, there is room and need for twice that number. There would be a challenging opportunity for them when their period of preparation is finished. The urgent need should inspire the desire to make the most of this plan.

Pastors will not fail to find a place in any plans they carry out in the observance of "Men for the Ministry Sunday" to emphasize the need of thorough preparation. In almost every modern occupation there is a new emphasis upon training. Our colleges and universities are taxed to their capacity with enrollments that are increasing annually. Surely no vocation is any more important than that of the Christian ministry, a work which deals not only with the things of time but with the things of eternity. And now with a new stress being placed upon religious education it is more important than ever that the prospective minister be "thoroughly furnished."

ADDRESS TO THE YOUNG PREACHER

By Rev. C. H. Whitaker

You are standing at the threshold of the noblest work to which men have ever been called, and among the many qualifications essential I will name among the first complete consecration, unfaltering faith, and a sublime courage founded in your conviction of the greatness of the calling and the might of Him who called you.

This address is the result of information that there is a misunderstanding concerning the purpose of the course of study that has been arranged for the benefit of those who are preparing to enter the conference as ministers. Where they got the erroneous idea under which they labored I do not know. I have known sick people who seemed to think that the physician prescribed a certain course of treatment for his own pleasure, and to show how much he knew.

Please do not think I am comparing our course of study to disagreeable medicine. Far from it. It would be a delightful pastime did we not feel so many important duties and obligations demanding attention. There are two essential ends to be attained by completing the requirements, a major and a minor. The minor is membership in the conference. There are certain rights and privileges that can be yours in no other way. The other is that you may be better prepared to do the great work to which you have been called by the Holy Spirit. Paul speaks of it as our "high calling" and "holy calling." In the Epistle to the Hebrews it is a "heavenly calling." It is so high, and so holy, and so heavenly, nothing less than our very best is fit to be offered in the name of Him who called us.

"Study to show thyself approved unto God." Paul did not say study books, or people, or conditions. He says study. The purpose is to show ourselves approved unto God. We must study everything that will help us to do that.

A hard working farmer was toiling in his field in western Pennsylvania when a young man who was a student in the scientific department of a nearby college joined him. As they discussed the business that had brought them together the young man began rubbing the soil between his hands. Presently he asked the farmer if he knew that there was coal in his land. The farmer had it investigated and was soon a millionaire. My brethren, there is gold in every congregation. It is our business to find it. We study people and conditions that we may understand the needs. We study books that they may help us to solve the problems. The physician studies his books, then studies his patients. When he finds what the trouble is, the books help him to decide on the proper treatment.

Our course of study is divided into four parts, viz.: entrance, first year, second year, third year. In order that we may better understand I have arranged them by a different system, with different designations, which I call: preliminary, preparation, practice (which includes preaching and pastoral work), and proving. This arrangement and these topics may not suit you. There is no law compelling you to accept them.

1. Preliminary. Frankly this does not suit me, for the reason that preliminaries are considered unimportant, and might be left off. That, however, is not the meaning of the word. Observe the derivation. Under this head I have placed the school books, discipline, democratic Methodism. It can be readily seen that these are logically in the forefront, being the necessary foundation. Do not let the arrangement confuse you. It is not a rearrangement of the course. We are studying the course, not the separate studies.

The preachers are the representatives of the denomination before the world. They must know the language of those to whom they preach, as well as the history, creed, and polity of the church. The Pharisees asked, "How knoweth this man letters, having never learned?" They intended to criticise and discredit. They probably meant he had not been to their schools. But they admitted that he knew. "How knoweth this man?" It does not matter if you are criticised if you know, and your critics find that you know. You will probably be told that there is no difference between your church and some others. Do you know what the difference is? Can you tell it?

2. Preparation. I have six studies here. How to Study, Preparation and Delivery of Sermons, Effective English, The Bible, Elements of Divinity, Binney. The Bible is our textbook, our Magna Charta. Jesus said, "Search the Scriptures." He said, "Go teach all nations to observe all things that I have commanded you." Paul said, "Preach the word." Not your opinion. Not some fad, or ism. "Preach the word." "Preach the word." Preach that men should repent. Preach that "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life." Preach love. And again, Preach love.

Preach optimistically. He is a great Savior and can save great sinners. "In all these things we are more than conquerors. In tribulations, famine, nakedness, peril, sword." "The weapons of our warfare are not carnal."

What is a good sermon? I will let an eminent English bishop answer. He says a good sermon must satisfy four requirements. Note the four and see if there is any objection. He says it must be interesting, intelligible, relevant, and edifying. He continues, "The foundation of successful preaching is the power to interest the hearer."

Shepard in his book, Before an Audience, says, "You should catch the attention of your audience with your first sentence." Have you noticed that some very successful preachers have this power? Second, intelligibility. No one is interested in what he can not understand. A church sending request to conference for a pastor said, "We have had a professor of history, a professor of science, of mathematics, etc., please send us a professor of religion." You would not preach the same kind of sermon before a convention of doctors or lawyers as to the inmates of a children's home. The next point fits in very aptly here.

3. Relevancy. Make your sermon suit the occasion and the audience. I don't mean try to please, but don't preach a revival sermon on a funeral occasion. A better educational preparation than formerly is imperative. My first and second pastorates a quarter of a century ago were in average rural communities. There was not a college bred man or woman, and not more than a half dozen who could enter high school on either field. There is not a congregation of whom this is true today. High schools are graduating hundreds and a constantly increasing stream of young folks come from our colleges.

"A good sermon must be edifying, building up the spiritual life." You must inspire as well as instruct. "Edifying preaching can result only from close fellowship with God. It presupposes a rich and developing religious experience of the preacher."

My third topic is practicing. Doing the work of pastor and preacher. The studies under this head are, Empty Churches, Church School, Ideal Ministry, Psychic Culture, Christian Ethics. These, not the studies but the work, are the big problems of administration and of conduct and are related to the intimate life of the preacher. His daily walk and work. The pulpit is where the preacher's greatest opportunity, his greatest influence, his greatest power is. He is there in the presence of Him who has called him, with the message he is sent to deliver; not his word, but his Master's. Can you stand there in that august presence and have the least feeling of levity? Moses said, "I exceedingly fear and quake." Some writer strongly condemns one who "courts a grin" when he should be "trying to win a soul." There is great difference between earnestness and sensationalism. There is a dignity that should be present in the minister that should commend his calling. Paul says, "I magnify mine office." "I honor my ministry," is said to be the literal meaning. I do not mean that he should assume an exalted idea of his own importance. The world applies the undignified term "bighead" to that attitude. "We are ambassadors for Christ." Paul says, "Take heed to thyself, and to the doctrine." And again, "Let no man despise thee." If the preacher's greatest power for good is in the pulpit—and will any deny it?—that power is multiplied if his life is back of his preaching. One asked a converted heathen if he knew Jesus. The savage replied, "No, but I know the missionary and he knows Jesus." My young brethren, "Can the world see Jesus in you?" "A bishop must be blameless and of good report of them that are without."

4. My fourth topic is Proving. The books to be studied are Logic, Personal Salvation, Divine Credentials. A bishop must "hold fast the faithful word that he hath been taught hat he may be able to exhort and to convince the gain-ayers."

There is the story of a young man who had been admitted o the bar whose educational advantages had not been great nd who sat down to reason about his chance to succeed. His onclusion was that he had to prove things, and to know hat he had proved them. He had never studied geometry ut knew that it was a science that dealt in proved conclu-ons. He delayed entering upon his practice until he had astered this science, and became a very successful lawyer. he preacher should know, in the first place, that he himself saved. Unless he can say, "I know that my redeemer veth," "I know whom I have believed and that he is able o keep," it is useless for him to try to tell a lost one the way f salvation. Then he should know how to present the truth. Give a reason of the hope that is in him." The books under is topic are intended to do this—will do this.

Let me assure you that our desire, the desire of every ember of this faculty, is to help you to be more useful and uccessful in your God-given task. The bringing of the lost o the Savior "who loved us and gave himself for us." I elieve every member of the faculty will stand with me to nphasize this assurance.

"I charge you therefore before God and the Lord Jesus hrist; Preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; prove, rebuke, with all long-suffering and doctrine.

"Watch thou in all things, endure afflictions, do the work an evangelist, make full proof of thy ministry." Then ou will be able to say, "Henceforth there is laid up for me crown of righteousness which the Lord will give me."

"Unto him that loved and washed us from our sins in his vn blood, and hath made us kings and priests, unto God d his Father; to him be glory and dominion forever and er. Amen."

THE CHEERFUL MAN

What a boon he is, says Ohio State Journal, in everybody's e! Like a bright sunrise and a gentle south wind coming gether on a winter morning, he is to all who cross his path. e brushes cheerily along, knocking grief and disappointment t of his path, and leaving it fringed with flowers. Such man is worth a great deal in the world; more than all his oney, or his wisdom, or his ambitious schemes. People feel sort of pleasure just seeing him come down the street, and hen they meet him there is not a cloud in sight.

Such men are a blessing to a town. They make one feel at the town is growing, is getting more beautiful, more an a place just to eat and sleep and make a living in. ometimes one doesn't meet such men and then he feels that e town is degenerating, that things are going wrong and at the evil spirit is trying to put a little malice in his heart, d he goes home and meets his wife's smile with a feeling suspicion.

A cheerful man doesn't realize the amount of good he is ing in the world. But it is his nature and he cannot help Heaven has picked him out as one of its angels, and he is ithful to his mission. Every day some fellow has been ade happy by his pleasant smile and his genial "good orning;" and if one has a bit of business with him, it passes very much like an exchange of compliment.

To be cheerful may not be so great a duty as to be honest unselfish, but it certainly widens the radiance of these rtues.—Selected.

SPURGEON'S CONVERSION

As is very generally known, Dr. Charles Haddon Spurgeon, perhaps, with the exception of John Wesley, the greatest preacher of modern times, was converted under the preaching of an obscure Methodist minister whose name no one knows. Dr. Spurgeon thus described this interesting event which exercised so far-reaching an influence in the world:

"I sometimes think I might have been in darkness and despair until now, had it not been for the goodness of God in sending a snow-storm one Sunday morning, when I was going to a certain place of worship. When I could go no farther, I turned down a side street and came to a little Primitive Methodist chapel. In that chapel there may have been a dozen or fifteen persons. . . . At last a very thin-looking man, a shoemaker, or tailor, or something of the sort, went into the pulpit to preach. . . . The text was: 'Look unto me, and ye shall be saved, all the ends of the earth.' . . . The preacher began thus: 'My friends, this is a very simple text indeed. It says, Look. Now lookin' don't take a great deal of pains. It ain't liftin' your foot or finger; it is just, Look. Well, a man needn't go to college to learn to look. You may be the biggest fool on earth and yet you can look.' Then, lifting his hands, he shouted, as only a Primitive Methodist can shout, 'Young man, look to Jesus Christ. Look! Look! Look! You have nothing to do but look and live.' I saw at once the way of salvation. . . . There and then the cloud was gone, the darkness had rolled away, and that moment I saw the sun; and I could have risen that instant and sung, with the most enthusiastic of them, of the precious blood of Christ and the simple faith which looks alone to Him."

Think of what the world might have lost if the pedants of that time had made it impossible for that simple, earnest, uneducated Methodist preacher to stand in the pulpit and in his artless way point the unsaved to Jesus!—Selected.

FRETTING

One fretter can destroy the peace of a family; can disturb the harmony of a neighborhood; can unsettle the councils of cities, and hinder the legislation of nations. He who frets is never the one who mends, who heals, who repairs evil; more, he discourages, enfeebles and often disables those around him, who, but for the gloom and depression of his company, would do good work and keep up brave cheer. The effect upon a sensitive person in the mere neighborhood of a fretter is indescribable. It is to the soul what cold, icy mist is to the body—more chilling than the bitterest storm. And when the fretter is one who is believed, then the misery of it becomes, indeed, insupportable.—Selected.

THE GREAT DISCOVERY

"What is the greatest discovery you ever made?" asked a young man of the celebrated Sir James Y. Simpson, Bart., the discoverer of the use of chloroform as an anaesthetic. He replied: "The greatest discovery I ever made was that I was a great sinner, and that Jesus was a great Savior."

The person who has never made the discovery that he is a sinner, and who considers he has no need of a Savior, is a person in peril. Jesus "came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance."—Selected.

—Ill-gotten gains give a little pleasure for the moment, but afterwards cause lasting woe.—Antiphanes.

OPTIMISM | The President's Letter | EVANGELISM

Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples.—John 15:8.

The Conference

The Winston church was a generous host, as every one testifies. The efficient committee on entertainment, headed by Mr. R. N. Hauser, seemed to have forgotten nothing nor spared nothing that would contribute to the success and the happiness of the conference. No feature of any conference that we recall was more effective than the banquet given at the Robert E. Lee Hotel by two of our strong and interested laymen. We are all grateful for such abounding hospitality, and shall always remember this as one of our very best conferences.

At the Front

After a few days of intermittent rest we are again at the front, with hopes high and courage strong. The conference year, and the conference just closed, are now pleasant memories, and once more we turn our faces toward a new year of opportunities and responsibilities. It will, no doubt, be a year beset with trying difficulties and hard labor; but nevertheless, it will be a year of joy and triumph; for God is with us. And "If God be for us, who can be against us?" Our watchwords still, therefore, are Optimism and Evangelism. In this spirit, "We conquer."

Shortly before our Saviour left his disciples he said to them, "Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit, so shall ye be my disciples." We all want this to be a year of much fruit-bearing—and surely this is the will of God. We appeal, therefore, to every pastor and every charge to set high goals now, at the very beginning of the year, and to "press toward the prize." "Lest we forget," we are setting these words of our Saviour at the head of our weekly letter, with the hope and the prayer that more and more we may realize them in our personal lives, in our ministry, and in the programs of the church. Nothing that we can do can be more assuring, more inspiring, and more pleasing to God, than to determine now that this shall be a year of "much fruit-bearing."

New Charges—Old Charges

This is what we are facing now, as we do every year at this time. Some pastors will change; others will not. Our itinerant system, and the interest of all matters concerned make these changes inevitable. Pastors who are moving will quickly become identified with their new work, we trust; and those who are staying will, of course, promptly set the machinery of the church going for the work of the new year. In either case—staying or moving—let us have new pastors and new charges. New in personal consecration; new in loyalty to each other and to every conference program; new in brotherliness; new in liberality; new in study and labor, that God may have in us a new opportunity to magnify his grace and his power. And brethren of the laity, give to the old pastor and to the new your heart and your hand. He is a divinely chosen leader, and appointed by the conference as such; do not forget that you can have his best service only by recognizing his leadership. And you, pastors, will remember always that leadership is not secured by an office, but by wise and progressive service, and the power of a pious life.

The Budgets

The conference ordered that the budget allotments should be made by "The New Century Service Commisison," created by the conference. This commission has had one meeting, and is prepared to report this week, through the HERALD, the allotments for A. C. B., Superannuates, College Maintenance, and Gratitude Gift balance. The G. C. B. is still under consideration by the Commission, and the report can not be published before next week. The problems that this budget presents to the Commission are so apparent to the conference that we feel the delay in publishing the report will be endorsed. Then, too, it is to be said that we were not able to have a full attendance of the Commission at our first meeting.

College Maintenance

By the unanimous order of the conference, this was increased to $10,000, and November named in which it is to be raised. The conference voted, also, to release certain pastors to assist, by full-time service, in raising this allotment. The churches to which they were assigned will acquiesce, we are sure, in this arrangement. The allotments for each charge will appear in the HERALD this week, and probably payments that have already been made. We know of one charge that has already paid in full, and another one that is half out—one a city charge, the other rural. No more important work is before us at this time. This college must be maintained, and we must do it. Every pastor and every charge is expected to carry out this conference order by giving the full measure of loyalty to this undertaking. Of course none will fail. Of course none will fail.

Promptness

In the business world there are but few qualities more valued than promptness. To encourage this, and most probably to magnify its value, a director of a bank once told me that a dollar bill was put in the chair of each director, and each one who was on time pocketed his money; the late-comers lost. We do not have any money to offer as a reward for promptness, but we would like to enter into a solemn covenant with every pastor to practice this virtue this year. And right now we are putting a pin here while we get off a letter that should not be delayed. . . . The letter is posted. Perhaps we have all been sinners in this matter of not attending to correspondence, and even important correspondence. But let us repent, even in sackcloth and ashes, and make this year famous for promptness. It will be good practice, too, for your appointments. If you are to begin a service at 10 a. m., be there on time, and begin. Waiting for the folks to come is bad practice. When they learn that you begin on time, they will be there. And again I say, "Be prompt."

Activities

Thursday, Nov. 8. On this date we met with the college maintenance committee, headed by President Andrews, to assist in putting in readiness the plans for raising the $10,000 for the college, as ordered by the conference. Tuesday, November 13, we were again in session with this committee; spoke also to the students in the college chapel, and met with the Board of Church Extension in the afternoon. All appropriations made last year were ordered paid, so far as our money would reach, and new appropriations made for this year. The Board was organized, with Rev. J. E. Pritchard as chairman, and Mr. W. L. Ward, of Asheboro, as secretary and treasurer.

On Monday, November 12, we held a meeting with the New Century Service Commission in an effort to apportion the budgets for this year. Our task, so far as we were able to complete it, will be given through the HERALD this week by the secretary of the Commission, Rev. C. W. Bates.

Appointments

Wednesday, Nov. 14, In conference with the Gibsonville church.

Thursday, Nov. 15, In conference with First Church, Thomasville.

Sunday, November 18, In the opening service of the new Spencer church.

Saturday, December 8, In quarterly conference on Why Not charge.

"Now the God of patience and consolation grant you to be likeminded one toward another, according to Christ Jesus;

"That ye may with one mind and one mouth glorify God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ."

A THANKSGIVING MEDITATION

By H. H. SMITH

It is well to have a Thanksgiving Day once a year; but as every day should be a holy day, spent for the glory of God, and not simply one day in seven; so every day should be a Thanksgiving Day, for each day brings its added blessings. A little boy, tired of hearing his father ask a blessing at the table three times a day, said: "Why don't you go down in the cellar and ask a blessing over the whole barrel of pork and save the time of doing it at every meal?" There are adults also who believe in "lumping" their thanksgiving and confining it to a single day out of the three hundred and sixty-five.

Ingratitude seems to be a common fault of humanity. "Were there not ten cleansed?" asked the Master, "but where are the nine? There are not found that returned to give glory to God, save this stranger." We are often mere beggars before the Lord, continually asking for blessings, and failing to give thanks for those received. A pastor once decided to have a prayer-meeting in which all who participated were to devote their whole prayer to an expression of gratitude for God's blessings without asking for more blessings. It was so difficult for those who offered prayer to confine themselves to thanksgiving alone that the audience was somewhat amused at the effort put forth to keep from falling into the old habit of making the prayer principally a matter of petition for greater blessings.

Perhaps some have had a hard year in many respects, and feel that they have little to be thankful for; but upon closer examination they will find many things for which to be thankful. In some cases loved ones have been called away, and we "long for the touch of a vanished hand, and the sound of a voice that is stilled." But let us be grateful to God that we can look forward to a happy reunion beyond this vale of tears. This is one of the great blessings of Christianity. A missionary in Korea lost his little child, and as the funeral procession passed along the street, one of the natives remarked, "How sad that the poor man's child has died!" But another native said: "It is not so sad with him as it is with us, for he knows osme way to be reunited with his child in the next world." In the hour of grief let us be grateful for this glorious hope of reunion with our loved ones who have preceded us to the Father's home above.

If tempted to think our lot harder than that of others, we should remember that there are many less fortunate than ourselves. The story is told of a beggar who was severely complaining because he had no shoes, when, suddenly he saw carried along the street another beggar who had lost both feet. Then in shame and confusion he ceased complaining and thanked God that he was better off with his bare feet than the beggar who had no feet at all.

Even adversity often has its bright side for which we should be thankful. Many a person has been brought to God by affliction. The writer recalls the case of an old man about 75 years of age who was seized with an incurable disease. He had been an unbeliever all his life, but, facing inevitable death in a short time, he heartily turned to God and died in the full assurance of faith. On his deathbed he thanked the Lord over and over again for the affliction that had brought him to himself and turned his heart to God. "It is good for me that I have been afflicted," said the psalmist. The frost blights the roses, but it destroys the fatal fever germs; the electric storm may damage life and property, but it purifies the atmosphere and wards off a plague.

Some people are thankful only when they have had a narrow escape from some great evil. But why not consider the blessings that come unmixed with evil as providential? A man once related to Bishop Whateley what he called a case of a wonderful providence. He said he had been in a shipwreck and every one but himself had perished. He felt sure that this was an extraordinary providence and a demonstration of special care on the part of God. "Whateley replied that he knew of a case more wonderful still. Some friends of his had sailed for some distant port and all had arrived safe. And not only they, but all the passengers had arrived safe. And still more wonderful, the crew and the vessel and the cargo had arrived safe; and no loss of any kind had been suffered during the voyage. The safety of all surely testified more eloquently of a divine providence than the bare escape of one."

We show our gratitude to God by our conduct more than by our words. God has given us life, with its many privileges and duties. How are we using this gift of life with its accompanying blessings? Are we thankful that we know not what it is to face real want? Then, we must not forget the multitudes who have a hard struggle to get bread for themselves and their families. We cannot be grateful for abundant material blessings and ignore the cry of hungry orphans in other parts of the world. Are we grateful for the Gospel? Then, we cannot neglect to send the bread of life to the benighted millions. We are truly grateful to God for all His blessings only when we use them to glorify Him and promote His Kingdom.

We often fail to be truly thankful for daily bread, taking it as a matter of course. Have we not worked for it and earned it by the sweat of our brow—or brain? But trace the loaf back to its origin and we trace it back to God.

"Back of the loaf is the snowy flour,
Back of the flour the mill;
Back of the mill the wheat and the shower,
And the sun and the Father's will."

OUR STORY PAGE

A TIME TO FIGHT

Father and Mother had moved to town, and James had to go to a different school.

After James had been going to this new school a few days, two of the boys had a fight on the playground at recess.

All the other boys began to yell, "A fight! A fight!" And they made a circle around the fighters, yelling, "Go it! Hit him again, Carl!" "Why don't you knock him out, John?"

James watched the fight a few minutes, and asked the boy standing beside him, "What's it all about? What are they fighting over?"

"Why, Carl put a chip on his shoulder and dared John to knock it off," said the boy.

"And you call that something to fight over? I don't." And James walked away.

The next morning when James went to school he found a crowd of the boys standing at the gate of the playground.

"Here comes the good little boy who won't fight," said one of them.

"Who said I wouldn't fight?" asked James.

"Oh, we know. You're a 'fraid cat," said another boy.

"I'm not a 'fraid cat, and I'll fight when there's a reason for it," said James.

"Oh, boys, he says he'll fight when there's a reason for it, and he said yesterday there was no reason for John and Carl to fight. He's his mother's good little boy."

"Yes, I am my mother's boy, and I'm proud of it. My mother says, 'There are only two reasons for fighting; one is to fight yourself to keep from doing wrong, and the other is to fight to keep wrong from being done another.'"

"Oh, hear him preach, boys. He's a 'fraid cat, that's what he is."

Just then the school bell rang, and, with cries of " 'fraid cat," "mother's baby," "sissy" and "coward," the boys hurried to form in line to march into their schoolroom.

At recess, as soon as the boys went to the playground, they formed a circle around James, and began daring him to fight, calling him all sorts of names, " fraid cat," "Mamma's good little boy," and "sissy," and one of the boys shook his fist under James' nose and said, "Dare you to fight."

"Oh, he won't fight. He's afraid he might get his clothes dirty," yelled a boy, as he knocked James' cap into the mud.

James' eyes flashed, and he straightened up and set his teeth tight together and clenched his fists.

It looked as if there were going to be a fight, but slowly James opened his hands and walked over and picked up his cap, and began to brush the mud off as he walked away from the boys.

One of the boys ran along beside James and said, "Aw, why didn't you fight him? He isn't any bigger'n you are. You could have licked him. The boys won't let up on you until you fight. I know. I had to when I first came here and now they let me alone."

"I was fighting, all the time," said James. "I was fighting myself to keep from fighting Tom."

"Why didn't you fight him, then?"

"Fighting Tom wouldn't have taken the mud off my cap. All the good it would have done was to show the boys they could make me fight, and I tell you they can't unless there's a reason."

When James reached school the next morning, John, the biggest boy in the room, and the one who was always starting fights, as he could whip most of the boys, came up to him and said, "So the 'fraid cat said no boy could make him fight. I see you took good care to say it when I wasn't around. You don't dare fight me."

"I dare do it and I can lick you, too," said James as the school bell rang.

After school, James saw a crowd of boys on one side of the playground, and, when he went over there, he found John and a little boy from a lower grade in the center of the crowd.

"Please, John, let me go," James heard the little boy say.

"The little baby wants to run home to his mother," said John. "Here, give me that pencil," and he snatched a new long pencil out of the little boy's pocket.

"Please give my pencil back," cried the little boy.

"No, I won't," said John. "You can run along home. This pencil just suits me," and he put it into his own pocket.

"You're a thief to take my pencil," cried the little boy.

"A thief, am I?" said John, and he gave the little boy a slap that knocked him down.

Quick as a flash James put his books on the ground, jerked off his cap and coat, and rushed through the crowd of boys. Snatching the pencil from John's pocket he handed it to the little boy and said, "There, sonny, run along home."

John drew back his arm and doubled his fist, as he said, "You will, will you?"

"Yes, I will," said James, as he dodged the blow John aimed at his head, at the same time planting a blow on John's jaw that made him see stars.

Fast and furious fell the blows. The boys who were watching were so surprised to see James fight that they forgot to yell, at first.

John was a larger, stronger boy than James, and he was a fighter. There wasn't a boy in the crowd that he hadn't licked, but James was quicker and knew how to hit where it would count for the most, and it wasn't long before John cried, "Enough," amid the yells of the boys, "Good for James!" "Serves John right!" "Who said James wouldn't fight?"

As James put on his coat, he said, "I told you boys I would fight when there was a reason."

And he never had to fight again as long as he went to that school.—Presbyterian.

CIGARETTE SMOKING AND MOTHERHOOD

In view of the present furor for smoking cigarettes, we think the following statement should be given due consideration. We clip it from a reliable exchange: "According to a statement made recently by Dr. C. L. Barber, Lansing, Mich., at the annual convention for Medical Physical Research, sixty per cent of all babies born from cigarette-smoking mothers die before they reach the age of two, due primarily to nicotine poisoning."—The Bible Champion, Reading, Pa.

Denominational Enterprises

TO THE METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH

There are few more important enterprises in the Methodist Protestant Church than Westminster College, Tehuacana, Texas. It is not a large school. It is not a senior but a junior college. The student body is not large, only 180 enrolling last year. There are only a dozen faculty members. The equipment is only moderate, there being three buildings, two of which are frame and both well beyond the time of their greatest usefulness. Texas Hall is a stately old building, made from the rock in the hill upon which it stands and a credit to the community and the church. It too is in need of repairs. Generous friends have made it more attractive and useful but it would take several thousand dollars more to give it the finish it so much needs. The library is small, the scientific equipment inadequate, while there is abundance of room for more chairs, desks, pianos and other furnishings.

Less than three years ago those who have carried the burden of this enterprise were utterly discouraged. They had come to the end of their resources and were convinced it was useless to keep up the struggle any longer. The money raised during the Million Dollar Campaign was exhausted. Grasshoppers, drought and a low price for cotton had brought our people to the verge of bankruptcy. Various circumstances had destroyed the good name of the school. It was decided to try once more in spite of these handicaps, but a mere handful of students responded to the announcements. The rating as a junior college was lost.

There seemed no one able to lead out of the wilderness. But Dean J. G. Willis did not lose heart. He consented to fill the position of acting president as well as that of dean. Rev. E. M. Mouser went into the field for funds. The contributions from the Board of Education were increased. And along came another "oil boom" and the college properties were leased for a respectable sum. Evidently the Lord did not intend this enterprise to perish. At least not until the Methodist Protestant Church had had another opportunity to redeem itself and save the situation. The school year passed off beautifully. No deficit was incurred and some of the obligations were paid.

The next year friends arose on every hand. The farmers had a good crop and received a good price. At a great personal sacrifice Rev. and Mrs. G. O. McMillan gave up their Oklahoma home and went down to Tehuacana to assume the responsibility of leadership and to see what more might be done to improve the situation. The plan to ask 500 people to give $10 or more a year for five years was undertaken and brought several thousand dollars to the college. A campaign of advertising and for students resulted in greatly improving sentiment and in securing a splendid enrollment. The indebtedness was reduced from around $15,000 to less than $6,500, due partly to the help from the Gratitude Gift. Its accrediting as a junior college was restored and a new day dawned.

The lost prestige of the school in the minds of the surrounding communities as well as in the supporting conferences was the hardest thing to overcome. They refused to send their children there. Westminster College was almost a by-word. But things have changed. The conferences of that area have heartily pledged their loyal support and are sending their students. The following clipping from the Mexia Daily News tells in a few words how the people in that community, six miles from Tehuacana, feel about it. From October 27-31 the Texas Annual Conference met at Tehuacana and here is the editorial in the Mexia News:

"Methodist Protestants, here's our hand. Welcome to the Bi-Stone Empire. The M. P.'s are holding an annual conference at Tehuacana. Some high churchmen there. They will seek to do something to improve the college. Moving it to Mexia wouldn't be a bad idea for the college, and Mexia would doubtless offer an attractive proposition provided the denomination agreed to get behind it. Westminster is a thorough college. There are none getting by easy there. They have to learn to get grades at Westminster. It's a value to the Bi-Stone, and move or stay Mexia is proud of the institution."

For thirty years Westminster College has been serving the cause of Methodist Protestantism in the Southwest. Two-score of its graduates are serving in that territory. Some are working in other parts of the church. There are ten splendid young men enrolled there now preparing themselves for greater usefulness as ministers of Christ in our church. Of this we must be assured: If our educational effort in that area fails, the Methodist Protestant Church will speedily disappear from that territory. Because of the struggle the college has had the church also has had a struggle. It has hardly been able to maintain itself.

This is what is needed: An annual appropriation of from $7,500 to $10,000 from the Board of Christian Education. In addition it needs an endowment of at least $100,000. Much more would be better. If the Methodist Protestant Church would raise the New Century Service fund in full we could go a long way toward realizing these goals.

In the meantime there are other things we can do. One good friend of the college is planning to place in the hands of the Board of Christian Education a splendid gift in the form of an annuity, the nucleus of a fund to support a chair of Bible. As long as she lives she will receive a fair income on this gift and then for years to come it will go on doing the work in which she is interested. Why cannot others do something similar? Gifts, annuities and wills can make the future of the college secure.

For thirty years Westminster College, Tehuacana, Texas, has been serving the cause of Methodist Protestantism. It has had a hard struggle. Upon the shoulders of those who have been responsible for its maintenance has rested a great burden. They have made the limit of personal sacrifices. They have done their share and more. Are there not some generous Methodist Protestants who can find it in their heart to help solve this problem? It is one of the most important missionary enterprises in the denomination. God grant that we will not let this opportunity pass.

—Treaties and the efforts of statesmen to advance the cause of world peace can only be regarded as a portion of the problem. In addition to treaties there must be an aroused public conscience against the utter horror and frightfulness of war.—Secretary of State Kellogg.

Helps for the Leader

What does the word, "Stewardship" really mean? The giving of our resources to charitable causes and to the church. Yes, but it means more than that. Stewardship is the spirit of giving. The responsibility of the gift is in proportion to the possibilites. "It is easy to overlook the claims of God, to forget His rights, to withhold the honor that is His due. Christian Stewardship not only recognizes Him, but uses His gifts for His glory."

'Most all Christian organizations have a continual struggle with financial problems. The lack of money is not because the people do not have it, but because we fail to give God His dues. We have often heard that we should give God a tenth of all our income, and we are due Him that amount. But if we stop there we have only paid our debts, and haven't given Him anything above our dues. He has granted us our possessions, and we are on our honor to give Him a true and just account of all that He has given us.

"Christian Stewardship," says Dr. Foulkes, "is a key which will unlock the door of industrial peace and good-will." Naturally the bringing about of peace and good-will in industrialism, will be a determining factor in the winning of the world for Jesus.

Points for the Topics and Questions

1. Stewardship would mean to our church:
   a. A greater benevolent work.
   b. The solving of our financial problems.
   c. A better salary for our pastor.
   d. Would bring a greater power to the church.
2. Stewardship would affect Christianity at large:
   a. More adequate program of religious education.
   b. More workers in full-time Christian service.
3. The Tenth Legion as an aid to Stewardship:
   a. The meaning of the Legion; giving a tenth of all our income.
   b. Less extravagant living.
4. How I can be a Steward with little money:
   a. Give as I can. Remember the widow's mite.
   b. I can promote a spirit of giving.

Quotations

"Property is a living trust. Things are tools, not prizes. Life is not for self-indulgence, but self-devotion. When, instead of saying, 'The world owes me a living,' men shall say, 'I owe the world a life,' then the kingdom will come in power. We owe everything to God but our sins. Fatherland, pedigree, home-life, schooling, Christian training —all are God's gifts. Every member of the body or faculty of the mind is ours providentially. There is no accomplishment in our lives that is not rooted in opportunities and powers we had nothing to do with in achieving. 'What hast thou that thou didst not receive?' If God gives us the possibilities and the powers to get wealth, to acquire influence, to be forces in the world, what is the true conception of life but divine ownership and human administration? 'Of Thine own we render Thee.' All there is of 'me' is God's estate, and I am His tenant and agent. On the day of our birth a new leave is signed. On the day of our death accounts are closed. Our fidelity is the interest on God's principal. 'That I may receive mine own with interest,' is the divine intention. So live, that when thy summons comes to give an account of thy stewardship it may be done with joy, and not with grief!"—Maltbie Babcock.

"The practice of stewardship will bring greater happiness to all who follow it. They will have the satisfaction of having been true to their obligation to God."—Selected.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

NOV. 25: THE PRAYERS OF PAUL

Scripture Basis: Acts 20:36-38; Rom. 1:8-10; Eph. 1:15-23; 3:14-21; I Thes. 1:2-5.

Golden Text: Rejoice always; pray without ceasing; in everything give thanks. I Thes. 5:16-18.

Social Prayer

It may be recalled that on his last journey to Jerusalem, Paul passed by Ephesus and stopped at Miletus, where he sent for the elders of the congregations to advise with them. (See lesson for October 26th). Having instructed and admonished them in things pertaining to the care of the Christians in Ephesus, with much feeling he informed them that they should see him no more. We can only imagine what a pathetic scene that was, as the heart of Paul went out toward those devout men in love, which drew from them the love and sympathy that they bore for him. With affection and sorrow they bade him adieu.

But before he left them, he kneeled down and prayed with them. And such a prayer that must have been! "We can imagine how tender Paul's prayer was, how full of love for the church. He carried to Christ all the needs of his hearers. He lifted their hearts with him to the throne of grace. Orientals are readier than we to show their emotions, and strong men are not ashamed of tears and kisses."

Social prayers may be engaged in under several conditions. The prayer around the family altar, where father is the priest and offers his prayer for the family. Regretful, indeed, is it that in the complexity of modern living we have gotten away from this practice. God help us as Christian parents to return to this habit of Christian living. The church prayer meeting during the week is another place of social prayer. Although other organizations of the church have to some extent supplanted the popular prayer meeting of other days, yet it is to be lamented that there is not more interest manifested in most churches in this service of prayer and praise. Social prayer is practiced in the services of worship on the Sabbath day. When the pastor or leader of the service says, "Let us unite in prayer," he means that the congregation should actually unite with him in thought and feeling as he utters the verbal petition. Methinks such prayers would move God mightily if all were in accord while prayer was being offered.

Intercessory Prayer

How encouraging it must have been to the Roman Christians to know that the great Apostle to the Gentiles remembered them in his prayers! And how strengthening it undoubtedly was to them to know that Paul thanked God for their indomitable faith which was "spoken of throughout the world!" Furthermore, it was his earnest prayer to come to them, not knowing that his desire would be realized, but as a prisoner.

In his prayer for the Ephesians, Paul draws upon the unbounded riches of the glory of God; that the power of the Holy Spirit may grow more powerful in them; that through faith they may enthrone the Christ in their hearts; that His love being rooted and grounded in them may cause them to be able to apprehend the boundless extent of it, and to know that love which is beyond knowledge in the realm of faith; and that they may thus he filled "unto the fulness of God," which is the completeness of the divine nature.

Intercessory prayer can and does accomplish more than we give it credit. "There is no more delicate service in the wholde round of human action than that of intercessory prayer. It is so hidden as to have a special beauty on that account. While men are unconscious that we are thinking of them, we fold our arms about them and bring them up before God for blessing and guidance. Intercessory prayer may be defined as loving our neighbor on our knees."

Thankful Prayer

As in his intercessory prayer for the Roman Christians, so the Apostle thanks God for the faith of the Ephesians, as well as their love. "The remainder of the passage prays more in detail for the Ephesians, that they may come to know more of Jesus Christ, of their eternal hope in him, of their glorious inheritance through him, of the exceeding greatness of his power which he will grant to believers, and of his majestic station at God's right hand in heaven, far above all rulers and dominions, and with all things in subjection under his feet."

Again, Paul rejoices in the faith and love of the Thessalonians, adding hope in their case. The church in Thessalonica, being one of the earliest churches founded by Paul in Europe, was the recipient of the earliest of his writings. "Paul's prayers are unceasingly of them, thankful to God for their faith-filled and loving labors, and for the patient hopefulness with which they look forward."

What is prayer without thanksgiving? How can we petition without praising? If we are not thankful for what we receive from the "Giver of every good and perfect gift," how can we expect him to give us more? And why not be thankful for the perseverance, faith, love, etc., of our fellow-Christians? Even if we are not as far advanced in Christian experience as they, we can surely praise God for their attainments. O, let us ever be thankful for our numberless blessings, both material and spiritual.

Our Children's Home

Thanksgiving Offering for the Home

For several years we have been looking to our people for a special offering for our Children's Home at Thanksgiving, and we are writing to remind you that Thanksgiving is almost here.

A few years ago Mr. J. M. Millikan, chairman of our board of trustees, suggested that our people make an offering of one day's income to the Home at Thanksgiving. This thought was followed up by the Orphans' Home Association of North Carolina, and all the people of our state are asked thus to contribute to the orphanage of their choice.

The need at our High Point Children's Home is especially pressing this time, so we are asking that our people remember the "One day's income for the Home" this year and thus lift us up where our real needs can be supplied. We confidently expect our people to roll up a fine offering for the Home within the next two weeks. We are trying to reach each pastor and each Sunday school superintendent by mail this week to get them to help us reach all our people. If our letter fails to reach you, please take this as our appeal for your help.

We thank our people for these splendid offerings. You cheer our hearts by your gifts. Several gifts of clothing and bed-clothing have come in, but in our present pressure of work in getting moved and in getting hold of the work we haven't them listed for this week, and this must go in the mail or be late. Be patient with us, and things will move systematically soon.

Please remember that we are looking to all our people for that "one day's income for the orphan child" at Thanksgiving. God bless you while you give. Thank you.

Faithfully,

A. G. DIXON.

FIELD WORK FOR THE HERALD

The plan adopted this year looking to a wider circulation of the Herald among our people involves sending by pastors the addresses of those not now receiving the paper that a few sample copies may be sent them. After this has been done, direct appeal (by pastors or others designated by pastors) is to be made for subscriptions.

One pastor has already sent a list of names. We request the others to send us their list by December 1, if convenient, that we may send samples in that month. January was made by conference resolution the special month in which to solicit subscriptions for the Herald.

Dixon-Smathers-Williams Reunion

This family reunion will be held at the Children's Home, High Point, N. C., on Thanksgiving day, beginning at 10:30 a. m. The descendants of Robert L. Dixon, "Uncle Johnnie Williams," "Uncle Billie Williams," "Uncle Robert Williams," and "Uncle Patrick Williams," are all expected to attend. Please load baskets a bit heavy since this Dixon has 77 children in his family now. Rev. J. S. Williams, D. D., of Asheville, N. C., has promised to deliver the address to the group about 11 a. m. in the chapel. Dinner will be served picnic style in the dining room in the boys' building. We are anticipating a great day.

A. G. DIXON.

—President-elect Hoover is to start next Monday by battleship to South America on a good-will trip. He will stop and inspect the Panama Canal and will then proceed to some of the South American countries on the west coast. It is guessed that Mr. Hoover thinks this a more pleasant and useful way to spend the next few weeks than hearing the appeals of aspirants for office.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Enfield.—On Thursday night preceding conference, the annual business meeting of the Enfield church was held in the hut, with the pastor, Rev. J. Clyde Auman, presiding. The hut had been made very attractive with fall flowers, and a blazing fire added to the cheerfulness of the occasion. The meeting was opened with Scripture reading and prayer, and a number of stirring hymns were sung. The church register was revised and church officers elected for the ensuing year. They were as follows: Stewards, J. R. Powers, P. S. Bellamy, E. I. Bellamy and Miss Mary Collins; trustees, R. C. Rives, J. B. Davies, Leo V. Braswell; class leader, H. C. Matthews; Sunday school superintendent, Hubert M. Whitaker; assistant superintendent, J. B. Davis; C. E. president, E. I. Bellamy; Intermediate C. E., Mrs. E. I. Bellamy; Junior C. E. president, Mrs. Walter Holliday, Mrs. J. R. Powers, assistant; president of the Ladies' Aid Society, Mrs. Ralph Rives.

Interesting reports were made by Mr. J. R. Powers, treasurer of the board of stewards, Mr. Ralph Rives, treasurer of the church trustees, Mr. Cecil Matthews, treasurer of the Sunday school, and Mrs. Sam Pierson, treasurer of the Ladies' Aid.

After disposing of the business, a very interesting little drama depicting the every-member canvass was presented by members of the church. This was greatly enjoyed.

Refreshments were served and a very delightful social hour was spent. A goodly number of the members were present at this meeting and greatly enjoyed the reports and the fellowship with each other.

On the following day the fourth quarterly conference was held. Financial reports were made, and the pastor read a splendid report of his year's work, which was accepted with thanks and appreciation. The conference unanimously voted to instruct the delegate to ask for the return of Mr. Auman, and also passed a resolution voicing appreciation of his work and high regard for him personally.

On the last Sunday of the conference year all church officers were formally installed. Two new members were received into the church at Enfield, one at Whitaker's Chapel. The service closed with a celebration of the Lord's Supper. REPORTER.

Fairview-Glen Raven. By the time this notice is read we will have moved to Glen Raven. Regular services will begin the third Sunday. WM. H. NEESE.

Pine Ridge Notes.—We now have the highway surfaced past our school. We can get all the way to Winchester, Kentucky, 49 miles distant, on either gravel, crushed stone, or tarvae surfaced road.

Recently the Kentucky State Board of Health Department held a clinic in Campton, our county-seat. Our students were examined; many were found to need their tonsils removed, while others required eye attention. The parents co-operated splendidly, giving their permission and the necessary work was done gratis.

We have been greatly in need of water for some time. Last week one of the pumps got out of working order, which was a still greater inconvenience. This meant water must be carried from rain barrels, etc., for washing purposes. Bath rooms could not be supplied and when it seemed we were going to reach our limit, God opened his windows and sent us rain, which gave some relief. What a blessing it will be to have the dam completed and have a supply of water ever on hand!

The Porters' Literary Society gave their monthly program on one of the October Friday nights. A play, "The Rainbow Kimono," was well given.

Another preacher, Rev. T. W. Farmer, together with his wife and baby, has come to be with us. He will co-operate in our religious services, thus enabling us to make more preaching appointments. Rev. Mr. Farmer is a former pastor of the M. E. church in Campton.

We conduct two chapels, one for the primary department; another, beginning with the fifth grade and continuing through the high school. Friday mornings we have union chapel, which takes in all our students. Last Friday the auditorium in our grade school building was full to overflowing. Some of the small boys, having no place to sit, went up in front and sat down around the altar railing. What an interesting scene!

We appreciate our friends throughout the church who co-operate with us. Remember us when you pray.

G. W. ANDREW.

Ebenezer, Greensville Circuit.—Our former pastor, Brother H. L. Powell, gave us a very helpful and interesting sermon on the fourth Sunday in October, which closed this conference year. He has served us faithfully for five years and we pray God's blessing on him and family wherever they are called.

Our officers for the past year have been elected for the coming year, and now we are looking forward to a better year than the one past. May we each so work together that our new pastor for the coming year may feel as one among us.

You will hear from us again soon.

Moriah.—Rally Day exercises were held at Moriah church on the fourth Sunday morning, beginning at 10:45 o'clock. A splendid program was enjoyed. We were very fortunate in having three interesting speakers from Greensboro: Mr. J. Norman Wills spoke on the work of the Sunday school; Mr. Stokes Rawlins, president of the State Christian Endeavor Union, on Christian Endeavor work, and Mrs. J. S. Moore on missions. The Rally Day collection amounted to $24.60. This included $10 from the Young People's C. E. Society, $2 from the Intermediates and $2.67 from the Juniors.

The Missionary Societies met with Mrs. G. W. Dawson at her home near Bessemer on last Tuesday afternoon with a good attendance. Dr. Joy Glascock, of Greensboro, led the devotional and gave a splendid talk on stewardship. Mr. G. W. Dawson gave a short talk on the meaning of missions, which was very interesting. Plans were made to serve a supper at the church the last Saturday night in November for the benefit of the societies.

On Tuesday evening a Hallowe'en social was given at Mrs. Van Kirkman's by Mrs. Kirkman and Mrs. Carl Comer for the benefit of the church. Miss Blanch Curtis won the prize for being the last of those in costume to be recognized. An admission fee of one cent for every two inches in height was charged.

A weinie roast was given for the Intermediate C. E. Society Friday evening at Gree-no-ca Spring by their retiring superintendent, Mr. C. F. Scott. Twenty Intermediates were present and the evening was enjoyed by all.

Mt. Zion, Pinnacle and Mt. Zion Charge.—Our last quarterly conference voted unanimously for Bro. Hunter to return to us for another year. We are very glad indeed that Bro. E. S. Stone, our delegate, was successful in securing Bro. Hunter for our pastor. He will fill his first appointment for us next Sunday at 11 o'clock.

At our church meeting the following officers were elected for the year: Stewards: Chairman, O. P. Jones; treasurer, J. R. Stone, J. N. and W. E. Jones, E. S. Stone, O. W. Barber, C. W. Allen, J. D. Mikles, R. S. Barber T. G. Barber, F. G. Fowler, S. T. Lane, S. T. Kellam, W. D. Hall and W. T. Allen, Sr.; classleader, R. S. Barber; reporter to church paper, C. W. Allen; church trustees, E. S. Stone, S. F. Mickey, O. F. Hauser, S. T. Lane and F. G. Fowler.

The meeting voted to give Bro. Hunter authority as pastor to revise the church classbook.

The following are the officers of our Sunday school for the ensuing year: Superintendent, C. W. Allen; assistants, S. T. Lane and W. D. Wall; secretary and treasurer, W. E. Jones; assistant, E. S. Mickey; teachers: class No. 1 (women), Mrs. F. G. Fowler; No. 2 (men), O. P. Jones, teacher, E. S. Mickey, assistant; No. 3 (girls), Mrs. W. E. Jones, teacher, Mrs. E. S. Stone, assistant; No. 4 (boys), Mr. Wilbur Lane, teacher, Everett Kallam, assistant; No. 5 (Intermediate, mixed), Mrs. W. D. Wall, teacher, Mrs. O. P. Jones, assistant; No. 6 (Primary, mixed), Miss Ethel Lane, teacher, Miss Lettie Wall, assistant; No. 7 (Primary or card, mixed), Miss Lola Barber, teacher, Miss Ellie Lane, assistant.

The Women's societies will present the church with a nice new pulpit Bible next Sunday.

As secretary of quarterly conference, it is important that I have the full reports of the different church meetings published in the church paper, but since there have been reporters duly appointed by all the churches I am not reporting for any but Mt. Zion, as I feel sure that each respective reporter will want to report their own business; so let's hear from Shoals, Pilot and Pinnacle. Let your members that are away know that you are still carrying on. Please send in your reports right away.

Miss Ruby Stone recently was married to a Mr. Kirby, of King, N. C. Mr. and Mrs. Kirby reside in High Point, where Mr. Kirby holds a position. Mrs. Kirby is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Stone and was a very regular Sunday school and church attendant and worker. We regret very much to have her leave us.

Rev. Albert Phillips, of the faculty of Pinnacle High School, filled Bro. Hunter's last appointment at Mt. Zion. Rev. Mr. Philips preached a very strong sermon, which was enjoyed by all present.

Several of our members are called to attend court at Dobson this week as witnesses in the wreck case of Miss Blanche Hunter, deceased.

Death visited the home of Bro. Riley Fulk and claimed him as his own. Bro. Fulk was attending court at Danbury, Stokes County, and at his boarding place he sat up and talked till about 10 o'clock the night of the 16th of October, seemingly as well as usual. In the course of conversation during the evening he remarked that he hoped he might die suddenly and without struggle. When he was called next morning he didn't answer, and upon investigation it was found that he had died during the night apparently as he had desired to. Bro. Fulk was 79 years and 17 days old. He was a loyal member of Mt. Zion church and will be missed by all who knew him.

Bro. S. M. Scott had the misfortune of losing his wife recently. Mrs. Scott was burned to death in her home and was buried at Shoals Baptist church.

We have been attending a revival meeting at our neighbor church, Friends Union; the preaching was being done by a Miss Sills, and was greatly enjoyed by all who heard her.

We heard some of the members asking about what would be done about Mt. Zion building a new church now since Bro. Hunter has come back. We are hoping it will be put over big this year.

Mr. and Mrs. Gorrell Kiger are the happy parents of a new baby boy.

May the Lord add His blessings to the action of our past Annual Conference to the extent that this will be a great year for the N. C. Conference.

C. W. ALLEN, Reporter.

P. S.: Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Culler are happy to announce the arrival of a bouncing baby in their home. C. W. A.

Albemarle.—We were very glad to have our pastor, Rev. J. R. Anderson, back with us again on Sunday. He brought us an inspiring message for the beginning of a new year's work, with an appeal for the "personal touch" of the members of the church, which he said will do more toward evangelizing the community than anything we can do.

The new officers of the church will be installed at the morning service next Sunday.

An offering was taken in the Sunday school Sunday morning for the Fort Brogg Memorial Chapel, which is to be erected at Fort Bragg for the purpose of providing a place of worship for the 10,000 soldiers who are connected with this camp every year. The appeal made by our pastor, who had made a visit to the camp and realized the great need of the chapel, was heartily responded to, and $18 was raised in about three minutes, which was more than we had been asked to contribute.

The Ladies' Aid Society held its November meeting with Mrs. Don Helms. Several items of business were disposed of, new activities discussed. Committee reports showed that good work is being done, and the members are all enthused with the spirit of work. At the conclusion of the business hour, delicious refreshments were served. The next meeting will be held with Mrs. D. F. Harkey.

Mrs. H. P. Sheffield rendered a vocal solo at the Sunday morning service, which was greatly enjoyed. We hope to have her sing again in the near future. Mr. and Mrs. Sheffield, with their son, Lloyd, recently moved to Albemarle from Florida, where they made the acquaintance of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Gantt, while they were living there.

A marriage that will be of much interest and surprise to some of our readers was that of Miss Blanche Furr to Mr. John Johnson, which occurred Saturday, November 3. The bride is the attractive daughter of Sheriff R. N. Furr, of this county, and has a wide circle of friends, many of whom were made through her activities as pianist of the M. P. church of this place, in which capacity she has served in a very able manner since she was only a child. Mr. Johnson is the son of J. W. Johnson, of High Point, and has held a responsible position with a wholesale grocery firm of this place for some time, during which he has made many friends. The couple left shortly after the ceremony for a trip by auto to Washington and other northern points. The best wishes of their many friends accompany them on their journey through life.

MRS. JOHN U. WHITLOCK, Reporter.

Spring Valley, Vance Circuit.—We held our annual revival in October. Bro. Troxler was our help, and did some fine preaching. The church and community was greatly revived, and as a result, nine united with our church.

Our Sunday school is doing splendid work; 110 on roll; average attendance, 70. The children rendered a Rally Day program the fourth Sunday night in October, which was very good. The offering was $5.00.

We regret very much that Bro. Chambliss does not return for another year. While we feel our loss we rejoice in others' gain. He will always find a warm place in our hearts.

Our church went on the honor roll again this year, as we paid out all claims before conference.

The Woman's Home Missionary Society is doing splendid work. They had an oyster supper on last Friday night and cleared $37.82. This will be used on the church.

Best wishes to the Herald readers.

West Forsyth.—The writer is glad of the privilege of being a pastor again. We were assigned to the West Forsyth charge by the Winston-Salem Annual Conference and have entered upon the work of the pastorate.

Last Sunday was spent with Union Hill church, located in Yadkin County. There we found a fairly large congregation before time for the service. The people gave us a very cordial greeting and a good hearing. We appreciated trying to preach to them. It was the first appointment since assuming the work. The congregation was pleased to have Rev. C. H. Whitaker, the retiring pastor, present and to take some part in the service. Bro. Whitaker, who served as a guide for the new pastor from the parsonage to the church, introduced the new pastor and spoke timely words to the people concerning the co-operation which should be given a pastor by the people.

We were glad to have Bro. Ring, a preacher of the Friends church, worship with us in the service last Sunday. He also had a part in the service, leading the opening prayer. A lady from Knoxville, Tenn., who was visiting in the community, was an attendant and worshiper with us.

Bro. Whitaker and I, with two of the little Ways, were invited to the home of Bro. J. W. P. Baker for dinner, and we glally accepted the invitation. My first impression of Bro. Baker was that he was a good man and a loyal Methodist Protestant. We enjoyed a most splendid dinner. Yes, chicken, of course, and numerous other good things to eat. A few hours were spent in this good home in the afternoon and we returned to our home at Lexington before sun-down.

The same plan of appointments for the West Forsyth charge will be followed which has been followed during the past year. The appointments are as follows:

First Sunday: Baltimore, 11 a. m.; Stony Knoll, 2:30 p. m.

Second Sunday: Union Hill, 11 a. m.

Third Sunday: Pleasant Hill, 11 a. m.; Tabernacle, 3 p. m.

Fourth Sunday: Harmony Grove, 11 a. m.

The meeting of the first quarterly conference has been called for the second Sunday in December at 2 o'clock at Pleasant Hill church. The place had been selected at the fourth quarterly conference and the pastor has named the date. It is the desire of the pastor that all of the official members of the conference be present and help transact the business of the charge.

We are preparing to move into the parsonage at Pleasant Hill as soon as it is vacated by Rev. C. H. Whitaker, who is now a superannuate. He is looking for a new location and as soon as he finds a place to move to, and vacates the parsonage, the new pastor and family expect to move in and be among the people on the charge as much as possible. In the meantime the appointments will be met by travel from Lexington to the different churches each Sunday.

It is the sincere prayer of this writer that every pastor assigned to a new charge will find pleasant surroundings and splendid co-operation from the people, to the end that the coming year will be the best for results in building up the Methodist Protestant Church in North Carolina and the advancement of the Kingdom of God.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Lexington, N. C.

Burlington, First Church.—We have entered upon the duties of the new conference year with very good attendance at the Sunday services. We are truly grateful to the conference stationing committee for returning our beloved pastor, Bro. Gerringer, to us for the new year, and we hope that we will make this the best year in the history of our church.

Sunday school attendance today was 321, showing an increase of 19 over the previous Sunday. The offering was $18.89. Special collection for the work of the Young People's Union was taken at the Sunday school hour.

Our Baraca teacher, Mr. C. C. Lindley, is back on the job and brought us a good lesson today. Early in December, we will hold our regular monthly business meeting and the most important item of business to come before this meeting will be the election of officers for the coming six months. It is the custom of the class to give the "boys" a supper in the hut at this time each year, so every member is urged to be present at this supper and business meeting and make the occasion a grand success.

Mr. Walter E. Smith, our new Sunday school superintendent, is on the job and we are hoping that, with his leadership, this will be a great year in the work of our school.

Our pastor was confined to his room with illness a few days last week, but was able to be at his work on Sunday, bringing, as usual, a real gospel message.

Our brother, Mr. L. L. Wilson, is still a patient at the Oteen Hospital, near Asheville, N. C., and we ask that any of our church folks in that section, who can, to pay this splendid Christian man a visit.

Yours in His work,

L. A. BRAXTON, Reporter.

Efland, Orange Charge.—We are very much pleased with the fact that conference saw fit to send our pastor back to us. This is the fifth year he has been on this work. We extend to him a hearty welcome and hope this will prove to be the best year yet. The work that Bro. Williams has already accomplished on Orange charge will ever be a treasured memory, and just to know that he is assigned to us for another year is assurance that there is stil much more in store for us. May the Lord add His blessing to all our efforts as we all, pastor and people, labor together.

We are very sorry that some of our members are on the sick list. Simm Efland, Archie Gray Williams and Harold Sharpe, three of our Sunday school boys, were absent Sunday morning on account of sickness, Simm being in Watts Hospital and Archie Gray in St. Leo's. We wish for these boys a speedy recovery, and may they soon be able to fill their places again, for we miss them so much. MRS. E. S. TAYLOR, Reporter.

Concord.—Our people seemed delighted in having Rev. G. H. Hendry returned to our church for another year. The work has prospered under his leadership. Our financial report for last year showed that we had raised over $10,000 during the year, besides a good increase in membership.

At the morning service Sunday Mr. Hendry outlined goals for the year in a short message, which were unanimously adopted, after which an installation service was held and the new officers were installed. The congregation was large, the church being filled. On next Saturday and Sunday, November 17-18, our church will entertain the N. W. District C. E. convention. The program calls for addresses by Messrs. Roy W. Bregg, of Chattanooga, S. S. Rawlins, of Greensboro, and Rev. N. G. Bethea, of Lexington, besides several local speakers.

Our folks are delighted in having Rev. and Mrs. E. G. Lowdermilk as neighbors. They are moving into the Kannapolis parsonage tomorrow (Tuesday).

Armistice Day was observed here Sunday, nearly all churches observing the occasion in one of their services. Our pastor spoke Sunday night on "World Peace." Music appropriate to the occasion was used.

The honor system of the every-member canvass was used again this year with good results. The stewards were at the church from 2 to 4:30 p. m. Sunday to receive pledges, and the members met them there.

REPORTER.

South Lexington Church.—Sunday marked a new day in our church. We started the new conference year with a very interested Sunday school. We elected teachers and officers for the ensuing year. May the Lord help us to give our best to His service. There were 169 present for Sunday school, an increase of a goodly number over last year.

We were very glad indeed to have Bro. and Mrs. Ridge, our former pastor, with us. He is still a resident of our town and we extend to them a hearty welcome.

Bro. C. G. Isley came to us with a very forceful sermon. We are very grateful to the conference for sending Bro. Isley to us. I feel sure we will have a good year. Let us co-operate and pray daily and God will surely give us the victory.

There is a great work to be done. We have a wonderful opportunity within our grasp. We can take advantage of the opportunity or we can shirk it. "Let us work while it is called today, for the night cometh when no man can work."

Pray for us that we may accomplish great things for God.

Orange Charge Announcements.—Thangsgiving services will be held as follows on Thursday, November 29:

11:00 a. m., Hebron; 2:00 p. m., Chestnut Ridge; 4:00 p. m., Union Grove; 7:00 p. m., Efland.

Offerings will be received at each place for our Children's Home.

The first quarterly conference is called to meet at Union Grove church Saturday, December 1st, at 2:00 p. m. The program will be as follows: 2:00 p. m., devotionals; 2:10, Impressions of Annual Conference, Julian G. Jobe and B. M. Williams; 2:30, Business session; 3:00, Adjournment.

B. M. WILLIAMS, Pastor.

Bethesda, North Davidson.—We were delighted with the return of our pastor, Rev. R. S. Troxler, and every one seemed to welcome him Sunday with smiling faces and happy hearts. He has been with us four years, but his work here has been so successful that he still meets the unanimous approval of our members. We hope that his work this year will be even more successful and enjoyable for him and his people than it has been in the past. His message Sunday was very interesting and inspiring to all.

The Sunday school is progressing nicely. It seems to be very active. The eyes and minds of all are alert for any new plan for improvement or added interest. Our work is very encouraging and there has been some progress made that is noticeable. We hope to do more in the future.

The Sunday school has started making plans for a Christmas program. The entertainment committee is carefully considering various things in the way of Christmas entertainment.

The various organizations are getting along very well. The Ladies' Aid and Missionary Societies hold their regular monthly meetings on the third Sunday after Sunday school. Our pastor expressed his desire Sunday to organize or ,rather, re-organize a Christian Endeavor Society and a date was set for organization. We hope that the society will be successful this time, for nothing is more enjoyable and helpful for the young people's training than wide-awake Christian Endeavor societies.

The first quarterly conference will meet with us on Saturday before the second Sunday in December.

Wishing for our church a successful year's work, both spiritually and financially.

REPORTER.

Hope, Chatham Charge.—Our new pastor, Rev. A. O. Lindley, filled his first appointment for us last Sunday. The people seemed well pleased with his splendid discourse from the text: "Wherefore art thou come?" found in Matt. 26-50. The congregation was not so large as we had expected, owing to so much sickness in Bonlee. We are hoping that we may have a good year with Bro. Lindley as pastor.

We certainly do hate to give up our former pastor, Rev. C. G. Isley, and his mother. They have made many friends among us and it is with sincere regret that we see them leave us. We are indeed grateful to Mr. Isly for the splendid work he has done for us, and wish him continued success in his new field of labor. May greater opportunities open up to him and may he have divine guidance and strength to go forth with the work.

May this conference year be the best the M. P. denomination has ever known.

KARA ANDREW, Reporter.

Rehoboth, Creswell Circuit.—We are glad to have back with us our same preacher, Rev. Mr. Hethcox.

Sunday school was held at Rehoboth church Sunday. An unusually large crowd was present, with 13 visitors. There was no preaching service on account of bad weather.

The Sunday school convention was held at Oak Grove church Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Did not have very many present on account of bad weather.

Our Christian Endeavor society met Sunday evening with a large number present. A lecture was made by Rev. Mr. Hethcox. Officers were elected as follows: Mr. Herbert Swain, president; Miss Seattle Swain, secretary; Mr. Joe White, treasurer; Miss Stella Phelps, chairman of social committee; Miss Eva White, chairman of program committee; Miss Norma Tarkington, reporter; Miss Alice White, chairman of music committee. A social will be given soon.

Preaching was also held at Rehoboth Sunday night. Had quite a large crowd present. Mr. Hethcox rendered a fine sermon.

Prayer meeting was also held at Rehoboth church Friday night, November 9. Had quite a number present. Mr. Wheeler Swain conducted the meeting and Mr. Laddie Swain was appointed to lead the following Friday night, November 16.

Mr. Joe White attended the Methodist Protestant conference at Winston-Salem last week as a delegate from the local community church. Mr. Vernon Everett accompanied the delegate. They returned Saturday. They were guests at a supper given in the Robert E. Lee Hotel by members of the host church. They heard many lectures.

Mr. D. P. Tarkington, a member of Rehoboth church, was visiting Miss Lillian Halsey and his relatives Sunday. He returned to Norfolk Monday morning.

Mrs. G. L. Davenport will soon leave to spend some time with her brother, Mr. Gibb Cherry, in Charleston, S. C.

Miss Stella Phelps, a member of Rehoboth church, is visiting her sister, near Cherry.

Mrs. Matilda Aumack arrived here last week after spending some time with Dr. and Mrs. S. A. Saunders, of Aulander.

Mrs. M. J. Elliott, accompanied by Mr. Vernon Everett, attended the funeral of Mr. Julius Woodley, of Norfolk.

Mrs. John Halsey, of this community, is at the bedside of her daughter, Ida, in Norfolk Hospital.

Miss Sabry Bateman, of Richmond, spent the week-end with her relatives.

NORMA L. TARKINGTON.

Greer's Chapel.—We are very glad indeed to accept to have our dear beloved pastor, Rev. R. S. Troxler, back with us. When he left for conference we were in hopes for him back. "Where there's a will there's always a way."

Last year was a good year for us with the aid of Rev. Mr. Troxler. We increased with knowledge of God by having him.

We are having a three weeks' singing at the church now. Professor C. B. Rollins is the teacher. Sunday afternoon we had a special singing; different choirs were there, including "Oakdale's choirs," "High Point's choir," and several other choirs in addition to ours. All of the choirs had been taught by Professor Rollins. Every one seemed to enjoy the afternoon. Several talks were made by different men, which were interesting. May God bless us all. REPORTER.

Pinnacle, Mt. Zion Charge.—Brother Hunter has come back to serve us another year. We are very glad that he did come back. He preached a good sermon last Sunday, his text being "Pray without ceasing." A large congregation was present to hear him.

Our Sunday school is very good now; we hope that it will continue so.

The officers elected for the coming year are as follows: Stewards, H. E. Kiger, L. G. Kiger, J. P. Owen, I. O. Hauser, D. C. Harvey, Mrs. C. V. Hauser; classleader, I. O. Hauser; Sunday school superintendent, J. P. Owen; assistant, Mrs. O. F. Hauser; church trustees, H. E. Kiger, C. W. Harvey, I. O. Hauser, J. P. Owen, P. B. Owen; church treasurer, L. G. Kiger; secretary for Sunday school, L. H. Kiger.

MRS. J. P. OWEN, Reporter.

High Point.—The sympathy of the entire congregation is extended to the pastor, Rev. R. I. Farmer, in the loss of his brother, Mr. Clinton R. Farmer. The news of his sudden death was received by wire Saturday night, and Rev. and Mrs. Farmer and their two children left at noon Sunday for Uhrichsville, Ohio, to attend the funeral services. They plan to return home the latter part of the week.

A solemn and impressive communion service was held Sunday morning at 11 o'clock when the Lord's Supper was celebrated with Rev. P. E. Lindley and Rev. E. L. Ballard presiding. A very large number participated.

The Ladies' Aid Society held a delightful meeting at the pretty, remodeled home of Mrs. C. L. Gray on Lindsay street. Associate hostesses were Mrs. J. A. Gray, Mrs. A. L. Ellison, and Miss Myrtle Ellison. Mrs. S. S. Coe presided at the meeting. Since the carpet and coffee urn and other kitchen improvements have been paid for the women are afraid of idle brains and empty hands—so they voted to contribute the sum of $50.00 per month to the church budget next year. After the transaction of business, the hostesses served delicious refreshments of coffee and sandwiches.

We are much pleased to know that Mr. Fred McPherson, who has had pneumonia following an operation for appendicitis, is improving at High Point Hospital.

We are pained to announce the death of Mr. Walton, father of Mrs. C. R. Hinshaw, wife of Professor Hinshaw, of the college faculty. Mrs. Hinshaw left Sunday for Gatesville, N. C., to attend his funeral. Her many friends extend sympathy in her sorrow.

Misses Helen Hayes, who is teaching at Asheboro, and Alice Faulkner, of Henderson, were guests at the college last Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Davis and small daughter were guests of her parents, Mr. and Mr. Ira Johnson, of Thomasville, last Sunday.

We are pleased to learn of the improvement of condition of Mrs. E. L. Ballard, who has been ill.

State Street, Lexington.—A large congregation heard Bro. Bethea Sunday morning in an inspiring and interesting sermon based on the text found in the 10th chapter of John, 10th verse: "I am come that they might have life and that they might have it more abundantly." That beautiful text is used many times, but is always new and wonderful. Mr. Bethea urged a deeper consecration and stronger effort to achieve greater things in the conference year just beginning than any previous one.

Armistice Day was recognized by two minutes of worshipful silence at the beginning of the service.

At the close of the evening service the Workers' Council held a meeting. New plans and suggestions for better work in all the branches were discussed.

The Missionary Society is giving a supper Friday evening in the dining room of the church. All whose have attended these suppers, several of which have already been given, have found them very enjoyable. We are hoping for a large attendance.

The many friends of Earl Rogers, young son of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Rogers, who underwent an operation for appendicitis at the Davidson Hospital recently, were very glad to see him back in his place Sunday morning for the services. REPORTER.

Spencer.—Our new church will be completed this week and we will move in Sunday. Our president, Rev. S. W. Taylor, will preach for us at 11 a. m. We are thankful we have a church at last to worship in. We want to thank Rev. N. M. Harrison for $5 given at conference; Mr. D. A. McLaurin built our church and has been very generous, building at almost cost, and now if all M. P. churches will give us $2.50 each we could pay off our indebtedness, except our mortgage. So many of our people have been placed on the extra board, only part time work, they can't pay as they would if they had all time work. We need your help now. Conference could not help us now, so we are asking the churches to please help us at this time.

MRS. A. L. MOORE.

Davidson Circuit.—I will be on the charge beginning the third Sunday in November, filling the appointments as they now stand. With this notice, I send greetings to the entire charge, praying that God's blessings may richly attend our labors together with Him this year. W. D. REED.

COLLEGE INFORMATION

You will be interested in the following facts which give some idea of the extraordinary progress made by our High Point College.

RATING. By the close of our fourth year and with the graduation of the first regular class, High Point College had been given the Standard A-Grade rating by the State Board of Education.

STUDENT BODY. Since the opening of the college we have had an average of 251 students each year, totaling 1,255 matriculants. These are for the most part Methodist Protestants and splendid young people. We have had 38 students for the ministry and missions.

OUR GRADUATES. Of our 61 graduates 39 are teaching, six are in the ministry, while several others are pursuing graduate study. The 36 seniors of the class of this year will bring the total graduates up to 97.

INTERCOLLEGIATE ACTIVITIES. High Point College has entered 17 inter-collegiate debates and oratorical contests, winning over State College, Wake Forest, Guilford, Lenoir-Rhyne and other colleges. In athletics we have been even more successful winning the championship in two sports among the small colleges of North Carolina.

FINANCIAL. By comparison we find that our college operates on a smaller cost per student than other similar institutions. Expenses are well regulated, which reduces the annual deficit to a minimum. Our great need is an adequate endowment to supply funds for operation. With only a slender income, we have made remarkable headway, and now we are prayerfully hoping for the fullest possible co-operation of our people along financial lines. Our immediate objective is to raise the total college budget at each church within the next few weeks. In this emergency you will be glad to do your part, we know, and also to urge your church to contribute its full quota.

INFORMATION COMMITTEE.

HIGH POINT COLLEGE CAMPAIGN

In the campaign for deficit in running expenses of High Point College, the assessment for all pastoral charges has been made out and sent to both pastor and delegate. It is just twice the amount of last year. Already Fallston Charge has sent a check for half its amount, $100, with the assurance that the other half will be raised this week. Burlington charge has raised its amount, $250.00, and State Street, Lexington, reports its amount raised.

All this sounds good and we believe that with an earnest, faithful effort the entire amount can be raised during the month of November. Please remember that this is the assessment laid by the last conference for running expenses for High Point College and would ordinarily be raised during the year, but since the need is so urgent, we are asking that the total amount be raised during the month of November. If for any reason a church cannot raise the amount assessed at once, please raise as large an installment as possible and secure the other with a pledge to be paid in 60 days.

Cordially yours,
R. M. ANDREWS.

New Church Opened

It was our esteemed privilege last Sunday to accompany President Taylor to Spencer where he preached the opening sermon in a new Methodist Protestant Church. There have been a few scattered Methodist Protestants in Spencer for several years, but they did not know of each other and in their individual loneliness did not make much demonstration of their denominational loyalty. A seeming accident brought two of them together and made them known to each other and they began to think and talk of a united effort for the church they both loved so well. They found a few others like minded, organized a little band and went to work in faith. That was about three years ago. They organized a Sunday school and a church in a private house, that of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Moore. Later they moved to a little chapel outgrown by the Protestant Episcopal Church. But they wanted a larger house and one that they could call their own. They wanted it so badly that they were willing to make great sacrifices to have it and then they found a way to have it. Of course they could not pay for it all at once, but they were willing to incur a debt for future payment, and they forged ahead. Now they have a neat brick veneered building on a good corner lot of which they are justly proud. Their lot will enable them to enlarge their building when they have need.

They now have 36 members and had 37 in Sunday school last Sunday. The congregation that heard Brother Taylor's opening sermon numbered about 60. The seating capacity of the church is about 250, the number depending on the size of the folks.

Bro. Taylor spoke on Christ and the Church, impressing most forcibly that Christ must have His pre-eminent place in every true church and also encouraging the hope of the perpetual presence and power of Christ in any church devoted to His Kingdom.

The church is located with a view to service. We trust it will grow and do an ever-enlarging work. President Taylor expects to find a pastor very soon. Bro. C. R. Jackson, an engineer on the Southern Railway, is the Sunday school superintendent. It numbers some faithful Methodist Protestants in its membership and it will develop more. Success to it!

(See sketch of this church in another column.)

What Is a Church?

There appeared recently in a daily paper an article written by a lawyer of the Roman Catholic Church setting forth the view that the church was organized by the apostles of Jesus. In opposition to the Protestant view that the Scriptures of the New Testament are the sufficient authority to direct in the formation of Christian churches, he makes the point that no book of the New Testament was written for years after the organization of the church. His conclusion is that a personal authority, that of the apostles representing Christ, was necessary to validate a church organization. In his view the supreme authority conferred upon the apostles was transferred to the line of Roman Catholic popes and is held today exclusively by the Pope of Rome.

Where the Roman Catholic finds one great all-including church organization, the Protestant reader finds many churches, groups of believers in Christ separately formed and each group constituting a church as really as does the whole including all believers in Christ. Paul speaks of the "church that is in thy house," and of "the church that is in their house." Evidently Paul thought of a small body of believers as constituting a real church.

That the apostles of Jesus organized numbers of Christian churches cannot be disproved and is probably true. That they organized one world-wide church, the church universal, cannot be proved and is extremely improbable.

The principal question about a church is not who organized it, but what is its character and purpose? All who are united to Christ by a living faith are prepared to enter into a union with other similar believers to constitute a church. A lake is as truly water as is the ocean. Because a drop of water is not in the ocean, shall we say that it is not water?

The Roman Catholic contention that a man who is not a unit in the largest religious body in the world is not truly a Christian is without warrant. Mr. Legality may insist on the Roman Catholic view, but we think Mr. Christian Vitality will take the view that individual Christian character derived from communion with Christ constitutes the essence of church membership. The real Christian is brother to every other real Christian and all real Christians constitute the church universal, but this is only partially identical with the Roman Catholic Church. A Christian church is a body of believers in Christ. They may believe in the Pope or they may not believe in him. Catholics should cease to read Protestants out of the church and Protestants should recognize the fact that there are many devout Christians in the Roman Catholic Church.

CHRISTLIKE MEN AND WOMEN NEEDED

The great need of the world today is not more professors of Christianity, but more Christlike men and women. Professors may be multiplied on the plane of nature where a nominal adherence to the Gospel has become popular. But Christlike people are the creation of a supernatural agency, even the Holy Spirit in His personal inworking and abiding. That Christianity may attain its maximum of power to transform men and elevate society, there must be a radical work wrought with nominal believers, who not only do not shine themselves, but also obstruct rays which emanate from truly consecrated souls. It is not only true that one sinner destroyeth much good, but, furthermore, that one dead church member casts an eclipse on many souls who might otherwise see Christ, the Light of the World.—Selected.

Denominational Enterprises

THE CHRISTMAS PROGRAM

So many requests have been received for material suitable for a Christmas program that the Executive Committee instructed Dr. J. H. Straughn and the other executive secretaries to prepare something to meet this demand. This is not intended as an effort to add another special day but to meet the needs of our people. Those who use the program will of course receive and forward offerings for the New Century Service, the new name chosen to supplant the one used for the past several years, the General Conference Budget. It is service, not budget, we are emphasizing.

As many of our churches as possible should make use of this Christmas season to raise something more toward their New Century Service apportionment. This is a matter of real concern to the Board of Christian Education. At the present time the Department of Educational Institutions, formerly the Board of Education, will receive less than $21,000 for the year's work, a conclusion based on the average monthly distribution coming to this department since May 1 when the denominational fiscal year began. Such a small income ties our hands. It is but a tithe of what is needed to promote the work with which we have been entrusted.

The same situation faces the Department of Religious Education, formerly the Board of Young People's Work. Their receipts to date promise an income of less than $8,000. How can such an important service survive, let alone expand, on such a paltry capital? How can those responsible for vital causes keep up their enthusiasm when they are tied hand and foot? A substantial offering at Christmas time, a sort of "they shall not fail" offering, will help to correct this situation.

One-half and more of the fiscal year of the church has gone, and the payments of the New Century Service have been hardly $75,000, or at the rate of $150,000 a year, a sum fully $85,000 less than the smallest amount received during any year of the last quadrennium. Of the amount raised to date the Department of Educational Institutions has received $10,242.23 and the Department of Religious Education $3,962.05. The records prove that these six months usually furnish the major part of the denominational budget. November is another good month, after which the receipts decline, reaching their nadir during the summer. Under the new arrangement it is hoped this will not be the case, that a broader information will stimulate more regular contributions.

Order your Christmas program at once and make an earnest effort to secure an offering which will mean something generous toward meeting your New Century Service responsibility. This offering should not be designated unless there is a special reason for it. When designated it helps but one; when undesignated it helps all.

Send your orders to Rev. J. H. Straughn, D.D., 516 N. Charles St., Baltimore, Md.

AMERICA'S GIFT TO ANCIENT LANDS

By John R. Voris
Associate General Secretary, Near East Relief

I stood on the balcony of the American House at Jebail, Syria. Jebail is the seaport town called Gebal in the Book of Kings. It was to this town that the cedars of Lebanon were brought from the mountains to the Mediterranean to be floated as rafts down the coast to Haifa, and from there taken overland to the Holy City to build the Temple of Solomon. It was here that the Egyptians and later the Romans found a port of entry and it was here that they left notable monuments now being uncovered by the French.

Below me where the soft waters of the Mediterranean lapped against the shores, I could see the dim outline of slender columns of an ancient Roman temple, recently uncovered by the excavators, and could fancy, at least, that I could see a great sarcophagus in which the earlier Egyptians had buried one of their leaders. In my mind's eye I could see the great cedars of Lebanon drawn on rough wheels by a multitude of dark-skinned servants, cedars that would go to build a temple of the Lord. Raising my eyes, I saw outlined against the sky above to my right a great castle built by crusaders in the twelfth century.

I found myself awed by the march of history. I was conscious of being on ground trodden by the kings of old. Alexander the Great had been here, Philip of Macedon and Napoleon. In imagination one could review civilization as it marched past. Each conqueror had left his monument in marble or stone.

Earlier in the day I had been talking with some of the older boy leaders of the American orphanage center and their teachers, and now I thought of the monument America was erecting there, not a monument of brick or stone but one measured in terms of human life. In the building near me seven hundred boys were sleeping. Fine, healthy and alert youngsters they were. I had seen them all at their work, at their meals, in the sea enjoying their morning plunge, and also in the church service. All these boys owed their lives to America's gifts of food and shelter and care. And I said to myself, "We're not leaving a crusader's castle or a Solomon's Temple or Roman monument or even an Egyptian sarcophagus, not even a shrine or church. We have invested our money in childhood."

Here we are leaving the kind of a monument that the earlier civilizations would have scorned. Just children! Even today childhood has but little place in these Eastern lands. Parents love their offspring, to be sure. But children are valued only as potential adults, not as children. Civilization is built for adults. The result is that there is a complete lack of child care movements. Money, if spent, is expended upon shrines and great churches built of lasting materials, but not for education or care of children. Now comes the richest nation on the globe, and it leaves only children, strong, sturdy, trained children, to be sure, but only children. A strange spectacle.

And so I turned to my couch with a feeling of content, for I knew that we had not only builded unselfishly, but we are leaving a trained leadership among youth and a new ideal for all childhood.

We have brought to the land of Him who said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me," a demonstration of the meaning of that message.

OPTIMISM | The President's Letter | EVANGELISM

Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples.—John 15:8.

Thanksgiving

When this reaches our readers, Thanksgiving will be very close at hand. Let us not forget to make an offering to the Children's Home on that day, and let our offering be just as liberal as our means will permit. The Home is highly worthy, and there is a need for the offering. Let us not fail to make it.

We hope, too, that our people will assemble for worship on Thanksgiving day. No observance of the day is in keeping with the idea without public worship and public thanksgiving. We urge our people, therefore, to meet in their own places of worship, or to join with other congregations in union services. Above eevrything else, Thanksgiving should be characterized by public worship, praise and thanksgiving to Him from whom all blessings flow.

College Campaign

This is on now, and good reports are coming in. Bro. Williams tells us that West End has provided the allotment for that church, and a letter yesterday from Bro. J. M. Morgan brings the good news that Fallston charge has oversubscribed. This is good work, and worthy of the completest success. We bespeak the full co-operation of every pastor and every charge, and urge that other matters be made subsidiary while this campaign is on. Prayer is to be offered constantly and earnestly for the blessings of God upon the undertaking.

"Men for the Ministry Sunday"

The Board of Christian Education is suggesting such a day, and we heartily endorse the suggestion. We desire that all of our pastors set apart such a day during the year, and on that day lay this claim upon the hearts of our young men. This can be done by an appropriate sermon, or by some other well thought out program. A number of good suggestions for the day are given in the HERALD of November 15. We believe that such a day is in harmony with God's plans for recruiting his ministerial ranks, and likewise, with present needs.

Budget Apportionments

We were delayed beyond our expectation in getting the report in the HERALD last week. However, it will appear this week, and the Commission publishes it with the hope that it may receive the approval of every charge. We earnestly hope that every pastor and every member will resolve to do his very best in serving God through the raising of the budgets. And the very best time to do that is right now at the beginning of the new year. Every dollar that can be raised now will certainly make this part of the conference program much easier later on.

We have had no report from the treasurer yet, so we are not able to give any financial statement this week. But please let us have something to report before the month is up. It will be interesting to see what charge will get in the first budget payment. Don't keep it back, please, because the amount is not large. Let it go in—anything from $1 to $100. Send to Rev. George R. Brown, Treasurer, Reidsville, N. C. First?

Song Books

We stated last year, through HERALD and from pulpit, that our General Conference had ordered the compiling and publishing of a song book for use in our churches. It was our hope that the book would be ready before a great while. It appears now, however, that the delay will be more than we anticipated. We hope, however, that it may be ready later, but in the meantime we advise churches that need song books to go ahead and get them—good, high grade, standard books. And first of all, we recommend our Church Hymnal—one of the very best song books to be found anywhere.

Activities

On November 7, Bro. Willie Wood was released from the pastorate of Spencer church. Bro. W. F. Ashburn was assigned there November 19. On the 15th we were in prayer service and business meeting with First Church, Thomasville, and again with them in business meeting on the 20th. We hope to have pastor with them very soon.

On Sunday, November 18, it was our good fortune to be with the Spencer people in the opening service of their new church. We found the Sunday school in session upon our arrival. This was followed by the 11 o'clock service, in which we were privileged to preach. The attendance was not large, though about 60 members and friends were present. This is our newest church enterprise. The work was started by Bro. Braswell about 1923, we believe. An organization was effected later, and a lot secured for a church building. About three weeks ago the actual building of the church began, and the opening services were held in the finished building, as stated above. However, the painting has not yet been done. The building is brick-veneered, 30x46, and cost about $3,000. The congregation acted wisely, we think, in building within their means. We have only about 40 members there. They are faithful and zealous, and we shall watch their developments with deep interest and prayers.

We had the privilege of going over to Spencer in Editor McCulloch's car, and the pleasure of having him as a traveling companion. We enjoyed the day.

Appointments

Nov. 21, Wednesday, at Gibsonville, in business meeting with Gibsonville church. Hour, 7:30 p. m.

Nov. 22, Thursday. At Liberty, in business meeting with the Liberty-Siler charge. Hour, 7:30 p. m.

Nov. 25, Sunday. Vance charge.

Dec. 1, Saturday. At Mt. iZon, West Thomasville charge, in quarterly conference. Hour, 2:30 p. m.

Dec. 7, Friday. Halifax charge, in quarterly conference. Hour, 2:00 p. m.

Dec. 8-9, Saturday and Sunday. On Why Not charge. Saturday, 11 a. m., preaching, and quarterly conference 1:30 p. m. Sunday as follows: Preaching, Lovejoy, 11 a. m.; Macedonia, 2:30 p. m.; Seagrove, 7:30 p. m.

Finally, brethren—

"Feed the flock of God which is among you, taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint, but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind;

"Neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being ensamples to the flock.

Fraternally,

Nov. 22, 1928. S. W. TAYLOR.

Shower of Hymnals Predicted

The papers recently predicted a shower of meteors on a certain night. Those who watched for them were disappointed. The meteors did not come in sufficient number to be called a "shower." Here is another predicted shower that we hope will really come: Last Sunday Mrs. A. L. Moore, of our new Spencer church, said she wondered whether some church somewhere would not supply Spencer church with used hymnals. President Taylor replied that he believed enough individual Methodist Protestants if they knew of the need would be glad to contribute one new book each or the price of the same (seventy-five cents). This would be a worthy offering and would be much appreciated by this new church. Will this shower fall? Will President Taylor's confidence be justified? If you are one who feels the force of the appeal and who wishes to aid in this way a heroic band of Methodist Protestants in a great and good work, send 75 cents or more to Mrs. A. L. Moore, Box 60, Spencer, N. C., for the new hymnal fund. We venture to say she will acknowledge all receipts for this purpose in the HERALD.

Arabs say, "All sunshine makes a desert." And they ought to know, for they are familiar with vast tracts of sand on which nothing grows. Eliphaz says in Job 15:21, "In prosperity the destroyer shall come." And Solomon says even more pointedly, in Prov. 1:32, "The prosperity of fools shall destroy them."

THE THIEF AT THE MEAT SHOP

"Bob! Bob!"

The cries came from downstairs in John Cart's butcher shop. Bobby dropped his book and hurried to the door.

"What's the matter?"

"Come down here quickly."

Bobby ran downstairs. Mr. Cart was standing at his meat counter, looking at a platter of raw steaks. He was excited—and perplexed.

"There's been another mysterious meat theft," he said, "but this time it is more mysterious than ever. It wasn't a minute ago that I put six plank steaks on that platter. Now there are only five."

"Are you sure you put six on there in the first place?" asked Bob.

"Of course I am," answered Bob's uncle. "I always put six on a platter that is going in the window."

"Was there anybody in the shop?" was Bob's next question.

"Not a soul," replied Uncle John "I turned my back for three seconds—maybe less—and it was gone!"

"Gosh, that is funny," agreed Bob.

For two weeks now, John Cart's butcher shop had been the scene of persistent and annoying thefts. Whoever the guilty person was, he seemed to have a preference for the meat counter. Although it was much easier to steal candy or bread, this particular thief never took anything but plank steaks!

"There's been one stolen every day," said Mr. Cart. "I watch pretty closely, but I can't seem to catch the criminal in the act."

"What time do the thefts occur?" asked Bob.

"Always before noon," replied his uncle. "In fact, right about this time every morning."

"I have a clue," announced Bob. "Leave it to me."

"Bob could sit in the bay window of the front room upstairs and see everybody who entered or left his uncle's store. For the last three days, he had noticed a suspicious character prowling around outside the door. At any other time, this character would not have been suspicious, but since the meat began to disappear, Bob could reach but one conclusion.

"He's the one, all right',' Bob decided to himself. "Tomorrow I'll watch every move he makes—and if he steals anything, I'll follow him and see where he takes it."

The next morning Bob took his station at the window, feeling very much like a spectator who has come early at the theatre. An hour passed—then he was rewarded by the appearance of the one he suspected. No wonder this thief could steal steaks right from under Uncle John's eyes! He wasn't any higher than the counter on which the meat was placed, and with a little speed at a moment when the butcher's back was turned, the job could be done.

The suspect walked slowly past the door, peering in as he did so. Ten yards or more up the street he stopped, retraced his steps as far as the door, stood there undecided for a moment or so, then quickly disappeared within the shop. Before Bob could cry out a word of warning to his uncle, the thief was out again, going rapidly down the street.

Bob dashed down into the street, but he did not try to overtake his prey. Keeping it in sight, he maintained a good distance—content for the first time to find out the headquarters from which the strange thief operated. Suddenly Bob's suspect turned a corner, and disappeared—vanished like a dim star behind a dark cloud, and Bob could not locate him again.

Returning to the butcher shop, he said to his uncle:

"Did you see the thief this morning?"

"No," answered his uncle. "He didn't come this morning."

"What!" exclaimed Bob in surprise.

"Oh, I fooled him this morning. I waited until after 11 o'clock before I cut the steaks. There they are now—six of them—all ready for the window."

"You mean there wasn't any theft this morning?"

"No. How could there be? I've just this minute cut that meat into slices."

"Well, this beats everything!" cried Bob, amazed. Then his uncle reached for the platter, but before his fingers touched it, he cried out in alarm.

Bob looked down quickly. There were only five steaks on the platter—the sixth one had gone!

While they had been talking about the thief, he had paid his morning visit. Bob stood mystified for a second or two, then ran out into the street and looked in the direction taken by the supposed culprit ten minutes earlier. There was nobody in sight!

"I'll catch him tomorrow morning," he resolved

Outwitted in the first attempt, he was determined not to be fooled any more. The next day, stationing himself in the store behind a small candy counter, he patiently awaited the coming of his clever opponent. Bob could see the door—and he could see the meat counter, and he had even arranged things so that he could see the single piece of steak that he had asked his uncle to leave out for bait.

At 10 o'clock the lookout spied the supposed criminal. He was peering in the doorway—alert, intelligent, judging his chances. Bob's uncle looked up casually from his work, saw the figure in the doorway, then thoughtlessly turned to his work again. The next instant the bait had been lifted from the platter, and was on its way out of the shop.

There was no mistake about it this time—Bob saw it done. He shouted a word of warning to his uncle, bounded out from his hiding place and pursued the thief—this itme tracking him to the door of a small cottage.

Mustering up all his courage, Bob knocked on the door, and a dog barked furiously from within. A few minutes later an old lady opened the door. She was coughing—Bob could see at a glance that she was very ill.

"Come in," she invited, in a weak voice—and when Bob had entered the house, undecided how to say what was in his mind, she continued:

"How did your uncle, Mr. Cart, know that I was sick?"

"Why—I don't think—he did know!" stammered Bob.

"He has been very good," murmured the old lady, "to send up a steak every day with Jack."

Here was Bob's cue.

Leaning over, he said softly:

"That is what I came to see you about. Jack has been—" He hesitated a moment. The old lady's eyes were filled with tears. "Well, the trouble with Jack is that he can't carry all that you need—and I wonder if it would be all right for me to bring your order instead."

The sick woman began to cry.

"Why—," continued Bob. "You need milk and bread, and butter and tea and lots of things. What good is a steak without something to eat with it?"

He left the cottage, ran back to his uncle's store, made explanations and certain other arrangements pleasing to them both, and in fifteen minutes was back at the cottage door. He had a basket on his arm—a basket of good things to eat, and in his pocket he had a letter from John Cart to the Widow Marlowe, informing her that it would be a pleasure for him to supply her with all her wants during her illness.

As Bob stepped inside, he put down the basket, and called out in a friendly voice:

"Here, Jack! Jack!"

An airedale jumped up from the corner and came over to Bob.

"You old thief, you," said Bob, running his hands through the dog's shaggy hair, and by the tone in which it was said, Jack knew that Bob was all right, so friends were made on the spot.

HOW BRUCE EARNED HIS WATCH

There was no other way to do it. Bruce simply would have to go and take the money to Grandfather Morris. Bruce's father was very ill, and of course his mother could not be spared. The money had to be taken to Chester that very day, and Bruce was the only one who could go. Over and over his mother explained that sometimes robbers took things from people and that he must be very, very careful.

"If Bruce were not such a talker, it would be all right," said the doctor to whom they told their troubles. The doctor did not know that Bruce was in the next room. "I can put him in care of the conductor, and it is only twenty-five miles to Chester, so no harm could befall him, but he may tell the secret to some one."

But Bruce was sure he would not. He was only in the second grade, and he did talk a great deal for one small boy; but if he said he would keep a secret they could count on him.

"I won't say a word, not a single word till I get to Chester and see grandfather. I'll just let them think I'm a little dumb boy like Johnny Harp."

In spite of their troubles they all had to laugh, even sick Mr. Morris. Mrs. Morris stopped laughing to say that if she thought Bruce would do that she would give him the watch he had been working so hard to earn.

"The watch is as good as mine, mother," said Bruce. "Please give it to me right away, so I can tell when to get off the train at Chester. Miss Lucy taught us to tell time on the school clock."

But of course no one could go and get a watch when time was so pressing, and then nobody thought Bruce would keep still. The money was made into a flat packet and pinned to his clothes with a big safety pin. He was told over and over not to touch that place where he could feel the packet, but to look out of the window and keep still until the conductor came to put him off.

But nobody could have guessed that morning that the passenger train would run into a freight train and the conductor get badly hurt. After the injured man was taken to the hospital, a new man came on, and of course he knew nothing of Bruce. Poor Bruce! He was determined to win that watch, but how would he know when he reached Chester? All this time they were going around a strange way to avoid the wreck, and Bruce didn't know a single place. Of course the man would call the name, but he did it so quickly that Bruce could not understand what he said.

"Ticket. Ticket!" said the conductor at Bruce's elbow. "Little boy, where is your mother?"

Not a word from Bruce. Finally a lady across the aisle said: "I think that must be a little deaf and dumb boy, Conductor. He hasn't said a word even when the accident threw him from his seat."

By this time Bruce drew out a little card on which he had printed in tipsy letters C-H-E-S-T-E-R. "Good!" said the conductor. "He may be dumb, but he's not deaf." Then he and the lady laughed, but Bruce looked out of the window.

So presently they rolled into grandfather's town, and the conductor helped him to go down the steps. He and the lady watched, and presently an elderly man grabbed Bruce up and hugged him. The train just pulled out when they heard a shrill little voice say: "Grandfather, I've got a lot of money pinned to my clothes inside. Mother said if I didn't say a word on the way down here she'd get me a watch, and I've earned it."

And the laughing conductor waved from the platform and said to grandfather: "He's right, mister. We couldn't get a word out of him all the way."

So Bruce won his watch, but grandfather bought it; and when he made the return trip alone he not only wore the watch, but he told all the passengers for three seats around exactly how he had earned it.—Hilda Richmond, in the Christian Advocate.

HE SILENCED THE DEVIL

If you find yourself getting very miserly, begin to scatter, like a wealthy farmer in New York State I heard of. He was a noted miser, but he was converted. Soon after, a poor man who had been burnt out and had no provisions, came to him for help. The farmer thought he would be liberal and give the man a ham from his smokehouse. On his way to get it, the tempter whispered to him:

"Give him the smallest one you have."

He had a struggle whether he would give a large or a small ham, but finally he took down the largest he could find.

"You are a fool," the devil said.

"If you don't keep still," the farmer replied, "I will give him every ham I have in the smokehouse."—D. L. Moody.

THE STORY OF TWO BROTHERS

There were two boys in the Taylor family. The older said he must make a name for his family, and so turned his face toward Parliament and fame. The younger decided to give his life to the service of Christ and so turned his face toward China and duty. Hudson Taylor, the missionary, died, beloved and known on every continent. But when I looked into the Encyclopedia to see what the other son had done, I found these words, "The brother of Hudson Taylor."—The Wesleyan Methodist, Syracuse, N. Y.

Leader's talk.
Quiet music. ("Nearer, My God, to Thee.")
Silent prayer, closed by a member.
Discussion of topics.
Hymn: "Dear Lord and Father of Mankind."
Answering of questions.
Piano solo.
Poem.
Hymn: "Jesus, Savior, Pilot Me."
Sentence prayers, closed with Mizpah.

Helps for the Leader

"Remember God" is a topic that will sound somewhat peculiar to some of us. But there are multitudes of people, many of them in our midst, who seem to forget God. The prime reason for this may be that they are so busy with the affairs of the world and an everlasting search for the materialistic things that they don't really stop to think that they are neglecting the most important thing of their lives.

We need to remember God now while the most of us are young, taking Him as the Guiding Star of our lives, and relying upon Him for our every need. We should remember God in our joys as well as in our sorrows. He will walk with you in every phase of an upright life.

An appropriate question we may ask ourselves during this Thanksgiving season is "What shall I render unto the Lord for all His benefits unto me?"

Remembering God should become a habit of our lives. We have only to open our eyes and ears to see the glory of His universe. God is the Maker of all things; the Giver of every good and perfect gift. How, then, can we forget His love for us?

Other Appropriate Songs

"I Need Thee Every Hour."
"Jesus, Lover of My Soul."
"Rock of Ages, Cleft for Me."
"Lead, Kindly Light."
"Jesus Calls Us, O'er the Tumult."

Topics for Discussion

1. Why We Forget God: (a) Because we are too busy with the world. (b) The pursuit of pleasure. (c) Because sin has built a barrier between God and our lives.

2. Why We Should Remember God: (a) He has created all for us. (b) He has given us spiritual blessings. (c) He gives us hope, faith, and strength for the future.

Questions to Be Answered

1. How may we remember God?
   a. Bible reading and prayer.
   b. Study of the Universe.
   c. Regular attendance at worship.
2. When shall we remember God?
   a. Temptation.
   b. Time of happiness.
   c. Time of sorrow.
   d. In youth, noontime, and old age.

GOD

"There is an Eye that never sleeps
Beneath the wing of night;
There is an Ear that never shuts
When sink the beams of light.

There is an Arm that never tires
When human strength gives way;
There is a Love that never fails
When earthly loves decay.

That Eye unseen o'erwatcheth all;
That Arm upholds the sky;
That Ear doth hear the sparrows' call;
That Love is ever nigh.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

DEC. 2: PAUL BEFORE HIS JUDGES

Scripture Basis: Acts 24:1-26:32.

Golden Text: I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision. Acts 26:19.

Comparisons of Character

I. Felix

Paul, having declared his Roman citizenship, saved himself from punishment and possible death at the hands of the irate Jews. The chief captain, nor anyone else for that matter, dare have a part in pronouncing the death sentence upon a Roman citizen. So the prisoner was sent under heavily armed escort to Caesarea, the Roman capital of Judea on the Mediteranean coast.

The procurator, or governor, of the province at that time was one Antonius Felix, who modern commentators claim to have taken this office in 51 A. D., and who held Paul prisoner between 56 and 58 A. D. The great Jewish historian, Josephus, with other authorities, corroborate the account in Acts of the evil character of Felix. He is declared as the worst one with whom the Apostle had any dealings except Nero, though quite as cruel. It is true that he aided materially in ridding the Judean country of robbers and murderers so prevalent then, but he acted, under the authority of his office, worse than them all. Though his wickedness knew no bounds, he was shrewd enough not to harm a Roman citizen. "His leaving Paul in bonds was but a final instance of one who sacrificed duty and justice for the sake of his own unscrupulous selfishness."

After five days, when his accusers from Jerusalem arrived headed by Ananias, the abominable high priest, and assisted by a hired Roman lawyer named Tertullus, the trial began. Tertullus, with a flattering introduction, addressed to the "most noble Felix," made his charge. Paul, when permitted to speak, boldly defended himself. Felix, upon the pretext of desiring the testimony of the chief captain of Jerusalem, Lysias, deferred judgment. His real purpose was, however, that he might obtain bribes from Paul for his release.

II. Festus

For two years, this man of God was kept prisoner under the roof of the palace until Porcius Festus succeeded Felix in the governor's chair. Ten days elapsed before Festus called for a hearing, during which time the new governor visited Jerusalem. He refused to have the prisoner brought to the Holy City for trial, which defeated the plans of his enemies to slay him en route. Some of them, therefore, came to Caesarea and repeated the charges formerly made against Paul, which he flatly denied, as before.

Festus is declared to be "honest, but bewildered." He was "a man of far better character than his predecessor, as history tells us and as our record shows. While Festus displayed a certain contempt for what he regarded as the empty delusions of a harmless maniac, his condut throughout the whole proceeding was marked by a strict impartiality, and his straightforward dealing with Paul formed a marked contrast to the dilatoriness of Felix.

Desiring to please the Jews, and believing the charges more of a religious character, Festus would have Paul tried in Jerusalem, but the Apostle, knowing the nefarious plot of the Jews to kill him, made his appeal as a citizen of Rome to Caesar, to which the governor acquiesced.

III. Agrippa

In the meanwhile, King Herod Agrippa came to pay his respects to Governor Festus upon his appointment to the high office. He had with him his sister, Bernice, whom he had sinfully made his wife. After they had been with Festus a while, he declared unto the king the case of Paul, which interested him to the extent of desiring to hear his defense.

Herod Agrippa II was the son of Herod Agrippa I and the great-grandson of Herod the Great, and at this time was king of Chalcis. Not having wholly forgotten his people, he espoused the cause of the Jews whenever he could. He loved pomp and ceremony, and doubtless was gorgeously arrayed as he sat in the throne room with Bernice and Festus listening to the greater Paul. His character is chiefly expressed in two words, crafty and base.

Having heard the convincing mesage of the Apostle to the Gentiles, Festus and his guests withdrew. Agrippa expressed the opinion of the group, after due consideration, "'This man might have been set at liberty, if he had not appealed to Caesar." (26:32).

IV. Paul

In our hearts we would humbly apologize to this pioneer Christian missionary for even listing his name with such characters as above, but it is done that the great contrast between them and him might be brought to our attention. How can we describe him? To use a multiplicity of words might have a tendency to lessen rather than raise our opinion of him. Although we might peruse the pages of a biography of his life, we need hardly to go beyond the limitations of his experiences in our lesson to discover his outstanding characteristics.

He was fearless. Neither bitter Jew nor pompous monarch disturbed him. He was powerful in speech. The cruel Felix trembled "as he reasoned of righteousness, and self-control, and the judgment to come. The bewildered Festus relented as he defended himself against the false accusations of his enemies. The vile Agrippa was almost persuaded as he reasoned with him concerning the prophecies. He was a Christian. It was far from complimentary in his day to be called such, but it has become a high and holy title as Christianity has progressed. In truth, it is the most all-inclusive, comprehensive expression that can be used to describe the character of Paul. Well he could say, "Be ye followers of me," for he was a follower of Christ.

AN OPEN LETTER

It belongs to the college and the Children's Home to have many things of interest near High Point. We who live at a distance are only able to attend a few of the interesting occasions. Through this letter I would suggest that some of the friends, near and far, try to be at the Home on next fourth Sunday. We can manage to get in by 2 o'clock, after going to our own meetings near home. I hope to go to the school and the usual preaching at our church, Oak Grove, near Rural Hall, and then run over to High Point by 2 o'clock.

The man that I have arranged to ride with agrees to try the trip if the weather is favorable and not too cold. The shape of the venture, as now proposed, is such that all who go will be safe, even if some of us who want to go should happen to be hindered. I will only mention two names of those whom I would ask to go: Bro. Swain, of Greensboro, and Bro. H. A. Garrett.

At conference, on Sunday, I was privileged to take dinner with a group of the friends of the home, and would ask them to get in, too, with some of their relatives and friends. I think that such a trip as is now in view belongs to the sacred side of life.

I was very glad to read a letter in a recent Herald from Brother Laughlin. We have never met, but his father, many years ago, served on the Forsyth circuit, was pastor of our church, and I was privileged to hear him preach often at several of the churches. At Tabernacle one day, after he had preached, and the most of the people had left, I was standing on the ground, he on the steps. His instructions were: "Bro. Grabs, read and learn, and inform yourself, and you can help to do some work in this country some time."

These words are near what he said. Even at this late date his instructions seem to be very encouraging. However, I'm trying to hold to the class of people who try to learn while they live.

I had thought to pass this letter through the hands of Dr. Dixon at the Home, but it would be too late for next week, and I ask for the "voice" as the editor may think best. The impulse now is to try to write to the papers right often. W. F. GRABS.

—Jesse C. Bradshaw died in a Winston hospital following a stroke of paralysis. He was buried in Greensboro yesterday. He was a brother of Mrs. Jennings, of Gibsonville, and of Mrs. V. R. Holt, of Burlington.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

CONCERNING THE PROGRAMS

When the programs were sent out, "Working With Orphans in India" was omitted. That paper has since been written by Miss Mildred Miskimen, and is printed in this issue of the Herald.

Sec. of Literature.

WORKING WITH ORPHANS IN INDIA

Hindu society is different from our own in that "charitable institutions," as we know them are practically unknown except a few in recent years in imitation of our Western systems Their own system of caring for unfortunate people is entirely different. In the caste system every individual born in the caste must keep the caste rules, and the caste in turn is responsible to a degree for his welfare. Cripples, blind, orphans, those whose business fails, all are cared for by their relatives in the caste. They prefer to care for their unfortuantes in this way rather than to provide institutions for their care. It is the custom of the ages.

It will be readily seen that they do not ask the outsiders for charity in these matters except in unusual circumstances. There is one class of people, however, for whom there is no place in the homes of relatives or friends, and these are illegitimate children. The moral code is strict, and a mother must dispose of her illegitimate child in some manner or leave the caste. She can not leave the caste, so she must dispose of the child in some way. The usual thing is the little girls are given to or sold to the harlots of the town. There is no other place for them, and these women bring them up to lead the lives they themselves lead. There is no hope that women and girls may ever escape from the life they lead, for they may not marry and no profession is open to them.

Mother love is the same in India as it is here, and most mothers prefer to have their daughters anywhere rather than under the degrading influences of the recognized harlots. It was for the purpose of rescuing these illegitimate baby girls that Miss Long started the institution that we call our "Orphanage." She knew that the mothers would bring their little unwelcome babies to an institution where they would be loved and sheltered, and have the opportunity to be good women, and they have done so. Most of the children in our school at Dhulia whom we call orphans are really not orphans, although we do have some whose parents are dead.

Along with these children in our school we have the children of the Christians in the community. These children have their parents and brothers and sisters, but the "orphan" girls have no one. Their mothers or other Hindu relatives never look them up after they leave them with us. Our orphan girls have taken to considering themselves a family. Miss Long started by giving them all the same name, Karmarkar. They call each other sister, and often seem to be bound together by very real affection. The older ones seem to take interest in the younger ones and encourage them to do their best.

The orphan girls are among the sweetest, prettiest and most talented of our schoolgirls. Many of them have married and gone to make happy homes of their own. If our mission has done nothing else, it has taken lives that would otherwise have been given to sin and misery and has given opportunity for the power of God to make lives of joy and usefulness.

Following are the names of our orphan girls who are making good: There is Shegulla, a fine Christian girl who was married over a year ago to a splendid young preacher in a nearby mission. She is able to be a very real help to him in his work. I have just heard that they have a little son. There is Champa, who is taking kindergarten training and who will be a great help in our work. There is Puma, who was very recently married to a bright young carpenter in Dhulia. There is dear baby Rama, who smiles her way into every heart. I could not mention them all by name, but all are sweet, happy girls.

MILDRED MISKIMEN.

A REPORT FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE

With the exception of three days at home, I have spent the past six weeks in the field. During that time, four days were given to district meetings in the Onondaga Conference, and the balance to the sessions of the Eastern, Texas, North Carolina, Alabama and Florida Conferences. In these visitations I travelled over 5,000 miles; and, with the exception of the visit to the Texas Conference, where Dr. Straughn was absent, was accompanied by Drs. Haddaway and Straughn.

These brethren presented the missionary, educational, and New Century Service programs, while I in turn sought to interpret conditions throughout the church as I apprehend them, and stressed the great need and opportunity for evangelism.

We were received enthusiastically, and each Conference pledged its heartiest co-operation in carrying out our denominational program.

Our great need is for the individual, and the local congregation, and the various organizations therein t o do their best for this program, and to do it NOW. The outlook is very encouraging all along the line.

—We have been kindly received by the folks and the prospects are encouraging.—J. L. Trollinger.

—I arrived Saturday afternoon, but the work went well Sunday and I trust we are to have a good year.—T. M. Johnson.

—A negro preacher is credited with a new theory to explain the origin of hell: "De wickedness of men is going to bring on hell. Dey goes down into de arth an steals de oil dat de Almighty put dar to grease de great axles on which de world turns. Some day dem axles gwine to run dry and cotch on fire because wicked men have stolen de Lord's axle grease. Dat fire will be hell."

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Chestnut Ridge, Orange Charge.—We are looking forward for a good year. We are indeed glad to have our beloved pastor, Bro. B. M. Williams, back with us for another year. We trust God will be with us in making this the best year in the history of our church. Pray for us. Let us all co-operate and we will have a good year in the service of our Lord and Master.

REPORTER.

Graham.—The beginning of the new conference year finds us full of pep and eager to help our new pastor, Rev. J. F. Minnis, who has been bringing some splendid sermons for the past two Sundays. The people are confident he has much in store for them, and welcome him heartily.

It was with sincere regret we gave up our former pastor, Rev. D R. Williams and wife. The four years they spent with us were very happy and profitable. For the great good they have done we are truly grateful and are hoping they will be happy in their new work.

On Friday evening a Father and Son banquet was held for the fathers and sons of the church and an interesting program was enjoyed. We were fortunate in having Prof. Yount, county superintendent of public instruction, who gave an inspiring address on the topic, "The Father's Duty to His Son." Mr. Henry Easley furnished instrumental music during the program and also sang. Short talks were made by the pastor and some of the fathers. Interest was kept up during the entire program by the toastmaster, Mr. P. S. Dixon. The response for the sons was given by Master S. S. Holt, Jr. A most enjoyable time was had by all present.

On Sunday morning the service was in honor of the fathers and sons and Rev. Mr. Minnis spoke on "The Ideal Father," and again in the evening on "The Ideal Son."

There will be services in the church Thanksgiving Day.

On Friday evening, November 30, monthly meeting will be held

We are glad to report that Miss Levona Amick, who underwent an operation in St. Leo's Hospital, Greensboro, was able to return home Sunday. We wish for her a speedy recovery.

REPORTER.

Concord.—Sunday was a great day with us. The Sunday school attendance was 316. The District C. E. convention opened Saturday afternoon with the president, Mr. Eugene Houston, of Mount Mourne, presiding.

Rev. M. R. Gibson, pastor of the A. R. P. church, this city, brought the first quiet hour message on "Crusading With Christ." Other quiet hour speakers were Rev. J. K. Parker, of Mt. Mourne, and Rev. W. P. Robertson, of this city.

The welcome address was made by Mr. D. A. McLaurin, of the local church. Miss Ada May White, of Mooresville, responded.

Messrs. W. Ray Breg, all-South secretary, of Chattanooga; S. S. Rawlins, Greensboro; A. J. Koonce, High Point, and Misses Gladys Routh, Greensboro, Hattie May Covington, Wadesboro, and Miss Hester Steele, Mooresville, state officers of the S. E. Union, were present, adding much to the program.

At 6 o'clock Saturday evening a picnic supper was held in the dining hall of the S. S. building, and a social hour followed. Messrs. Breg, Rawlins and Koonce were in charge, and a general good time was had by everybody. The principal address Saturday night was made by Rev. N. G. Bethea, of Lexington, who brought a splendid message on "Crusading With Christ for Christian Citizenship."

The church was packed Sunday at the 11 o'clock service when Mr. Berg brought an inspirational message which was a challenge to all young people to prepare themselves for Christian leadership.

The closing services were held Sunday evening and night. At 6 o'clock a great C. E. prayer meeting was held, led by Messrs. Breg and Rawlins. This was followed by reports from committees and installation of officers. Mr. D. A. McLaurin is the new district president and Mr. W. J. Widenhouse, treasurer. Both these men are from our church.

The climax of the whole convention was the closing message by Mr. Breg, who spoke on "Crusading With Christ for Evangelism." This was a decision service and numbers of young people reconsecrated their lives to the Master. A pleasing feature of this service was a beautiful solo, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," by MacDougall, sung by Mrs. J. B. Womble, who was accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Ernest Litaker.

The delegates were entertained in the homes by our people, and the convention was a success in every way.

Bethel, Alamance.—Last Sunday our pastor, Rev. J. A. Burgess, filled his first appointment for the conference year and delivered a wonderful sermon from Exodus 32:26: "Who is on the Lord's side?" We are glad to have him back with us, for we always enjoy his splendid sermons.

We paid our budgets in full the past year and hope to do the same this year. We have already raised our college assessment.

Our Sunday school is doing nicely under the leadership of our efficient superintendent, Mr. Lon McPherson. May we all work together to make this year the best ever.

Our Woman's Missionary Society held its regular monthly meeting the first Sunday in November at the home of Mrs. D. M. Thompson. An especially interesting feature of this meeting was the discusion of the subject, "Influence."

The Thanksgiving service of the Woman's Missionary Society will be held at Bethel church on the first Sunday afternoon in December. We are expecting to have Rev. J. F. Minnis with us at that time. We feel we are very fortunate in securing Mr. Minnis, returned missionary from India, as our speaker.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

MARCIA FOUST, Reporter.

Tabernacle, Tabernacle Charge.—We are very glad indeed to have our pastor, Brother Isley, back with us for another year. He gave us another splendid sermon Sunday, using as his subject, "The Adornment of the Gospel." He told us one way to adorn the gospel is to magnify Jesus in our lives. He called our attention to the fact that some people never read the four gospels of the New Testament but they read the gospel according to you and me.

We are looking forward to next Sunday morning when Dr. Dixon and some of the children from the Children's Home will be with us. We are expecting all the Julian church folks up to enjoy this program with us.

Our Sunday school is moving on nicely. Good attendance Sunday. Several visitors were present. The woman's auxiliary met at the home of Mrs. R. L. Jones Saturday afternoon with Mrs. A. P. Coble in charge. After the meeting a very delightful social hour was enjoyed, during which the hostess, assisted by Miss Hendrix, served delicious refreshments.

We are glad to have as assistant teacher in our day school Miss Hendrix, who is a graduate of our High Point College.

The four days old son of Fletcher Horney was buried at Tabernacle on November 15. Funeral services were conducted by Pastor Isley.

REPORTER.

Friendship Church, Mt. Hermon Charge.—Friendship church is glad to welcome Rev. J. E. Carroll back to the work for the coming year. We feel that more can be accomplished by keeping the same pastor for several successive years. Much valuable time and effort is lost in changing pastors, teachers, and officers too often. We should realize that in church work the old is ever new and that far away fields are not always greenest.

A very interesting worth-while service was held last Sunday. Mr. R. W. Isley, who has served us several years as steward and church treasurer, resigned and Mr. Clifton Sharpe was elected to succeed him. Mr. Howard Patterson, of Friendship, and Mr. L. A. Edwards, of Alamance Mills, were appointed to collect the college assessment before the first Sunday in December. We feel sure that the full amount, $51.12, will be on hand by that time.

After the short business session the pastor preached a splendid sermon, using as his theme "New Year Resolutions." He made it plain that the church people this year should serve God and the church more devotedly in three ways: 1. By giving more liberally of our money; 2. By crusading for Christ, and 3. By personal consecration. Pastor and people must co-operate to incorporate these resolutions into our lives during the coming conference year.

We are planning to make this the best year in every way in the history of our church; but we must be mindful that the church is made up of individuals, so everybody should help to put our church on the honor roll next year.

Our Sunday school is doing some splendid work now. The different classes are taking turns in opening the Sunday school. The Philathea class was in charge of the opening exercises today and gave a helpful program. The Intermediates will conduct the opening exercises next Sunday.

Members of the Sunday school are taking a course in teacher-training. The class will meet every Friday night with Rev. and Mrs. D. I. Offman unless otherwise announced.

Mr. Offman has kindly consented to help in the teaching of this course, and we hope that a large number of our people will avail themselves of this splendid opportunity to know more about the Bible.

We wish to extend to the other churches in the conference our best wishes for a successful year's work. REPORTER.

Liberty, Davidson Circuit.—Our new pastor, Brother W. D. Reed, filled his first appointment this evening. Brother Bethea being with him, he did the preaching and gave us a splendid sermon. We were glad to have Bro. Bethea with us.

Every one seems to like Bro. Reed. We hope and pray that every one will put their shoulders to the wheel and let's make this a good conference year. We were sorry to give up Bro. Ridge, but God knows best and we are sure He makes no mistakes.

We have elected our officers for the coming year and our Sunday school is pressing right on. We are hoping to make each year better in the Sunday school. We have the material for a splendid Sunday school if we could only get the people to come out. We have a reporter elected, but I never see anything from Liberty, so I just thought I would drop in and let the people know we are still fighting the wicked one.

MRS. P. L. WALKER.

Kannapolis.—Our church here recently elected me for their reporter for this year; this is something new for me, but I hope I shall escape the wastebasket.

Our new pastor, Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk, arrived last Tuesday evening just in time to be present for a reception or get-together meeting the Ladies' Aid Society had planned for that night that we all might meet our new pastor and his wife. Of course these good people were not strangers to some of us, as Brother Lowdermilk had been pastor of a few of us in other years when he was pastor of Concord church. And it was there we first learned to love them. Between 55 and 60 men, women and children, including some of those who are much interested in our church at this place from Concord, assembled at the Tabernacle to greet these good people. There were a number of informal talks made by different ones, after which refreshments were served and before we separated we forgot that there were any strangers in our midst.

The following are the officers for the coming year: Trustees, M. W. Henderson, C. B. Price, C. B. McCommons, E. N. Galloway, and J. M. Gordon; church treasurer, C. B. McCommons; stewards, J. M. Gordon, E. N. Galloway and Mrs. N. F. Harris; parsonage trustees, Mrs. C. B. Price and Mrs. M. W. Henderson; Sunday school superintendent, M. W. Henderson.; Sunday school secretary and treasurer, Miss Pearl Gordon; pianist, Mrs. C. B. McCommons; reporter, for Methodist Protestant Herald, Mrs. C. B. Price.

Today we had 62 present in Sunday school. The collection was $2.86.

For the 11 o'clock service the attendance was very good, 75 or 80 being present. Our pastor brought us a message on co-operation. He showed us clearly that where the people all have a mind to work and co-operate, Zion will surely move. In unity there is strength. God grant that our little band shall co-operate with our leaders and do much in helping extend His kingdom this year. We would ask the prayers of every reader of the Herald.

MRS. C. B. PRICE, Reporter.

Halifax Charge.—The new conference year is starting off very well, and we hope this will be the best year we have had on this charge. We had a good congregation at Harmony church yesterday morning.

Mr. W. A. Ellington died Saturday and was buried yesterday evening. The funeral services were held in Hollister church, and a very large congregation attended the service. Mr. Ellington had been sick for several months.

At the last meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of Eden church, they presented the pastor and his wife with a fine set of silver spoons as a token of their appreciation of them and their services.

We want to express our sincere thanks to the Ladies' Aid for this kind remembrance, and we will assure you that we will try to render better service in the future.

Our first quarterly conference will meet with Ringwood church on Friday before the second Sunday in December, December 7. We want all of the official members to be present at this conference. We want to lay our plans for the year, and we need your help; we want you to help us plan the work for the year, and plan to make this the best year in the history of this charge. We can do it, and I believe you will help do it, and we will have a great year.

C. L. SPENCER, Pastor.

Randleman.—We went to Glen Raven the fall of 1923 and served these good people for five years, and it was five successful years; did not do as much as I wish we could have done, but will say we left a fine people for anyone to serve and I feel that we have as dear friends there as any place we have left yet.

On Wednesday, November 14, a truck brought Bro. W. H. Neese's furniture to Glen Raven and brought ours back to Randleman, and we have found a fine people here. I filled two appointments Sunday; in the morning at Mt. Lebanon and in the afternoon at New Salem; found good congregations at both places. I trust that this will be a fine year for both pastor and people, and may we go hand in hand to do the work that our dear Lord and Master has assigned us to do.

T. A. WILLIAMS.

Enfield.—Last Thursday night a very enjoyable affair took place at the Hut, when an oyster roast was given in honor of Rev. and Mrs. Auman. Our pastor and his wife have faithfully and successfully served the people of the M. P. church for a year now, and it was a great pleasure for the people to welcome them back; they begin work among us for the second year.

A glowing fire was sparkling in the huge fireplace of the Hut as the people assembled. Mr. Hubert Whitaker very ably acted as leader of the program, which consisted of a song by all present; prayer by Rev. R. C. Stubbins, who was visiting in Enfield; the address of welcome by Miss Mary Collins; response by Pastor Auman; an "Uncle Remus" story by Mrs. Sam Pearson; a short address by Rev. R. C. Stubbins, our former pastor. Then followed the best part of the program, namely, the roasted oysters, which were very palatable. The whole affair was quite enjoyable and we hope our pastor and his wife will be very happy as they live among us this year.

The Men's Union Bible class met with us Sunday morning. Mr. Coletrane, superintendent of Roanoke Rapids Schools, taught the class in a very profitable and enjoyable way. We are always glad to have Mr. Coletrane with us.

Rev. Mr. Daniel, a student of Wake Forest College and an Assyrian, very vividly brought us a message of the conditions in the East and particualrly of his own country, at the morning hour last Sunday. The offering at this time was $37.75, which was very good considering the audience present.

At the evening hour Pastor Auman presented in a unique manner High Point College.

A Junior C. E. has been organized, with Mrs. Walter Halliday superintendent and Mrs. J. R. Powers her assistant; they started with 10 little folks and are having good results. The Seniors and Intermediates are coming on nicely.

Best wishes to all. REPORTER.

Enfield.—The second Sunday saw the beginning of the second year of service with the people of this charge. We have been very warmly received and we anticipate a good year. Our people here are manifesting a fine spirit of co-operation.

The Sunday school, with Mr. H. M. Whitaker as its leader, has started off with a fine showing. This is Mr. Whitaker's third year as superintendent. President Bellamy, of the Senior C. E. Society, has entered upon his new field of Christian service in a zealous manner. Along with Brother Bellamy is his wife and co-laborer, Mrs. E. I. Bellamy, the re-elected superintendent of the Intermediate C. E. Mrs. Bellamy is doing a fine piece of work with the teen-age boys and girls. The Junior Christian Endeavor, a new project of the Enfield church, bids fair to be one of the most interesting pieces of work which the church has undertaken. The name of Miss Ruth Bellamy should be added to the list of church officers as given in the Herald last week. Mis Bellamy is one of the assistants of the Junior Christian Endeavor and is showing, along with the other leaders of this society, real talent for this most important work of the church.

At the request of Mr. H. C. Matthews, the classleader of the church, for someone to assist him in his work, Mr. George L. Parker was unanimously elected.

With such a splendid corps of co-laborers the writer is expecting great things for the interest of the Kingdom among this people.

On Thursday night of last week members of the Enfield church, in the nature of a church social, welcomed the writer and his wife back into their midst. Mr. P. S. Bellamy had ordered a barrel of oysters to be roasted. Every one seemed to enjoy the oysters to the fullest degree. The pastor greatly appreciates this hearty welcome expresed in genral by those who were there and in particular by those who appeared on the program.

Last Sunday morning at the 11 o'clock hour Mr. M. G. Daniel, a student at Wake Forest College, spoke. Mr. Daniel is the authorized representative of the Assyrian Relief Commission with its headquarters in Philadelphia. He told in a very vivid way of the awful atrocities committed against his people by the Turks. At the conclusion of the service an offering was taken which amounted to $38.75

Mrs. Mary A. Barnhill has been very ill, but we are glad to report that she is considerably better, although yet under the care of the doctor.

Mr. B. R. Kimball, Sr., who has been confined to his room for a long time, is able, we are glad to say, to be out again.

J. CLYDE AUMAN.

Pine Grove, Kernersville Charge.—A large congregation heard Rev. J. D. Cranford, our new pastor, Sunday at the 3 o'clock service in an inspiring and interesting sermon based on the text found in I Corinthians 3:6-9: "I have planted, Apollos watered; but God gave the increase." For we are laborers together with God.

What has already been planted we must strive to keep watered with the Spirit of God. For every man is rewarded according to his labor.

At this, the beginning of the conference year, he urged that all do their best and labor together for the upbuilding of the kingdom, and look to God for the results.

We wish for our former pastor, Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk, much success in his new field of labor. May he have divine guidance and strength to go forth with the work.

REPORTER.

High Point.—Rev. and Mrs. Roy I. Farmer and children, Mary Elizabeth and Joseph, returned Saturday evening from a sad trip to Uhrichsville, Ohio, where they were called by the sudden death of Mr. Farmer's younger brother, Clinton R. Farmer. On Sunday morning Rev. Mr. Farmer occupied his pulpit at the hour for morning worship, and delivered a beautiful and appropriate sermon from I John 4:16: "God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him." He said in part that the conception of God in all ages has been very different. To the Jew God is lawful; He is strong and beautiful. If God should not love His creatures, it would prove something is wrong. He has never made anything that He cannot embrace in the pale of his love, which shines upon the good and evil alike. "I know its beauty and power in my own life and that of others." God's love is inconceivable to mortals; it is immutable, boundless, infinite. You cannot fathom it; it is so great that it includes all peoples and nations of the earth. The function of religion is not to argue God and His love, but simply to announce it. What is love? The love of God is that love which is self-affirmation, an honest, just, and fair respect for self. He is not a true lover who is not made purer by his love. When we believe ourselves worthy of God's love, then it comes into our hearts. Then His love is self-impartation. When we love another, we delight to bestow affection, gifts, and service upon that person. Love in family life is self-impartation; also in neighborhood or community life. Again God's life is self-finding. Vivariousness means that He put himself in our place; He became the propitiation for our sins. Sympathy is the pain in one's heart for another. The crux of this text revolves around this question: "Are we in Christ and He in us?" "No life can be pure in its purpose and strong in strife, and all life not be purer and stronger thereby."

At this service Mr. Clarence Schultheiss sang, "Rock of Ages" with beautiful effect, with a lovely organ accompaniment by Prof Ernest B. Stimson. The choir rendered a beautiful anthem, "Break Forth Into Joy," by Harker. After the sermon a short, but impressive installation service was conducted by Rev. Mr. Farmer, when officers of the church, trustees, stewards, superintendent of Sunday school, chairmen of special committees, such as grounds, music, house, Boy Scouts, etc., presidents of Ladies' Aid Society, W. F. M. S., W. H. M. S., Christian Endeavor, church treasurer, secretary, and church reporter were inducted into office.

At the evening service Rev. Mr. Farmer delivered another splendid sermon in the series on David Livingstone's text. A lovely quartet, "Crossing the Bar," was sung by Mesdames Allred and Whitesell, Messrs. Schultheiss and Mason, and the anthem, "The Shadows of the Evening Hour," was rendered by the choir. Professor Stimson is proving himself an excellent organist and music director, and the congregation is delighted with his wonderful skill.

Sunday was Volunteer Pledge Day, and the members of the church looked up their stewards and gave them subscriptions for the work of the new conference year. This plan works better than the one hitherto used here, that of the stewards going to the homes and soliciting the pledges. "God loveth a cheerful giver," and when one makes a voluntary, free-will offering, it always adds to the joy and satisfaction of the gift.

The two Missionary Societies held an interesting meeting Monday afternoon at the church. The meeting of the Home Society came first, and Mrs. L. R. Johnston presented a splendid program. Rev. R. I. Farmer conducted the devotionals and Mrs. L. J. Diffee told of some of the urgent needs of the Children's Home, as November has always been designated as the month for Thanksgiving and special contributions to the Home. Mrs. Johnson read a touching and beautiful poem, "The Children." Mrs. J. H. Allred sang a lovely solo, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. R. M. Andrews. All members present joined in singing the exquisite hymn, "O, Master, let me walk with thee." Rev. Mr. Farmer led in a tender, three-fold prayer; first, for the children in our own homes, then for the helpless orphans in our Children's Home, and, lastly, for the children in foreign lands. Announcement was made of the annual Thank-Offering service by the Woman's Home Missionary Society, which will be held this year on Sunday evening, December 2, which will be the Sunday following Thanksgiving day. Every one, men, women, and children, are earnestly requested and urged to contribute the amount of one day's wages or income for the support and maintenance of the children, who by unfortunate circumstances have been placed under our care in the Children's Home. This institution at our very door which is admitted to be the most beautiful benevolence of the Methodist Protestant Church of North Carolina, is full worthy of our heartiest support, and the members of the Home Society are hoping and praying for a larger thank-offering than ever before. The secretary will send out an individual appeal in the form of a letter to every member of our church within the week. After business of the Home Society was finished, Mrs. C. L. Whitaker gave the first chapter of the Foreign Society study book, "Friends of Africa," by Mrs. MacKenzie, in a most interesting manner. The members present enjoyed greatly the presentation of Mrs. Whitaker.

The C. E. Society held its weekly meeting Monday evening. The topic, "Remember God," was led by Mrs. Alice Koonce Davis. Following this discussion a hobo party was enjoyed.

In Roberts Hall, High Point College, on Tuesday evening Miss Mary Young will be hostess to the Young Women's Auxiliary, and a Thanksgiving program will be presented.

On Wednesday evening at the usual hour the prayer meeting and teacher-training class will be held.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Robbins left Saturday for a trip to points in Florida and Havana, Cuba.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ogburn, of Summerfield, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Russell R. Blackburn Saturday and Sunday.

Dr. A. Norman Ward, president of Western Maryland College, Prof. Samuel Schofield and Dr. Isanogle, of the faculty, were guests of Dr. Andrews at High Point College one day last week.

Mrs. A. G. Dixon left Monday for Pittsburgh, Pa., to attend a meeting of the executive committee of the Women's Missionary Societies. Miss Vista Dixon, who is teaching at Bath, N. C., will spend the Thanksgiving holidays with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. A. G. Dixon.

Albemarle.—Our Sunday school was re-organized on last Sunday, and the new class rooms were used for the first time. New teachers were elected and a Junior department was organized with Mrs. C. S. Moton as superintendent. Mrs. Moton has had quite a bit of experience in this line of work, and we feel that she will make a fine superintendent. Several new classes were formed, and every one seemed to be happy to have a class room of their own again.

Pastor Anderson brought a message especially to the new officers of the church at the Sunday morning service, at which time the installation of officers occurred. A powerful appeal was made for willingness to serve in the places to which the officers had been elected.

As some of our readers know, one of our oldest and most energetic members, Mrs. Marshall Hatley, has been working on a "memory quilt" for some time, getting donations from her many friends and acquaintances, and the quilt is now finished, and will be sold at auction at a Thanksgiving social which is to be held Tuesday, November 27, in the church basement. Mrs. Hatley, through her untiring efforts, has succeeded in raising about $150 on the quilt, $5.00 of which was sent to her by Governor McLean. The money is being used to purchase needed things for the new church.

Mr. J. E. Gantt's team wins in the second month of the contest, which is being carried on in the Men's Bible class, so they win the next supper.

Two new members, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Smith, were received into the church Sunday night, having transferred their membership from the M. E. church of Wadesboro. We are very glad to have these fine folks join with us, as they have been living in our midst for some time and have been associated with the Sunday school.

MRS. J. U. WHITLOCK, Reporter.

Midway, Haw River Circuit.—Our former pastor, Bro. Curry, was with us the fourth Sunday in October, which closed the conference year. This was communion day, and a very sweet service was held. Most of the congregation partook if the Lord's Supper. We regret very much that Bro. Curry was not returned for another year; he served us only one year, but will always find a warm place in our hearts and we pray God's blessings on him and family in their new work. While we regret losing Bro. Curry, we feel that we are fortunate in getting Bro. Trollinger, and we welcome him and family into our midst. He does not seem like a stranger to us, as he has been with us in a revival and we learned to love him very much. He was with us the second Sunday afternoon, but did not preach, as it was cold and our heating plant was not finished. It is now finished and we are looking forward to his being with us neyt Sunday morning.

Our Sunday school is moving along nicely. We have reorganized and elected teachers for the coming year, and are hoping to do a great work. Some of our boys and girls are sick with "flu," and were missed at church last Sunday. We hope for them a speedy recovery.

Best wishes to the Herald Readers.

MRS. G. W. APPLE, Reporter.

Nov. 18, 1928.

North Davidson Charge.—Our work is starting off nicely. Everybody seems to be happy and taking hold of the work as never before; they want to make this the best year yet on this charge. Good congregations met us at all appointments. Last Thursday night we organized a C. E. Society at Bethesda, with Miss Elizabeth Yokley as president. We have a fine bunch of young people at this church, who can do great things for our church and kingdom.

Workers' Council met at Shiloh church on Monday night. We had a good meeting. The Workers' Council is a great help to Shiloh church. They have done some fine work.

The executive board of the Christian Endeavor Society will meet at the parsonage Tuesday night to lay plans for the year.

We have been enjoying plenty of fresh meat since conference. Bro. Jeff Berrier gave us a whole hog, or big pig, and the peculiar thing about it is I have three hams and one shoulder.

The teachers at Shiloh Sunday school gave Mrs. Troxler a nice dress for conference. As they had to take the same preacher back for another year, they wanted them to look new, at least.

We are planning and praying for a good year; pray for us. R. S. TROXLER.

Orange Chapel, Saxapahaw Charge.—Today was our regular preaching day. Our pastor, Rev. O. C. Loy, gave us another one of his good sermons. Words can not express how glad we are to have Mr. Loy, our pastor, back with us this year. He has delivered many wonderful sermons during the past year, but the one he delivered today was one of the greatest sermons we ever heard. It seems that he preaches from the material that needs to be expressed before the peopl.

A vry interesting program was rndered today by the Mission Band. The offering was eight dollars. This collection is to go to the Children's Home at High Point.

We are very sorry that Mrs. Loy was not able to come to church today; we missed her very much and hope she will be able to come next preaching Sunday.

New officers were elected for the coming year a few Sundays ago. We feel and pray that great working is going to be done in the Sunday school this year.

We kindly request your earnest prayers for a great religious co-operation among the members of Orange Chapel church during this year's work.

Best wishes. L. W.

Concord, Saxapahaw Circuit.—We started another year's work at our church Sunday with Mr. O. C. Loy as our pastor. We are very glad to have him with us again. He gave us a very inspiring sermon, using as his text, "Arise, take up thy bed, and walk."

We are trying to create more interest in our Sunday school by each class taking it upon themselves to open the school one Sunday. The Baracas had charge Sunday and the Philathea's will open school next Sunday.

The Sunday school has started plans for a Christmas program and tree at our church on Monday night, the 24th of December. Mrs. R. N. Robertson, Mattie Ferguson and Edith Guthrie were appointed to prepare a program.

The young people of the church have given their play twice and have taken in $45.

The Woman's Missionary Society will have their next regular meeting with Mrs. R. T. Woody. This society has not been doing much for the past year, but we hope to be more successful this year.

REPORTER.

English Street.—We certainly did hate to give up our pastor, Rev. D. I. Garner, who has made many friends in High Point, and we are indeed grateful to Mr. Garner for the splendid work he has done for us, especially in getting the young people interested in the work, and we wish for him much success in his new field of labor. May greater opportunities be opened up for him to go forth in this great work, that he loves so much to do; but as he was called elsewhere we are very much pleased with the fact that conference saw fit to send Rev. G. L. Reynolds to us. He began his work here with a wonderful sermon for the beginning of this conference year, pleading with the members to have more faith, which he says will have more to do with this year's work than anything else. Mrs. Reynolds, Mr. and Mrs. Hunnycutt, Irene and Inez, in their friendly way, have already won many new friends and with such a family to co-operate with much work can be done.

Our Sunday school has released the superintendent, M. L. Boswell, who has served well, at his own request that he might take up other work in the Sunday school, and now Mr. Tom Kennedy has this work in hand, who is much interested and the people seem to be pleased with his efforts.

The new secretary and treasurer, J. A. Lee, began his new year's work last Sunday. It has been decided to grade and divide the classes, which will be done next Sunday.

The Senior Christian Endeavor held its business and social meeting this month with Mr. and Mrs. Jim Bower. The meeting was called to order by the president and the usual business of the society was looked after. These young folks want to give better programs each Sunday night from now on. When business was over the chairman of social committee, Miss Tressie Caudle, started the fun by sending each one through the spider web for a treasure. Many other games were played; then Mrs. Bowers invited us to the table, where were lots of good things to eat, and the game, telling a secret, was enjoyed by all.

A Junior Endeavor has been organized and the first meeting last Wednesday night had 15 youngsters present.

Mr. and Mrs. Hunnycutt are starting a great work and it seems their field is unlimited.

The Ladies' Aid came together with a good crowd last week at the home of the new president, Mrs. Goebel. More interest was taken than usual and we know if we will work as she is instructing us, lots will be done. And if you Herald readers know how she and Mrs. Elilott can serve good things to eat, we'd have company next time.

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Little announce the birth of a daughter, Bettie May, October 28.

The first quarterly conference was held last night but owing to the rain there were not many present. Much work was planned for this year.

There is a long list of our members sick with "flu," but we trust they will soon be out again.

May this year be the best the M. P. denomination has ever known.

MRS. J. A. LEE, Reporter.

Cedar Falls.—We have entered upon the duties of the new conference year. Our Sunday school is small, but we hope the people will see fit to come to Sunday school and preaching more in the future than they have in the past.

Our new pastor, Rev. T. E. Pierce, filled his first appointment the second Sunday at 11 a. m. and preached a splendid sermon. The congregation was not so large, but all seemed to enjoy the sermon.

We certainly do hate to give up our former pastor, Rev. Fred R. Love. We will miss his smiling face. We are glad to know that Sister Love is improving after a long illness. May the Lord bless and protect Bro. and Sister Love wherever they go.

May the Lord bless our church and may our Sunday school prosper. Let's all work together for the Lord.

MRS. JAMES M. ALLRED, Reporter.

West End, Greensboro.—On Friday evening, November 16, the Ladies' Aid Society and the adult classes of the Sunday school gave a reception in the new auditorium to welcome our pastor, Dr. Williams, whom we are so glad to have with us again, and all the members that have been added to the church during the past year. The entertainment committee provided a splendid program. We also enjoyed several selections of negro spirituals by the New Light negro quartet. This quartet was furnished through the courtesy of the Baraca and Philathea classes.

The attendance was good and every one had a good time.

I am very glad to report that our assessment to the High Point College for this year has been raised.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies will hold a joint session at the home of Dr. Joy Glascock Tuesday evening, November 22.

The members of the Foust Bible class were invited to the Central Fire Station last Sunday. The class was well represented and enjoyed it very much. REPORTER.

Spencer.—In 1925 Rev. D. A. Braswell came to Spencer and held services in the home of A. L. Moore, 600 Carolina Avenue. On July 5, 1925, Mr. Braswell began a series of services, and on Monday night held service in St. Joseph Chapel on Rowan Avenue. This meeting continued through Thursday. On Thursday, July 9th, 1925 we organized our Woman's Home Missionary Society in the home of Mrs. A. L. Moore. Officers elected were Mrs. A. L. Moore, president; Mrs. N. A. Lynch, recording secretary, and Mrs. C. R. Jackson, treasurer; only three present. The next week we went out and secured four more names, together with three honorary members. The lady members joining at this time were Mrs. J. W. Redding, Mrs. Mary Deadmon, Mrs. S. D. Smith and Mrs. J. S. Lawson. The honorary members were A. L. Moore, C. R. Jackson and N. A. Lynch, making a membership of ten. The next to join our society were Mrs. S. C. Brown, Mrs. J. C. Lloyd, Mrs. J. W. Redding and Mrs. J. L. Gray. Rev. D. A. Braswell continued to hold services twice a month until September 13, 1925. We organized our church with 15 members. All these services were held in the home of A. L. Moore except three night services mentiond above.

A new church of our own has been built and was completed November 16, 1928, with opening services held Sunday morning, November 18, 1928, conducted by Rev. S. W. Taylor, president of the North Carolina Methodist Protestant Conference.

On July 9th, 1925, the following officers were elected: Trustees, A. L. Moore, C. R. Jackson, Mrs. N. A. Lynch; Stewards, C .R. Jackson, Mrs. A. L. Moore, later adding J. W. Redding, J. L. Furr; Treasurer, Mrs. A. L. Moore.

Our Sunday School was organized December 6th, 1925, in the Mason's Hall, but only met at this place on the first Sunday as we were not allowed to rent the hall, and the Sunday School returned to the home of A. L. Moore for meetings. Officers of Sunday School were elected, as follows: C. R. Jackson, Superintendent; J. L. Furr, Assistant Superintendent; Mrs. J. L. Furr, Bible Class Teacher; Mrs. C. R. Jackson, Primary, and Mrs. A. L. Moore, Beginners; Secretary and Treasurer, J. L. Furr.

On September 24th, 1925, Mrs. Moore, Church Treasurer, bought a piano and made first payment of $20.00.

On November 4th, 1925, at the North Carolina Annual Conference at High Point, N. C., Rev. D. A. Braswell and Mrs. A. L. Moore went before the Boundary Committee asking that Spencer Charge, embracing North Charlotte and Spencer, be admitted and that Allison Grove be attached to the Spencer Charge. Rev. D. A. Braswell was pastor that year, preaching in the home of A. L. Moore until May 23rd, 1926, when we rented St. Joseph Chapel on Rowan Avenue.

Other ministers to visit us and preach during this time have been Rev. W. C. Carson and Rev. N. G. Bethea.

Membership List: A. L. Moore, Mrs. A. L. Moore, C. R. Jackson, Mrs. C. R. Jackson, Thomas Jackson, Arnold Jackson, Doris Jackson, Mrs. N. A. Lynch, J. W. Redding, Mrs. J. W. Redding, W. A. Redding, Mrs. W. A. Redding, Mrs. D. A. Hackney, Mrs. J. C. Lloyd, J. L. Furr, Mrs. J. L. Furr, Mrs. Susie Harkey, N. A. Lynch, S. C. Brown, Mrs. S. C. Brown, C. M. Mayes, Mrs. C. M. Mayes, Mrs. C. P. Styres, Mrs. J. H. McPherson, Mrs. D. R. Cable, Josephine Cable, Phillip Cable, W. N. Thompson, Mrs. W. N. Thompson, Margaret Thomposn, R. William Thompson, Ruth M. Thompson, Sarah F. Thompson, Mrs. R. L. Small, Margaret Small, Samuel Cable, Harold Hackney, D. A. Hackney, Jr., R. L. Small.

In November, 1926, at Annual Conference at Greensboro, N. C., Mr. C. R. Jackson was delegate. At this conference Spencer Church was attached with Union Grove Church and Rev. T. Glenn Madison was given us as pastor.

MARRIED

Married at my house by the writer November 3, 1928, Worth Foster and Maomi Canoy; also on November 10, Mr. W. Pearley Osborn and Miss Pearl M. Foster.

They are fine young people. We wish for them all the happiness this life affords. The parties are all from Asheboro; so come on, Asheboro, it is only six miles to my house; good road and down hill all the way; at least Asheboro is several feet above Deep River level at Cedar Falls; so come on and get married while it is convenient.

G. A. LAUGHLIN.

Smith-Newby

At the writer's home in High Point, Mr. Percy Smith and Miss Lucile Newby were united in marriage on the 17th of November. Mr. Smith is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Smith, of Davidson county, and is a young man of excellent character. Mrs. Smith is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Newby, of High Point, and is a young lady of strong Christian character. We wish this happy couple smooth sailing over life's troubled waters. GEO. L. REYNOLDS.

ATTENTION, CHURCHES!

The Executive Committee of the General Conference in a recent meeting authorized the issuance of a spcial Christmas program for use in our churches.

The preparation of the program was entrusted to Dr. J. H. Straughn, secretary of Promotional Work, in conjunction with the secretaries of the Board of Missions and the Board of Christian Education.

In connection with this program, an appeal is to be made for a special offering to apply on the General Conference apportionment Whatever amount is given is to be credited on the local church budget for the New Century Service.

Send your orders for the Christmas program to Dr. J. H. Straughn, 516 N. Charles street, Baltimore, Md.

The time is short, but long enough for intensive and efficient preparation. A liberal offering will greatly help the Boards.

J. C. BROOMFIELD, Pres.
General Conference.

NICARAGUA'S ELECTION

The presidential election in Nicaragua was held November 4. The election was under the supervision of United States marines. A large vote was cast and there were few disorders. Gen. Jose Maria Moncada, the Liberal candidate, was elected president of Nicaragua by a majority of about 20,000 votes over his Conservative opponent.—Current Events.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Isley

Mr. Andrew Michael Isley, one of Friendship's oldest members, passed away October 27. He was one of Alamance County's best farmers and a member of the Jr. O. U. A. M. The remains were interred in Friendship cemetery following the funeral service, which was conducted in the church.

Mr. Isley was born June 29, 1856. Most of his life had been spent in the Friendship community. For over ten months he had been in failing health; however the last two weeks were more painful to him. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Minerva E. Isley, and one son, R. W. Isley, Burlington. He also leaves one sister, Mrs. Sophia Rippy, Altamahaw, and one brother, J. Frank Isley, Winston-Salem.

The funeral was conducted in Friendship church Monday, October 29, at 11 o'clock. The pastor was in charge and was assisted by Revs. A. O. Lindley, D. I. Offman, and T. A. Williams. The remains were interred in the local cemetery. The Juniors conducted their regular burial service at the grave.

He was a member of Friendship church for over a half century. For several years, even unto death, he was a member of the board of trustees. He had a spirit that was unconquerable and superb. Even during his latter days he came on a cane to a trustee meeting. He was the first member to vote that Friendship church install electric lights. He always stood for progress. Even though he almost reached the three-quarter century mark he was young in spirit. He was always laughing and smiling. We on earth may miss his cheer, but heaven must be a little brighter by his sweet disposition and cheer.

J. ELWOOD CARROLL, Pastor.

IN MEMORIAM

James W. Hinkle
Virgil Hinkle
Lucille Elizabeth Hinkle

A cruel fate it seems when our loved ones are snatched without warning from our firesides into the Great Beyond. Epecially does this seem true when the victims are the little sunbeams of the home. More especially is it true when the lives of sweet, innocent children are snuffed out by the fateful bullet of a madman's pistol. Such was the tragic and deplorable case of Virgil and Elizabeth, the two younger children of the late J. W. Hinkle and Mrs. Hinkle, who were slain by their father just before he turned the pistol to his own heart.

Born near Louisburg, West Virginia, February 19th, 1884, James Walker Hinkle came to High Point in young manhood about 20 years ago. He married Miss Vesta Kinney, a native of Virginia, October 5, 1910 . To them were born three children: James, Jr., Virgil, and Elizabeth. Soon after their marriage they established a home on South Main street in High Point, and united themselves with the Main Street Methodist Episcopal church. Some time later they moved to Thurston street, and about 10 years ago removed their membership to the First Methodist Protestant church. The father was a capable man in business and in the church, and efficiently conducted the affairs of the several positions of trust which he held in the First church. A more efficient secretary of the quarterly conference or steward could hardly be found. His attendance upon the services of the church was characterized by faithfulness and worshipfulness. The fervency of his public prayers led one to remark, "Surely, no man could pray like that if he were not a good man." Financial complications opened the way for the evil spirit to enter his overwrought mind, with the fatal result stated above. That the wisdom and mercy of God, whose ways and thoughts are higher than ours, may deal kindly with his soul is the hope and prayer of a large number of Christian friends. Who can say that the love of pomp and display so manifest in these modern days, and of which the church of the living God cannot prove itself entirely innocent, did not contribute in a large degree to the temptation and dawnfall of James W. Hinkle? Let the mantle of Christian charity cover his name for all time, and "He that is without sin, let him first cast a stone at him." God grant that we may ponder and take stock of ourselves, and as church members be more faithful in our duty as teachers of morality and champions of humility and duty, even as the "lowly Nazarene."

"Oh yet we trust that somehow good
Will be the final goal of ill,
To pangs of nature, sins of will,
Defects of doubt and taints of blood;

That nothing walks with aimless feet;
That not one life shall be destroyed,
Or cast as rubbish to the void,
When God hath made the pile complete.

Behold, we know not anything;
I can but trust that good shall fall
At last—far off—at last to all,
And every winter change to spring."

Virgil Hinkle, born in High Point February 2, 1918, was a typical American boy, fun-loving, even hilarious at times. He was unusually bright, and was a member of Miss Morton's sixth grade in Junior High School. His teachers speak in the highest terms of Virgil, who was a leader among his group and very popular with his companions. In fact, he was "a little gentleman" in every sense of the word. Deliberately accepting the invitation to dedicate his life to the Lord Jesus on Palm Sunday, 1927, he followed it by uniting with the church the next Sunday. By his faithfulness to the Sunday school and junior church, as well as his childish effort to live daily for Jesus, he proved himself a worthy member of the church of Christ. Although only ten years of age, he left an impress upon his little friends and schoolmates, and his memory will linger long in the hearts of those who were near to him.

Lucille Elizabeth Hinkle, over whose fair head only eight summers had passed, was a ray of sunshine to all who knew her. Blue-eyed and blondhaired, her beaming countenance bespoke the happiness of the buoyant heart within her little body. She had already reached the third grade at Ray Street School, and was greatly loved by her teachers and little fellow-students. She was not far behind her brother in making her decision for her Savior, for only two weeks before her tragic death she made her confession along with others of her friends. She manifested an interest in the church of her parents, and was faithful in attendance at Sunday school and Junior church. "Of such is the kingdom of heaven," spake the Master. Despite our heart-rending sorrow at the loss of these dear, lovely children, we rejoice that they have escaped the "evil days" of later life, which are fraught with so many dangers and pitfalls so hard to avoid. To the grief-stricken mother, who has been a true and faithful wife and help-meet, we commend her to the Father, who has promised: "He shall gather the lambs within His arms, and carry them in His bosom."

BLANCHE A. PICKENS,
E. LESTER BALLARD.

Dosier

Roxanna Dosier was born June 20th, 1836, and died October 23rd, 1928, being 92 years, four months and three days old. Her husband, Perry Dosier, died ten year sago. She leaves three sons and one daughter. Rev. J. F. Dosier, the eldest son, died the day after his mother's 92nd birthday. Thirteen grandchildren and 15 great-grandchildren survive. Grandma Dosier had lived with her daughter, Mrs. A. S. Barker, for ten years. For a long time she was almost deaf, blind and helpless. Mrs. Barker exceeded the limit of her physical ability in her ministration to her helpless and deserving mother. The deceased was a long time member of Level Cross M. P. church. Funeral services were conducted by the writer from Providence Friends church on October 25.

A good mother has gone on to greet a great son.

WM. H. NEESE.

Poole

J. D. Poole, Jr., was born September 24th, 1922, and departed this life September 17th, 1928. He was run over by an automobile as he was crossing a highway near his home at Greenville, S. C. He was rushed to the hospital but it was too late; nothing could be done for him.

J. D. leaves to mourn their loss a father, mother, and two little sisters, Mary Alice and Barbara; two grandfathers, two grandmothers; also a host of relatives and friends.

The funeral service was held at Liberty Hill M. P. church September 18th, conducted by the pastor of his parents, Rev. G. B. Ferree, assisted by Rev. Smiley Edwards, of Greenville.

His body was tenderly laid to rest in the church cemetery under a mound of beautiful flowers to await the resurrection morn.

ROMAINE POOLE.

Charles

Noah L. Charles, son of Pleasant and Samantha Kennedy Charles, was born in Davidson county near High Point September 8, 1896, and died October 29, 1928, at his home near the place of his birth. Surviving are his wife, two brothers, Gurney and Roscoe, also one sister, Mrs. Florence May. All of these live near High Point.

Bro. Charles spent the greater part of his life in this community, except the time spent in the World War. During this great war he spent about two months in training and then went to France, where he spent about seven months. At the end of this time, March 31, 1919, he received an honorable discharge and returned to his home here. His health gave way and he then went to the Oteen Hospital near Asheville and spent 13 months. While there his health improved to some extent and he came back to his old home where he spent the remainder of his days.

Fbruary 11, 1922, he was married to Miss Irma Lee Craven, of near High Point. While his married life was not very long, yet it was one of happiness. It was in the home that he displayed so many acts of kindness and love to his wife that she deeply mourns because of his going.

Shortly after his return from the hospital this writer was in his home for the first time. We learned later of his being converted while a patient in the hospital and solicited his name for membership at the Grove. He at once expressed a desire to join the church, although he was not able to go to the church to be received. We gladly consented to receive him at his home. After his taking all the vows for active church membership we presented his name to the church the next Sunday and he was voted full membership in Pleasant Grove church. After this we visited him regularly for two or more years, and the last conversation we had with him, which was a few days before death came, he expressed his willingness and readiness to go. I think we can truthfully say, "He died in the triumphs of a gospel faith."

His pastor conducted the funeral at the church in the presence of a large congregation and his body was placed in the family burying plot in the church cemetery.

GEO. L. REYNOLDS.

Presnell

Mary Lillian Presnell was born June 24, 1869, and departed this life November 5, 1928. She professed faith in Jesus Christ in youth and first joined the Methodist Protestant Church at Cedar Falls; later she moved her membership to Flag Springs and remained a faithful member until death. This writer and Mary spent a good part of our school days as schoolmates. Mary was a good girl, and grew to be a good woman. She will be much missed in church and the community. She leaves to mourn her departure three brothers, John, Henry, and Braxton Presnell; three sisters, Mrs. W. R. Williams, Miss Louzena Presnell, and Mrs. Herb McGee. May our heavenly Father comfort those left behind and lead them in the center of his will until they all be gathered in that home where peace flows like a river and where parting will be no more.

On the 6th her funeral was conducted at Cedar Falls Methodist Protestant Church by her pastor, assisted by Rev. J. E. Pritchard and Rev. G. A. Laughlin. She was laid to rest beneath a mound of flowers to sleep that sweet sleep from which none ever wake to weep.

JOEL B. TROGDON, Pastor.

Our Children's Home

A REASONABLE REQUEST

"And whoso shall receive one such little child in my name receiveth me."

When the lights are burning in your spacious home on Thanksgiving night, when the children's hour has come—that little tot so bravely struggling against the sandman, those of larger growth busy with the lessons for tomorrow, so well started on life's road as fine, useful citizens, with all of life's opportunities before them, may it be said that you have previously given thought for those who are homeless, without father, without mother, just set adrift to find what harbor they may on the restless sea of human endeavor.

Have you ever felt the thrill and the warmth of heart that comes when the weak hand of the little child snuggles into yours on a dark night, or in a strange place? If you have, this message, although it has come to you a dozen times during the past 12 years, will appeal to your sense of justice to the fatherless and homeless children of the state who, through no fault of their own, are left to battle alone along the rugged pathway of life.

The farmer plants the seed for the harvest he expects to garner. The orphan homes of the state are planning for a harvest of the race. Shall we give to growing children that degree of care and attention the farmer expends upon the plants from which he expects an abundant yield of golden grain? Shall we have a part in building for the future? Shall we grow patriots for the coming years? If so, we shall not offer an apology for bringing again the needs of the fatherless and motherless children of North Carolina to the attention of the people at Thanksgiving.

Here is the proposition: The North Carolina Orphan Association is asking every man and woman in the state to contribute the equivalent of one day's income, or a day's salary, to one of the orphan homes of the state on, or near, Thanksgiving Day. All of them are cleanly administered and all of them are worthy of unstinted support. Their needs are urgent and they are looking with hope and confidence to the Thanksgiving period for means to sustain them through the long dreary months of approaching winter. No one can do a finer thing at this blessed Thanksgiving season than to show his, or her, love and appreciation for them and for the thousands of helpless children whom they are nourishing and bringing up under religious influences, by remembering them at Thanksgiving in a generous way.

The President of the United States and the Governor of North Carolina issue their Thanksgiving proclamations calling upon our people of every faith and denomination, and in every walk of life, to "give thanks" to the Almighty Author of our being, the Preserver of our lives, liberties, and all the blessings we enjoy through the gracious mercies of the Protector of our country—the Great Architect of the Universe. But the measure of one's thankfulness is found in what he is willing to do, and WILL do, for those who are less fortunate.

Those who are truly thankful for the Christian land of ours, for the creature comforts that God has given them during the year, for the prosperity that their community, their state, and their nation enjoy, will show it by trying to pass on to those worthy of their benefactions some of the blessings that they themselves are enjoying. To those who are looking for some such an outlet as this for the joyful spirit of Thanksgiving we commend to their consideration the appeal of the North Carolina Orphan Association which is, once again, asking every citizen of the "Old North State" to contribute the income of one day out of 365 to the orphanage of his, or her, choice on or near Thursday, November 29, the day set apart for the celebration of divine goodness. Make the offering on the basis of your earning capacity for a single day—more if you will; less if you can do no better. Make it through your church, or lodge, or individually to the orphanage in which you are most interested.

And, remember, you are asked to do this in the name of Him who said, "And whoso shall receive one such little child in My name receiveth Me." It is for His little ones bereft of parents that this appeal is made. To the liberal giver it will bring happiness and contentment; and the liberal contributor is the one who gives in the right spirit, he it much or little. "For God loveth a cheerful giver."

It is the hope of the committee and the North Carolina Orphan Association it represents that many thousands of people will enter into the spirit of this message, which seeks to help gladden the lives of hundreds of orphaned children now under the fostering care of the fine orphan homes located in the various sections of this progressive commonwealth. From year to year responses to similar appeals have been most gratifying, not only because of the liberal gifts to the various orphan homes, but because there has been revealed tender and practical sympathy which many of our people feel towards the thousands of our fatherless children.

One day's income to the orphanage of your choice would help mightily in directing little footsteps into the ways of pleasantness and peace. So little for YOU, but in the aggregate a princely sum.

The above is a part of an article sent out by the Orphanage Association to the citizens of North Carolina. We are substituting this for the financial report this week, hoping that it will stir the hearts of our Methodist Protestant people, and their friends to do a beautiful thing by our own Children's Home this Thanksgiving.

Christmas Cards

We are offering for sale to our friends Christmas cards. Twenty cards and envelopes in a box, no two cards alike, all for one dollar. These are cards and envelopes such as you would pay 10 cents each for at a book store. If you pass the Home, stop and buy a box, or order by mail.

Faithfully yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON.

WATCH FOR THE ECLIPSE

A total eclipse of the moon will take place early in the morning of November 27. It will be visible throughout the United States and other parts of North America.

Entered as second-class matter at the post office at Greensboro, N. C.

—We were pleased to find among the members of the new Spencer church Bro. Thompson and family, formerly of Burlington, now of Salisbury.

—Calvary's parsonage is now closed in and is to be ready for occupancy on or before January 1. It has basement, six rooms and a bathroom on the first floor and will have two rooms and a bathroom on second floor. The upper rooms will not be completed now as the present pastor's family will not need them.

—Coming from High Point to Greensboro last Sunday evening we came to the scene of a wreck and found a broken car surrounded by people. A woman with three small children sat upon the ground and had been sitting there for an hour. Nobody was hurst in the wreck but a car full of people were left without means of transportation. Some lived in Greensboro, some in High Point, and some in Winston. They had been attending a family reunion in High Point, celebrating grandmother's birthday. On the road toward Greensboro a reckless driver had driven across onto their side of the road and smashed into their car and then went on his way. An unhappy ending to their happy day. We were able to help them a little by bringing them to Pomona. They said we were the first to offer to do so in all the hour they had sat helpless.

—Mrs. S. W. Taylor and her children visited friends in High Point College the first of this week.

—President Taylor made a pilgrimage to Yadkin College last Sunday afternoon to see his aged mother, now 85 years old. She is almost blind, but otherwise is well preserved.

—On the road between Spencer and Yadkin College there is a stone slab about six feet high set up by the roadside with some inscriptions declaring that George Washington sat on that stone one day and ate his dinner. That day was perhaps 150 years ago. We could not tell what he had for dinner that day by any marks left on the stone.

—On the road from Greensboro to Spencer one may see the following M. P. churches: St. Paul, Calvary, Grace, West End, Midway, Pleasant Grove, Lebanon, Welch Memorial, First Church (High Point), English Street, First Church (Thomasville), Community, West Thomasville, State Street (Lexington), South Lexington, Greers, and the new church in Spencer. The distance is about 50 miles.

—Pleasant Grove's new parsonage shows off well and the marker calling attention to the church is the largest and most conspicuous one we have seen.

—We were pleased to see the new church named Greers last Sunday. It was built by a new society and they have done themselves credit in building so well. They have a brick building which we presume contains several rooms.

—The new church at Spencer was built by Bro. D. A. McLaurin, of Concord. He built it in a few weeks, but did a neat job.

—Spencer church has an attractive new stove as its source of heat. Brother Jackson found ready helpers in raising the purchase price among his associates in railroad service.

—Here is a memorable incident in the history of the Spencer church: Rev. D. R. Williams had been secured to preach one day and was well advertised as the "Railroad Preacher." A large congregation of railroad men was expected and a public building was secured for the occasion. The time drew near for the service and nobody came to open the doors. What should they do? Mrs. Moore pondered the question and decided that if the janitor or other person did not come to open up she would have some one break out a window-pane, go in and open the doors. This program would have been carried out had they not found a rear door unfastened.

—The Masonic order of Greensboro this week dedicated their new temple.

—The United States Supreme Court has just upheld the law of New York State requiring the Ku Klux Klan to file with the secretary of state sworn information as to its by-laws, oaths, and membership.

—Snow fell in Western North Carolina last Tuesday. The mercury dropped to freezing at Asheville.

Demand for Infallibility

"O that I knew where I might find the seat of knowledge!" I want absolute assurance. I want to know! This expresses what seems to be a widely felt demand. Men are not satisfied with probabilities. They want certainty. In this state of mind men have done some surprising things. They have played a trick upon themselves. They have set up idols of infallibility and bowed down before them. They have in a moment accepted a great delusion in order that they might evermore seem to have a great light. In a day the Pope of Rome was made infallible by vote of his brethren and for centuries his decisions have been accepted without misgivings. By a similar process the Protestants declared the Holy Scriptures infallible and have regarded them as a complete and perfect revelation of the will of God.

In the political world when men could no longer believe in the divine right and perfect infallibility of kings, they sought elsewhere for a solid foundation. They ended by declaring the voice of the people the voice of God and accepting the voice of the majority as the voice of the people.

Men live in a physical world which is fast moving through space, but they demand a foundation of absolute solidity and absolute unmoveableness in the moral world.

It is honoring to our nature that such a demand exists in our souls. But how shall this demand be met? We believe infallibility is to be sought and found only in God Himself. All substitutes for God are mere graven images wrought by the device of human fancy. Happy is the soul that is led by his love of truth to God, the only Infallible.

Roman Catholic Layman in a Methodist Protestant Pulpit

This took place last Sunday night. The layman was R. D. Douglas, Esq., a lawyer of Greensboro. The pulpit was that of Grace Church. This does not mean that the members of Grace Church have all turned Catholic or that their pastor, Rev. R. J. Tamblyn, is trying to make any of them Catholic. It is part of a program of enlightenment, giving opportunity to Methodist Protestants to broaden their knowledge of the religious world. A month ago a minister of the Quaker church spoke from the Quaker point of view. A month hence a Jew will tell what a Jew can believe. Later the Presbyterians and the Universalists will be represented by ministers with addresses. Possibly there will be others, all speaking on "The Why of Religion."

"Why I Am a Catholic" was the phrasing of Mr. Douglas's theme. He answered the question briefly by saying it was because he believed it most to his advantage in realizing eternal salvation. He then proceeded to draw a picture of the Roman Catholic Church, comparing it with the Protestant portion of Christendom. The chief difference between the two bodies, he thinks, is in the place given the Bible. Both honor the Bible and have exactly the same New Testament. The Roman Catholics admit to the Old Testament certain books regarded by Protestants as apocryphal. The Protestants regard the Bible as a sufficient guide in faith and morals. The Catholics think of the church as an additional source of authority, though this authority must not contravene that of the Scriptures. He compares the Bible to a state constitution which limits authority within certain bounds but does not forbid the legislature (representing the church) to exercise authority on grounds not covered by the constitution. In the matter of church authority he did not trace the course of history out to its climax in the recognition of the infallibility of the Pope. But he took occasion to deny the right of the church to temporal dominion. He said the possession of temporal power was but an accident of European politics, not likely to occur again, and declared that ninety per cent of the Roman Catholics were opposed to the exercise of temporal power by the church. This would allay most Protestant fears if all could know that the remaining ten per cent did not include the class of men most likely to be mischief-makers.

Mr. Douglas spoke in no controversial spirit, but was glad of an opportunity to correct certain misconceptions. He declared that in many respects investigation of facts will reveal just the opposite of what was previously conceived.

This misunderstanding between churches gives ground for such efforts as Bro. Tamblyn and Grace Church are making through this series of addresses. Of course there is risk in the effort and it should be made cautiously when made at all.

Miracles of Regeneration

It is counted a notable and wonderful achievement to make two blades of grass grow where one grew before. But what shall we say of the achievement of making a pure human life grow where a corrupt human life grew before? This is nothing less than miraculous. And yet it is a miracle that we may see for ourselves. We do not have to go into past centuries to find it. Our own time displays many such miracles. We may see any day men and women whose moral tastes have been changed even to the point of reversion. What they once loved now they hate. What they once hated now they love. They now abhor what they once delighted in. They have been changed. And it is no slight change, no superficial alteration. They have been regenerated. They are new creatures, creatures of a very different sort. Evolutionists have been searching the earth and the rocks to find evidence that living creatures may change their species. It is doubtful whether they have found it or can ever find it. But here in the realm of moral creation we behold not simply change of species, but change of genus. Yes, the world has its "twice born men," the marvels of their age. God may be through with physical creation on the earth for aught we

A LIFE OF PRAYER

By Rev. Norman H. Camp

In a recent book entitled His in a Life of Prayer, Dr. Norman B. Harrison, its author, the pastor of the Brooks Memorial Presbyterian Church of St. Louis, in pleading for such a life, says: "One of the ceaseless activities of the body is its breathing. It is essential to self-preservation. We do it involuntarily. Such is the function of prayer; hence its primal importance. It is the church's part, practically, in the sustaining of her life. We sing:

"Prayer is the Christian's vital breath,
The Christian's native air."

"But it is a law of the body that the more actively and vigorously it exercises the more deeply and freely it must breathe. Under exertion the body demands a quickened breathing, an ampler supply of air, to meet its necessities.

"The application to the church is obvious. She has come upon a day of almost hectic exertion. Her activities are many and varied. She is endeavoring to do things as never before. Hence, acknowledging that she is an organism, this speeding up of activity, by every known law, automatically, so to speak, calls for increased breathing. To sustain her own life she must have more prayer. Physiologically and scientifically judged, to refuse herself an increase of breathing, proportionate to her heightened exertion, must prove fatal."

In the introduction to Problems in the Prayer Life, by Dr. J. O. Buswell, president of Wheaton College, the author defines prayer as "conversation with God." He continues: "Our conversation with God is reciprocal. God speaks to us while we pray, though we do not always recognize His voice. We ought always to pray with the words of the child Samuel in mind, 'Speak, for thy servant heareth.' When we pray, we talk with One who hears, who understands, who cares, and who answers!

"This conversation with God need not always be in words, but it should never be broken off. It ought to be essentially continuous in its nature. . . . The continuous nature of prayer may well be illustrated by the conversation of intimate friends. Words are not constantly exchanged, but fellowship is not interrupted. We must not only have regular and frequent times for prayer, but, whenever there is a break in the occupation of our minds, we ought to revert to conscious communion with God just as involuntarily as we should continue in conversation with a friend near at hand."

In his book on Prevailing Prayer, D. L. Moody says in the opening chapter: "Those who have left the deepest impression on this sin-cursed earth have been men and women of prayer. You will find that prayer has been the mighty power that has moved not only God, but man. Abraham was a man of prayer, and angels came down from heaven to converse with him. Jacob's prayer was answered in the wonderful interview at Peniel, that resulted in his having such a mighty blessing, and in softening the heart of his brother Esau; the child Samuel was given in answer to Hannah's prayer; Elijah's prayer closed up the heavens for three years and six months, and he prayed again and the heavens gave rain. . . . Let us remember that the God of Elijah still lives. The prophet was translated and went up to heaven, but his God still lives, and we have the same access to Him that Elijah had."

Dr. R. A. Torrey, in his book on How to Pray, which has had a large circulation, writes thus on "The Importance of Prayer": "The history of the church has always been a history of grave difficulties to overcome. The devil hates the church and seeks in every way to block its progress; now by false doctrine, again by division, again by inward corruption of life. But by prayer, a clear way can be made through everything. Prayer will root out heresy, allay misunderstanding, sweep away jealousies and animosities, obliterate immoralities, and bring in the full tide of God's reviving grace. History abundantly proves this. In the hour of darkest portent, when the case of the church, local or universal, has seemed beyond hope, believing men and women have met together and cried to God and the answer has come.

"It was so in the days of Knox, it was so in the days of Wesley and Whitfield, it was so in the days of Edwards and Brainerd, it was so in the days of Finney, it was so in the days of the great revival of 1857 in this country and of 1859 in Ireland, and it will be so again in your day and mine. Satan has marshalled his forces. Christian science with its false Christ—a woman—lifts high its head. Others making great pretentions of apostolic methods, but covering the rankest dishonesty and hypocrisy with these pretentions, speak with loud assurance. Christians equally loyal to the great fundamental truths of the Gospel are glowering at one another with a devil-sent suspicion. The world, the flesh and the devil are holding high carnival. It is now a dark day, but—now 'it is time for Thee, Lord, to work; for they have made void Thy law.' (Psa. 119:126.) And He is getting ready to work, and now He is listening for the voice of prayer. Will He hear it? Will He hear it from you? Will He hear it from the church as a body? I believe He will."

In the introduction to a compilation of remarkable answers to prayers, entitled I Cried, He Answered, Dr. Charles G. Trumbull, the editor of the Sunday School Times, writes as follows: "We never have to choose between service and prayer. We never have to choose between working and praying. For prayer is service; prayer is work of the most efficient kind that any human being can render. The commonly used expression, 'prayer and service,' often on the lips of sincere Christians, is a mistaken one. It implies that prayer is one thing and service another, whereas those serve who pray, and they serve while they are praying.

"For prayer, as has well been said, 'releases the energies of God.' Prayer is asking God to do what we cannot do.

"Every true prayer originates with God.

"Every true prayer is brought from the heart of God by the Holy Spirit to the heart of man.

"Every true prayer, thus originated by God and conveyed to the heart of man, when offered in the only true way in the name of Jesus, is carried back to God by the Holy Spirit.

"And every true prayer finds its efficiency in the resulting work which God Himself accomplishes in answer.

"We all have the marvelous privilege of permitting or preventing this working of the omnipotence of God."

In George Muller's narratives of Answers to Prayer, one of the series of books belonging to the Moody Colportage Library, he assures us that: "The joy which answers to prayer give, cannot be described; and the impetus which they afford to the spiritual life is exceedingly great. The experience of this happiness I desire for all my Christian readers. If you believe indeed in the Lord Jesus for the salvation of your soul, if you walk uprightly and do not regard iniquity in your heart, if you continue to wait patiently, and believingly upon God; then answers will surely be given to your prayers. You may not be called upon to serve the Lord in the way the writer does, and therefore may never have answers to prayer respecting such things as are recorded here; but, in your various circumstances, your family, your business, your profession, your church position, your labour for the Lord, etc., you may have answers as distinct as any here recorded."

The author of Praying Hyde, the Rev. Francis A. McGaw, of Akron, Ohio, tells of the amazing prayer-life of a missionary in India whose intercession "changed things" for the Sialkot revival. He refers to the Punjab Prayer-Union which was started in 1904, about the time of the first Sialkot convention. The principles of this Union are stated in the form of questions which were signed by those becoming members, as follows:

1. "Are you praying for quickening in your own life, in the life of your fellow-workers, and in the Church?

2. "Are you longing for greater power of the Holy Spirit in your own life and work, and are you convinced that you cannot go on without this power?

3. "Will you pray that you may not be ashamed of Jesus?

4. "Do you believe that prayer is the great means for securing this spiritual awakening?

5. "Will you set apart one-half hour each day as soon after noon as possible to pray for this awakening, and are you willing to pray till the awakening comes?"

Rev. Gordon Watt, of England, in his book on The Strategic Value of Prayer, has this to say in the last chapter: "There are two forms of weakness in the prayer-life of many. The first is to think that prayer consists only in words. Prayer is more than asking something. It is work, the greatest that can ever be done, and one in which each Christian can have a share.

"The path to the throne of God lies open for all who will tread it. And who can measure the issues for the kingdom of God that flow from prayer? Our ideas of prayer are colored by our limitations. The Word of God views prayer in its unbounded possibilities. A man of eloquence may touch multitudes; the man of prayer touches God. Eloquence may pass away without permanent result; prayer in the spirit, prayer that lays a hand upon the throne and knows how to concentrate upon a recognized need, sets in motion spiritual forces which will influence others near and far.

"The second form of weakness is to think that prayer consists in many words, without any real point or purpose in them. Indefiniteness of petition produces leakage of power. Generalities, whether in prayer or preaching, are ineffective. And it is therefore necessary to emphasize this fact, that prayer is a work, as much a work as preaching, teaching, singing, visiting, or attending some religious service. . . . The thoroughness with which we do that work is the measure of the thoroughness with which God will be able to do His work through us."

Those who desire help in their prayer-life may secure any of these books on "Prayer" by writing the Bible Institute Colportage Association, founded by D. L. Moody, 843-845 N. Wells St., Chicago. These books range in price, if bound in paper, from twenty-five cents to fifty cents. They have been an inspiration to many.

THREE BEAUTIFUL GARMENTS

Rev. W. A. Ledford

One of the plainest facts in all creation is that God is a lover of the beautiful. The variety of flowers, scattered so widely over the face of the earth, leaves the inference that God loves flowers. The starry skies, which have gripped, startled and amazed the imagination of the wisest men of all ages with their beauty, are the handiwork of God. A trip through some subterranean cavern, or a study of geology, reveals the hidden wonders and beauties concealed in the bosom of the earth. One is not surprised that the Indians called the beautiful valley in Virginia "Shenandoah—Daughter of the Stars." Neither are we surprised to read in the Scriptures that God commanded Jerusalem to put on her beautiful garments.

The prophet states that one of these beautiful garments was the garment of praise. This was among the garments substituted for others that were not so desirable. The whole list is both interesting and comforting. They are among the good things the Messiah would give. A few of them are "Beauty for ashes, oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness." The note of praise is not sounded as much as it should be among God's people. The late Dr. J. H. Jowett lamented the fact as follows, "God be merciful" is uttered by ten to one saying, "God be praised." Such expressions as, "I will praise Thee with my whole heart," "I will declare thy name unto my brethren," "I will declare his glory among the heathen," suggest both how and where the ministry of praise should be performed. The Scriptures say as much about praise, joy, rejoice, as they do on any other one subject. "Rejoice always; pray without ceasing; in everything give thanks," was the way Paul saw it.

While Jesus bestowed the garment of praise, He wore the garment of humility. He said, "Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart." The lowly service He performed, as He went about doing good, those that were with Him never forgot. Peter wrote, "Gird yourself with humility." In his reminiscences he never could forget the time Jesus girded Himself with a towel and washed the feet of the disciples. Peter figured so prominently in that scene. The word "girded" is literally to "wrap" and "knot," making it difficult to strip it off. Peter was describing the garment of a servant, in which he was to do his work, adding that Christians are to do their work clothed in humility. Since Peter was a student of Old Testament history, he might also have had in mind King Saul, who was promoted and so pre-eminently successful, when he was little in his own sight, and demoted and failed when he became proud and boastful in his own achievements. Peter knew the proneness of men in their prosperity to cease to walk humbly before God. Some one has observed that pride is the only sin that riseth up and boldly resisteth God, and God brings out His army to defeat it. "Haughty spirit goeth before a fall," is the natural and only logical result. The figure is suggested from the following Scriptural statement, viz.: "For God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace to the humble." The humble are to be rewarded with the present earth and the new heaven and the new earth that are to come. Surely the reward fully justifies the garment of humility.

Paul after naming a long list of Christian graces and virtues added, "Above all things put on love or charity, which is the bond of perfectness." The thought is that all other graces are collected and clasped together by love, and without it they fall asunder. Praise and humility are worthless without love. Paul was stressing the same thought when he wrote the 13th chapter of First Corinthians. The figure suggests that love holds the same relation to other graces that staves do to the barrel, or twine to the sheaf of grain. Love does more than merely hold together; yea, "it covers a multitude of sins" not a multitude of sinning. Perhaps there is no garment the Christian church needs to wear today worse than the garment of charity, or love. In a world of hate, jealousy, suspicion, pride, intolerance, there is need for the practice of love and charity, which alone can conquer the discordant elements in society. Some one has said,

"Small deeds that charity gladly would hide,
By evil minds are greatly magnified."

"Now abideth these three beautiful garments, namely, praise, humility and charity, and the most beautiful one is charity." Since "God is love," might one not say, who is clothed with love, or charity, that the beauty of the Lord our God is upon him. That is the way God would have it. Man in his growth must "add . . . god-likeness," saith the Scriptures.

WORSHIP

(Sermon preached by Rev. J. E. Pritchard, of Asheboro, N. C., to the North Carolina Conference, Methodist Protestant Church, Winston-Salem, Oct. 31, 1928.)

Text—But the hour cometh and now is when the true worshipers shall worship the Father in Spirit and in truth, for the Father seeketh such to worship him. John 4:23.

I can think of no subject that is of more importance than that of Worship. It is that which concerns us here and that that concerns us yonder. We have only a few glimpses into the spirit world but wherever the curtain has been drawn and men have been permitted to look beyond the vail almost invariably they have seen those who have gone on before us engaged in worship around the throne. It is a fine thing for a man to be a great preacher, but in so far as we know preaching will cease with the ending of our existence here, but worship must go on forever. Now let us look at the text. We have recorded here a discussion of a great subject by our Lord and the woman of Samaria at the village of Sychar. And let me say here that our Lord was not afraid of losing a big sermon on a small crowd. Perhaps some of us have changed subjects after arriving at the church because we did not want to give our best to the small number, but some of the most precious truths ever uttered by our Lord were not to the multitude but to the few.

As our Lord was going from Jerusalem into Galilee he passed through Samaria and as he came to Jacob's well he found a woman there. A conversation developed concerning the well and the water. And finally the conversation shifted to the subject of where men ought to worship. The woman had been taught that on Mount Gerizim, a short distance away, was the place to worship and the Jews thought that at Jerusalem was the place to worship, but our Lord said, The time will come when neither at Jerusalem nor on Mount Gerizim will be any better places to worship than anywhere else, for men shall be permitted to worship anywhere provided they worship in spirit and in truth.

Now there are certain words and expressions here which I would like to mention briefly. True Worshipers. When we think of the true worshipers somehow we have a feeling that there were some others in the mind of our Lord who were not true but false worshipers. And we know that the Samaritans had a general mixture of some good and some bad in their worship. In Spirit and in truth seems to suggest that there were some who did not worship this way. Perhaps our Lord had in mind those people who had been bringing their carnal sacrifices and had been trying to worship by means of these. Now we know that God had at previous times sanctioned this kind of worship. People had even been commanded to bring a sacrifice consisting of some kind of animal or of fowl. But in this was not God teaching the people how to worship. In this early stage of the world's civilization God was dealing with the childhood of the human race and the child needs some kind of object with which to grasp a truth. Spiritual truth is always difficult to get hold of unless in some way it can be associated with some concrete object. Even our Lord Himself used many parables and he always used things as objects that were perfectly familiar to the people to whom he was talking. He used the parable of the vine and the branches to show the spiritual relationship between the believer and his Lord. He used the parable of the sower to teach a spiritual truth.

One other expression, The Father seeketh such to worship him, it seems to me, needs to be emphasized. Why the Father should seek us to worship him when angels could do it so much better can be explained by saying that the ultimate purpose in worship is the good that comes to the worshiper rather than to the Father Himself. For God knew from the beginning that man would never be at his best until he could look away from self to something else. He also knew that if the worshiper should ever be lifted above the debasing things of life he must have a high goal. As we worship the true, the good, the holy one, we aspire to be like him and as we are made like him we are getting ready to live not only with our fellow men but with ourselves also.

What then is Worship? Some might say it is offering praise to God. And certainly this is a part of it. We might say that this is good in so far as it goes, but the trouble with it is it does not go far enough. Worship involves an expression of feeling and a conception of the object towards whom the feeling is expressed. As we worship we are conscious of the fact that this great Supreme Being is worthy of our worship. The scripture says, He that cometh to God must believe that he is and that he is a rewarder of those who diligently seek him. Worship, then, is the offering of the soul unto God.

We come now to a discussoin of public worship. While the text was not written with public worship rather than private worship in view, yet I will not be doing violence to scripture by discussing public worship. And why should I discuss public worship? Because the church is weak on public worship. Protestantism has magnified the sermon out of all proportion to other things. And in this I am not minimizing the sermon, for sometimes it seems that people pay little enough attention to it. God honors preaching and has used it for the conversion of a great many people and without it not many people are converted and somehow God has ordained that by what the apostle calls the foolishness of preaching the world is to be saved. All of this is gospel truth and we do not want to take anything away from that, but while this is true, it is also true that most churches are weak on worship. Even today you may go into some communities where certain people will stay out of doors and talk about their crops and the weather and various other things until the preacher is ready to take his text, when they hustle in to hear the sermon. Why do they stay out there? It is not because of their absorbing interest in their crops, neither is it that they are especially interested in the weather nor the latest scandal of the community but it is largely because they have not learned the value of worship. They do not see that there is anything in worship for them. It is no wonder their souls are lean. It is no wonder some of them do not have much love for the church nor much loyalty to their Christ, for they have not learned the important lesson that worship is the most important thing about the service.

It now becomes my duty to suggest some aids to worship, some things that will add enrichment to our services. The first of these which I shall mention is, There must be a quiet place. And let me pause here long enough to say the time has come when we must consider the place for the church building. I could mention a number of churches right now which are comparatively new and splendid in design which are practically worthless as places of worship simply because they were built on some public corner where the noise of modern traffic renders it almost impossible to worship or do anything else worth while. Why did Jesus tell the people to go into their closet and shut the door and pray to our Father in secret? Was it not because he knew that the soul was in no condition to worship in the midst of ten thousand distracting things such as we have to contend with in the busy thoroughfares. A few years ago while pastor in a certain progressive city in this state we decided to have a union revival meeting. We secured at considerable expense a large tent and erected it on the busiest corner in the city. We engaged one of the most eloquent preachers I have ever heard to do the preaching but the meeting was almost a failure because of the noise.

Another great aid to worship is a spiritual hymn. And when I say spiritual hymn I mean just what the term implies. Everybody knows we have had enough of the cheap jingles and modern jazz. Yes, I mean we need real hymn singing, singing with the heart as well as with the lips. And there ought to be a hymn book for everybody in the congregation as well as for those in the choir. It is almost an insult to my nature to go into a church where they offer me no hymn book and where the choir tries to worship for me, for they cannot do it. Think of the effect it has upon the devout soul to sing,

All hail the power of Jesus' name,
Let angels prostrate fall,
Bring forth the royal diadem
And crown him Lord of all.

One such hymn as I have quoted is worth a dozen of the cheap trashy kind that has neither melody nor common sense. Let it be understood that I am not opposing any hymn simply because it is new. We do have a few really great hymns that are of recent origin. But whether the hymn is new or old, for it to be worth anything it must have worship in it and I am sure it is impossible to worship while using some hymns I have heard.

Another aid to worship which I wish to mention is the responsive reading. Did you ever try to worship without words? Suppose you try it. Just sit down somewhere and try to praise God without words. You cannot do it. You must either use your own words or the words of somebody else, for the mind must think in terms of words. Now the responsive readings furnish you the words for worship. A great many of the Psalms are devotional in their nature and are especially suited to worship. When we say, Great is the Lord and greatly to be praised in the city of our God, and when we say, God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble, we are rendering praise unto our God and this expression deepens the impressions which we already have. Imagine if you can the profound impression upon the pious Jew when he said in the sanctuary, Lift up your heads, O ye gates; and be ye lifted up, ye everlasting doors; and the king of glory shall come in. Who is this King of Glory? The Lord, strong and mighty, the Lord mighty in battle. Lift up your heads, O ye gates, even lift them up, ye everlasting doors, and the King of glory shall come in. Who is this King of glory? The Lord of hosts, he is the King of glory.

With some degree of hesitancy I use one illustration from the present political campaign. Take the speakers of both political parties. Do you not notice what progress they have made in declaring for their respective candidates. At first some of them were hesitant, but now they can speak with great freedom about the virtues of the one whom they want to see elected. What is the significance of this? The more we tell a thing the more strongly do we believe it. They have told it until they now believe it. How much more then are the things of God real to us as we utter them over and over again in the responsive readings.

Now the laymen as well as the ministers can have a part in this. They can furnish the hymnals with the responsive readings and make it possible for the people to worship.

But there is another thing that is necessary before the people can worship in the truest sense, and here the responsibility falls largely on the minister: the people must have the right conception of God. People cannot worship that which they do not love. And they cannot love that which they do not consider worthy of their love. Suppose a hostile army were encamped just outside this city and that at twelve o'clock today the general of this hostile army would come into the city and would expect homage from all the people even to the point of their bowing down in his presence. At the time appointed the people might bow the knee, but I guarantee there would be nothing akin to worship there. They might be on their knees but very likely in their hearts they would be thinking something very different from what their bodily posture would suggest. But on the other hand suppose the one coming to them was coming to give them deliverance and they knew he was worthy of any recognition which they could show, how different would be their feelings.

Now one of the things which will enable the people to worship will be to realize that God is good. And what matchless teaching did our Lord do in this respect. Why, he told Nicodemus that God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have eevrlasting life. In the Sermon on the Mount he said that our Father sends the rain upon the just and the unjust. That is, he is so good that he does not render railing for railing. He also said that not a sparrow should fall to the ground without our Father's notice. He even taught that our Heavenly Father is more anxious to give good gifts than the earthly parent is to give to his offspring. Then add to this the thought that he is anxious for us to have the best and to be the best, promising that he would withhold no good

Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples. John 15:8.

The College Campaign

Word from the different charges and the report of Treasurer Brown indicate encouraging response to this effort. Just now we are side-tracking practically everything else that this campaign may have right of way. The cause and the need both justify this. The campaign will be continued into next month, we trust, until every charge has been covered. We are expecting that the results will be highly gratifying when the work is completed.

Financial Report

This report is being published this week just as it comes to us from the treasurer. We are hoping that he will handle this report weekly through the HERALD, without sending it to us. This will expedite matters for us and at the same time place this phase of the work more completely in the hands of the treasurer, where it seems to us it should be.

Thanksgiving

This day will be gone before you read this. But perhaps you did not have an opportunity on Thanksgiving Day to make your contribution to the Children's Home. In that case do it yet. Send your offering to the superintendent or make it through your church. Let us not fail to make an offering.

Not Too Fast

"Make haste slowly" appears to be a contradiction, but in reality it is a good maxim for pastors on new charges to follow. New confidences and new understandings must be established before too many new things can be successfully undertaken. We suggest that haste be made slowly.

Can You

Send something on budgets? We do not expect large payments now while the college campaign is on, but we must ask that you do not completely forget the budgets. Small amounts from each charge will meet present needs, and when the pressing college claims are out of the way the budget payments can be increased. And of course you will not forget your pastor. While other things are being paid, his needs must not be forgotten.

The Christmas Program

At the request of many persons for material suitable for Christmas programs, the Executive Committee has authorized the Executive Secretaries to prepare a program to meet this demand. The program is ready and can be secured from Rev. J. H. Straughn, D.D., 516 North Charles Street, Baltimore, Md. We trust that many of our churches will make use of this program. It will be sent on request without charge. The only requirement is that an offering be taken for the benefit of the New Century Service, and forwarded to Treasurer Brown for credit on the G. C. B. of the local church. In addition to the benefit derived in preparing and rendering this program, there should be a worthwhile sum realized for the New Century Service.

Christmas Present

What shall it be? The question is answered right now. Here it is: A volume of the Centennial Memorial Book. Thirty-three copies were left in my hands by the conference for distribution. And I know just how to do it, and be quick about it, too. Thirty-three persons give a copy as a Christmas present—either to themselves or to some other good friend. Price only $2.00 and postage. Now for the orders!

Assigned

On November 24, Rev. P. E. Lindley, Lit.D., was assigned to the Gibsonville charge, and on the 26th of November Rev. H. L. Powell to First Church, Thomasville. These brethren will enter promptly upon their work, and find great satisfaction, we trust, in serving their respective charges. We expect to be able to supply the two remaining charges without undue delay.

Activities

On Thursday night, November 22, we were in conference with the Liberty-Siler charge, the meeting being held in the Liberty church. Both churches were represented and a satisfactory conference held. We are hopeful that a pleasing arrangement may be found soon by which these important churches may be supplied.

November 26-26 were given to Vance charge. On Sunday we preached at Gillburg 11 a. m., Flat Rock 3:00 p. m., and Spring Valley 7:30 p. m. A business conference was held at Flat Rock following the preaching. Each church on the charge was represented except New Hope. A committee was created by the conference to assist us in securing a pastor for the charge. This, we think, can be done at an early date. We found the charge in hopeful spirit and ready to go forward with the work of the new year. Bro. Chambliss, the retiring pastor, did good work on the charge, and the esteem of the people follows him to his new field.

As It Should Be

Pastors—old and new—appear to be entering upon their work in the spirit of hope and progressiveness, and the people are making their proper response to this spirit, so far as we are able to check up at this time. This is as it should be, and with this spirit strong among us, the year can not but be one of much fruit-bearing. Our great Head can and will make grace abound for every problem, every need and every opportunity.

OUR STORY PAGE

ALBERT'S THANKSGIVING

"The Redskins won't get you, boy, if you stick by me," said Kit Carson, and Albert at once became his shadow.

It happened that three years before, the boy had been captured by Indians and adopted by an old squaw named Star Woman. She grew fond of him and named him Nomani, meaning Fish, which was supposed to be a nice name for a boy. Star Woman was feared by the Tribe because she was believed to know magic. Albert had been grateful for her kindness, but he had been afraid of her too. One of the traders from the Fort found out about him and made the Indians give him back to his own people, that is, white people. The boy's parents had been killed by the Indians, so no wonder he had no love for redskins.

As Albert was leaving the Indian camp, Star Woman had whispered in his ear: "You will be back here before the first flake of snow."

It was getting very cold, and the wonder was that the snow had held off so long. When Albert heard that Thanksgiving Day was at hand and the hunters were going out to get meat, he was very anxious. But what boy would doubt the word of so great a hunter as Kit Carson?

"Son," said the frontiersman, his eyes flashing, "I came West as a little tow-headed boy. I had been bound out to learn the saddler's trade, but I ran away. I have managed to get along very well and so will you, if you keep your wits about you."

But Albert was only eight years old, and felt doubtful if his wits could help him much against the wily Indians who were after him. In fact, Indians were prowling in the woods nearby, and not showing themselves nor saying what they wanted, which aroused everybody's suspicions.

"Will you stay at the Fort or come with us?" Albert was asked when the hunters were starting out, and Albert decided to go along and stick close to Kit Carson, who had promised to protect him.

Bread and dried meat was the usual food at the Fort, but plans were afoot to make Thanksgiving a great day, and Chipita, the cook, had promised to cook anything the hunters brought back.

They had good luck and Albert shot a few times, forgetting in his excitement his fear of the Indians. It was not long before he was separated from Kit Carson, but a faithful Indian hunter was near him and he thought he was safe.

Alas! he was not as safe as he thought. As he hastened through the woods following a deer, he suddenly felt something fall over his head—a buffalo robe, he knew the smell. In a moment he was being held in powerful arms and carried swiftly away.

"If your friends come for you, they can not get you," chuckled his captor, as if he knew some wonderful joke. Albert trembled, knowing well the cruel ways of the Indians and wondering what dreadful fate they had in store for him.

On and on they went through the forest, and by and by Albert began to talk to the man.

"Tomorrow they make a great feast at the Fort," he whimpered. "It is the day the palefaces sing to their Big God. Let me go back to the feast and I promise I will go afterwards to Star Woman's wigwam."

The man looked up at the sky, which was very white, and then he grunted, "No." But Albert went on pleading: "If I do not show myself at the feast, Kit Carson and Flat Nose, the trader, will begin to wonder where I am and they will go on a warpath for me. Am I worth a hundred braves? If you will take me back now, I will promise to come out of the Fort right the next day early in the morning and meet you in the edge of the wood."

"Paleface make heap big promise!" grinned the Indian, and that was all he would say, except to grunt again that if the boy's friends did go after him, they would never be able to find him.

"Then I guess it's dog kill dog," thought Albert. "I'll be waiting my chance, and if Mr. Injun gets where I can shoot him, he'll find that I'm no baby he's kidnaping."

And just then something made the Indian stumble, and Albert felt his grasp relax for a second. It was all he needed. Like a rabbit he squirmed free and darted like a squirrel for the nearest tree, rifle in hand. He was up in the branches before his captor could lay hands on him. Higher he went and then settled in a crotch and pointed down with his rifle.

The Indian squinted up, still grinning.

"All right, shoot me," he challenged, meaning to make the boy waste all his shot.

Quick as a flash, bang! went Albert's gun, and the Indian sank to the ground with a bad wound in his shoulder and the knowledge that the boy could shoot a moving target. The sound of the shot brought Indians out from the trees.

"Remember," said the wounded Indian, "Star Woman says to bring him alive. It will be easy. Sit down and wait. He will come down."

One of the braves took some herbs out of his pouch and pressed them into his companion's wound. Then they moved into the bushes out of sight, casting some pretty dirty looks up at the boy in the tree.

Albert sat quietly where he was, praying for Kit Carson and his friends. Then he thought: "What a trap they will walk into! If I shout they will come to rescue me and the Indians will shoot them from the bushes."

Then he looked about him and saw that the branches of the next tree grew close to the one in which he was perched. Very carefully and softly he slid over the rough bark into the cover of the evergreen. The next tree was not so close but that did not worry the boy, who was like a monkey in the trees. He made a great leap and landed into its friendly branches.

One of the Indian watchers began cautiously climbing behind him, but a shot from the rifle stopped him, unwounded but scared.

By the sun, Albert guided his strange journey and moved slowly towards the Fort. Then he saw a curl of smoke and heard voices.

"Mis-ter Car-son!" he yelled.

There was an answering cry and at the same moment he felt something cold on his nose. It was snowing.

He called a warning to his rescuers, but they heard no more from the Indians. They never knew why Albert was left in peace after that, but the reason was the snow. The first flake had fallen followed by many more flakes, and Star Woman's power over the boy was believed gone. What had made the Indians so careless with their captive was that they believed him to be under Star Woman's spell. Had she not said: "He will come back to me before the first flake of snow!" Now something had broken the spell, and Albert was his own man.

The next day at the Fort was one of unmixed joy, especially for Albert who was free from his enemies and under the protection and guidance of Kit Carson, his ideal. As he ate and drank he kept saying in his heart:

"O God, thank you, thank you! I will be good and honest and trust in thee always."

And he had the true spirit of Thanksgiving which still lives in our hearts in 1928 when we can buy meat from the butcher and Indians no longer prowl outside the wall.—Selected.

Worship

thing from those who walk uprightly and you see what a wonderful Savior we have. How different is this picture which our Lord gave of the Father from the one I once had in that I thought of God as sitting upon a throne watching for every misstep which we make in order that he might punish us. I am glad that I no longer have this conception of Him but I think of Him now as the one altogether lovely and one who is so anxious about us that it even grieves his heart for us to go wrong.

And finally we shall never be able to worship aright until we have some conception of what our salvation cost. And here words fail. But every plan and purpose of the Old Testament, the toils and heartache of every priest and prophet, the blood and agony of all his saints who have given themselves for the truth must enter into our salvation. Then add the blood and agony of all his saints who have given them- to this the fact that God gave the best he had to come and live among us, tread the weary pathway of man, and even tread the winepress alone and then bear the agonies of a cross that we might have life and have it more abundantly, then we can have some conception at least of what our salvation cost. And when we catch a glimpse of this Savior and of the Father even before the Savior came, when we realize his love, his goodness, his kindness, his anxiety for us, we shall not wait for some one to tell us how to worship, but we will fall at his feet and with Thomas of old cry, My Lord and my God. Then we will worship the Father in spirit and in truth, yea we will ascribe blessing and honor and glory unto the Father and unto the Son and unto the Holy Ghost.

THE DEVOTIONAL LIFE

One reason for the present state of the church is an unsustained devotional life. It applies equally to clergy and laity, for both need it equally. The absence is unfortunately more marked in the clergy. I have no reference now to public worship, but to private devotion. It is the misfortune of many never to have collided with a life that wholly depended upon prayer; but once you have met a spiritual force who makes the first hour with God the central act of the day, you do not forget it; and you are dissatisfied with yourself till it takes the same place for you. My hat is off to my Anglo-Catholic brethren who get up daily and go to Holy Communion; the regularity of it braces them, the grace in the sacrament itself strengthens them. But I think it no substitute for private prayer and Bible study. Yet how fitful is this with most of us, while all great spiritual experiments combine to tell us of its effectiveness. Many have at various times begun it, but they never have found a workable technique, and so have repeatedly dropped it. Family worship has gone by the board; partly, I suepect, because it filled the only time there was for religious exercise, without giving adequate returns. For spiritual effort, we all want spiritual results, and unquestionably the most fruitful time is time spent alone with God.

But does anything really happen in prayer? There is no doubt that prayer has ceased to be real for a great many devout people; and this not alone because we are in a hurry, or are bothered by the psychological or metaphysical difficulties, but because we realize the force of Jesus' words. "Your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things," and so, why beg? He will give if it is good for us, or withhold if it is not. Many of us today are thankful, but few ask. Now there is a way by which I have found that things can happen in prayer, so that the experience may literally bring with it an enormous adventure and transform life itself. And that is by listening. God is a Father. He has a will. Prayer is a reality. Is there anything impossible in the idea that He will tell us His will, if we listen obediently and openly and willingly? The prophets and the apostles undoubtedly thought so, whatever the modern psychologists think. The deepest spiritual experimentors have thought so, and their lives proved they were not in touch with a Chimera. Sit down with an open mind, clear away sinful or distracting thoughts, keep a pencil and paper handy so that you may not forget directions which come and so be distracted from undivided attention to the next "leading" by trying to remember the last.

It is easy to poke fun at such suggestions as this: but I have tried the Quiet Time as a ground-work in my own devotional life for the past ten years, and it goes on yielding greater comfort and illumination and power all the time. I cannot begin to outline it all in this article, but I know that there is an immense difference in the lives of Christians, laymen and parsons, who make this the first act of their day, and then keep open for running guidance throughout the rest of the day. They have joy and power and courage and influence such as I crave for the whole church. Surrender must come first; but it must be sustained in steady and obedient prayer. I cannot imagine a parson who makes this his steady practice dropping into tame and indeed disgraceful ways. The trouble with the kind of devotion which we have recommended, and used, is its unfruitful and uneventful stupidity. Give people the kind of prayer in which things "take place" —uncomfortable as sometimes those events are, to our pride and our self-conscious fears—and the best of them will begin to pray again.—Rev. Samuel M. Shoemaker, Jr., in The Living Church.

know, but He is not through with moral and spiritual creation. It is still as mysterious as it was to Nicodemus, but it is as much a fact today as it was when Jesus first declared its necessary occurrence. And in this mysterious fact we have the one great hope of men born in sin and living in iniquity. Into their conscious degradation and ever deepening misery comes the great light of salvation from both sin and misery.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

DEC. 2: "WHAT IS OUR REASONABLE SERVICE."

Rom. 12:1, 2

(Consecration Meeting)

Points for the Leader

The concluding words of the first verse of our Scripture lesson give us a wonderful theme for our meeting, "Our Reasonable Service." What is our reasonable service, anyway? Is it a requirement of the best of our abilities? This is a partial answer. But each person will be confronted with an entirely different solution, just as no two of us are alike and do not have the same viewpoints on life. Your reasonable service may be entirely different from mine, and vice versa. The thing, however, that we are primarily interested in for this evening is the phase of service that affects all of us in like manner.

The word, "service," is no new word to any of us. Every club or organization to which we belong has something to say about the service we render. The slogan of many business firms has become, "Service with a smile." The idea is followed up in practically every undertaking of a worthwhile nature.

Jesus taught service throughout His entire ministry. The disciple who served best would be counted greatest. He taught His followers that they were saved to serve; that they should minister rather than be ministered unto.

Edward Everett Hale gave us a beautiful expression on the thought in his lines:

"Look up and not down;
Look forward and not back;
Look out and not in;
And lend a hand."

Suitable Songs

"I'll Go Where You Want Me to Go."
"I Gave My Life for Thee."
"The Son of God Goes Forth to War."

Topics for Discussion

(Outline from C. E. World)

I. Reasonable Bodily Service

1. Attendance on church service.
2. Using tongue, hands, feet, ears, eyes, etc.
3. To fill church offices.
4. Giving money.
5. The community chest.
6. "Wearing out shoe-leather."

II. Reasonable Service of Mind and Will

1. Surrender will to Christ.
2. Give best thinking to Christ.
3. Use personalities for Christ.
4. The mental service of studying Him.
5. Yielding ourselves to His transformation.
6. We serve Him by proving Him.

Quotations

"They serve God well, who serve His creatures."—Mrs. Norton.

"And ye shall succor men;
'Tis nobleness to serve;
Help them who cannot help again;
Beware from right to swerve."
—Emerson.

"You know that love will creep in service where it cannot go."—Shakespeare.

Debate Query

"Resolved, That reasonable service may sometimes require one to sacrifice part of his own business."

Poetry to the Point

"If I can stop one heart from breaking,
I shall not live in vain;
If I can ease one life the aching,
Or cool one pain,
Or help one fainting robin
Unto his nest again,
I shall not live in vain."
—Emily Dickinson.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

DEC. 9: PAUL GOES TO ROME

Scripture Basis: Acts 27:1-28, 31; Rom. 1:8-15; Phil. 1:12-14.

Golden Text: "I am not ashamed of the gospel; for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." Rom. 1:16.

Purposeful Pining

Rom. 1:8-15

The epistle to the Romans was written by Paul while in Corinth. It is regarded by many Christians as his supreme work. Corinth was the nearest place he ever got to Rome before his last journey as a prisoner, and as he meditated upon the hope of visiting the Christians there, his heart pined for the privilege of seeing them.

This pining, or longing as he expresses in this passage, was not without purpose. It was with joy and thanksgiving that he learned of their widely-known faith, and he never ceased to remember them in his petitions to the throne of grace. He also continued his request of God that he might go to them that he might impart to them the full knowledge of the gospel of Christ, and thus pay the debt that he conscientiously felt he owed them as well as all others to whom he might have the privilege of preaching.

Providential Protection

Acts 27:1-28:14

The chief facts of Paul's voyage to Rome are these:

Paul, as a prisoner, was put in charge of one Julius, a captain over a hundred prisoners, who was directed to embark for Rome. The ship on which they started was bound for a seaport on the coast of Asia Minor, where the captain of the guard hoped to find a vessel going to Italy. From Caesarea they sailed to Sidon in Phoenicia, thence northward and westward between the island of Cyprus and the mainland to Myra in Lycia. Here a ship from Alexandria in Egypt was found, which was headed for Italy, and on which the prisoners and guard took passage.

The contrary wind made progress slow, hence at the end of "many days" they had only reached the tip end of Asia Minor at Cnidus. Turning south, the ship passed close to the eastern end of the island of Crete, and followed the southern coast until it arrived at Fair Havens. Here it was deemed advisable to remain until the wind changed or died down, since navigation was dangerous in those days in adverse weather. Anxious to proceed on their voyage, the owner and captain of the ship disregarded the advice of Paul to stay until the winter storm period had about ended, and headed the craft westward, when a gentle south wind seemed to urge them on.

But the favorable wind did not last, for one of those characteristic storms of the Mediterranean Sea from the north came rushing upon them so that they were compelled to do all they could to prepare the ship to withstand the merciless waves. Even the cargo had to be thrown overboard. Many days the sky was dark and the sea was tumultuous. With fatigued bodies, hope began to fail, and Paul's chance to declare the providence of God came. "Be of good [illegible]" he said, "for there stood by me this [illegible] Their effort was brought to a sudden end, for the bow of the ship ran aground, and the stern was beaten to pieces by the angry waves.

Lest the prisoners should escape, and the lives of the soldiers be required by the Roman law in their stead, the latter proffered the advice that the former be slain. But Julius had learned to trust Paul, and for his sake especially, refused to heed the recommendation of the soldiers. Orders came that all of the 276 on board who could should swim to shore, and the rest get there the best way they could. So, in accordance with the Apostle's word, all were saved.

The islanders, though called barbarians, received their uninvited guests graciously. A fire was speedily built, in the process of which a viper fastened itself to Paul's hand. Believing this was a curse of the gods, the Melitians expected him to drop dead; but when he shook the serpent off into the fire, they changed their minds and declared him to be a god. Paul, about his Master's business "in season and out of season," manifested the power of the true God through him in healing the father of the governor of the island, Publius, as well as many other sick

GOLDEN RULE SUNDAY

Dear Pastor:

The International Observance of Golden Rule Sunday has commended itself to the American people, for its spiritual values as well as for its aid to the orphans in the Near East, and we most earnestly recommend active co-operation in the observance this fall.

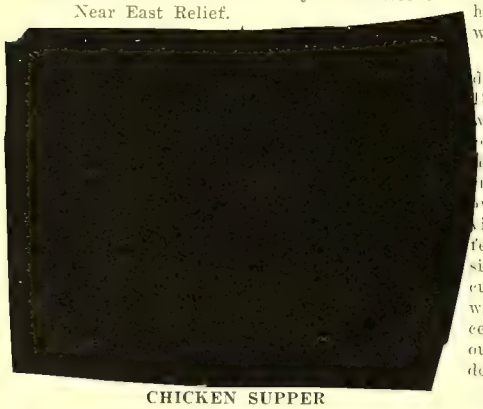
No finer international Christian service has ever been done than that we are now doing through Near East Relief. You are helping, no doubt, in every way to obtain the final $6,000,000 budget to complete the work for the 32,000 remaining orphans. It is unthinkable that we should run away now from this task which we have brought so near to completion: we must "see them through."

Our urgent appeal that you co operate in the Community Campaigns and in the Golden Rule Observance of 1928 is in direct line with the official endorsements by the General Conference, our Board, and the Federal Council of Churches, and with the personal endorsements of many church leaders of all religious bodies who have seen the work and have had a hand in guiding its program.

With sincere appreciation and thanks,

Yours in His service,

LAWRENCE LITTLE, Chairman,
Methodist Protestant Advisory Committee on Near East Relief.



CHICKEN SUPPER

The Missionary Societies of Moriah Church will have a chicken supper at the church on Saturday night, December 1, from 6 to 9 o'clock. A silk memory quilt will be auctioned off for the benefit of the church. The price is only 50 cents a plate for the chicken supper and you will get plenty of extra helpings and other dishes. Come and help a good cause.

Many good Christmas wishes to the Herald and a big, successful year.

COLLEGE INFORMATION

College Spirit. .Life at the college is so fine and wholesome we like to speak of the general spirit on the campus. From administration, faculty and students comes the testimony that everything is running well. We are having the best spirit just now that has been in evidence since the opening of the institution. Everyone seems to be happy and earnest in the work. And of course this enthusiastic college spirit is worth more than all else besides. It is a matter of much gratitude therefore to observe the happiness and co-operation running throughout the college life reducing the friction and irregularities to a minimum.

Debating. .The four literary societies are busy in training the young talent in reading and oratory. It appears now that we will meet several institutions this season in intercollegiate debates. All students are urged to enter these contests and if sucessful at the preliminary, go out to represent High Point College. We are expecting also to send out orators to meet the speakers of other North Carolina colleges in the annual contests this year. Our representative, Keith Harrison, won the first State Oratorical Contest held some time ago in Raleigh. This phase of the student activities receives unusual attention here and we are looking for laurels to be won this season.

Personal Interviews. .This being the middle of the first semester we are having the Dean of the College interview all students who seem to be in danger of failing any courses. The teachers have prepared each a list of students who in their classes show signs of inferior work. This list is turned over to the Dean, who conducts the interview. Students seem to appreciate the conferences and show a fine spirit of responsiveness regarding the work. It all is calculated to point them to their weak points with a view of stimulating them on to a successful completion of the course. There ought, therefore, to be fewer failures in all departments.

It is a pleasure, then, to make this report on the present condition of college life. You will gladly share with us all the joy that rightfully comes from such a glance at our institution at High Point. Come to see us.

P. E. LINDLEY, Chairman,
Information Committee.

TREASURER'S CORNER

The treasurer and his wife have returned after visiting relatives and friends in Georgia for ten days. This accounts for the delay in sending receipts for remittances.

So far, we have received less than a thousand dollars for the college, and "nary" cent for the other interests. Of course, we are just getting "cranked up" for another year's run, but we ought not to run in "low" too long, unless we want to damage the conference machinery. No one wants to do this, so we are urging our charges to change "gears" as soon as possible and step on the gas.

Please make all checks payable to Geo. R. Brown, Treas. Leave off the "Rev." and the "D. D.," as they do not add anything to the value of checks, and by doing so the treasurer will be saved a little trouble.

Please do not hold your collections. It is impossible for us to pay bills with money that we do not have. Send on what you have even if the amount is small.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Friendship, Fallston Charge.—Thanks to the onference that saw fit to let us have back ur beloved pastor, Bro. Morgan. This is he sixth year he has been on this circuit, nd during this time he has been faithful nd has rendered us great help. We extend o him a hearty welcome and hope that the oming year will be the most successful year et.

Bro. Morgan's sermon last Sunday was great nd touched the hearts of the large crowd resent. The text of this sermon was "God's resence With Us."

Our Sunday school has been enlarging and mproving rapidly. We have just purchased new piano which we are very thankful for.

The Christian Endeavor Society is also making much progress. The young people are displaying great interest in the society. A large crowd is present at each meeting. Much interest has been created by dividing the society into two groups, called the Blues and the Reds. Those of the winning side are to be entertained by the losing side. On the fourth Sunday of this month the Christian Endeavor Society will have a special program. The topic for this meeting will be "Remember God." Everybody is cordially invited to attend.

Last Sunday donations to our college at High Point were made amounting to $124. The following are the ones who made the donations: Rev. J. M. Morgan, $25; Dr. F. H. Lackey, $25; Annie Mae Lackey, $10; Rev. J. D. Morris, $10; N. J. Wright, $10; John Lackey, $10; Dr. A. A. Lackey, $10; Getys Bingham, $5; D. L. Martin, $5; Mrs. W. A. Gantt, $5; Mrs. J. D. Morris, $2; Johnnie Lewis, $2; S. J. Bingham, $1; Jeff Petty, $1; Sid Grigg, $1; J. J. Haynes, $1; H. F. Costner, $1.

We extend our best wishes to our college and sister churches for the coming year.

ANNIE MAE LACKEY, Reporter.

Kannapolis.—The Ladies' Aid Society held their regular monthly meeting at the parsonage Monday night, November 19th. The President, Mrs. N. F. Harris, conducted the devotional. Roll was called and dues collected. The purchasing committee for parsonage furnishings reported that the following articles had been placed in the parsonage: One bed, one pair springs, one dresser, six dining room chairs, one buffet and one oil range; also a four-piece living room suite, chifferabe, rug for dining room, and kitchen cabinet have been placed in the parsonage.

We are getting our parsonage to look like a real preacher's home, and it thrills our hearts that we can do this.

Our society plans to have a chicken supper and bazaar December 8th.

We had 59 present at Sunday school yesterday and the offering amounted to $8.50. This is our Thanksgiving offering, which goes to the Children's Home at High Point.

Our attendance was very good at the 11 o'clock hour, 56 being present. Two new members, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Lowe, were received into the church. We are very glad to have these nice young people join in with us, as they have been very interested in our church for some time. Our pastor, Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk, brought us a splendid sermon on giving. The sermon proved to be very effective, as our members were very prompt in coming back at the Tabernacle at 2 o'clock to make their pledges for the coming year. We are glad to report that every member volunteered and made their own pledges. At the 7 o'clock services we had a very good congregation, considering the cold weather. Our pastor preached another very interesting sermon on "Lifting Up Christ." We are planning and praying for a successful year and ask the prayers of all Christian people.

MRS. C. B. PRICE, Reporter.

From Kenersville to Kannapolis.—Mrs. Lowdermilk joins me in thanking all the people of Kernersville charge for every favor and kindness shown us during the two-year stay among them. I feel sure that the people of this charge will be pleased with the incoming pastor, Rev. J. D. Cranford. I trust as he goes out among his people that he shall "go out with joy, and be led forth with peace: the mountains and the hills shall break forth before him into singing, and all the trees of the field shall clap their hands. Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree, and instead of the brier shall come up the myrtle tree; and it shall be to the Lord for a name, for an everlasting sign that shall not be cut off."

Mrs. Lowdermilk and I left Kernersville about 3 p. m. on Tuesday, Noverber 13, and reached the parsonage in Kannapolis about sun-down. Took supper at Bro. and Sister Henderson's. Went to the Tabernacle about 7:30 and had what was called a get-together meeting, and to this gathering was served more eats, all of which was much enjoyed. After prayer and a few songs we adjourned, and through the kind invitation of Brother and Sister McLaurin went and spent the night in Concord, and this was made our home until we got our furnishings placed in the parsonage. Two prayer meetings have been held at the tabernacle, and four preaching services since my coming to this place. We have had an average of 50 or more at every preaching service until last night when there was a fall-off in attendance on account of the cold weather, which rushed suddenly in on us.

On yesterday we received two good members who came from the Baptist church. Every member of the tabernacle on yesterday, including the two who joined, signed up, making their pledges for church finance before the night service was held. Most of these pledges were made at the appointed hour at the tabernacle, the people returning for that special purpose.

We have raised our college assessment. We have also made our thank-offering to the Children's Home, amount $8.50.

The Ladies' Aid Society has our many thanks and much appreciation for adding a number of needed furnishings to the parsonage.

E. G. LOWDERMILK.

Box 601, Kannapolis, N. C.

Porter Church.—Our community was made very sad on last Wednesday, November 21, when death came and took from us our beloved friend and neighbor, Mrs. G. H. Thompson.

She was one of our oldest and most faithful members, never being absent from Sunday school and church except when sickness kept her away. She always had a cheerful word and a sunny smile for everybody. To know her was to love her. The church and entire community has suffered a great loss. Her sweet disposition and Christian character was an inspiration to all who knew her.

The funeral service was held Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the church, conducted by the pastor. She is survived by her husband and seven children. May the Great Comforter be with these dear ones in their sad hours.

Pastor Hill came back to fill his first appointment for the new year on the second Sunday at 11 o'clock and as usual preached an excellent sermon. We were overjoyed to have him return to us for another year.

Mrs. Hill addressed the congregation yesterday at 11 o'clock and brought a most helpful message, which was enjoyed by every one present.

Our first quarterly conference will be held next Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock. Let every one that can attend and get lined up for the new year.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Marbry, of Winston-Salem, former members of our church worshiped with us yesterday. We were glad to have them come back. REPORTER.

Hobbs Chapel, Greensville Circuit.—We expected to have Bro. Cowan with us the second Sunday, but on account of some inconveniences he could not get here. We were glad to have him with us today. He preached a good sermon; wish more people could have heard it than did, but hope the few that did attend will pass the message on to others, and we hope to see more out in the future.

Mrs. Joe Shell came out to play for us, also brought her husband, father and sisters with her to help sing. We enjoyed having them. Hope they will come again.

We are planning to repair our church some time soon, and will appreciate any help that members of other charges can give.

Hope this will be a good year with Bro. Cowan and family, also with Bro. Powell, wherever he goes. We are sorry to see him go, but hope he will serve his people as faithfully wherever he goes as he did here. God be with him and direct him as He sees best.

Don't forget the first quarterly conference at Matthews Chapel Saturday, December 15. Let it be the best yet.

We will take the Thanksgiving offering the second Sunday evening for the Children's Home. Let everybody come prepared to make a generous contribution for the children.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

REPORTER.

Pleasant Grove.—We left the good people of Graham on November 9 for our new field at Pleasant Grove. Our four years' stay in Graham was pleasant and, we hope, profitable. We thank them all for their many favors and kindnesses to us. We reached our new field on the afternoon of the ninth and found the new parsonage was not quite ready for us to take up our abode, so we made our home with Bro. B. E. Kennedy until Tuesday, when we went into the new parsonage.

We have a beautiful home, nicely furnished, and the people are trying to make it pleasant for us.

On last Tuesday night we held our first quarterly conference, with good attendance, and we feel like the new year has started off well. We hope to do all we have been asked to do by the Annual Conference.

On last Saturday evening the Brotherhood met with Bro. George L. Hilton. After the transaction of business we had a splendid talk by Mr. Pope, a banker of Thomasville, after which delicious refreshments were served.

D. R. WILLIAMS.

Denton Charge.—We were glad to be returned to this charge for another year. These good people have been loyal to their pastor and family and to the Kingdom. The cooperation has been fine. We thank each one for the fine spirit in the past and ask that it may be continued.

During the past two Sundays the High Point College running expenses account has been presented at Mt. Ebal, Denton, Canaan, and Piney Grove churches. Each church in the order named subscribed their quota, and the most of it has been paid. We have not presented it yet at Cid. We thank Brother Bethea for helping us at Denton. We also thank each one who helped to raise this much-needed money.

Canaan church voted almost unanimously to build Sunday school rooms to their church on the last Sunday before conference. Since that time they have decided on a plan to build five rooms. The money is now being subscribed to do the work. We feel that these Sunday school rooms will meet a great need and help Canaan to go forward.

On Monday evening, November 19, while the pastor and family were visiting in the home of Mr. Norman Johnson, they received a telephone message that someone had come to see them. We came home and found a great company of the Denton members in the parsonage porch loaded up with good things to eat. I will not try to mention all the names of the donors, or what they brought. But will say they must intend for pastor and family to keep sweet, as they brought 56 pounds of sugar. They did not stop with things we could eat, but also brought towels. And our neighbors and members just keep pounding us with fresh meat. We thank each donor for their gifts and kind remembrance of pastor and family. It is our prayer that these things may help us to render more helpful service to our people.

E. A. BINGHAM.

Burlington, First Church.—Sunday school attendance today was 317 and the offering amounted to $17.32. The absence of the Sunday school superintendent, Mr. W. E. Smith, was noted, as he has been confined to his home with illness for a few days.

The attendance of the Baraca class was 67. In the absence of the regular teacher, Mr. George C. Smith taught the class. We understand that the social committee has already planned for the banquet early in December and at this time we will hold a business session of the class. On of the most important matters to be disposed of, perhaps, will be the election of officers for the new term. We are informed that our fellow Baraca, Mr. Langston Wilson, at Oteen, has gained 32 pounds in weight since entering the sanatorium, and is sitting up some also. We are truly glad to hear this good news and hope he will soon be able to return to his wife and loved ones, restored to good health.

There will be a union Thanksgiving service Thursday morning of this week at 10 o'clock at the First Baptist church. It is the custom of the local Ministerial Association to arrange a union Thanksgiving service each year and it is hoped that as many as can will attend this meeting this week.

The Christian Endeavor Society had a very interesting prayer meeting today at the regular hour, with attendance numbering 21. Miss Mildred McPherson was the leader and the service was helpful. Mrs. Dewey Fogleman is the new president and we are hoping that we will continue to grow. The society voted unanimously to assist in the Christmas program of the church, in the event the program committee should see fit to call upon the society.

The first quarterly conference and business meeting of the church will be held December 5 at 7:30 p. m., and a full attendance of officers and members is greatly desired.

A meeting of the captains and their respective teams is to be held after the midweek prayer meeting this week, and let each captain plan to attend and urge his team members to come.

We are hoping to have Rev. A. G. Dixon, of the Children's Home, and some of the children to render a program in our church next Sunday at the evening hour, although we are not in a position to make this a definite announcement as yet.

We should have mentioned in the beginning that our pastor brought two powerful and stirring messages today. We are indeed grateful to have Bro. Gerringer and his splendid wife and children back with us for the new year.

L. A. BRAXTON, Reporter.

West Forsyth.—The pastor and family are now comfortably and conveniently located in the parsonage at Dosier, having moved into the community on Tuesday, November 20. We have been given a very cordial reception by the good people of West Forsyth charge. Before we arrived one member of Pleasant Hill church had a big load of wood placed in the wood-shed at the parsonage, so we were able to cook our food and keep ourselves warm and comfortable from the beginning of our residence here. We are thankful for the thoughtfulness of Bro. C. G. Hunter in looking after our comfort at the parsonage.

The pastor and family have already been the recipients of a number of things for the kitchen and dining table. Mrs. W. W. Whitman, of Tabernacle church, visited the parsonage last Friday night and brought a large basket filled with different articles of food. This was a pounding from her and two or three others who sent theirs with her. On the previous night Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Hunter and daughter visited us and brought table supplies. We are deeply grateful for these gifts and thank each one who had a part in providing them. We deeply appreciate the kindness of Mrs. C. G. Hunter, who is supplying us with milk without charge. We thank Mrs. Jasper Long for gifts.

Four of the churches on the charge have been visited by the pastor. We have already reported our visit and service with Union Hill church on the second Sunday morning. The third Sunday morning was spent with Pleasant Hill church, where a large congregation greeted us. Rev. C. H. Whitaker, former pastor, was with us and introduced the new pastor. After the service we went to the home of "Rabbit" Whitman, son of Bro. J. A. Whitman. Young Whitman is a noted baseball player, having been a member of the International league during the past season, playing at Reading, Pa. We enjoyed our visit to this home and the splendid dinner served.

On the third Sunday we were at Tabernacle church for the regular appointment there at 3 o'clock. A fairly large congregation was present and the people gave the pastor splendid attention. This church, like Pleasant Hill, is splendidly equipped with a piano.

Last Sunday we were at Harmony Grove church, which is ten miles southeast of the parsonage. That is the smallest church on the charge. We arrived in time for the Sunday school and found over 50 people in the Sunday school, which is under the direction of Brother Gurney Craft as superintendent. The people at this church seemed interested in the church work and are looking forward to a good year's work. We were invited to the hospitable home of Brother and Sister Jarvis for dinner and we were served a splendid chicken dinner. We spent a couple of hours in this home and returned to the parsonage in the afternoon.

Last Sunday night at Pleasant Hill church a very interesting program was given by the missionary societies of the church. The program consisted of an interesting talk by Mrs. Speas, music by the choir, a song by the children and a pageant, "Tithes and Offerings." This was a two-act play presented by six persons. An offering was taken for the Children's Home at High Point. Mrs. J. F. Hunter, president of the missionary society, directed the program of the service, with Mrs. Nell Whitman taking the leading part in the pageant.

With the services next Sunday the pastor will complete the round of regular appointments at the six churches on the charge. We will be at Baltimore at 11 a. m. and at Stony Knoll at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

Our first quarterly conference will be held at Pleasant Hill church the second Sunday afternoon in December at 2 o'clock. We are looking forward to a good meeting with a large representation of official members from all of the churches.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Hebron, Orange Circuit.—The new conference year is starting off nicely and we hope this will be a good year for this church.

We are all glad indeed to have Pastor Williams and family come back to us. Bro. Williams filled his appointment the second Sunday afternoon and again yesterday at 11 o'clock and brought splendid messages each time. He also baptized two infants yesterday before preaching service: Leon, the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Wilson, Jr., and John F., son of Mr. and Mrs. A. K. McAdams.

Tonight the officers of this church will hold a business meeting at the home of Mrs. J. G. Jobe, for the purpose of laying plans for the year's work.

Our Sunday school is in the midst of a "Red and Blue" contest, and already many new members have been added to the Sunday school. Mrs. J. G. Jobe is the Blues captain, and Miss Grace Mebane is captain for the Reds. Much interest is being shown, and we hope to grow greatly in number before the contest ends.

We are planning a Christmas tree and a program by the children and choir.

We will hold a special Thanksgiving service at the church at 11 o'clock Thursday. The offering will go to the Children's Home.

The first quarterly conference will be held Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock at Union Grove. Let every member strive to be present, as this is an important conference.

MRS. LELIA GILL, Reporter.

Rehoboth, Granville Charge.—Last third Sunday was our regular Sunday for preaching services and we were very glad to welcome our same pastor, Rev. H. F. Fogleman. We hope that we can make this the best year in the history of our church. Mr. Gerringer was also with us on the third Sunday, in the interest of the High Point College. I think about half of our budget was raised.

We were glad to have Mr. J. T. Cozart in our midst again.

Mr. William Wrenn was elected as superintendent of the Sunday school for the coming year. May we render our support to make this work successful, even more this year.

The Woman's Missionary Society met last Wednesday with Mrs. W. O. Cheatham. A very interesting program was rendered. Many members were present and thank-offerings were taken for the Children's Home at High Point. The social hour was enjoyed. Cakes and ice cream were served.

The C. E. Society met last Sunday evening with Mrs. Bob Cawthorn.

The little Mission Band held its meeting at the church last Sunday.

The Woman's Missionary District Rally was held at Union Chapel the 22nd. All of the churches were represented. Mr. and Mrs. Bates were with us on this occasion; also Miss Velna McCulloch. Mrs. Bates gave us a very helpful message on Missions. It was thoroughly enjoyed. We all love her. Mr. Hunter conducted the devotional. Mr. Bates was the speaker for the evening. His lecture was inspiring. Rev. Mr. Fogleman offered the closing prayer. A good meeting and social time was enjoyed by all.

REPORTER.

High Point.—The Sunday school meets every Sunday morning at 9:30 o'clock, and has classes for all ages, from the tiny tots to adults. There are competent superintendents for all departments—Cradle Roll, Beginners, Primary, Junior, Intermediate, Baraeas, Philatheas, and Home Department. Mr. E. L. Douglas is the newly-elected superintendent, and under his leadership the coming year promises to be the best in the history of the school, which has an enrollment of approximately 500.

The Junior church, under the leadership of Rev. E. Lester Ballard, meets every Sunday morning in the assembly room at 11. The interest of the children is kept remarkably well, and the attendance is splendid, averaging 75 to 100.

Last Sunday was observed as "Men for the Ministry" Sunday, and Rev. Mr. Farmer delivered an eloquent and very earnest discourse from Matthew 9:38: "Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest." His subject was "Why and How I Became a Minister." He said, in part, that there are many different ways of ministry in this day for men and women, but preaching is a vital part of ministry. It requires personality, and the function of the ministry is to awaken the spirituality inherent in every human being. Glenn Frank, the brilliant young scholar and president of the University of Wisconsin before he was 40 years of age, says that our Western civilization is at the turning point, and will either go down in decay or rise upward and onward in progress. It is high time that the church call a large number to the ministry. It is not a matter of vital importance simply to ministers, but parents, as well, to saund a challenge to young people to devote their lives to the Christian ministry. We must sound the challenge before the young people reach maturity, and get too old to be educated. The challenge must come early because the business world and secular professions allure them to service and the pursuit of wealth. Two or three years ago in 17 Methodist Protestant conferences there were 49 unsupplied churches, and there were 150 doors of opportunity for consecrated leaders. Thank God that we have some groups of consecrated young men and women in every college and our Theological Seminary in preparation for this holy calling. We must stop speaking lightly of the Christian minister and his work; last year in 32 plays out of 35 produced in America the Christian minister is held up to ridicule. What a travesty on our boasted civilization that will alolw such dishonor to be cast upon the most sacred profession extant! He gave his personal experience when God's call came to him out in the quiet fields of Ohio while a youth at work with his father. He tried to quench the Spirit, but his godly mother encouraged him by her words and prayers, telling him that she consecrated him to God and prayed before his birth that he might be led into the Christian ministry. It costs somethings for parents to encourage their sons and daughters in this sacrifice. It has meant much to walk with God in faith and love. "He that converteth a sinner saves a soul from death." The only reward a man has is the knowledge that he is deserving of that blessed plaudit, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant!" After this forceful and appealing sermon, a touching prayer was made by Rev. J. H. Moton, a superannuated minister who has spent 51 years of his life in preaching the Gospel. At this service, Prof. Ernest B. Stimson played very beautifully on the pipe organ, "Prayer," from Lohengrin, as the Prelude, the popular "Intermezzio" from Cavalleria Rusticana for the offertory. The anthem by the choir was Maunder's "Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem," and Messrs. Clarence Schultheiss and C. L. Gray, Jr., sang a duet, "Lead, Kindly Light."

At the evening service Mr. Stimson played the lovely Adagio from Mendelssohn's "Moonlight Sonata," and Mr. Arthur Fidler rendered a violin solo, "Traumerei." The anthem was "I Will Lay Me Down in Peace." Rev. Mr. Farmer chose for the subject of his evening message, "Christ's Authority and Our Response."

The annual Thank-offering service of the Woman's Home Missionary Society will be held Sunday evening, December 2nd. Every one is asked and urged to give the amount of one day's wages, salary, or income for the Children's Home. Already the initial offering has been sent in by the Deaf and Dumb class of Wesley Memorial M. E. Sunday school. A personal appeal in the form of a letter has been sent to every family of our church members by the officers of the Woman's Home Society, and they are asking for the largest Thank-offering in ou rhistory. A group of boys and girls from the Home will render the program of the evening. The appeal of homeless and helpless childhood is very strong upon every heart.

"On a Thanksgiving Day,
If you want a good time,
Then give something away."

The topic for the weekly C. E. meeting on Monday evening was "What the Practice of Stewardship Would Mean to the World." After the close of the meeting, the Sunday School Workers' Council was called to hear reports from the different departments, and transact important business.

The combined mid-week prayer meeting and Teacher Training Class will be held on Wednesday evening, as usual.

On Thursday morning the City Union of Christian Endeavor will hold a sunrise praise and prayer service at 7 o'clock at the Central Friends church, at which our pastor, Rev. Roy Farmer, will preside, after which a large number of well-filled baskets of "eats" will be distributed to the needy families of our city. This is a beautiful custom observed by our young people annually.

Last Sunday's Bulletin contained the following Scotch verse, which is timely and appropriate, and we pass it on:

"If, after kirk ye bide a wee
There's some would like to speak to ye;
If after kirk ye rise and flee,
We'll all seem cold and stiff to ye."

We are very sorry to note the accident whicch befel Mrs. Lawrence Leonard last Sunday, when she fell in her home at 1204 Blain street and broke her ankle. She was taken to Guilford General Hospital for treatment. Her friends are hoping that she may have an early recovery.

Our membership extends congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Rankin, Jr., upon the arrival of a young son, who will bear the name of Alexander M. Rankin, III, and also to Mr. and Mrs. Eecles Everhart, whose home has been brightened by a little son, who will be called Lee Abels. We are sorry that we shall lose the latter young couple, who are moving to Winston-Salem in a few days to make their residence. Our prayers and best wishes accompany them to their new home.

We are much pleased to learn that Mrs. E. Lester Ballard, who has been ill, is able to be up and about the house.

Master Harry Brown Finch, of Thomasville, spent Sunday with his grandmother, Mrs. W. P. Pickett.

Classes at High Point College will be suspended for one day only, Thursday, for Thanksgiving. A number of students who live near will go to their homes, but the majority will remain, and will be served a turkey dinner at 1 o'clock in the college dining room.

Reidsville.—We are very glad to have Dr. and Mrs. Brown with us for another year. They have been visiting relatives in Georgia recently, and report a delightful trip.

Mr. F. W. Easter was elected Sunday school superintendent before conference and we are hoping for a good year.

Mr. C. H. Rogers, one of our oldest members, died November 11 and the funeral was conducted by the pastor, assisted by Rev. J. H. West, of the M. E. church.

Mrs. T. W. Setliffe is in a Greensboro hospital and Mrs. C. H. Garrison is in a Danville hospital. We hope for both a speedy recovery.

The W. F. M. S. and W. H. M. S. have united and the following officers were elected: President, Mrs. G. A. Brown; vice-president, Mrs. J. H. Allen; secretary, Mrs. D. L. Carroll; treasurer, Mrs. L. C. Younts. The society will hold a Thanksgiving program next Sunday evening.

The Philathea class met last week with Mrs. Roy Stallings and Misses Nannie and Sadie Pegram as hostesses. After business was transacted a social hour of fun and refreshments was enjoyed. Their December meeting will be in the Sunday school room for their annual Christmas tree.

The Ladies' Aid met with Mrs. S. L. McCollum last week. The weather being rainy, not many were present.

Our folks are going to pound the preacher for Thanksgiving. Hope it will be a good one.

Best wishes for all the churches.

REPORTER.

Enfield.—The Ladies' Aid met Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Hut, with Mrs. P. S. Bellamy and Mrs. Ralph Rives, hostesses. The meeting was presided over by the president, Mrs. Ralph Rives. All sang together, "Faith of Our Fathers;" Mrs. P. S. Bellamy read the Scripture lesson and Mrs. Lilly Whitaker led in prayer; then each member named the things for which they were most thankful.

The sick mentioned were Mrs. Mary Barnhill, Mrs. L. F. Whitaker, Mrs. Lloyd Matthews and Mrs. George Parker. Mrs. Matthews and family have been down with the "flu." She was one of the hostesses but due to her illness she could not be present.

Many items of business were taken up. The order from Japan has arrived and will be put on sale Thursday, December 6th, at the Hut. The sale will begin at 12 o'clock, noon. A salad course will be served, also other eats. Look for the notices about this.

The December meeting will be omitted, due to the busy season. The next meeting will be in January, with Mrs. Lilly Whitaker, Mrs. Hubert Whitaker, Mrs. Stanley Whitaker and Miss Virginia Whitaker, hostesses.

REPORTER.

Whitakers, Whitakers Charge.—Since we are again on the conference map, we will let the readers of the Herald hear from us. We feel very much on the map with Dr. T. M. Johnson as our pastor. We are especially thankful for this, and our prayer is that under his leadership we may all co-operate in everything and great good may be accomplished.

D.r Johnson arrived late Saturday afternoon, November 17, and preached for us the next day. We had very good congregations at both services. Last Sunday he preached at Roseneath.

Our Sunday school is holding up nicely in attendance. Although we had no pastor, all the organizations have held together and worked on. We know that in our helpless condition the Lord has stood by us, and now that we have a pastor to lead us we are still trusting God for His guidance, for we realize we can do nothing without His help.

Our Ladies' Aid held a turkey dinner last Thursday, which proved very successful. We are bending all our efforts toward the building of a parsonage, which we hope soon to begin on.

We want the prayers of all who are interested in us, for there is a great work to be done here.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Cutchin, Jr., expect to spend Thanksgiving with Mr. and Mrs. Paschall.

We will hold a union service on Thanksgiving day in the M. E. church, with Dr. Johnson doing the preaching.

We are glad to note that Mr. O. R. Taylor (Mrs. Dr. Cutchin's father) is at home after 11 weeks spent in Park View Hospital as a result of a very serious hurt.

With best wishes for all the churches in our conferences.

MAMIE JOHNSTON.

November 27, 1928.

Winston-Salem, First Church—Whiz! Bang! What hit us? Oh, yes, I know—Conference! We had been sleeping nicely for a whole year. Then all of a sudden a host of people came to our city calling themselves delegates to the M. P. Confrence that was to meet at Winston-Salem. We awoke to see what it was all about. And sure enough there they were, disturbing our peace. We got to work to see what could be done. All of the people were carried to a nice, comfortable place to stay while in our midst. As the meetings moved on we rubbed our eyes to the wonders that were going on around us. Not having a regular pastor living in our city made us lag along for about a year, but having such a delightful awakening, we are ready to start a new year with vim.

Out of this conference we received a great blessing, a new pastor. Rev. and Mrs. H. F. Surratt came to us from Charlotte, N. C. They now reside at 906 Carolina avenue.

Since Conference got us started I do not know what is going to stop us, but this is what we have been doing:

On Tuesday evening, the Women's Home and Foreign Missionary Society held their Thanksgiving meeting at the church. They had as their guests the Young People's Society. A very interesting program was presented in which both societies took part. A short play was given by the young people, "Why the Missionary Meeting Was a Failure." After the business session delicious refreshments were served by the Woman's Society.

On Wednesday evening the weekly prayer meetings were started. There has been no mid-week prayer meeting because of not having a regular pastor residing in the city. It is thought that there will be quite a bit of enthusiasm shown over the meetings. This week Mr. Surratt begins a series of talks on "The Ladder of Christian Graces."

There was a delightful reception given at the church Thursday evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Surratt, welcoming them to our church and city. The meeting was opened with prayer by Rev. C. H. Whitaker. A very interesting musical program was then given by members of the church and friends. The principal address of the evening was made by Rev. R. C. Stubbins. The theme of his talk was welcoming Mr. and Mrs. Surratt to the church and to the largest city in Forsyth County. This was followed by a response by Mr. Surratt, who gave the outline of the work he hoped to do, and thanking the people for the way in which they received them into the church.

When the pastor and his wife reached home they were surprised by queer noises they thought were burglars, but happened to be a pile of queer-shaped packages they found on the front porch containing food enough to fill their pantry to overflowing. This was given them in form of a pounding by the members of the church.

Sunday three new members united with the church: Mrs. H. F. Surratt, of Charlotte, and Dr. and Mrs. E. T. Allman, of High Point, N. C. Dr. Allman was formerly of the Children's Home of High Point.

This is just the beginning of what you are going to hear from First Church of Winston-Salem.

We regret to report that last Thursday evening Mrs. W. N. Pegram, one of the oldest members of our church, fell and suffered a broken arm. She is improving rapidly and it is thought that she will soon be able to be out again.

EVELYN SMOTHERS, Reporter.

Liberty Hill, Anderson Charge.—We are glad that our pastor, Rev. G. B. Ferree, has been returned to us for another year. He filled his appointment yesterday, preaching very interesting sermons, morning and night.

The first quarterly conference will be held at this church on Saturday before the second Sunday in December at 2:30 o'clock.

Mr. N. G. McClimon, who has been church treasurer for several years, has resigned. Mr. E. L. Davis has been elected to fill his place.

Bro. Ferree and family are planning to spend Christmas with home folks at Asheboro, N. C. He will be absent from his appointment the fourth Sunday, but will give us the fifth Sunday instead.

The Christian Endeavor Society is planning to give a Christmas pageant the fourth Sunday night in December.

REPORTER.

Glen Raven.—As already reported, Bro. Williams and I exchanged the same day. Through the big-heartedness of Bro. Wiley L. Ward, both families were moved free of charge. For this fine deed all concerned are more than abundantly grateful.

We are highly pleased with our new location. The parsonage is a good house, well arranged and partly furnished. We are also highly pleased with the people.

The attendance so far has been fine, and the interest good. Last night an impressive in-tallation service was held. This was a new xperience in the ministry of the writer.

On last Saturday night the Sunday school old chicken pie, oyster stew, etc., the proeeds to apply on piano debt. The Ladies' Aid today is purchasing chairs for parsonage lining room.

WM. H. NEESE.

Burlington, N. C., Route 4.

Chestnut Ridge, Orange Charge.—Yesterday was another very good day for us, considering the cold weather. Mr. Williams filled his second appointment the fourth Sunday afternoon; he gave us a very helpful sermon.

Thanksgiving service will be held on Thurday at 2 p. m. Hoping to see a good congregation for this service.

Our Sunday school seems to be moving along very nicely under the leadership of J. T. Hobbs.

Our first communion service will be held the second Sunday in December.

The first quarterly conference will meet at Union Grove church Saturday, December 1, at 8 p. m.

We are glad to learn that our pastor's boy, Archie Gray Williams, is improving; also, Simm Efland and Harold Sharpe.

Best wishes to the Herald and its many readers. REPORTER.

Hollister, Halifax Charge.—Sunday was our regular preaching day. Our pastor, Rev. C. L. Spencer, filled his appointment with a splendid sermon. The congregation was not very large, but all seemed to enjoy the sermon. An offering was taken for the Children's Home. This was our Thanksgiving offering.

An announcement was made that our first quarterly conference would meet with Ringwood church on Friday, December 7. We are looking forward to having President Taylor with us in our conference. All official members are urged to be present.

We have a very good Sunday school. We hope the people will take more interest in the Sunday school and will attend more regularly. We are planning to have a Christmas program. Mrs. Robert Arrington and Miss Sallie Wood have charge of the program. We are going to have a Christmas tree, also.

Since our last report one of our members, Mr. W. A. Ellington, has passed away. Mr. Ellington was a faithful member of Hollister church for a number of years. He attended Sunday school and church regularly as long as his health would permit him. He will be greatly missed in his church and Sunday school.

Our next missionary meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. J. L. Alston. We are expecting to have a good program and we want all the members to be present.

KATHLEEN SHEARIN, Reporter.

Philadelphia, Greensville Circuit.—We're very glad indeed to welcome our new pastor, Rev. E. G. Cowan, on this charge. He delivered his first sermon on Sunday night, which was enjoyed by all.

We're planning on having a Christmas program and tree on Tuesday night, December 25, beginning at 7 o'clock. Everybody come.

Best wishes for a Merry Christmas.

BERNICE PEARSON, Reporter.

Corinth, Littleton Charge.—We certainly did hate to give up our pastor, Rev. N. M. Harrison, who has many friends here, and we are very grateful to Mr. Harrison for the splendid work he has done for us, especially in getting the young people interested in the work, and we wish for him much success in his new work at Charlotte. May greater opportunities be opened up for him to go forth in this great work that he loves so much to do. As Mr. Harrison was called elsewhere, we are very glad that Mr. M. J. Morris, our delegate, saw fit to bring back to us Rev. J. C. Smith, whom we hope to have with us next Sunday morning, December 2.

On Saturday, December 1, at 1 o'clock our first quarterly meeting will be held at the Littleton M. P. church.

On Friday evening, November 16, at eight o'clock, our Christian Endeavor Society had a box party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Morris, which was very much enjoyed by every one present, and was very successful; made $31.

Later on we hope to put on better programs and make our meetings more interesting, that still more of our people may join us.

Several of our members attended the funeral of Mr. Ellington at Hollister last Sunday afternoon. REPORTER.

OUR CHILDREN'S HOME

My Dear Friends:

We are wishing all of you a happy Thanksgiving this week. The prospects for us at the Home are bright for a happy day. The offerings are coming in well, and we are anticipating good offerings from those Sunday schools and churches and individuals who have not yet responded.

We had a most delightful trip recently to Grace church, then on last Sunday we went to Tabernacle and Community Church, Thomasville. The people were good to us and contributed liberally.

Next Sunday we plan to go to West End, Greensboro, Moriah and First Church, High Point. This will be a full day, but our boys and girls will fill it gladly.

Many packages are coming in each day now, and we will make full reports soon.

Christmas Cards

Through the kindness of Mr. Charles Reiner, Jr., Baltimore, Md., we are enabled to offer to our friends a box of 20 beautiful Christmas cards, no two alike, for $1.00. These are cards such as you would pay 10 cents each for at a book store. Let us sell you, thus make a fair profit for the Home. With this profit it is our purpose to permit each child to send a few Christmas cards to their friends. They will be receiving cards and good things, but you know it will give them a special joy to send just a few cards which are their very own. Buy from us.

Faithfully yours,

A. G. DIXON.

SALUTATORY

Well, all I know about it is that our conference in a "brain-storm" did it. I am the treasurer. The treasurer is supposed to handle money, and unless someone gives him money he will have nothing to do but to sit and grin at the honor thrust upon him. At this time he hasn't enough money in the treasury to buy postage for this letter. This means that our treasury is depleted, which means that it is "busted." I hope, dear reader, that you understand what I have said. If you do, will you not answer this "S. O. S." with "oodles" of dollars?

I have arranged with my banker to open an account with him in the name of the North Carolina Annual Conference, Methodist Protetsant Church; but, brethren, it can't be opened with a can-opener. It takes dollars to turn the trick. Who will be the first to help me out of this unpleasant dilemma? Several bills were ordered paid by our conference, and the treasurer was instructed to pay the president's salary monthly, even if he had to borrow money for the purpose. Why not save this interest? We need every dollar we can get for other purposes. Save the interest, brethren, save the interest.

who were brought to him. Tradition has it that Publius was won to Christianity and became bishop of Malta.

Persistent Preaching

Acts 28:15-31

Three months at Malta gave Paul great opportunity to set up the blood-stained banner of King Emmanuel, after which time he, with the other survivors, set sail once more on another vessel from Alexandria which had wintered at Malta, for Rome. Syracuse in Sicily and Rhegium (the modern Reggio) at the tip of the toe of the Italian "boot," were stopping places before they arrived at Puleoli, Rome's chief seaport at that time (now Pozzuoli). From here they traveled over land to the great metropolis of Rome. Word had reached the city of Paul's arrival in Italy, and a number of the Christian brethren came to meet him.

After the first three days, the great missionary called together the chief among the Jews, before whom he declared his innocence of any crime worthy of death, or even imprisonment. Then, deciding upon a certain day, the news was spread that Paul would present the claims of the gospel to all who would come. The response was great, and by expounding, testifying and persuading, a number of believers were added to the kingdom. Much freedom was given him, for, in a house probably rented by his friends for him, he received all who would come unto him and preached the gospel with boldness and effectiveness.

"You say," thundered the attorney, "that at midnight you were cleaning out the office and eight masked men brushed past you and went on into the vault room with revolvers drawn?"

"Yah," said Ole.

"And a moment later a terrific explosion blew the vault door off and the same men went out past you carrying currency and bonds?"

"Yah," said Ole.

"Well, what did you do then?"

"Aye put down my mop."

"Yes, but then what did you do?"

"Vell, Aye say to myself: Dis bane queer way to run a bank."

Restful Verses of Scripture

The Bible abounds in them. The promises of God, for example. We can rest in them as in easy chairs or downy beds. They exactly fit our needs. They bring us comfort. They refresh us and give us hope. Without them we would be as frightened children crying in the night. With them we are as a child whom his mother comforts and lulls to repose. Without the Bible the future is a dark and stormy sea. We look out upon it and are terrified. We have no life preservers and no life boats. We feel the ship going to pieces and are frantic. A voice comes to us out of the darkness, saying to us, "Be not afraid, it is I." The effect of that voice is magical. Our fears are gone, we are ready to plunge into the deep, to lay hold upon the hand of rescue and hope. God speaks to us out of the Bible and our mourning is turned into joy, our evil forebodings become pleasing anticipations, our despair passes and hope abides.

The very first verse of the Bible brings profound rest to our souls: "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth." That tells us what kind of a world we are in. It is God's world. It is not a pandemonium. It is not a realm ruled by devils. It is not a playground for demons. This verse takes from our minds a most painful mystery; the mystery of existence, our existence and the existence of the world. Why is all this here? Our souls grow frantic in the effort to understand, but we are baffled. But the quieting voice comes. The world is here because God created it. It is still a mystery, but now it is not a painful but a pleasing mystery. The world enfolds a loving purpose of the good God. It has a reason for being, God's reason, supremely rational because supremely benevolent. Because God made the world we know the world must be very good.

And what a wonderfully restful verse is John 3:16: "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish but have everlasting life." God's love and God's thought for us reach on into the eternal future. We are not playthings of a day. God prizes us and would have us forever. We may become His precious jewels. He has done an astonishing thing that we might live on through the ages. He is not willing for us to perish as sickly infants. He wants us to grow up into beauty and strength and be His forever. Doesn't that make us feel better? What would you take for John 3:16? Not all the gold of Ophir.

If you will go through your Bible and mark every verse that has spiritual value for you, it may help you to realize what a valuable book you have.

—The deriving of vast sums for the revenue from the bitter sufferings and grinding pauperism of the people is a terrible offense. If Judas had received one thousand dollars instead of thirty pieces of silver, would that have justified his conduct?—Canon Wilberforce.

Determining Moments in Life

As we look back over the course of our lives we discover certain critical points when great decisions were made. We perhaps did not realize at the time that we were playing a game with destiny, but we see now that we were giving shape to all our future. Had we decided differently, all the rest of life would have been different. Sometimes we decided better than we knew; at other times worse than we knew. We believe that we may state it as an invariable rule that when we allowed God to guide us in our decisions we decided better than we knew, and when we decided for ourselves without regard to the divine will we decided worse than we knew. God has a right to direct our lives and will direct our lives if we will permit Him to do so, and in that case will life be satisfactory. If we trust in our own wisdom we will surely make serious mistakes and have to suffer the consequences.

The truly wise man is wise enough to know that it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps. Man has not wisdom enough to find his way through the labyrinth of this world's relationships. Man can learn something by experience, but what a costly lesson it is when it takes up the whole of life. Man needs wisdom before he can acquire it by experience and God graciously offers it to those that humbly ask for it. The crises of life should drive us to God for wisdom. Then all the future will reveal the wisdom of God in our lives and we will know not the bitterness of great regret.

"Faith of Our Fathers, Living Still"

"That marvelous life which began at Bethlehem we know to have been different from any other life ever passed upon the earth. It would be impossible to account for it save by acknowledging a miracle. The more experience in life we have, the more infallibly we learn to count on the certainty of the impossible. I believe in the Virgin Birth; I believe all the other miracles; I believe in the Resurrection. Nor is credence given for the supine reason of conformity, nor even of spiritual comfort. I accept Christ as divine because my reason and my instinct reject every other possible interpretation of Him. He cannot sensibly be classified with other sages and saints. He is a figure of solitary splendor. His greatness is not of this earth. His character is of that celestial quality to be communicated only from one spirit to another spirit."—Archibald Rutledge in American Magazine, December, 1928.

BOARD OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION MEETING

When the Board of Christian Education met soon after the last General Conference it was voted to hold another meeting this fall. The Executive Committee selected Cambridge, Ohio, and the meeting was held November 20. The following members were present: Rev. G. I. Humphreys, D.D., Rev. C. J. Morton, Mrs. G. W. Ramsey, Rev. Lawrence Little, Rev. F. W. Stephenson, Rev. F. L. Gibbs, and Rev. J. C. Broomfield, D.D. Word was received from most of the other members stating the reasons for their inability to attend.

Reports from the two departments were read and action taken on the recommendations. Dr. Broomfield was unable to remain throughout the session due to engagements in the District Rallies being held in the Pittsburgh Conference. Several matters in which he was particularly interested were discussed before he left.

After the reading of the report from the Secretary of the Department of Educational Institutions, the more important actions taken were as follows: The amount of the surety bonds carried by the Secretary and his office assistant was not changed; the plan of the Secretary to furnish the Educational Secretaries of the Woman's Missionary Work with printed matter, bulletins, etc., relating to the work of the Board was approved; it was voted to inaugurate a campaign for annuities; a Rally Day committee was ordered which shall co-operate with the Secretary in preparing the material for next year's Rally Day program; the proposal to assume fifty per cent of a $1,500 obligation of Westminster College if the college pays the other half was adopted, the total amount remaining in the hands of the Board as an annuity and which shall later become an endowment for the support of a Chair of Bible at Westminster College; the policy of the Board not to assume financial obligations in order to help our colleges or seminary was not changed; the request of Chancellor W. O. Jones, of Kansas City University, to reduce the annual payments on their obligation to the Board of Christian Education from $5,000 to $2,500 was granted; as one item in our educational goal the purpose to bring our senior colleges to a parity was approved; the position of the Secretary in protesting against the church-wide offer of scholarships to ministerial students on the part of one of our colleges was approved; factors considered in making appropriations to our schools were such things as the amount of the endowment, condition of plant, equipment, accrediting, miscellaneous income, faculty salaries, area contributions, competition, indebtedness, location, wealth of constituency, and the probable resources of the Board; the seminary is given, as in the past, a prior claim; action on the request from the Board of Trustees of Adrian College for the return of their endowment was deferred; tentative appropriations were decided upon, later changes if found necessary to be made by the Executive Committee of the Board.

The Executive Secretary reported that during the last quadrennium the educational contributions of the church were paid back to the schools of the areas in the following proportion: Western Maryland, 61 per cent; Adrian, 68 per cent; High Point, 174 per cent; and Westminster College, 456 per cent. During the last four years 70 per cent of the seminary graduates returned to the Western Maryland area, 16 per cent to the Adrian area and 14 per cent to the High Point area.

He reported also that his Department would not receive over $21,000 this year for its work and that the Department of Religious Education would not receive over $8,000, judging from the returns to date for the New Century Service. The reduction made by the General Conference in the percentage allowed the Department of Educational Institutions from 23 per cent to 14 per cent would work serious injury unless the church raises more than $250,000, something it has never yet been able to do. Less than $75,000 for all interests had been raised in the first six months of the fiscal year of the church.

The Executive Secretary of the Department of Religious Education suggested the advisability of a more adequate approach to our young people with the missionary program of the church, of holding a youth's congress during the Christmas holidays and of the Executive Secretaries attending the meetings of the other denominational Boards.

The following actions were taken: The Secretary was instructed to prepare some program material to be used for Christian Endeavor Day; the two Executive Secretaries with Rev. F. L. Gibbs were constituted a committee to purchase standard text books to be used in the Leadership Training Conference, and $250 was appropriated for this purpose; an adjustment of Mr. Gibbs' salary was made in the amount of $166.66 to correct an error made at the June meeting; the Secretary was instructed to plan for at least two Denominational Standard Leadership Training Schools, to be held possibly at Westminster, Maryland and Adrian; to charge tuition fees in the Leadership Training Schools throughout the church, 25 cents for those taking courses for credit in the Young People's Division and $1.00 for those taking courses for credit in the Standard Leadership Training Division; to permit the Department to employ at least three additional workers for the next season's schools; to endorse the principles, standards and program as set up by the International Council of Religious Education regarding the Standard Leadership Training curriculum; that each instructor be required to prepare the same kind of outline for his work, regardless of his former work; that the Executive Secretaries, together with such other assistants as they may see fit to employ, constitute the Committee on Accrediting Instructors; to approve the constitution, as amended, for use by the Annual Conference Councils of Religious Education and that all changes desired by the Councils to be submitted to the Board of Christian Education for final approval; that a college education be required of those seeking accrediting as instructors in the Leadership Training Schools, exception being made only in extraordinary cases; to consider the advisability of holding three regional Standard Leadership Training Schools instead of two; and to make an adjustment in Mr. Little's salary while attending the university.

Other matters relating to both Departments were discussed but no formal action taken. The meeting adjourned after the larger part of two days had been spent in considering the work of the Board.

Following the adjournment the Advisory Council opened its sessions, under the direction of the Department of Religious Education, with eleven of the Annual Conference Young People's Unions represented. Nearly three days were spent in conferences, discussions and earnest consideration of the various problems the church is facing in the conduct and development of the Leadership Training Schools. Various committees were appointed which gave to the more important questions special consideration. Their reports were submitted to the entire group for consideration and final action. The new constitution for the Councils was adopted, the organization and curriculum perfected, plans for twenty-three summer schools made, action taken for a similar meeting next year, arrangements made to study further the possibility of a Youth Congress, and for the development of the correspondence courses. Special features of the gathering were the worship service prepared by Mrs. H. W. Maier for the opening session and the devotional hours in charge of President H. L. Feeman, of Adrian. No pains were spared by Rev. Geo. H. Miller, D.D., and the people of the Cambridge church to make the visit pleasant. It was a delightful and profitable meeting.

FRANK W. STEPHENSON.

RESUME OF THE ACTIONS OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEETING OF BOARD OF MISSIONS

Held in Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 22-23, 1928

The meeting was called to order by the President, G. H. Miller, all the members of the committee being present. Prayer was offered by Mrs. A. G. Dixon and Dr. J. C. Broomfield.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

After the communications were read the Executive Secretaries presented their reports.

On motion $6.50 per month was added to the appropriation for the Boys' Work in India to cover the increased expense for living rooms for the boys in the school.

The minutes of the meetings of the Mission in India held August 15, October 11 and 18 were read and approved and their requests granted.

A letter was read from Miss Frank in India stating that she expects to be married soon, and therefore wished to be released at the termination of her present contract; the request was granted.

On motion the Mission in India was authorized to employ the necessary native help at the time of Miss Frank's release.

The minutes of the meeting of the Mission in Japan, held October 23, 1928, were read and approved and its recommendations indorsed.

The work report of Paul Warner was read and the committee congratulates the Kuwana mission and its pastor, Rev. Tomera, on becoming a conference church.

The committee rejoices in the proposed plans of the Japan Mission by which they will celebrate the completion of their program to raise the Japanese share of the building fund.

On motion by J. W. Hawley and seconded by G. W. Haddaway the new charter of the Board of Missions was submitted to the General Conference Executive Committee for review.

The resignation of Miss Edna Dexter to take effect June 1, 1929, was accepted. The disposition of her time until that date was left to Dr. Woodford.

Owing to ill health Miss Bessie Eiss is unable to continue her work at Dillionvale, Ohio. Her resignation was accepted.

Letters of appreciation for the splendid service rendered our Home Mission work were ordered sent to Miss Dexter and Miss Eiss.

The Executive Secretary was asked to look after the matter of $5,000 left the W. H. M. S. in the estate of Mrs. Lizzie Copp.

The matter of securing added slides for illustrated lectures was left to the Executive Secretary.

Action was taken requesting the Anniversary Committee of the W. F. M. S. to co-operate with the Executive Committee of the Board of Missions in making plans for the May meeting which will include the meeting of all the Boards of the church.

J. W. Hawley reported the result of his negotiations with the Executive Committee of the W. F. M. S. and in harmony with the Board's policy of publicity the results of these negotiations were ordered published. The paper presented for the consideration of the Executive Committee of the W. F. M. S. was as follows:

Meeting of the Executive Board of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist Protestant Church held at their office in the city of Pittsburgh, on the —— day of November, 1928.

Whereas, at the twenty-fifth quadrennial session of the General Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church held in the city of Baltimore, State of Maryland, in the month of May, 1928, action was taken looking to the unification of the missionary activities of the church and to that end action was taken that hereafter the missionary activities would be under the control of managers, designated by the said conference, under the name of the Board of Missions of the Methodist Protestant Church, and since the adjournment of said conference, the persons so designated as managers or officers thereof have met and organized under the name of the Board of Missions of the Methodist Protestant Church, and elected officers for the active prosecution of the work, and have taken further action providing for the obtaining of a charter on application to the Court of Common Pleas of Allegheny County, and

Whereas, by virtue of said action the work of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist Protestant Church, represented by this Board, has been transferred to the Board of Missions organized as above recited, and that the future management of the missionary activities shall henceforth be carried on by said Board of Missions except in so far as property rights are concerned.

It is therefore resolved:

First. That the management of the missionary activities of the Methodist Protestant Church, in so far as heretofore carried on by this society, shall be in the future carried on under the jurisdiction and management of the Board of Missions, and that so far as the missionary activities are concerned, the jurisdiction and management thereof by this society shall cease upon being assumed by the Board of Missions.

Second. That the title to the property, real and personal, now held by this society shall continue to be held by this society and the income therefrom, upon receipt, shall be transferred by this society to the Board of Missions.

Third. That the Branches and Auxiliaries now existing shall organize in harmony with the action of the Board of Missions and be under the authority and jurisdiction of said Board in the same manner as they have heretofore been under this society, and

Whereas, in conforming with the action of the General Conference, it will be necessary to continue the corporate

OPTIMISM | The President's Letter | EVANGELISM

Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples.—John 15:8.

Christmas

The most popular, the most joyous, the holiest of all festive seasons is drawing near. The church should prepare for its coming. Whatever the world may do about Christmas, the church must make it honor Christ. The time that commemorates His birth can not be for His followers a season of frivolity and worldliness. It must be for them a time of worship and praise and honor to the Christ of Bethlehem's manger. Nothing is more fitting on Christmas morning than for the people who love Christ to assemble in His church and offer unto Him the gold, frankincense and myrrh of loving hearts, as He is worshiped and His name praised. We earnestly urge that our people hold such services.

We call attention again to the Christmas program that is being offered without charge by the Board of Christian Education. If you have not already secured this program, please do so. You wil no doubt find it pleasing, and easily adapted to local conditions. Order from Rev. J. H. Straughn, D.D., 516 North Charles Street, Baltimore. The only stipulation is that you take an offering for the G. C. B., and take credit for the amount on the budget of the local church.

The College Campaign

We must keep this to the fore for a few days yet until the work can be completed. The workers who have been loaned for this purpose have been diligent, and the people have responded well, at least in a number of places. Several churches and charges have promptly paid their allotments, and thus provided ready cash for immediate college needs. For this, and for what is yet to be paid, and likewise, where the will is good but the means lacking—for all this we are grateful. And while we are paying, and willing to pay, let us not forget to pray. God can accomplish things for us in the least expected ways, and far beyond our fondest hopes. Let us pray. And without ceasing, let us pray.

Officials

Should attend the sessions of the quarterly conference. This is to the local charge what the annual conference is to all the charges within the conference district. When officials are present, the business of a quarterly conference can go forward with enthusiasm and confidence; for "In the multitude of counsellors there is safety." There are occasions, of course, when every official can not be present; but these occasions should be the exception. The rule with every official should be to attend every quarterly conference. We trust that the conferences this year may be so interesting that every official will want to attend, and will do so, not only because it is his duty to do so, but because he finds pleasure in it. We hope to have something to say later about the relation of the congregation to the business of the church.

Encouraging

We note with interest and pleasure the way pastors and reporters of the various charges write. "We have been given a very cordial reception by the good people of —— charge"; "We are indeed grateful to have Bro. —— and his splendid wife and children back with us for the new year"; "We are all glad indeed to have Pastor —— and his family come back to us"; "Our folks are going to pound the preacher for Thanksgiving"; "We feel very much on the map, with —— as our pastor"; "We are highly pleased with our new location. The parsonage is a good house, well arranged and partly furnished. We are also highly pleased with the people"; "Sunday, three new members united with the church —this is just the beginning of what you are going to hear from First church ——"; "We are glad to be returned to this charge for another year. These good people have been loyal to their pastor and family, and to the Kingdom"; "On last Tuesday night we held our first quarterly conference, with good attendance, and we feel like the new year has started off well. We hope to do all we have been asked to do by the annual conference."

These are some of the things that pastors and reporters are saying through the Herald. We like the ring of these reports. It indicates a pleased, hopeful, and progressive spirit. And now let us venture the hope that this good spirit of love, co-operation, and zeal is to continue through the year, and that nothing shall be permitted to mar this good prospect for a year of much fruit bearing.

Our Treasurer

For three years Bro. V. W. Idol rendered the conference faithful and efficient service as conference treasurer, but the pressure of business has made it necessary for him to decline re-election. Rev. Geo. R. Brown was chosen by the conference to succeed Bro. Idol in this important office. This affords Dr. Brown an outlet for his surplus energy, and at the same time gives the church a continuation of the splendid service rendered by Bro. Idol. Dr. Brown is entering zealously upon the work of his office, and will be heard from frequently through the Herald. In fact, he has readily consented to handle the weekly financial reports, and in connection with this he will have valuable information to give out from time to time in regard to the status of the treasury. We predict that the conference will realize great satisfaction in having Dr. Brown handle this business; and we predict further that Dr. Brown will realize an abundance of hard but pleasant work. Brethren, keep him busy! keep him busy! He likes it.

Activities

On Friday, November 30, we were in meeting with the Group Insurance Committee, and a brief meeting, also, of the New Century Service Commission.

On Saturday, December 1, we were with Bro. Whitehead at Mt. Zion church, West Thomasville charge, for quarterly meeting. As three churches were not represented, it was thought best to postpone the meeting to Friday night, December 14. On this date the conference will be held in the West Thomasville church. Hour, 7:30 p. m. A full representation from each church is expected.

On Sunday morning, December 2, it was our privilege to worship with the First church, High Point. We enjoyed the service, and the fellowship of the folks. Bro. Farmer is giving his untiring efforts to the work, and is winning the full confidence of his people.

Our goals for the new conference year are in process of preparation, and will be published soon.

Appointments

Dec. 7.—Ringwood church, Halifax charge, in quarterly conference. Hour, 2 p. m.

Dec. 8.—Quarterly conference, Why Not charge. Hour, 1:30. Preaching, 11 a. m. (We do not have information as to church.)

Dec. 9.—Why Not charge. Preaching: 11 a. m., Love Joy; Macedonia, 2:30 p. m.; Seagrove, 7:30 p. m.

Dec. 15-16.—Fairview, Glen Raven charge. Quarterly conference at Fairview church Saturday, 2 p. m. Preaching at Glen Raven Sunday, 11 a. m.

Dec. 16.—Belmont, Mt. Hermon charge. Hour, 7:30 p. m. (Tentative.)

"Now the God of all hope fill you with all joy and peace in believing, that ye may abound in hope through the power of the Holy Ghost."

Story of a Preacher and a Turkey

A Greensboro preacher received a Thanksgiving turkey. He was so pleased that he told his congregation, but added that he would not tell them where he was keeping the fowl. Some of the boys thought they knew where or could find out. They furthermore thought that it would be a good joke on the parson to take his turkey by night and transfer it to the coop of another preacher not far away. They decided to do so. But one of the boys thought this would be carrying the joke too far, and he went to the preacher and told him of the plot, and warned him that the next night at eleven o'clock was the time when the action was to take place. The preacher, forewarned, was forearmed. He decided to watch the thieves, follow them and when they had left the turkey and gone away, he would seize the bird and restore it to its rightful place, thus having the laugh on the boys the next morning. The boys went according to their plan and the preacher went according to his plan. But the preacher overlooked one risk. As he was going home about midnight with the big bird in a bag over his shoulder, he was accosted by a policeman and asked to explain. He explained, but the policeman was a new man on the beat and he thought the explanation too thin. "You will have to tell that to the judge; I will take you to the police station and keep you under guard till court meets in the morning." This issue of the affair did not strike the preacher as quite so funny as the issue he expected. However, he was permitted to retain the turkey, but he did not carry it home on his shoulder. But he understood the broad grin on many faces he met for some time to come.

existence of this society for the purpose of holding title to the property; to that end

Be it resolved, That at the next annual meeting of the Executive Board of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society to be held in May, 1929, action be taken at said meeting authorizing and amending the By-Laws so that the By-Laws shall provide that this society shall be managed by a Board of Managers consisting of five women designated by the Board of Missions and chosen from its number as elected by the General Conference.

The foregoing preambles and resolution were presented to the Executive Committee at a meeting held on the 21st day of October, 1928, and upon motion duly seconded the said preambles and resolutions were recommended for favorable adoption to the Executive Board at its regular meeting in May, 1929.

BILLYBOY'S THANKSGIVING

Billyboy had heard a great deal about Thanksgiving offerings. At Sabbath school it had been talked about and at home and at church.

"What is a Thanksgiving offering, Mother?" he asked. Whenever Billyboy wanted to know anything he just asked some one and almost always he found out exactly what he wanted to know.

"Why, a Thanksgiving offering," said Mother, "is a present we give on Thanksgiving day to some of God's people because we want to thank Him for being so good to us all the year round. At our church this year we are going to thank God by sending money to take care of the little boys and girls whose mothers and fathers have gone to heaven."

Billyboy was satisfied and went out to the sandpile to help Dod, his year-and-a-half older brother, make frog houses. Dod was getting to be a great big boy, was in the second grade at school and had lost a tooth. Billyboy had been very much interested in that tooth. Daddy had told Dod to put the tooth under his pillow and see what he would find next morning. In the morning the tooth was gone and in its place there was a bright, shining new dime. Of course you and I know that Daddy had put the dime there but Billyboy thought it was very wonderful. Gee! but he did wish he could lose a tooth. He thought and thought about it. He knew he was too young, but how he did wish he could!

At last he decided to see what he could do. He picked out a lower front tooth to work on and began pushing it and punching it and wiggling it every time he could get a chance when no one was looking, until at last it really began to loosen a little. He kept on working at it until finally it got to be quite loose, then very loose, and at last, the very day before Thanksgiving, he tied a string around it and Dod helped him with a good, hard jerk and the tooth came out. It hurt a little, of course, but a real man has to stand some little pain in this world, thought Billyboy, so that didn't matter.

That night the tooth was placed under Billyboy's pillow and next morning, sure enough, there was the wonderful dime in its place.

On Thanksgiving morning Mother was getting ready to go to the service at the church when Billyboy came puffing upstairs, his new dime tightly clasped in his fat little hand.

"Here, Mother," he said, "put this money in an envelope and write my name on it."

"Why, what's that for, Billyboy? That's your tooth money, isn't it?" asked Mother.

"Yes'm. That's why I pulled my tooth out. I was just 'bliged to have a Thanksgiving offering."—The Presbyterian.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

By Grover L. Angel

President C. E. Society, High Point College

DEC. 9: "HOW SHOULD A CHRISTIAN'S CHRISTMAS BE DIFFERENT?"

Luke 2:15; II Cor. 9:15

(Don't you think the members of your society would be happier if you planned, as a society, some project to carry out the Christmas idea? Keeping the Christ in Christmas is the duty of each individual. There are many ways in which we could do this: There are numerous things we could do for the little children at our Children's Home; we can send cards to the workers on the mission fields; we can sing carols on the eve of Christmas to shut-ins, and other friends and relatives, we could send a basket of food for some poor family's dinner. We could go on and on naming things that we could do, but let's leave it up to the society to find some worthy project to carry out. Remember that Christmas should be unselfish.)

Suggested Program

Quiet music. (Preferably a Christmas anthem).
Opening prayer.
Hymn: "It Came Upon a Midnight Clear."
Scripture lesson.
Announcement of topic and leader's talk.
Special music.
Answering of questions.
Sentence prayers.
Debate.
Topics for discussion.
Sentence prayers.
Poem.
Planning of Christmas project.
Hymn: "I Heard the Bells on Christmas Day."
Benediction by a member.

Points for the Leader

"How Should a Christian's Christmas Be Different?" This is, indeed, a peculiar question to be asked. And yet we are forced to ask it because of the irreverent manner in which the birth of our Lord has been celebrated in the past few years. In reality the celebration should not be different to any individual from that of another. Christians are the only people who have a purpose in celebrating the occasion, and for them it should be a day of peace, joy, and happiness, and a spirit of good will toward God and man. The gifts we give should be a manifestation of the love He has kindled in our hearts, and a commemoration of God's greatest Gift to the world and mankind.

The first Christmas was a day of quiet and stillness. Should we not observe the day in this manner? Fireworks, drinking, and the like detract from the spirit of the event, and it remains for us as Christian Endeavorers to look down on such irreverence in a way that will aid the abolishing of such methods of celebration. Other things, too, which we may not think of detract from the day unless they are dealt with in a very careful manner: such as, Christmas trees, Santa Claus, and the like. However, if used in the right way these can be made to add to the spirit of the time rather than diverting attention from the essential meaning.

Let it not be a day of commercial gain, of greed, and unselfishness, but a day that He would approve.

Questions to Be Answered

1. Is it wrong for Christians to give expensive presents to friends and loved ones when there are other causes that are hindered on account of financial support?

2. Should we send greetings that have no suggestion of Jesus?

Topics for Discussion

1. Making Christmas mean more to the home and its individual members.

Appropriate Quotations

"The Christian Christmas should not leave one bankrupt in body, spirit and money. It should help to strengthen Christian attitudes that will last throughout the year."—C. E. Quarterly.

Newly every Christmas morn
For each soul the Christ in born.
New the needs of every year,
New the pain and new the fear,
New the grief and sad surprise
Holds in waiting for our eyes.
For this pain, surprise and grief,
Christ is born to bring relief!
Hallelujah!
—Rebecca Perley Reed.

Poetry to the Point

MAGI

We are less wise—less kingly,
And not like unto them
Who followed in the darkness
The star of Bethlehem . . .
Who brought their myrrh and jewels
Across the Syrian sands.
We have no gifts to offer—
We come with empty hands.

But stars and stars are blazing,
And each must seek his own,
When through the vesper silence,
The myrial lights have thrown
Their flame of garish luster,
Their flickering candle-shine:
The privilege of choosing,
This shall be yours and mine!

The star that each shall follow,
Not holy as the one
That led the wise od monarchs
To worship Mary's son;
But bright, perhaps, with visions,
With dreams and songs that call . . .
Oh, the stars and stars are shining
And we are magi all.
—Catherine Parmenter.

—Calvary church received a notable accession to her membership last Sunday morning. Bro. J. C. Coe and family and Mrs. Hanner were gladly received. All live in Greensboro and it seems altogether fitting that they be members of a Greensboro church. We wish all Methodist Protestants living in Greensboro would join some Greensboro Methodist Protestant Church.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

DEC. 16: PAUL AND HIS FRIENDS

Scripture Basis: Acts 20:36-38; Rom. 16:1-4; Phil. 2:25-30; Philemon.

Golden Text: A friend loveth at all times. Prov. 17:17.

Ephesian Elders

We recall (Lesson for Oct. 28) that Paul on his last journey to Jerusalem, stopped at Miletus, 25 miles south of Ephesus, and sent for the Ephesian elders that he might advise with them. After admonishing them in words of tenderness and love concerning the care of the churches, he prayed with them, fell on their necks and kissed them, and departed to see them no more. "Paul's prayer for them as they all knelt, their weeping, their embracing Paul and kissing him and sorrowing because they were not to see him again—is one of the most expressive pictures of Christian friendship in all the books ever written."

Phoebe

Paul characterized Phoebe in three terms: (1) "Our sister." He spoke of the members of the churches as of families, thus emphasizing the close relationship existing between them. (2) "Who is a servant of the church that is at Cenchreae." The term used here is between the words "servant" and "deaconess," as we know them. Phoebe had probably voluntarily devoted herself "to minister unto the saints" by means of charity and hospitality. (3) "A helper of many, and of mine own self." "Many of the early Christian communities had the appearance of clients under a patron, and probably the community of Cenchreae met in the house of Phoebe. She also devoted her influence and means to the assistance of 'brethren' landing at that port. Paul was among those whom she benefited." It is generally thought that she carried Paul's letter to the Romans, and the apostle bespoke for her a Christian welcome.

Priscilla and Aquila

These were a devoted husband and wife, whom the apostle met at Corinth. The man was a tent-maker, so they worked together and Paul abode in his house while there. (Acts 18:1-3). This couple was among those who were driven from Rome by Claudius in A. D. 52, because of the disturbances caused by the Jews. There is no record to deny that they were converted to Christianity while Paul worked with them at Corinth. "Not only did they become Christians, but they also became fast and devoted friends of Paul, and he fully reciprocated their affection for him." They went to Ephesus with Paul, and stayed there while he went into Syria, doing Christian work. When Claudius' temporary decree was lifted, they returned to Rome and ministered to their spiritual father while he was in Rome. Probably during the riot in Ephesus, they risked their lives for the sake of this worthy friend. The only reason that can be given for the wife's name being placed ahead of her husband's is that she was probably the stronger character.

Epaphroditus

Epaphroditus was doubtless a native of Philippi, the first town Paul visited in Macedonia, and was thought to have been a convert of the apostle at that time. He bore the gift of the Philippian Christians to Paul at Rome, and while there worked so diligently as "Paul's attendant and as his assistant in missionary work" that he "was sick nigh unto death." But he recovered, and returned to Philippi with "the wonderful letter which Paul sent back again, the Epistle of Christian joy." "Paul calls him 'my brother and fellow-worker and fellow-soldier.' 'The three words are arranged in an ascending scale: common sympathy, common work, common danger and toil and suffering.'"

Onesimus

Onesimus, meaning "profitable," "helpful," was a slave of Philemon in Colossae, who had become unprofitable by running away and perhaps taking some of his master's goods with him. He came to Rome; Paul was in Rome; the two came together. No more need be said, for a mere reading of the life of Paul convinces the reader that a man could not come under the influence of such a man of God without being affected for good by the gospel he taught. So Onesimus was converted. Paul would have kept him, so acceptable had his services become, but he knew that he must return to his master to manifest the Christian spirit. He sent a letter to the Colossians by Onesimus and Tychicus, and furthermore, wrote one to Philemon in behalf of his returned slave, in which he lovingly requests that he be received as a Christion brother. We have only to read the short Epistle to Philemon to discover the diplomacy and sympathy the writer used in dealing with this delicate situation.

Philemon

"Philemon was probably the pastor, or bishop, of the church at Colossae in Asia Minor. Though a pastor, he was a slaveholder, a circumstance which we must not judge by modern standards. Christianity took the world as it found it, and began as it could and where it could to introduce the sublime mystery of the New Manhood." The two whom Paul greets at the beginning of his letter, Apphia and Archippus, are no doubt the wife and son, respectively, of Philemon. It was at this house that the Colossian Christians often met, for the head of the home was noted for his hospitality, and was doubtless a man of means. "The relation between the apostle and Philemon was so close and intimate that St. Paul does not hesitate to press him, on the basis of it, to forgive his slave, Onesimus, for stealing and running away."

Friendship

Friendship is power and riches all to me;
Friendship's another element of life:
Water and fire not of more general use,
To the support and comfort of the world,
Than Friendship to the being of my joy:
I would do everything to serve a Friend.
—Southern.

—A collision near this city on the High Point road last Sunday night put four men in Clinic hospital with serious injuries and killed W. A. Jeffreys, of Durham. One car was filled with students of Duke University. The accident is attributed to a heavy fog and to a curve in the road near Thomas swimming pool.

DIXON - WILLIAMS - SMATHERS REUNION

On Thanksgiving Day about 300 of the descendants of Robert L. Dixon, Patrick Williams, Robert Williams, Billie Williams, Johnnie Williams, met at our Children's Home at High Point, N. C., for their annual reunion.

Dr. A. G. Dixon, superintendent of the Children's Home, is president of the association; Rev. Geo. W. Williams is vice-president, and Miss Bessie Dixon, secretary and treasurer.

At 11 o'clock the crowd was called together in the chapel of the Home. The children rendered a very interesting program. Rev. J. S. Williams, of Asheville, made the principal address. A splendid talk was also made by Rev. Roy Farmer, pastor of First Church, High Point. The meeting was then thrown open for any who wished to speak a few words and several responded appropriately. Someone mentioned in their talk that the Williams family had been so closely identified with the organization and growth of Flat Rock church that if you even mention Flat Rock you think of the Williams family. The church activities of the Dixon family mainly center around Midway church. L. R. Dixon, father of the writer, was superintendent of the Sunday school for nearly 40 years. He died four years ago at the age of 74 and was still superintendent of the Sunday school. John F. Dixon, father of Rev. A. G. Dixon, was a great Sunday school worker wherever he went. He organized many Sunday schools and where schools already existed he was in the work.

The same officers were re-elected to serve another year. It was unanimously voted to held the 1929 reunion at Flat Rock church on the Fourth of July.

A long table had been prepared on the lawn of the boys' building. The baskets and boxes were brought and unpacked and placed on the table. The table fairly groaned under the load of good things to eat and the 300 men, women and children did justice to the feast. The 77 children of the Home were guests of the re-union at this picnic.

After the picnic, Rev. J. S. Williams, who brought horse-shoes with him, and Rev. Roy Farmer and others had a game of horse-shoes.

The crowd gathered in groups and memories were refreshed by talking of many incidents of childhood. It was an ideal day, considering the season of the year, and all seemed to thoroughly enjoy the day.

A. C. DIXON.

—Few commercial houses have better collectors than the Odell Hardware Company has in the person of Mr. F. R. Stout. He was trained to the business from boyhood when he was local collector. Now he goes over the state to collect from merchants. He goes to a man with the evident expectation of receiving a payment and he generally succeeds. If he cannot get money from a bankrupt merchant he will take the goods and carry them away in his car.

We have paid 15 per cent of the ten thousand dollars pledged to the college for current expenses. The other 85 pr cent ought to be paid in the next 30 days. The college needs the money, and we need the college. In order that our need in this respect is met, we must meet the need of the college. This may not be good reasoning, but it is certainly good horse-sense.

We have $6.50 with which to meet a $250.00 obligation. This is some problem, and it can not be solved by any rule of mathematics with which we are familiar. If someone of our church members will tell us how it may be done legitimately, we shall be profoundly grateful. In the meantime we shall borrow the money in accordance with conference action and meet the obligation.

We hope the pastors and churches will check up the items of our reports as they appear in the Herald from time to time, and call our attention to any inaccuracies that may be found. We are exceedingly anxious to have our reports correct in every particular. Please help us to keep them so.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Rehoboth, Granville Circuit.—The Missionary Rally of District No. 2, Vance County, was held Thursday, November 22, at Union Chapel church, with representatives present from each auxiliary. The chairman, Miss Mary White, presided. Miss Lucy Baskett conducted the devotionals at the morning session. After the roll call, minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary, and reports were heard from each auxiliary. The reports were very interesting, showing the number of active and honorary members. In many instances new members had been added. Interesting plans for better societies were discussed and ways and means of raising money. Several auxiliaries have planned to send boxes to Bethel Home and the Children's Home.

Mrs. C. W. Bates, of Greensboro, made a splendid talk on the achievements of the Woman's Missionary Organization and of the present opportunities for greater service. She explained the new plan, which we hope to be able to follow, and answered many questions concerning the plan, and how to bring about the re-organization of our work.

After the lunch hour, which was also enjoyed, the afternoon session was opened with congregational singing. Rev. R. A. Hunter, of Henderson, conducted the devotionals. The business was next in order. Mrs. L. R. Gooch, chairman of the nominating committee, reported the nomination of the following officers: Miss Crystal Bobbitt, district chairman, and Mrs. Richard Harris, secretary. The nomination was accepted. Mrs. Gooch then commended Miss White, the retiring chairman, for untiring efforts and faithfulness to the organization.

Mr. Bates was the afternoon speaker. He emphasized the great command, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." His message inspired us to go forward.

We were glad to have with us Miss Velna McCulloch, also of Greensboro. Miss McCulloch is the thank-offering secretary.

The next meeting will be at Flat Rock church.

MRS. RICHARD HARRIS.

State Street, Lexington.—The members are very glad to welcome Mr. Bethea as pastor for another year. Last Sunday he preached two most inspiring sermons; the subject for the morning service was "The Duty of Thankfulness," and for the evening worship, "The Religion That Helps." Mr. Harold Helms was received into the church at the morning service.

On Sunday afternoon the pastor preached a Thanksgiving sermon at Yadkin College. Mrs. Curtis Koontz spoke in behalf of High Point College. These faithful Methodist Protestants at Yadkin College are expecting to raise their apportionment in full.

We regret to report that Mrs. J. D. Davis continues very ill at her home at Yadkin College.

Our C. E. meeting was not held last week, because the Lexington Township Sunday School Convention was in session at the Presbyterian church. The pastor and several teachers of the Sunday school attended the convention. A young people's conference was held in connection with the convention, and State Street had a good representation at the banquet which was held in the Legion Hut on Tuesday evening. The young people report a most enjoyable and helpful occasion, and are hoping that these conferences will be held regularly.

The union Thanksgiving service will be held in our church Thursday morning at 9 o'clock. Rev. W. S. Holmes, of the Episcopal church, will preach the sermon. Mr. Bethea urged all of the State Street congregation to come to the home of the Lord and return thanks on that day.

At 6:45 Thursday morning the City C. E. Union will have a sunrise service in the City Park. Our Christian Endeavorers are planning to take part in this meeting.

Mr. Bethea reports that the response to the call of High Point College is gratifying. Most of the churches visited have paid their quotas and others expect to raise their this month. Several churches will be visited next Sunday by the representatives. Mr. Bethea is being assisted in this campaign by Mr. Curtis Koontz, Mr. D. A. McLaurin, Mr. J. B. Leonard, Rev. H. W. Maier, and Rev. Mr. Bingham.

Since the last report the women of the church have served an oyster supper and cleared $21.45.

Mr. Lewis Bethea, of High Point College, spent Sunday at the parsonage visiting his parents.

Mrs. J. F. Burkhart is sick at this writing. We hope for her a speedy recovery and an early return to the church services.

REPORTER.

Love Joy, Why Not Circuit.—We are not as inactive as our silence would indicate. Sunday a Thanksgiving offering was taken for the Children's Home at High Point. An offering will be taken once each month for the Home. We are having a large attendance at Sunday school each Sunday. When the church is completed, we hope to increase the attendance 50 or 75 per cent.

The members of the Sunday school are taking an interest in the song service. We have a junior choir, consisting of the children in school. They render a selection at the Sunday school hour. We are interested in the children of our community and it is a pleasure to work with them during the week, and to have them present every Sunday.

Work on the new brick church is progressing rapidly. The walls are finished, the covering on, the windows will be put in at an early date, then the ceiling, flooring and plastering will be done.

It is late to mention our camp meeting, but since we had such a great revival, may I say a few words? There were 42 conversions and several additions to the church. A great interest was manifested throughout the entire meeting which continued through two Sundays. Unusually large crowds attended each service, especially the Sunday and evening services. Rev. C. E. Ridge and Uncle John Hulin did the preaching. We appreciate the wonderful messages they delivered; also the inspiring solos by Brother Ridge. There were several visiting ministers and we were glad to have them with us.

The following officers were elected, or rather re-elected, for the year: Stewards, A. H. Reynolds, G. R. Hamilton and I. F. Russell; trustees, J. P. Saunders, J. A. Russell, J. E. McGee, W. L. Atkins and Leach Russell; class leaders, E. H. Reynolds, A. W. Hulin and M. C. Reynolds; superintendent, D. F. Hulin, and assistant, H. F. Beamon.

Pray for us that we may go forward with renewed vigor to accomplish something worth while and not to leave undone or forget the things that we can do.

VELLIE SUGGS, Reporter.

Gibsonville-Whitakers.—I did not choose to leave Gibsonville. Gibsonville did not send me away. But conference assigned me to Whitakers, and I could not come to Whitakers without leaving Gibsonville; hence, I left, I came. I treasure the memory of two happy years' residence in the City of Roses, among as fine people as may be found anywhere. I treasure the memory of the reception given jointly by the boys' and girls' classes just before leaving, this in honor of me as teacher of the boys' class and in honor of the Junior member of my family as a member of the girls' class. I treasure the memory of a reception given us both by the Christian Endeavor Society, and especially do I treasure a C. E. pin, a thing of beauty, given by this society as an expression of appreciation.

Since conference, in the midst of the flurry incident to moving, I have been engaged, without pay except the invisible salary, in the teaching of geography—telling friends and acquaintances where Whitakers is. It's on the map, but it is often easier for the pupil to ask the teacher than to consult the text-book. If there are those who would like to take this course by correspondence, I will say that Whitakers is 12 miles north of Rocky Mount, on the state highway, paralleling the Atlantic Coast Line Railway, known as No. 40. And if No. 10, from the seashore to the mountains, is the "main street" of North Carolina, No. 40 may be known as the "street whilh is lalled Straight." You do not travel extra distance by making right and left curves or up and down curves to reach your destination.

But the town. The name, "Whitakers," has a historic sound in the annals of our church. And you would not go amiss to call it a little gem of the plains. I do not have in mind so much the outward appearance, though there is nothing in the appearance common or unclean. But I have in mind the people and spirit of the community. You may have heard of the hospitality of the East. It is still here and active. When people meeting you on the street stop to make your acquaintance, the postmaster reaching out through the window to shake hands with you, why you just couldn't feel other than at home. Then the religious and moral activities. Sunday school at ten, teaching the men's class, preaching at 11, quarterly conference at two-thirty, Christian Endeavor (three meetings) at six-forty-five, and preaching at seven-thirty. Monday, conducting chapel for grammer grades and high school, attending a high pressure Ladies' Aid at two-thirty. It is entertaining to see how much fun the ladies can have collecting dues and planning a turkey dinner and oyster supper all at the same time. And such faith!—but not without works. It always sounded big to me to hear the Ladies' Aid talk in terms of hundreds of dollars in their work, but this Ladies' Aid talks in terms of thousands. They are going to build a parsonage. Yet mine and I are so comfortably quartered that I would not know but that they have a parsonage had they not told me otherwise. I hope, at least, to keep out of the way and let the folks work.

Tuesday, hunting up folks and attending a district Christian Endeavor convention in Rocky Mount. Wednesday, hunting up more folks and attending a Christian Endeavor prayer meeting with special prayer for the college campaign. Thursday, hunting up more folks and eating the turkey dinner and the oyster supper. Rather I should have said in each instance locating the folks that I may know where they are and that they may know where I am, that I am here; they are not lost that they need to be hunted.

By all the above I feel somewhat initiated.

T. M. JOHNSON.

Pleasant Grove.—Our new pastor, Rev. D. R. Williams, and wife came to us on Friday after conference. Since the parsonage was not quite finished and unfurnished they spent some time in the home of Mr. B. E. Kennedy. The parsonage is now complete and furnished, they have moved in and the church work is starting off nicely.

Brother Williams has certainly been bringing us some splendid sermons. We feel sure he has much in store for us. May we all work together and make this a good year in the Master's vineyard.

It was with sincere regret we gave up our former pastor, Rev. G. L. Reynolds, and family. They have made many friends in the five years they have been with us. We are indeed grateful to them for the splendid work they have done for us, and we wish them continued success in their new field of labor.

The first quarterly conference was held Tuesday night; the reports were good and the conference business was transacted harmoniously.

The young people of the church gave a play at the Hasty High School, "Safety First," and realized the sum of $60.

The workers' conference meets at the church Wednesday evening at 7:30. Plans are to be made for the Christmas program.

MRS. RALPH KENNEDY, Reporter.

Shiloh, Randolph Charge.—Our new pastor, Rev. D. I. Garner, gave us a very interesting and helpful sermon, the subject being, "The Power of Prayer." The congregation seemed well pleased with his splendid discourse. While we regret losing our former pastor, Rev. A. O. Lindley, we feel that we are fortunate in getting Bro. Garner to be with us and we welcome him in our midst. We are confident that he has much in store for us and if we will heed his teachings and co-operate I'm sure we will have a very successful year. We also had Bro. Garrett with us Sunday. He spoke in behalf of the college assessment. Part of this assessment was raised Sunday and Miss Inez Burrow and F. R. Garrett were appointed collectors. Mr. Garrett also gave us some interesting points concerning our Children's Home.

The following officers have been elected for our church for the following year: Trustees, G. L. Whitaker, Eli Garrett, C. U. Burrow, Ed Jordan and E. H. Henderson; stewards, G. L. Whitaker, Charles Hemphill and J. S. Pickett; superintendent, Charles Hemphill; assistant superintendent, F. R. Garrett; collectors for general interest, George Pickett, W. C. Kime and A. L. Kime; class leader, W. P. Pickett; assistant, Mrs. A. L. Kime; organist, Miss Glady Pickett; choir leader, J. H. Hinshaw; reporter, Mrs. W. C. Jones.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely. We took our thank-offering for the Children's Home Sunday and received $13.30.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

MRS. W. C. JONES, Reporter.

Friendship.—Yesterday Mr. Hill preached a splendid sermon. All seemed to enjoy it.

Prayer meeting on Sunday night was fine, the leader being Mrs. J. H. Harkey.

We are very glad to have Mr. and Mrs. Hill back with us. We trust that this year may be one among the best years yet.

Our community has been made very sad; death took from us our beloved friends and neighbors, Misses Martha Harwood and Myrtle Almond. May the great Comforter be with their homes and friends in their sad hours.

We will have our first quarterly meeting Friday night, December 7, at 7 o'clock; let every one that can attend the meeting.

We are planning a Christmas tree. The pastor and choir will render the program on Monday night, December 24.

Best Christmas wishes to the Herald and its readers.

DOROTHY HARKEY, Reporter.

Calvary, Greensboro.—It was my intention to make a report just after conference of the state of things here at Calvary, but I have been so busy doing other things that the time has passed until any review of last year's activities would be almost ancient history. But I shall at least sum up some of the outstanding things. And first, to say that it was, in many respects, the best year in the history of the church. And that is saying a good deal, for the church made wonderful progress during Brother Gerringer's pastorate. And it is only fair to say that the good work done last year rested on the fundation laid during his ministry. "Paul planted, and Apollos watered," holds good here.

It was a year notable for improvements made to the plant. Among them: The organ put in good repair; a piano purchased for the Hut; 150 song-books purchased; a bulletin board erected on the lawn; a telephone installed in the pastor's study, and the study fitted up for his use; a Sunday school register board made; a new window installed in the front of the church; altar cushions provided, and last, but not least, the new parsonage started. This year sees the parsonage well on the way to completion—we are to have possession by the middle of this month—and a number of other improvements in prospect.

Last year we had a net gain of 24. So far this year we have had eight additions. Sunday school attendance last year averaged some 75 more than any previous year, and bids fair to surpass that record this year. Church attendance so far this year has been better than it was last.

All this has been made possible by the fine spirit of co-operation manifested by the membership and the friends of the church. The folks have a mind to work, and they do it cheerfully and willingly. They are in perfect harmony one with another, so the work goes forward without the frictions that so often interfere with the progress of the Kingdom.

We are entering upon the work of the new year with a fine enthusiasm. Every indication is that the church in all its departments will far surpass the record of last year.

Last Tuesday night, week, the membership gave the preacher and his family a reception and pounding. Both were thoroughly enjoyed by those present. They have our grateful thanks for both.

C. W. BATES, Pastor.

Mt. Zion, Pinnacle Charge.—Sickness seems to be taking a very noticeable toll on our Sunday school attendance. We are sorry to report sickness in the homes of Bro. E. S. Stone, O. W. Barber, Ira Fulk, S. T. Kellam, W. E. Jones, O. P. Jones, T. G. Barber and several other homes we know of that have cases of "flu."

Yet we had a very enthusiastic school today. We started a contest that the entire school has a chance to take part in, whereby our finances will be greatly increased we hope.

Starting with the fiirst Sunday in December and closing with the first Sunday in March, there will be given to the teacher of the class that gets the largest offering one copy of "Amos R. Wells' Select Notes" on the Sunday school lessons for 1929, and to the person that makes the largest contribution personally there will be given one copy of Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress."

The first quarterly conference for Pinnacle and Mt. Zion will be held at Pinnacle Saturday before the third Sunday in this month at 1:30 p. m.

Our membership extends congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Jones upon the arrival of a new daughter.

Our Sunday school offered a special prayer in behalf of the sick of our community today.

We are very glad to note the progress that our folks at Spencer—among the other good people, Bro C. R. Jackson. We are very proud to notice his untiring interest. Bro. Jackson is really one of Mt. Zion's boys, anyway. Bro. Jackson, the membership of old Mt. Zion extends to you and yours their very hearty congratulations on the success you and your very efficient co-workers in His vineyard are accomplishing at Spencer. May the Lord continue to add His blessing to your efforts, is our prayer.

We will have a Christmas program, provided the "flu" don't get too strong throughout the membership.

REPORTER.

Kannapolis.—Our Sunday school is growing in number as well as interest. We had 67 present yesterday. Some of our Methodist Protestant people that have not been coming to church have started coming to Sunday school and church, so we feel like we are doing good work. Our attendance was good at the 11 o'clock services, 69 being present.

Pastor Lowdermilk baptized four children, Norman, Lillian, Royce, and Ernest Galloway. He then brought us a good sermon which seemed to put the congregation in good heart, for we know we are a little flock now, but we are looking forward to the time in the near future when this tabernacle will not hold us. Another good crowd gathered at the tabernacle for the night services; 46 present.

We are very sorry Mrs. Lowdermilk could not be with us yesterday, as she was sick. She went to spend Thanksgiving in Greensboro with her mother, and was not able to get back. We all missed her and hope she will soon be well and back with us again, as she has meant so much to us the short time she has been here.

On Monday night, November 19, between 30 and 40 persons, including some of our good old people from Concord church, gave our pastor a pounding. All marched in to the dining room and after loading the table with good things to eat we assembled to the living room, where several good talks were made.

We are planning a great year in Kannapolis and ask the prayers of every reader.

REPORTER.

Draper.—We are glad to have for our pastor for another year Rev. Bro. Totten.

A few of us went to Leaksville today and had prayer meeting.

We held our first quarterly meeting on Saturday, December 1. We had a good meeting; everybody was in a good humor.

S. C. CRAIG, Reporter.

Spencer.—We were very glad to have our pastor, Rev. W. F. Ashburn, with us Sunday. He brought us two very helpful and interesting sermons. We are hoping for a good year in our new church.

We want to thank Mrs. J. J. Cranford, of Orange church, Saxapahaw, for $2.00 for our new church; Rev. and Mrs. Geo. R. Brown for Hymnals, $1.50; Mr. G. B. Harris, Henderson, for Hymnals, $5.00; Rev. T. Glen Madison, Westminster, Md., one Hymnal. Bro. Madison was our pastor two years and we appreciate his gift so much and pray God to bless all who have helped us in this time of need. We thank you.

We are planning to have a Christmas program.

Our appointments are the first and third Sundays, 11 a. m. and 7 p. m.

MRS. A. L. MOORE.

Fairview, Anderson Charge.—We were glad to be returned to this charge. The people are so loyal to their church and pastor. We are glad for the fine spirit of co-operation. May the Lord help us as we enter in upon the new conference year that we may have greater zeal and courage.

Not depending upon our own strength, but fully depending upon the Lord. For the Lord has promised to be with His people, neither forsake nor fail them. On last Wednesday evening at 7:15 there was a Thanksgiving service at Fairview which was enjoyed by all present, and was a very profitable service.

After we were dismissed everybody stood around and talked longer than usual. I am in the habit of talking until nearly every one else leaves, but this time they kept staying. When we went to our car it was loaded with many good things to eat, they had so completely filled it that there was no room for our children, so Bro. Lawrence Naley got them in his car and carried them to the parsonage.

There was more placed in the car Sunday. I will not try to mention all the names of the donors or what they brought. We thank each donor for their gifts and kind remembrance of pastor and family. It is our prayer that these gifts will help us to render more helpful service to our people.

The writer filled his appointments yesterday at Fairview; good congregation at each service. Pastor and family were invited to take dinner with one of Fairview's oldest and most faithful members, Bro. Robert Wyatt. It being his 71st birthday, his children gathered at his home and set him a birthday dinner. May the Lord bless Bro. Wyatt and may he live to see many more happy birthdays.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

G. B. FERREE.

Kannapolis Charge.—On Monday night of November 26th a number of the people of Kannapolis decided to get together. The place of meeting was made by choice to be at the parsonage. In this assemblage were fathers, mothers, sons, daughters, little, old and young. The crowd was a merry crowd, smiling and waiting to be smiled at. Contrary to general rules of visitors, they knocked for entrance at the back doors, which were opened unto them, and straightway they made their own way to the kitchen, not saying by that act that they were either hungry or desired anything to eat, but from the least to the greatest, so far as the writer could see, left a number of packages containing many good things to eat. These articles changed the looks of the kitchen and pantry very much, and also gave the occupants of the parsonage assurance that they would have something good to eat for quite a while. Through the invitation of the writer the people marched to the living room and after talking for a while in a social way, a talk was made by the pastor and others; this then was following by reading and prayer, after which the good people dispersed at leisure.

Mrs. Lowdermilk joins the writer in thanking all, including some of the good people from Concord, who had any part in showering these blessings upon us.

E. G. LOWDERMILK, Pastor.

Moriah.—We are getting things lined up, and hope to make this the best year yet.

Thursday, November 22, the ladies of the church were invited to an all-day sewing party at the parsonage. Each lady took sandwiches and the hostess served coffee. The day was enjoyed and the following articles were made: 14 pair pillow-cases, four sheets, four dresses, one coat, two blouses, two slips. These, together with three bolts of denim, 35 yards of ginghams, three quilts, nine quarts of fruit, one gallon of vinegar and two pints of jelly, some potatoes and pumpkins given by the Junior Missionary Society, were taken to the M. P. Children's Home last Wednesday as our Thanksgiving gift.

Saturday night a chicken supper was served at the church for the benefit of the Missionary Societies. The plates sold for 50 cents, and such a supper! If you readers want to know what you missed, ask someone who ate supper with us. We cleared about $24.

Sunday we had an all-day service with dinner on the grounds. Sunday school and preaching in the morning and at 2:30 p. m. a splendid Thanksgiving program was given by pupils of the M. P. Children's Home. The children did fine and we were very glad to have them. We were glad also to have Mrs. Dixon. She told of some of the things they are trying to do, and some of the great needs of the Home. Our thank-offering amounted to $34.50.

We are planning a very interesting program for Christmas, which will include a Christmas tree, treats for the children and a real live Santa Claus.

Mr. Ed Kirkman continues quite ill. Our hearts go out in sympathy to the wife and children.

MRS. J. S. WOOD, Reporter.

Friendship, Mt. Hermon Circuit.—At our regular eleven o'clock service this morning Bro. Carroll preached a splendid sermon. He announced that the college fund had been raised with a few dollars over, which were turned into the church treasury.

The C. E. Society held its regular meeting this evening at 7 o'clock with Mr. J. A. Sharpe as leader. The attendance was good, several visitors being present. We were glad to have them with us and urge them to come again. Among the visitors was Rev. D. I. Garner, of the Randolph charge. We were delighted to have Mr. Garner and hope that he will visit us again.

The Thanksgiving service, which was held at our church under the auspices of the Woman's Missionary Society on Thanksgiving night, was very inspirational. The playlet, "Tithes and Offerings," should awaken us to a sense of our duty of stewardship in the church. The offering taken was a very liberal one and will be used for the support of the Children's Home at High Point.

The Sunday school training class wil meet with Mr. and Mrs. D. I. Offman, as usual, Friday night. Every one is urged to attend.

The Woman's Home Missionary Society met with Mrs. D. I. Offman on Tuesday evening, November 19. After the business session a delightful social hour was enjoyed during which the hostess served delicious refreshments.

As the Christmas season approaches, let us not forget the real meaning of the holiday. Let us remember that it is celebrated as the birthday of our Savior, who gave even Himself for the world. Let us give gifts to charity as well as to our friends at Christmastide, for Christ Himself said, "Inasmuch as ye did it unto the least of these, my brethren, ye did it unto me."

MAE PATTERSON, Reporter.

West Thomasville Charge.—I have now been to all of the churches on this charge. I find that the people are very much interested in the work of their churches and that they are willing to do their part in this work.

We have put on a campaign at three of the churches to raise the assessment for the college. The assessment has been paid in full at West Thomasville. Mt. Pleasant has pledged or paid its part. The matter was presented at Spring Hill last Sunday. They would have raised all of the amount but bad weather and sickness kept many of the members away. The other churches promise to pay their part at an early date.

The new church at Spring Hill is about ready to be opened for church services. The Sunday school rooms will not be erady to be used for some time. The people at Spring Hill have a church that they should be proud of. It is a brick veneer building. The auditorium will seat a large crowd. The Sunday school rooms have been well planned.

The people at Canaan are planning to begin work on their Sunday school rooms in the near future. These people have a large Sunday school, and the rooms will add much to their work.

T. J. WHITEHEAD, Pastor.

Charlotte Church, Richland Circuit.—Our new pastor, Rev. T. E. Pierce, filled his first appointment at our church December 2 at 11 o'clock. He preached a fine sermon and we are glad to have him and Mrs. Pierce with us. There was a good crowd present and we feel that this is going to be a good year for our church and circuit.

Our Sunday school is doing very well. We took our Thanksgiving offering for the Children's Home, November 25, which amounted to $12. Our offering December 2nd also goes to the Children's Home, amounting to about five dollars.

Miss Sallie McCain is in the hospital at Gastonia; also, Mrs. R. M. Bulla is in the High Point hospital for treatment. We hope they will be able to return home soon.

Our first quarterly conference will be held at Giles Chapel Saturday, December 8, at 7 p. m. Every church is requested to be present. REPORTER.

Concord.—A beautiful and impressive service was held Sunday at the 11 o'clock hour. Mr. Hendry brought a short message on "The Inner Circle," after which the Lord's Supper was observed. A large congregation, including several visitors, was present and communed. A communion service tray and glasses, gift from Mrs. J. R. Helms, and a splendid Sunday school bulletin board from the S. S. Workers' Council were formally presented to the church at this service.

The new church bulletin, which carries the names of all officers for the new year, made its first appearance Sunday and is a great improvement over last year's. The first issue was given by Mr. L. R. Wensil, one of our church leaders, in memory of his mother, who recently passed on.

The Sunday school Thanksgiving offering amounted to $50.00, which goes to the Children's Home.

Mrs. L. M. Williams recently entertained the members of the choir at an oyster supper in the dining room of the Sunday school building. This was an enjoyable occasion, and the choir appreciates Mrs. Williams' generosity.

The Ladies' Aid Society is holding a Christmas meeting tonight (Monday) with Mrs. L. E. Beaver.

On Friday night of this week the Brotherhood supper will be held and all men of the church have been invited.

Miss Ethel Blackwelder, who is teaching in Kernersville, spent the week-end with home-folks here.

The Christian Endeavor Societies and Missionary Societies have recently elected new officers. Mrs. Ernest Litaker heads the missionary work this year, and the writer is general president of the C. E. work. Other officers for the C. E. societies are: Miss Mae Aycock, president Young People's Society; Miss Dora Eliza Bundy, superintendent Intermediate, and Miss Maggie Mann, superintendent Junior Society.

The pastor has moved his office and study into the new Sunday school building and can be found there from 9 till 12 each day.

MRS. D. A. McLAURIN.

Asheboro.—Since I am serving a very conservative people I cannot report any of the big receptions and welcome services which some of the brethren have been reporting; however, I am settled down to hard work and am trying to render the best service possible under the circumstances. Congregations have been fairly good at the preaching services and the Sunday school is doing fairly well. We have held the first quarterly conference and have set up machinery for carrying on the year's work. One thing decided on at the quarterly ronference was to try to keep in closer touch with our out-of-town members this year. We have something like 90 members who live somewhere else and some of them we never hear from, even though we send our communications to them. While at conference this year we heard of two of our members in another town in North Carolina who joined another M. P. church two or three years ago without getting letters or letting us know about it. It does seem that people who join other churches might ask for letters.

Our college assessment has been paid in full and in addition we have furnished severa speakers for other churches in this section. It has been the writer's privilege to hear two good sermons the past two Sunday afternoons while out in the interest of the college assessment. The first was preached by Brother T. A. Williams, on the Randleman charge, and the other by Brother Pierce, on the Richland charge. Both of these new pastors preached with earnestness and made fine impressions.

Our Every Member Canvass was made yesterday afternoon in so far as the Stewards could find the people. It will be completed as early as possible.

Brother James C. Bunch has been elected church treasurer to succeed Brother W. C. Hendricks, who rendered five years of faithful service.

Miss Edna Holder, one of our members, a student at High Point College, was operated on for appendicitis at High Point last week. She is getting along nicely now.

Our quarterly communion service was held yesterday at the morning hour and was well attended. Almost the entire congregation present took part in the service.

Joseph Ross, Jr., who is a student at the University of North Carolina, and Elmer Calicott, who is taking a business course in Greensboro, and Miss Louise Swaim, of Salem College, have been at home during the past few days.

Mrs. N. M. Harrison and Nat Mason, Jr., who have been here with Mrs. J. S. Lewis for several months, have gone to Charlotte to live, where Rev. N. M. Harrison is serving the Charlotte church. We miss them very greatly.

Brother Clarence Lovett, who has been clerk of the court here since the death of his brother, more than a year ago, has accepted a position in High Point, though we are glad to know he will be at home frequently.

Our campaign for subscriptions for the Herald is on this week and will probably run into next week.

Brother W. C. Hammer, member of our church and Congressman from this district, has returned to Washington for the opening of Congress. J. E. PRITCHARD.

Orange Charge.—The first quarterly conference met at Union Grove church Saturday, December 1. Each church was represented. The reports from the different officers were good. Sunday school superintendents' reports were especially good.

The financial report was encouraging. Enough funds were in hand to pay our college assessment ($200) in full. Checks for this amount have been sent to Rev. George R. Brown, treasurer.

Bro. Cicero H. Jones was re-elected secretary of the conference. Bro. W. A. Davies was re-elected financial agent for the charge.

The work seems to be starting off nicely. Thanksgiving services were held at each church on Thanksgiving day. Offerings were received at each place for our Children's Home. These services were held in connection with the Woman's Home Missionary Society program.

Christmas programs are being planned for each church. At these services Christmas offerings will be received. These services will be announced later.

All appointment have been filled to date. Congregations have been good.

We are hoping and praying that this may be our best year on this charge. The outlook for this now is good.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Cid, Denton Charge.—Rev. E. A. Bingham, accompanied by Rev. Ed Hill, of Denton, filled his appointment at Cid yesterday; a good-sized congregation was present. His sermon was fine. We were glad to have Mr. Hill with us. The college issue was presented in a fine way.

We are having a very good Sunday school. Two weeks ago we had 91 present—the largest number we have ever had.

Mrs. A. J. Belk, who has been away for 12 weeks, returned home yesterday. She stayed in a High Point hospital four weeks, then went to her sister, Mrs. Floyd, at Greensboro. She is not able to do much work as yet. She has had the sympathy of her many friends.

We welcome Bro. Bingham back. May we have a prosperous year.

MRS. N. W. LANIER, Reporter.

Davidson Circuit.—We are now in the midst of what appears to us, great, big-hearted folks. They have received us with open hearts and given us every evidence of progressive co-operation.

They are supplying the parsonage with fixtures and our stomachs with eats, and our fireplaces with fuel. Mrs. W. A. Frank, being nearest by, remembers us most frequently.

Hardly a day passes that does not bring to us some substantial token of her kindness.

One strong evidence of their goodness it the fact that we haven't been able to learn they they ever asked for a change of pastors. They stay until they ask to be released and then leave with the people tugging at them to stay longer. They have something good to say about all their pastors. They think and speak of Bro. Hulin, who served them 13 years, as their spiritual father, and indeed he is.

To my mind wonderful opportunities are before this charge, and I will be greatly disappointed if this does not in the near future become one of the best charges in the conference. They have got the stuff in them.

W. D. REED.

Handf, N. C.

P. S.: Now, listen, Davidson. We are going to hold our first quarterly conference at Liberty on Saturday before the third Sunday in December at 1 o'clock. Now, officials, show your stuff; come on and let's make this a jaw-bone-breaker for attendance.

W. D. R.

Lexington, State Street. — The Union Thanksgiving service was held in our church Thursday morning. All denominations in town were well represented and the service, led by Dr. Holmes of the Episcopal church, was uplifting and helpful. The services Sunday were all well attended. The collection from Sunday school was liberal, as is always the case on this occasion each year when all are asked for a special contribution for the Children's Home.

The sermon Sunday morning was appropriate and very helpful and good, the subject being "Cast thy bread upon the waters."

The Missionary Society will meet Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock with Mrs. Bethea at the parsonage.

The entire membership of the church is asked to meet with the workers' council next Sunday night just after the preaching service. Business of importance will be discussed at this time and all are urged to be there.

Haw River-Welch Memorial Tidings.—My stay at Haw River charge was just one year. This is my shortest pastorate, but it was one of the most pleasant. The people were very kind indeed. They responded to our needs and made us comfortable and happy. Even since we have moved, the kindnesses have continued. One of the last favors rendered was on the part of Bro. John Warren, who killed and dressed our hogs and refused a cent of pay. Haw River has some as good people as are to be found anywhere. While developments might be a bit slow, I believe there is as great possibility on this field as is to be found on any country charge in the conference. We leave this work with the greatest reluctance and will always carry in our hearts great love for the good people. God bless them and Bro. Trollinger, their new pastor. I can heartily commend them to the pastor, as well as I can the new pastor to the people. It is to be expected that this and other years of Bro. Trollinger's labors with this good people will be record years.

Immediately after conference the hardships of the moving began and we soon found ourselves among the good people of Welch Memorial. It was at once found that this church is a hive of busy workers, and to know this people is to love them. The two things very evident are that they want to make their church a success in the Kingdam, and that they are anxious to make their pastor and family comfortable. The people began at once to supply the parsonage with the necessary furnishings and among the articles that have arrived are the following: Beautiful parlor suite, beautiful bed room dressers, and good, substantial iron beds with springs, coal heaters, floor coverings, window shades, hall-tree. The brethren who are good at using the brush are now re-painting one of the rooms which is to be used by the "preacher woman." Other improvements are to be made in the near future. But this is not all by any means. Another one of the samples came on the night of November 29. The pastor had called a congregational conference for that night. On good time for the conference a goodly number of people had gathered in front of the church. But at the appointed time when the pastor attempted to call the conference to order he found that the crowd that had assembled in front of the church had disappeared. Presently a messenger informed the pastor that he was wanted at the parsonage. On arriving the pastor found his crowd. These good people had found their way into the dining room and other parts of the building. And, to be sure, they did not go empty-handed. They carried with them great quantities of good things and piled them on the dining table until it overflowed and then the floor was brought into service. This was some pounding—75 pounds of sugar and other things in the same proportion. The pastor tried to thank the people for this kindness, but it was indeed difficult to find words. But he would rather prove his appreciation by actions. He did manage to say, "Come again," and it goes without saying that it was suggested that we strictly follow the Discipline and have the regular congregational conferences each month and that they be as well attended as was the first one.

On last Wednesday evening the children from the Children's Home were with us and rendered a fine Thanksgiving program. We thank you, children, and invite you to come again.

On Thanksgiving morning our Christian Endeavor furnished more than 30 baskets to the city C. E. Union to be distributed to the poor. This was a splendid contribution for this church to this cause.

Christmas programs are now being prepared by our people. There will be three programs rendered in this church during the Christmas season.

At the present time quite a number of our people are shut in because of sickness. We are having quite an epidemic.

A canvass for the Herald is being made this month that the subscriptions might begin with the beginning of the year.

GEO. L. CURRY.

High Point.—Appropriate to the season of Thanksgiving, on last Sunday morning Rev. R. I. Farmer chose as his text Luke 17:16, "And he was a Samaritan," the occasion of the healing of the lepers by Jesus, when one saw that he was cleansed turned back and fell down on his face, glorifying God and giving Him thanks. The speaker said in part that gratitude is a basic virtue; a grateful mind is a great mind. Cicero said that gratitude is the mother of virtue. The sin most often practiced today is ingratitude, which Shakespeare described as "a marble-hearted fiend." "Were not ten cleansed, but where are the nine?" There are not more than one out of ten Americans today who give thanks for their innumerable bounties. Some people say that they have nothing for which to be grateful, but let every one give thanks that he does not have the disease of leprosy. In Chicago a number of years ago the brave Nat Spencer rescued 23 lives when the steamer, "Lady Elgin" was wrecked on Lake Michigan, and it is a fact of history that not one of the 23 returned to thank their rescuer! We fritter away our life until we come to give it up, and then realize its value when it is too late. Let us thank God for life while it is in our possession. When in trouble or sorrow or when a loved one is in imminent danger of death, too many of us promise God that if He will deliver us we will stop sinning and serve Him. What God wants is our daily life of devotion, and He is counting what you and I do now at the present time. Some peope live with nothing of which to boast except distinguished ancestors dead and gone, and they are like the humble potato—the only good part of them is under ground. A good, unselfish mother, who had spent her strength for her family, lay dying; a son patted her on the head and said: "You have been such a wonderful mother to all of us," and she exclaimed, "Why did you never say that before?" This grateful man was a Samaritan and an alien, which fact shows that life's best attitudes often are shown by unexpected persons. The woman at the well was surprised that Jesus would even speak to her because she was of that despised race. Neither position, race, nor place of habitation can determine religious devotion. He who came from the lowly and despised Nazareth was the Redeemer and Savior of the world. What are you giving to the life about you? History records only what we do now, and not what we intended to be or do. It is fine to say to a soldier, "Thank you for being wounded for me," but how much greater it is to be grateful to the one "who was wounded for our transgressions and bruised for our iniquities, and by His stripes we are healed!" It would sweeten our daily family life so much if we always expressed our gratitude and thanks for "all the little, nameless, unremembered acts of kindness and of love." At this service we were delighted to see Rev. S. W. Taylor, president of the Annual Conference, who led in a beautiful prayer.

The evening service was given over to the annual thank-offering of the Woman's Home Missionary Society. A splendid program was presented by 20 boys and girls from the Home, who have been well trained by Miss Cleo Harrell, one of their teachers. This program was composed of choruses, songs, and readings, and was greatly enjoyed by an unusually large and appreciative audience. Dr. Dixon, the new superintendent, made an interesting address, and the offering was taken by the following girls: Misses Rosalie Andrews, Esther Pritchard, Lois Snipes, Dorothy Rankin, Annette Pickens, and Margaret Neese.

This collection amounted to $265.10, which is by far the largest in the history of the society. The members are rejoicing over this unexpected contribution from the church and wish to extend most cordial thanks to each and every one who helped to make this splendid donation possible. Several contributions from people outside of our denomination were received, notably from Dr. J. C. Broomfield, the Central Friends church of High Point through Mr. A. S. Parker, the Deaf and Dumb Sunday school class of Wesley Memorial M. E. church, Mr. A. W. Klemme, and others. It is always more blessed to give than to receive, and may Heaven's richest blessings attend these grateful people, who did not forget the homeless and helpless children at this happy Thanksgiving season.

The Missionary Circles met Monday. Circle No. 1 was made happy by the addition of two new members, Mesdames L. R. Johnston and C. R. Hinshaw, who will, we feel sure, prove worth-while and efficient recruits.

The Brotherhood Supper will be held Thursday evening in the assembly room. These get-together meetings are seasons of good fellowship and social life for the men of the congregation.

We were much pleased to have Dr. and Mrs. S. K. Spahr, of Greensboro, worship with us Sunday morning. Mrs. S. W. Taylor was another welcome visitor at our service.

Dr. R. M. Andrews left Sunday for Fort Worth, Texas, where he is attending a meeting of the Southern Association of Schools and Colleges. He will study the requirements of the association with the idea of making a request for admittance at some time in the future. This is the only standard agency for colleges in the South, and requirements for admittance are very rigid. The greatest obstacle now is lack of sufficient endowment. The College already meets the requirement of scholarship.

The church parsonage on North Main street, erected 24 years ago, has been sold to Messrs. R. T. and C. L. Amos for $20,000. A new site will be purchased and house for the pastor and family will be erected in a short time.

Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Ballard have bought a new home at 805 East Lexington avenue, and have moved into it. They moved their phone number with them, 2638.

Halifax.—We held our regular service at Eden church yesterday at 11 a. m. We had a very good crowd and a good service. The people here are making their plans for the new year, and we are expecting a good year at Eden.

After the service one of the members hinted that they had a little surprise for the pastor, but when we saw it we found that it was not a little surprise. It was one of these big Methodist poundings, just like they always give the pastor on this work. We will not undertake to give names this time, as many of the packages did not have names on them. We want to thank all the members of Eden church for this kind remembrance, and assure you that we appreciate it. We will try to prove it by giving better service this year.

We preached at Union yesterday in the afternoon; had a good crowd and a good service. We preached at Bethesda last night. We had a thanksgiving program here, and the offering at each place yesterday was taken for the Children's Home.

Our quarterly conference will meet at Ringwood church next Friday, December 7. We are expecting our president to be with us at that time.

C. L. SPENCER, Pastor.

Glen Raven.—At Glen Raven church Sunday night we had the pleasure of hearing Rev. R. I. Farmer, of our church in High Point. Bro. Farmer came at the pastor's request and presented the college assessment claim. The speaker proved himslf to be an interesting and forceful speaker. An offering of seven dollars in cash was received, and pledges totaling fifteen dollars were mads.

On Saturday, December 15, at 2 p. m., the first quarterly conference for the charge will convene at Fairview church. President Taylor will be with us and preside. On Sunday following, Bro. Taylor will preach at Glen Raven at 11 a. m.

On next Sunday, December 9, the pastor will meet the regular appointments at Fairview church, morning and at night.

We are finding much work to do over here in the way of pastoral visiting, as well as everything else a pastor is expected to do. A question that rises in my mind just now is this: Is a pastor duty bound to do everything he is expected to do, and be everything he is expected to be? Wm. H. NEESE.

Haw River Mission.—We are very glad to have as our new pastor Rev. M. P. Chambliss. We feel he will be a great help to our church and community, and for him to serve as our pastor means a great gain to us.

He filled his first appointment the fourth Sunday in November. There was a very large number out to hear him, and he gave us two very helpful sermons.

We have changed our Christian Endeavor service from Wednesday to Thursday night, so our pastor can be with us. Last Thursday night instead of having our service at the church we went to Mr. and Mrs. Sandy Hughes' home for our service, all members carrying a Thanksgiving gift to the old couple. Our pastor gave us a very interesting talk.

Our Sunday school is doing nicely. Last year was the best year we have had for years. We are having an average attendance of about 95, and we hope to raise this average in the coming year.

We took our regular Thanksgiving offering last Sunday for the Children's Home, which proved very good.

Pray for us that we may have a prosperous year and do great things for our Master.

Reporters.

West Forsyth.—The pastor completed his round of appointments to the six churches last Sunday. We were at Baltimore at 11 o'clock and at Stony Knoll at 2:30 o'clock. There were large and attentive congregations.

We will be at Union Hill church next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. From there we will hurry back to Pleasant Hill church for the meeting of the first quarterly conference at 2 o'clock. We are looking for a good attendance from all of the churches.

This writer will try to be brief in his reports, but we cannot refrain from mentioning the fact that the good people of Pleasant Hill church have continued their "poundings" of the pastor and family. We thank Brother J. D. Anderson, Brother "Rabbit" Whitman, Mrs. John Hunter, and Mr. Creech for these gifts for our pantry.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

WHERE ARE THEY?

The list below represents the former members of the Children's Home Family of High Point, who have outgrown the Home and have gone out into the world here and there to make their lives count.

These are they whose names are still on the register of First Church, High Point, and whose whereabouts are unknown to pastor and members. Some are doubtless nearby; others are some distance away. Some of the young ladies have changed their names; others are expecting to, perhaps. Some have united with other churches, but have not requested a letter of transfer.

Will the readers of this paper kindly help us to locate them? Are any of them related to you, and you know where they live? Is one or more of them an attendant or member of your church? We are trying to help the boys and girls in the Home now, and desire to help them as much as we can after they leave, especially by endeavoring to keep them in the fold of Christ and mmbers of our churches.

If you will kindly take the time to drop the writer a card or a letter, it will be greatly appreciated.

A REQUEST

I am authorized by the other Methodist Protestant pastors of Greensboro to say that we shall esteem it a privilege if any members of the churches of our denomination having friends or loved ones in any of the hospitals of the day from time to time, will inform us of the same. Just give the name of the person, and the hospital, and we shall get in touch with the case. We are here to serve not only the members of our local churches, but to bring such cheer and comfort as we may to any others whom we are informed of. Write the pastor you wish to have call, or to me. C. W. BATES,
1113 Bellevue St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

—Bro. R. H. Brooks, of Grace church, is a patient in Guilford Sanitarium. He has our sympathy. His friends hope that by virtue of his splendid vitality he will surmount his present troubles and return to his place where he is much missed by many friends and associates.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Bishop

Mrs. Kate Garrett Bishop, for the past three years a resident of Clinton, S. C., died at her home Friday morning, November 16th, following a long illness of heart trouble. While she had been confined to her bed for the past three or four months, her death was rather unexpected and brought profound sorrow to the family and a wide circle of friends and relatives.

Mrs. Bishop was born at Cross Anchor, S. C., in 1873, a daughter of Moses H. and Sallie Taylor Garrett, of that community, where she had lived her entire life, until she with her family moved to Clinton, S. C., about three years ago.

She was a loyal and devoted member of Yarborough Chapel Methodist Protestant Church at Cross Anchor, S. C., and for a long time a subscriber to the Methodist Protestant Herald, which she dearly loved and enjoyed reading. She loved the Sunday school and every organization of the church, never missing one of its services if she was able to attend. She was always liberal to every cause. Mrs. Bishop was for some time treasurer of her Sunday school class and Missionary Society. The ministers were always welcome in her home. The sunshine of her happy smile will be missed by old and young alike. She was a devoted wife and mother and always manifested eager interest in the welfare of others.

We can't understand why these loved ones are taken, but we realize that she will be glad to know that we are reconciled to the will of her Father, who knows best when to call His own home. In realizing this, may we strive to do our duty and live better lives in accord with her examples.

The funeral service was held from Yarborough Chapel Methodist Protestant Church at Cross Anchor, S. C., on Sunday afternoon, November 18th, after which she was laid to rest in the New Hope cemetery of Cross Anchor. Rev. O. M. Abney, of Broad Street M. E. Church, Clinton, S. C., conducted the service, assisted by Rev. Mr. Touchberry, of Padgett's Creek Baptist Church, Cross Keys, S. C. A large number of friends and relatives gathered to pay tribute to the passing of Mrs. Bishop, and many beautiful floral offerings were laid on her grave as a token of the high esteem in which she was held.

She is survived by her husband, J. E. Bishop, and the following children: Mrs. T. H. Stevens, of Cross Keys, S. C.; Mrs. W. C. Young, of Asheville, N. C.; A. N. Bishop, of Enoree, S. C.; Mrs. C. N. Mills and Miss Frances Bishop, of Clinton, S. C., and six grandchildren.

Cates

On Saturday, the 24th of November, death claimed one of Concord's oldest members, Mrs. Hester Holt Cates.

Mrs. Cates was 85 years of age. She leaves her husband, Mr. G. W. Cates, of Graham, N. C., and the following children: Mrs. Minnie Zachary, High Point, N. C.; Mrs. George Staley, Liberty, N. C.; Mrs. Ida Lewis, Graham, N. C., and Mr. Lee Cates, of California, and a number of grandchildren and great-grandchildren to mourn their loss.

She was laid to rest at Concord on Monday, November 26. Rev. H. L. Isley, a former pastor, conducted the funeral. The pallbearers were her grandsons, G. R., Everette, Lee, and Howard Zachary, Leslie Lewis and Elbert Staley. The flower girls were her granddaughters.

We extend to the husband and children our sympathy.

A NEIGHBOR.

Crotts

Lee O. Crotts was born December 8, 1911, and died November 20, 1928. He was recovering from a serious operation and his parents thought that he was happy. But his troubles were too heavy and in an hour of loneliness he passed to the great beyond.

Lee was a quiet boy and was loved by all who knew him. He leaves his parents, several brothers and sisters and a host of friends to mourn their loss.

The funeral service was held at Mount Pleasant church on November 23, conducted by the pastor of his parents, assisted by Rev. J. W. Braxton, pastor of Mocksville charge.

T. J. WHITEHEAD.

Fulk

Riley Franklin Fulk died October 17, 1928, aged 79 years and 17 days.

On August 1, 1872, he was united in marriage to Mary Ann Barr. To this union were born four sons and three daughters, one son and one daughter preceding him to the great beyond.

He joined the Methodist Protestant church at Mt. Zion in his late middle age and lived a very consistent member until he was called home. We had the privilege of attending a reunion of relatives and friends at his home the fifth Sunday in September in honor of his 79th birthday. It was a very enjoyable occasion, and the vast crowd gave evidence of the high esteem in which he was held; he seemed to enjoy the day, and passed it very pleasantly with his friends and no doubt thought as little of the early passing as many of the rest of us. This again brings to our minds the reality of the quotation: "Be ye also ready, for in an hour when ye think not the Son of man cometh."

The end came with him without any lingering illness or suffering, seemingly in answer to his request, as he had been talking with friends until late in the night and expressed his desire to go suddenly and without a struggle. Next morning he was found dead in bed and apparently had passed away just as he wished. This should be one comfort to us, that he was granted his last request.

He will be greatly missed in his church, home and community, but, most of all, in his home, where he has so faithfully filled his place so many years. Home will never be the same without him, but Heaven, no doubt, will seem nearer and dearer to his loved ones, remembering that they have one more there waiting and watching for them.

May we all strive to live such lives that we may go some day and join our loved ones in that happy place, where there will be no more sorrow, sickness, pain, or death, but where all is peace and joy.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Bro. W. D. Reed, after which the remains were laid to rest in Mt. Zion cemetery in the presence of a large number of sorrowing friends.

The bereaved have our deepest sympathy.

A. L. HUNTER.

Bradshaw

Jesse G. Bradshaw was born near Salem Methodist Protestant church about 42 years ago. He was the son of the late James T. Bradshaw and Nellie Thompson Bradshaw. He was a descendant of the fifth generation of Thomas Thompson, who ran away from his home in England, was hidden in a barrel by friends, put on a vessel sailing for America. He stopped in the Pennsylvania colony, came to North Carolina, settled at what is now Saxapahaw about the middle of the 18th century.

Jesse professed religion and joined Salem M. P. church while in his teens. He was an efficient steward in his church for a number of years. About 1910 he was married to Miss Pattie Clendenin, of Mount Hermon section of Alamance County. "Jess" was a successful farmer while on his farm near Salem. About 1913 he accepted a position as superintendent of Lake Latham Farm, Mebane, N. C., where he remained for several years. Then he went to Greensboro and worked for the Latham Real Estate Company for some time; thence to Moore's Springs, Stokes County; was there about seven years.

On the 17th day of November he was stricken with paralysis, was rushed to a Winston-Salem hospital. Tuesday morning, November 20, his soul passed into the great beyond to await the resurrection morn.

He leaves a devoted wife, one brother, Charles W. Bradshaw, two sisters, Mrs. W. J. Jennings, Gibsonville, N. C., and Mrs. Vitus Holt, Burlington, N. C.; a number of nieces and nephews, besides many friends and relatives.

His funeral was conducted Wednesday evening at 4 o'clock from the home of his brother, C. W. Bradshaw, by Rev. R. Murphy Williams. Interment was in Green Hill Cemetery, Greensboro.

A large number of friends and relatives were present. Pallbearers were of his friends of Winston-Salem and Danbury, N. C. The floral offerings were beautiful, and were borne by his nieces and nephews.

Let us heed the admonition: "Be ye also ready, for at such a time as ye think not the Son of man cometh."

J. NEWLIN THOMPSON.

Graham, N. C.

Moore

Rebecca J. Moore died November 27, 1928. Funeral services were conducted at Chestnut Ridge church November 28 by the writer, assisted by Rev. M. Ivey Crutchfield.

Sister Moore lived to be 75 years of age. She had been a member of Chestnut Ridge church for more than 50 years. She was always faithful and true. A good woman is gone.

May God comfort the bereaved ones, especially her brother, W. A. Moore, with whom she lived and who is now left alone.

Johnson, $2.00; Haw River Circuit, $24.15.

I have a list the pastor sent me in which he thought that he had reported what part of this belonged to each church, but as there was $6.00 undesignated I will just credit the $24.15 to Haw River Circuit and each church can be credited on my list later.

These dear people from Haw River also sent us 21 chickens, one bag of turnips, two bags of potatoes, one-half side of meat, and one box of boys' clothing from Fair Grove; 18 chickens, one box of boys' clothing and two bushels of sweet potatoes from Midway; 11 chickens, 40 pounds sugar, canned fruit, clothing for boys and girls, 14 brooms and one quilt from Brown Summit; 11 chickens, two bags of potatoes, one bag of corn, canned fruit, 48 pounds flour, and three gallons sorghum from Friendship; and 17 chickens, one pair blankets and five pounds sugar from Mizpah. All this besides the cash reported above.

From Shiloh, Randolph, we have received 15 chickens; and from Melangthan Lutheran church, $1.00 from the pastor's wife, Mrs. Lyerly, and three chickens from three of their lady members, and one chicken from one of the M. E. ladies of the same community.

Mr. C. T. Dixon, Winston-Salem, about $25 worth of shrubbery.

Dr. A. A. York, High Point, bed sheets and pillow-cases.

Mount Carmel church, Forsyth, two bushels wheat, pumpkins, canned fruit, and potatoes.

Hickory Ridge, Forsyth, 14 chickens, one bag sweet potatoes, apples, canned fruit and turnips.

Moriah, five bushels potatoes, pumpkins; Junior Missionary Society, Moriah, canned fruit and jellies.

Welch Memorial, canned fruit, one quilt, pillow-cases and sheet, coffee, post toasties, prunes and jelly.

Liberty, Mrs. J. W. Curtis, canned peaches, and Mr. J. W. Curtis, for the community, six chickens and six bed quilts, besides six quilts already reported.

Ray Street School, High Point, toys for the children, 19 boxes cereals, 60 cans fruit, 28 preserves and jellies, four pounds rice, two boxes macaroni, two boxes cocoanut, two boxes preserves, one box cocoa, three bushels potatoes, three packages apples and oranges.

Driver of Bus No. 37, High Point to Greensboro, one bushel applies and two packages chewing gum. "No. 37" is a great friend of our children.

Lebanon Home Missionary Society and Philathea class, material for 37 dresses, nine dresses ready made, two pair bloomers, two pair pantaloons, one shirt, one blanket, remnants for 13 dresses, seven yards nutty twill, two and one-half boxes thread, 10 pair salt and pepper shakers, one sheet, one pair pillow-cases, four gowns, two towels, 36 yards sheeting.

Siler City, Woman's Auxiliary, one dozen tablets, one dozen pencils, eight boxes of Skiddoo, two dolls, two toy automobiles, four towels, sheeting, and material for several dresses.

Dulins, Mocksville, 20 pounds sugar, canned fruit, peas and beans and 40 cents in money.

Rehoboth, Creswell, a large bag of peanuts and a box of pecans.

Moriah, through a friend, a large bolt of blue denim.

Mineola Manufacturing Company, Gibsonville, a bundle of outing.

Virginia Cotton Mills, Swepsonsville, a bundle of blue shirting.

Thomasville, fruit and two dresses.

Ladies' Aid Society, Enfield, 6 pair pillow-cases and 18 towels.

Mrs. L. N. Vanderwort, Morgantown, W. Va., a box of clothing for boys and girls.

Mrs. J. S. Lewis, of Asheboro, sent us $500 as a bequest from the J. S. Lewis estate. This we are to be permitted to use for a while until our friends help us over the "Hill Difficulty," then this amount will go to Capt. A. M. Rankin, treasurer of the building fund. We are thankful that Bro. Lewis thus remembered the Home.

Now, friends, this is a rather lengthy report this week, but it is the first financial report for three weeks, and our friends are being good to us because they are just thankful to God for His blessings upon them and they are also thankful that there is such a Home through which they may give expression to their gratitude to God.

We have tried to report every item, and wish we could give a longer write-up and mention names in each case. But had we done that this time we could have filled at least two pages in the Herald. It is just fine to get these cheering letters and your good gifts, and then be able to look back into the homes and churches out of which they have come and remember nearly every one of you personally, and then just to breathe a "God bless you" right up to our heavenly Father. If any package has been overlooked, please let us know and we will make amends.

Please Be Clear

It is easy for you to state just what church or what charge you wish given credit. Be perfectly clear, and then records will be clear.

Good News

For a long time Miss Millie Bowman, of sainted memory, gave Bibles in the Home. A few days ago I was planning to ask through the Herald for a volunteer for that work when here came a letter in the mails saying: "Please reserve for me the privilege of giving Bibles when needed in the Home. I am afraid someone will get ahead of me in this." (Signed) Mrs. J. S. Williams.

We thank Mrs. Williams, and we shall be glad for you to share some definite work about the Home. Write us and we will assign you a definite task.

Our Big Love Home

It was Mrs. Maier who gave our Home that name. We like it, and our big hearts in this Love Home take in all of you, and we crave your love and sympathy and co-operation. And we are sure we have it and will continue to have it.

The law of our Home is "The Good of the Child."

Several checks are already in for next week's report.

Faithfully yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON.

POSTPONED

The bazaar and chicken supper has been postponed indefinitely because of sickness.

DR. FRANK CRANE IS DEAD

Dr. Frank Crane, noted American writer, whose short essays appear in hundreds of newspapers in the United States, died at Nice, France, November 6. He was 67 years old. Dr. Crane was the author of many books. Some of them are: "The Religion of Tomorrow," "Footnotes to Life," "Four Hundred Four-Minute Essays," "Adventures in Common Sense." In speaking of his writing, Dr. Crane once said:

"I always try to write constructively, to write about the things I like in a book I have read or a play I have seen. I like to write about the good things that appeal to me, not to dwell on and criticize the bad. I am essentially an optimist, and I like to think of my work as being the business of appreciating people. There is good in every one and it will come to the surface."—Current Events.

BANK DEPOSITS BREAK RECORD

Total deposits of all the banks of the United States now amount to nearly 57 billion dollars, the highest figure ever reached in American history. All the banks have total resources of nearly sixty-nine and one-half billion dollars. The total number of banks in this country is 26,699. Of that total, 18,965 are State banks and 7,734 are National banks.—Current Events.

GOSSIP!

Oh, have you not heard?
Sh! Mum is the word;
It's gossip, you know,
So let us go slow.
Is anyone near?
Can anyone hear?
Now don't breathe a word
The thing sounds absurd!
I know you will doubt
When the story is out.
Of course you will laugh
And call it mere chaff.
But don't tell a soul,
First get the news whole.
I'm last to defame
Another's good name;
All gossip and lies
I loathe and despise.
Yet what can one do
When rumor seems true?
I'm sure Mrs. Smith
Will say it's a myth,
And Jones will taboo
The thing as untrue.
You see it's like this—
The morsel don't miss!—
Do listen! Be still!
Wait a moment until—
Sh! Now not a word,—
I don't want to be heard—
Be patient, I pray,
I know what you'll say,—
Just lend me your ear
And I'll whisper, my dear:—
Our neighbor, the lord,
Has bought a new Ford!
—Grenville Kleiser.

—Bro. Willis Booth was called out of bed last Sunday morning about 1:30 by the cries of a party caught under an overturned auto in front of his house. It was a party of negroes who had been moving at such a high speed that the car could not execute the curve but ran up an embankment and turned over. Bro. Booth and his neighbor, Mr. Apple, went to the rescue of the imprisoned party and by strenuous effort at length succeeded in releasing all the party. None seemed seriously hurt, though Bro. Booth received a baptism of blood to the great detriment of a suit of clothes.

WANTED

We are needing four good young cows at the Children's Home—good milkers. What community will give us one or sell us one cheap? Cows must be healthy or the health officer would condemn them. We must know soon. Write or phone.

A Greater Than Jesus Is Here

This title shocks and offends you, and rightly. But wait till you see what it means. We hasten to explain. It means that those who think themselves greater than Jesus are here. We know it by their writings in books and magazines. They have climbed up to a lofty altitude from which they look down upon Jesus. He did pretty well for his day, but he did not know exactly what he was trying to do, did not know what he could do, and he frequently changed his mind. He first thought he would found an earthly kingdom, but he found the world was not ready for it, so he changed his program and contented himself with a future heavenly kingdom, with perhaps a province upon the earth. He was no organizer like his great critics would be in such an enterprise. He didn't even know very well how to make disciples or how to treat them and train them. He did the best a man of his limited intelligence could do with the meager resources he had and he deserves credit for his achievements, but how much greater things and better things he might have done if he had only had the advice of these later-day critics.

What a spectacle such men make! Unworthy to stoop down and unloose the shoes of Jesus, they climb up on their pinnacle of pride and try to belittle Him who was so great that the world of rational men still regards Him as higher and greater than man.

Some Christmas Problems

We do not realize how many friends we have until Christmas approaches and we consider those we would like to make happy with a Christmas present. To some of us this is like the problem that confronted the disciples in the desert—how to make five loaves and two fishes suffice for a multitude. The only solution they could see was for the multitude to go and buy for themselves. But there was another solution, as the sequel showed. How can we make eight dimes, five nickels, and four pennies purchase presents for all our friends? It looks impossible. There would not be enough to make one cent for each. The solution is found only when we discover that there is something more valuable than money or what money will buy which we can give to our friends. Some of the finest expressions of the Christmas spirit do not involve the expenditure of a single penny. On the other hand, large and costly gifts may be made and the true Christmas spirit not be felt by either giver or receiver. The main problem is the development of the true Christmas spirit in our own breasts. This spirit will find some way to express itself and make itself felt. What is the true Christmas spirit? It is the spirit of Christ, the spirit of love and kindliness. How is this spirit to be caught? By being with Christ and learning of Him. By being with Christian people and learning of them. The limitation of our means may be overcome in large measure by a boundless love. Somehow we can do good to all the people we desire to help. If we have not silver and gold, such as we have we can give unto them, and our gifts may cause them to leap for joy more than would the largest gifts of money. This problem can be solved: somehow we can give to as many as we choose.

There is another problem that perplexes those who have unlimited means to purchase what they please. Their problem is how to choose an appropriate gift. There is conflicting advice regarding the difficulty. Some say, send a check and let the receiver decide what the present shall be. Others say, no, this is too easy. It is proper to give thought to the matter, give your mind and heart as well as your money. That leaves you up in the air. You do not know what to do. Well, that is not so unfortunate a situation as it might be. It means that you must consider the matter and try to decide properly. If you cannot do better, you will not go amiss in sending the coin of the realm and explaining your failure to do better.

Christmas brings other and more serious problems. It calls for giving, Christ-like giving, outside the circle of our personal friendships. Christmas will come in vain to us if it does not leave us more like Christ.

If There Were No Pain

Ingersoll would have made this world painless, if he could. So he said, but he probably would have changed his mind if he had considered the consequences. Nothing else could take the place of pain. Pain is painful because it must be to answer its purposes. Pain serves as a warning. It lifts up its voice to prevent destruction or serious injury. Pain saves our hands from being burned off. Pain stays the knife that would seriously wound us. In ten thousand ways pain protects our bodies. Without pain to warn us we would be ground to a pulp or burned to ashes or drowned in the water. Pain was meant to be not our destruction but our salvation. It usually is. We owe to pain we know not how many escapes from death. God could not make us "fool-proof." So He gave us pain. In love and mercy He gave us pain.

We believe the deepest investigation of the subject will disclose the fact that pain makes an important contribution to our moral and spiritual development. If people could not feel pain, we could not make them suffer, and they could not make us suffer.

Pain has an essential place in the present order of the world. It is here by will of the infinitely wise and good Creator and must perform a beneficent service. But John tells us that the present order will pass away and a new order will come in which there will be no more pain. Pain therefore is temporary in its purpose. There is possible escape from it—for the good and the obedient sons of men. But in almost the same breath he tells us that there will be the lake of fire

ORDINATION SERMON

(By Rev. J. A. Burgess at the late Winston Conference)

John 3:16: "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

Love is of God. Love is God, and God is love personalized. Love is characterized negatively by the absence of haughtiness, cruelty and license. Love is characterized positively by the presence of patience, kindness, generosity, courtesy and self-control. Love never seeks its own. Love loses sight of itself in seeking the good of its object for its object's sake. By the love of man for man we mean that within man which leads him to lose sight of himself in seeking the good of his fellow-man for his fellow-man's sake. Such was the love which existed between David and Jonathan. Each lost sight of himself in seeking the good of the other for the other's sake. By the love of man for God we mean that within man which leads him to strive with all his might to possess in his own soul all those moral qualities which are inherent in the divine nature for the glory of God. By the love of God for man we mean that within God which leads him to lose sight of himself in seeking the good of man for man's sake.

Our appreciation of love is always in proportion to the dignity of the one who loves us. There are persons of whom we do not care to have it said that they love us. If we should be told that we are loved by some noted criminal we would perhaps resent the statement. If we should be told that we are loved by some person of extreme poverty and illiteracy we would perhaps receive the statement with indifference. If we should be told that we are loved by the most wealthy, cultured and influential citizen of the state we would be delighted. If we should be told that we are loved by the wealthiest and most refined and worthwhile citizen of the world our joy would be unbounded. Now, in our text we are told that God loves the world. Since we have the message that God loves the world we are interested to know who God is, and what is his character and station in life. The story is told that when a great body of ministers had met for the purpose of formulating a worthy definition of God and found themselves unequal to the task they turned aside to pray for divine guidance. The youngest of their number, a deeply spiritual man, was called upon to lead the prayer. In his opening sentence he said: "O thou who art a Spirit infinite, eternal and unchangeable in thy being, wisdom, power, holiness, goodness and truth." The ideas comprehended in these words became the substance of the new definition. Certainly no higher definition has ever been formulated. God is spirit and personal. God is unchanging and unchangeable in character, "the same yesterday, today and forever." He is the one eternal self-existent being. He is sole creator and preserver. He is the supreme one. He holds in their places the stars and the planets. He numbers the hairs of our heads. He holds in his grasp the destiny of men and of nations. He clothes the lily and he feeds the birds. He is high above us and yet he is ever present with us. It is impossible for us to escape from his authority or hide from his presence. The wealth of the universe is his, material and spiritual. The earth with its coal, its iron, its silver, its gold and its diamonds is his. The earth with its soil, its plants, its flowers and its trees is his. The earth with its fish, its beasts and its birds is his. The world with its history, its poetry, its philosophy and its science is his. The world with its hopes and its fears is his. The world with its moral wealth and its religious wealth is his. There is no wealth material or spiritual but that he has created and sustains and possesses. He is infinitely rich within himself. All virtue has its origin in him. Knowledge, wisdom, power and authroity flow out from him. Love, mercy, truth and goodness are inherent in his nature. Such is the character and station in life of the being who loves this world. The world that God loves is not this material world. It is not this world of mountains, hills, valleys, plains, rivers and oceans. It is not this world of coal, iron, silver, gold and diamonds. It is not this world of flowers, plants and trees. Love is of a person and it always flows to that which is personal. The world that God loves is this personal world. It is this remembering, judging, willing, imagining, thinking world. It is this world of men and women and boys and girls. It is this world of humanity. And there is something astonishing about this. And the more we think about it the more astonishing it becomes. It is not astonishing for parents to love dutiful sons and daughters—sons and daughters that are making good, sons and daughters that are lovable and loving, sons and daughters that honor their parents. Such is perfectly natural. It would be astonishing if it were not so. But the world that God loves is not made up of dutiful sons and daughters. It is not made up of sons and daughters that are lovable and loving. It is not made up of sons and daughters that are making good. It is not made up of sons and daughters that bear his image and manifest his glory. The world that God loves is this lost world. It is this depraved world. It is this enslaved world. It is this ignorant world. It is this bankrupt world. It is this world that is full of atheism, infidelity and agnosticism. It is this world that is full of hatred and cruelty and slander and selfishness and lust. It is this world that hates God and is in a state of rebellion against God and is running away from God and which, if it were possible, would dethrone God and wreck the moral universe. That God should lose sight of himself in seeking the good of such a world is astonishing beyond measure. This is no passing interest which he has in us, but a ceaseless outgoing unto us of his whole moral self for the sole purpose of doing us good. It is not a part of this world that he thus loves. It is the world. It is the whole world. It is every nation. It is every race. It is all mankind. This love is not only all embracing, but it takes cognizance of the individual. It singles him out and flows to him separate and apart from the multitude. These are facts which ought to fill us with an unbounded gratitude and an inexpressible joy. Here is news of such transcendent value that it is utterly impossible to accept it as true except upon the most unanswerable evidence. And we rejoice in the fact that it is not necessary to write the love of God with a question mark. The first channel through which this evidence comes to us is the great book of nature. The older I grow and the more extended is my experience, the more am I convinced that nature when rightly studied and rightly understood and rightly used holds in store for us nothing but that which is good. And that which always blesses can suggest nothing but friendship, and friendship can originate nowhere but in love. In this way we may read the love of God in the warmth and light of the sun, in the sublimity of the mountains, in the beauty of the valleys and the plains, in the majesty of the rivers and the grandeur of the oceans, in the beauty and fragrance of the flowers and the songs of the birds. All nature is but a marvelous display of divine love.

Another channel through which this evidence comes to us is the Bible. Love is the cord that runs through this book and binds all of its parts together. You will find it in the first book and you will find it in all the succeeding books. In the book of Genesis we read that God made man in his image. This can be interpreted in nothing but terms of love. Then we read that God placed him in a beautiful garden in which there grew every tree bearing fruit fit for food and pleasant to the eye to look upon and in the midst of the garden the tree of life—an environment which supplied perfectly his every physical, mental, moral and religious need. This we can interpret in nothing but terms of love. And then we read that when man had disqualified himself to remain there God placed at the east of the garden a flaming sword which turned every way to keep the tree of life lest man should put forth his hand, and take and eat of the fruit of the tree of life and live forever. This is not to be interpreted in terms of hatred, or revenge, or punishment, but in terms of love; for we must remember that even death is infinitely to be preferred to an eternal conscious existence in separation from God and in the grip of sin. Evidence of this love is seen in the ten commandments, in the songs of Israel, in those wonderful prophetic messages and it is written upon every page of the New Testament.

But the supreme evidence of God's love is not to be found in nature, nor in the Bible as God's book of revelation. It is not to be found in what God has done in the great field of his creative acts, nor in what he is now doing in his continuous work of preservation. It is not written: God so loved the world that he performed some great creative act, but God so loved the world that he gave. When we give an object we cease to possess it. We cease to control it. We turn away from it. We forsake it. God so loved the world that he ceased to possess, he ceased to control, he turned away from, he forsook an object. That was the most precious object in all his universe. If God had given for us all the coal, the iron, the silver, the gold and the diamonds of his creation that would have been a great evidence of his love. If God had given for us a thousand blazing stars and a million revolving planets, that would have been a wonderful evidence of his love. If God had given for us ten thousand holy angels to live among us and suffer for us and die for us, that would have been a marvelous evidence of his love. But nothing is said of the gift of coal and iron and silver and gold and diamonds. Nothing is said of the gift of stars and planets. Nothing is said of the gift of holy angels. But God so loved the world that he gave his Son. Now I have five children, and so far as I know I love them equally. If it were possible, and you were to come to me and lay at my feet all the wealth of this state—its mineral wealth, its soil wealth, its wealth of water power, its wealth of flowers and plants and shrubbery, its forest wealth, its social wealth, its industrial and economical wealth, its intellectual wealth, its historical wealth and its wealth of government—the entire wealth of this state, and say, here, take it in exchange for the life of one of your children, and if to this you should add the entire wealth of this southland of ours, and the entire wealth of this great country, and then the entire wealth of this continent, and then the entire wealth of South America, and then the entire wealth of Europe, and then of Asia, and then of Africa, and then of Australia, and then of the islands of the sea, I would not only refuse the oqer, but with all the energy of my soul I would resent it. But God did not have five children. In all eternity God has begotten but one son. God had an only begotten son. Into this son God had poured all his knowledge, all his wisdom, all his power, all his authority, all his love, all his mercy, all his holiness, all his goodness, all his greatness. Into this son God had emptied himself, for, in him dwelleth all the fullness of the God-head bodily. When God gave this son he had nothing left. We would do no violence to this text if we should make it to read: God so loved the world that he gave himself that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. God did not give his son to make a pleasure trip down here. God did not give his son to come down here and investigate conditions and report back. God gave his son to take upon himself the form and limitations and inconveniences of man. God gave his son to live among us, to labor, to be tired, to be hungry, to be thirsty, to be slandered, to be persecuted, to be buffeted, to be spat upon, to be crowned with thorns, to be scourged, to shed his blood, to be nailed to the cross, to bear our sins in his own body on the tree, to pour out his very life for us. And when we stand before Calvary and look upon the bruised, bleeding, suffering and dying Son of God and hear his agonizing cry, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" we are standing in the supreme evidence of God's love.

This brings us to a most interesting question. What is the explanation of this lavish of love? Why does God love? God loves for the same reason that sparks fly upwards. God loves for the same reason that water seeks its level. God loves for the same reason that the sun radiates heat and light. Sparks have no will in the matter of ascending. They simply obey a law under which they exist. Water has no will in the matter of seeking its level. It can do no otherwise. The sun has no will in the matter of radiating heat and light. It simply obeys the law of its own existence. It must radiate heat and light to be the sun. If the sun were to cease to radiate heat and light it would cease to be the sun. Neither does God have any will in the matter of loving but the will to love. It is the very nature of God to love. Love is the very essence of God and God is the very essence of love. You can never define love but in terms of God and you can never define God but in terms of love. If God were to cease to love he would cease to be God and the universe would be godless. But we must not think of this love as blind, or unintelligent. It is never misdirected. It never makes a mistake. It flows out from the supreme intelligence. And this leads us to ask, why does God love us? There can be but one answer. He loves us because we are worth loving. I do not mean by this to say that we possess any actual value in the sight of God. Such a statement would not be true. In all the realms of God there is no place where he can use a world in the grip of sin. Such a world possesses and can possess no actual value in God's sight. But God looks down through the atheism and infidelity and agnosticism and hatred and lust and falsehood and cruelty and license and ignorance and poverty and slavery of this world and sees a potential value. Not because of what we are does God love us, but because of what he sees he can make of us through an inflow of his grace. He sees that in this way he can break the power of sin and wash away our filth and give us newness of life and lift us up into a state of health and strength and efficiency. This is our encouragement. It differs not to what depths of sin the soul may have sunk, if there is still an open avenue through which

Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples.—John 15:8.

"The Care of All the Churches"

This is our constant concern, whether we are in the field among the churches or at home. "Without ceasing I make mention of you always in my prayers," and my thought and my effort continually is for an increasing measure of success in the God-given work that we are all trying to do. Pastors will feel free, of course, to call on us for service, and always it will be our pleasure to respond in the full measure of our time and strength. However, the major part of the "care of the churches" is of necessity with the pastors. They are the shepherds, and we look to them to care for the flock. By their wise leading, their zeal, and their unfailing faithfulness, we shall go forward in happiness and to enlarging measures of service.

Halifax

We were with this charge, in their quarterly conference, December 7. The conference was held at Ringwood, and all churches were represented but one. Stewards reported $80.50 paid to date on pastor's salary. The Sunday schools of the charge are going forward hopefully with their work. Two contribute regularly to the Children's Home. We were glad to hear a prominent member of one of these schools say that the reaction was helpful to his school. The other schools were urged to adopt this practice. The college assessment and the other budgets were ordered apportioned to the different churches. An effort will be made to raise the college budget in full now. The pastor urged in his report that the charge press the finances in the early part of the year, and that the every member canvass be made at all of the churches. The spirit of the conference was good, and the charge appears to be starting hopefully upon the work of the new year. Pastor Spencer is in his fifth year on this field. He has the confidence and the co-operation of his people. He will work zealously, wisely and steadfastly along all lines to make this a year of progress for his charge.

Why Not

Saturday and Sunday, December 8-9, were given to this work. On Saturday we were at Love Joy, preaching at 11 a. m. and holding the quarterly conference in the afternoon. The conference was well attended, all churches being represented but one. Reports showed only small amount paid to date on pastor's salary. About $60 was reported raised on college assessment. The Sunday schools are running with usual interest, and the general outlook for the work is hopeful. We found a new brick veneered church building in process of construction at Love Joy. This they hope to complete in the near future. The budgets were ordered apportioned to the various churches on the percentage basis of pastor's salary. Also the assessment for college, superannuates, and Gratitude Gift. The college assessment will be pressed, with the hope of raising the full amount—$170.

On Sunday at 11 a. m. we preached again at Love Joy to a large and appreciative congregation. At this service $28.50 was subscribed to the college assessment, and nearly all was paid in. At 3 p. m. we were at Macedonia, preaching to a small but attentive group. Here $10, the full assessment on this church for college, was padi. This gives the charge about $100 paid to date for college. In the evening it was our privilege to preach at Seagrove. There is pronounced sentiment among our people in and near Seagrove for a church at that place. There does seem to be an opportunity there for us, and we felt inclined to give encouragement to the movement. The matter was left open for one month for prayer, and to determine how many persons may be relied upon to become charter members. We hope that a wise decision may be reached, and we shall pray to that end. Pastor Trogdon is entering hopefully upon the work of the new year. He is liked by his people, and his opportunities for service seem boundless. He seems strongly inclined to move to the parsonage. This would please his people, and no doubt be a decided advantage to him in his work.

We enjoyed our visit to the fields, and our interest and prayers will continue with them. We are indebted to every one who gave us entertainment and contributed to our comfort on this trip.

On December 11 we were called to Burlington to assist in the funeral of Bro. G. A. Cartner, a man whom we received into the church during our pastorate there, and who apparently was in perfect health when we left there a year ago. Our tender sympathies are extended to the stricken family.

Tuesday night, December 11, we were privileged, through the courtesy of Mrs. W. S. Jones, to be in the meeting of the W. H. M. S. of Grace Church. The meeting was held in the commodious home of the Joneses, on West Market Street, and is a fixed part of the yearly program of the society, we understand. We enjoyed being there, and were much pleased and helped by the program and the spirit of the meeting. By unanimous and hearty assent the meeting adopted the unification program of the church, and officers were elected for the new organization. This splendid spirit of conformity is highly commendable. We hope that it may be contagious.

That Christmas Present

We are waiting for your order. You know—that Centennial Memorial Book that we spoke of just recently. Nothing more suitable for a Christmas present. Come on, now ,with your order. We have two, and need thirty-one more. The price is $2.00 and postage. Hurry! Christmas is nearly here.

Children's Home

We are pleased with the long list of contributors appearing in last week's HERALD. This is an indication of a strong interest throughout the conference in the Home. And we are pleased to note several contributions from other conferences, too. The Children's Home is a General Conference institution, and it is encouraging to have it receive general support. Superintendent Dixon and his helpers are grateful for every expression of interest, and they will make every dollar given to the Home count one hundred per cent for the children who are being cared for there. Keep on keeping faith with the Children's Home.

Hymnals for Spencer

Dr. McCulloch's call through the HERALD is being heard. Several books have been provided for our newest church. If you could meet with our little band there and see their happiness and their zeal, you would be gladder still that you helped to provide music for them. Come on with a few more books; we hardly think that they have enough yet. Send your donation to Mrs. A. L. Moore, Spencer, N. C., Post Office Box 60. Thank you.

More of the Same Kind

"When people meeting you on the street stop to make your acquaintance, the postmaster reaching out through the window to shake hands with you, why you just couldn't feel other than at home"; "While we regret losing our former pastor, Rev. ——, we feel that we are fortunate in getting Bro. —— to be with us, and we welcome him in our midst"; "We are entering upon the work of the new year with a fine enthusiasm. Every indication is that the church in all of its departments will far surpass the record of last year"; "We feel that this is going to be a good year for our church and circuit"; "We are now in the midst of what appears to us great, big-hearted folks. They have received us with open hearts, and given to us every evidence of progressive co-operation."

And so the reports go. But we can not quote more now. We are delighted with the spirit revealed in these reports, and cheered by the hope that this spirit inspires. Success is sure where this attitude prevails.

Much Fruit-Bearing

We are anxious that this shall be a year of much fruit-bearing in every department of the church. The pastor is our hope for this realization. Since he is the leader, we can not hope to reach high standards unless he leads in that direction. We are therefore calling upon our pastors to make this a year of renewed study of the Bible and of church needs and church plans; a year of much prayer and personal consecration, a year of renewed determination to "keep back nothing that is profitable" for the church. But in everything and in every way to so lay hold upon the work that great spiritual harvests may follow.

May the Spirit of God rest with renewing power upon us all.

If There Were No Pain

for those who are not obedient and good. Those in whom pain has accomplished its moral purpose will be released from pain. Those in whom pain has not accomplished its divine mission will be subjected it seems to a terrible baptism of pain.

Pain brings us to a realization of the seriousness of life. It makes us aware of the spiritual character of our existence. It makes us conscious of moral distinctions and moral deserts. When it has accomplished in us its divine purpose, God will say to us, It is enough!

Ordination Sermon

the grace of God can pass into the heart, that soul may be brought back into a state of normalcy, and fill its place and do its work in the great divine plan of life.

And now, we have another very interesting question. To what end does God love us? It is expressed both negatively and positively in the text. For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish. It is to arrest us in our mad career of self-destruction. It is that we may sink no deeper in atheism, infidelity and agnosticism. It is that we may sink no deeper in hatred, selfishness, lust, slander, ignorance, poverty and slavery. Then it is to stay the hand of sin itself. It is that sin may sap away no more of our vitality. It is that sin may no more strengthen the bonds of our slavery. But we rejoice exceedingly in the fact that this great divine purpose reaches far beyond arresting us in our downward career and staying the hand of sin in its deadly work in the human heart. There is a positive side. It is one of restoration. It is that of refitting the wreck. It is that of bringing us back into a state of normalcy. It is that of giving us a new chance to make good. Read on through the text: but have everlasting life. The very essence of everlasting life is the fullness of life. It is the completeness of life. It is the perfection of life. So in this great outpouring of divine love we may see human bodies free from all defects, bodies full of health and strength, bodies with perfect efficiency of hand and eye and ear and voice, bodies every organ of which functions in a perfectly normal way. In this great love we may read minds that are fully efficient, minds that never fail in memory, or judgment, or will, or imagination. Here we may also read souls that never fail in faith, or reverence, or worship, or obedience, or love, or mercy, or holiness, or friendship, or sacrifice and service, or goodness. Such is the great end of God's love.

So far what are the accomplishments of this love for us? It would be much easier to answer the opposite question, what has it not accomplished for us? It has brought us the Christian church, and the Christian church has brought us the Christian home, and the Christian home as brought us Christian literature, and Christian literature has brought us Christian civilization, and Christian civilization stands solidly behind every victory over the sea and over the land and over the air. It is this fact that stands back of our scientific farming, our manufacturing business, our banking business, our merchandising business, our rail-roading business and our mining business. It is this that has built our orphan homes, our schools and colleges and universities and hospitals. It has given us the radio, the flying machine, the telephone and the automobile. It is putting into life everything that makes its beautiful and rich and sweet and good and strong and glorious—everything that makes life worth living. Nor is this all. It has brought to us a new conception of God. In Christ we see God not only as creator, preserver, judge and king, but as our great heavenly and universal Father. Out of this new conception of God we have that other conception—the universal brotherhood of man. Out of this conception we have every movement looking towards international confidence, international co-operation, international good will and universal and perpetual peace. Nor is this all. It has brought to vast millions of sin-sick souls the consciousness of cleansing from all spiritual filth, of pardon for every sin and of a new life functioning within. To these it has also brought the consciousness of the presence of a Person to guide them unerringly, and to shield them perfectly, and to fill them with all spiritual benediction, and to make them to abound unto every good work. Nor is this all. To these it has given the assurance of a glorious immortality. And now, a word to the young men who are about to take upon themselves the sacred vows of the Christian ministry. This love has conferred upon you the greatest honor that can come to man. Not only has it called you to repentance and faith, and made you citizens of his kingdom on earth, and adopted you into his heavenly family, and made you heirs of his infinite goodness jointly with his only begotten son, Jesus Christ, but it has called you to be fishers of men, the torch-bearers of human progress. If this love fills you, if it permeates your soul, if it is the dominant power in your life, if it controls you in all your activities, then your efforts will be crowned with success, and in the end you will receive a crown of life which will outshine the stars for brightness. But if it does not, then, it matters not to what heights of oratory you may mount, nor to what heights of scholarship you may ascend, nor how cultured the congregations you may serve, nor how large salary you may draw, nor with what ease you move in society, you will be nothing more than a sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal.

"HIS LIKENESS"

"How does God look?" said my little lass.
At her question I often smiled;
But this time I offered a prayer instead
For guidance to help my child.
"God's face is seen in the heart of a rose,
In the bud of a lily white,
In the brightness of sunshine after rain,
In charms of a moonlight night;
In the beauty of everlasting hills,
The trees with their leafy shade,
In the sky above and the earth beneath,
And all things he has made.
But the dearest picture I ever saw,
The clearest and finest, too,
Is his likeness in hearts that hallow his name,
And seek his work to do."

—Nettie K. Cole.

IMMEDIATE OBEDIENCE WISE

There is much in obeying as our Lord did, "straightway." When the Lord gives His servants grace to follow out their convictions as soon as they feel them, then they act courageously. First thoughts are best in the service of God; they are like Gideon's men that lapped. Second thoughts come up timorously and limpingly, and incite us to make provision for the flesh, like those men whom Gideon discarded because they went down on their knees to drink, taking things too leisurely to be fit for the Lord's battles.—Charles H. Spurgeon.

—Isn't this a pretty mess? We read this morning that two South American states are at outs with each other and one of them is clamoring for war. And that on the eve of Christmas and while Mr. Hoover is on a visit there! The man or nation that undertakes to keep quarrelsome neighbors from quarreling has some job on hand.

FAITH INDISPENSABLE

The key that unlocks the doors to the choicest treasures in the Divine Kingdom is faith. A Christian is spiritually strong and rich, or weak and poor, according to the measure of his right belief. Faith is the foundation virtue, and when it crumbles all else must fall with it. Peter on the water went down when his faith failed; and so must every man go down when overtaken by a like calamity. The most majestic heroes of the Cross have been those who had unwavering confidence in God and to whom heaven was scarcely less real than earth. It was a fitting thing that St. Paul should have taken a part of his great Chapter on Faith (the Eleventh of Hebrews) to catalogue some of Christianity's mightiest dead. It was through faith that they surmounted the obstacles in their way and ascended the imperishable heights, from which they shall ever shine.—Selected.

THE ANVIL OF GOD'S WORD

Last eve I paused beside a blacksmith's door,
And heard the anvil ring the vesper chime;
Then, looking in, I saw upon the floor
Old hammers worn with beating years of time.

"How many anvils have you had," said I,
"To wear and batter all these hammers so?"
"Just one," said he, and then with twinkling eye,
"The anvil wears the hammers out, you know."

"And so," I thought, "the anvil of God's Word
For ages skeptic blows have beat upon,
Yet, though the noise of falling blows is heard,
The anvil is unharmed, the hammers gone."

HER KITCHEN BIBLE

There was always a Bible on the window sill or on the kitchen table where Naomi worked. She was a Norwegian girl who had recently come to the land. Those who knew her felt at once that she was going to make a good citizen.

"This is my kitchen Bible," she explained with her foreign accent, when her mistress remarked on its always being there.

The mistress was not surprised to find that she gave the utmost satisfaction as a worker. A Bible with you at your work, a Bible used in odd, spare moments of life, will make a life of sweetness and power.

A home where every one has a Bible and makes everyday use of it is a home which should make any of us feel both rich and happy.—Queens' Gardens.

THE PRIVILEGES OF PRAYER

A life of unceasing prayer is a possibility, a duty, a privilege, and a security. Search the Scriptures that you may be intelligently prayerful. Be prayerful that you may intelligently search the Scriptures. Be prayerful and search the Scriptures that you may richly live the Christian life. Without prayer, life, like the cathedral window viewed from the outside, is dull and unpleasing; with prayer, life is like the stained window viewed from within—full of divine beauty and splendor. Wherefore, my beloved, pray without ceasing, and you cannot do other than in everything give thanks.—Selected.

CHRISTMAS AT THE BATEMAN HOUSE

"Isn't it queer to be in a perfectly strange house in a perfectly strange town on the night before Christmas?" Mary Anthony closed the book she had been reading and looked up at her mother. "Just think of it; not a single solitary soul in this town do we know."

Mrs. Anthony laughed nervously. "Not unless we count Mrs. Bateman."

"The lady who gave us the key? Oh, we won't count her. She wasn't one bit friendly. Why, when I asked her about the Christmas entertainment at the church on the corner, she turned away and said she wasn't going and knew nothing about it. And we strangers just arrived in town!"

"My dear, she looked very sad; maybe she is in trouble. It's odd, but somehow her face seemed familiar to me. And the name, Bateman, the minute I saw it in Cousin Esther's letter it seemed to recall something to my mind. And yet I'm sure I never knew any one by that name."

Opening the letter from Cousin Esther, the one which had brought them so suddenly to Burson, Mrs. Anthony read it again.

"Dear Mary:

"After owing me a letter for all these years it was about time you wrote. Your letter followed me to Burson, where we have been living for the last three years. And now in about five minutes I am starting for South America—to be gone for nearly a year. The wife of a civil engineer never stays anywhere long. And we hate to close it up. Why can't you and little Mary live in it this winter? We're leaving the key at Mrs. Bateman's next door. We call it the twin house because it's just like ours.

"Oh, there's the taxi! Goodbye and do come."

Mrs. Anthony folded the letter and sighed. She almost wished that she had waited until after Christmas before coming. But the house had been so cold. And here it was delightfully warm.

"Never mind, mother," said Mary, "we'll have a merry Christmas all by ourselves. And in the afternoon we'll go to the entertainment at the church. It's for the little tots, but I guess they'll let us look on anyway."

Yawning, Mary said goodnight to her mother and started up the stairs. Pausing for a minute by the window on the landing, she stared wistfully at the house next door. At a brightly lighted window she could see a girl of about her own age with her head bent over a book. "Mrs. Bateman might have introduced me to her daughter," she was thinking resentfully. "Their house doesn't look the least little bit Christmasy; not a holly wreath in any of the windows. Or a sign of a Christmas tree. Maybe she's like Scrooge; doesn't believe in Christmas."

Slowly Mary mounted the rest of the steps. Ah, this was her room. Reaching for the button just inside the door, she pressed it. Instantly the room was flooded with light. A pretty bedroom certainly, all delft blue chintz and white enamel. But what was that on the bed! Mary stared in astonishment. The blue and white quilt that had been so smooth when she had dressed before supper was rumpled. And under it lay a little boy scarcely more than a baby. With his head snuggled deep in the white pillow, he was fast asleep. Mary tiptoed nearer and inspected the little fellow. What long lashes he had and such a chubby flushed face. He must be one of the neighbor's children.

"Mother," she called softly, running into the hall. "Come see what's on my bed."

"On your bed!" Mrs. Anthony answered from the foot of the stair.

"Come and see."

"A baby! Where did he come from?" Plumping down in the blue chintz rocker, Mrs. Anthony stared helplessly at her daughter.

"I don't know. Must have crept up the back stairs while we were in the front room. See—there's his little coat and cap, suit and everything."

"I'd better call up Mrs. Bateman. She'll know whose child it is."

"Wait," cried Mary. "What's this fastened to his sleeve? A Christmas tag! Did you ever!"

"A Chrsitmas present." Turning the card over, the bewildered lady read these words scribbled in pencil: "I just couldn't keep him."

What a pity. How could a mother ever give up a child like that?

"Can we keep him? Oh, mother, please. Till after Christmas anyhow."

"First of all I'm going to notify the police," announced Mrs. Anthony.

That done, there was a hurried rush to the stores before they closed at ten o'clock. It would never do to have the little fellow wake on Christmas morning with not a single toy to greet him. By the time the toys were arranged invitingly on the bed and the tree trimmed, Mary and her mother were more than ready for bed.

And they slept late next morning. Mary on awakening sat up eagerly and started to unwrap the packages at the side of her bed. Then remembering the baby, she ran to get her warm slippers. Oh, they were still in the trunk. She began to unroll the slippers from the old newspaper wrapped around them; then gasped at the words that stretched across that page in big black letters.

Rushing out into the hall, she burst into her mother's room. Holding up the newspaper, she cried: "Call up Mrs. Bateman, oh quick. Just to think of it. Oh, mother! Mother!"

With shaking hands, Mrs. Anthony at last found the number in the book. "Mrs. Bateman? This is Mrs. Anthony. Can you come over here, please. Yes, right away. It's—oh, it's very important."

Scarcely a minute later, the two ladies, followed closely by Mary, were ascending the stairs, Mrs. Anthony trying her best to break the news gently. But at almost the first word Mrs. Bateman rushed ahead. And she was the first one to open the door into the blue room. There sat Bobsy in the midst of his toys, an entrancing smile on his face—Bobsy Bateman.

Mary read again the heading on the paper in her hand: "Bobsy Bateman Stolen From His Home in Burson. Suspicion Points to a Former Nurse, Maggie O'Brien." Underneath were pictures of the baby and mother. And the paper was nearly three months old. Three months since Bobsy had been in his mother's arms!

Well, there isn't very much more to tell. As the news spread, the house was besieged with people. First, Mr. Bateman and his daughter, then the neighbors. Then pretty much every one in Burson, it seemed to Mary.

After they had all gone except the Bateman family, Mr. Bateman figured things out. "Maggie must have repented. But in the darkness she brought Bobsy back to the wrong house. And now," he cried, turning to Mary and her mother, "suppose we all have Christmas dinner together, and go to the Christmas entertainment at the church this afternoon. I tell you what, nothing can be too Christmasy for me!" And Mary had no complaints to make after that of the Bateman family.—Selected.

SOMEBODY CARES

Somebody knows when your heart aches,
And everything seems to go wrong;
Somebody knows when the shadows
Need chasing away with a song;
Somebody knows when you're lonely,
Tired, discouraged and blue;
Somebody wants you to know Him,
And know that He dearly loves you.

Somebody knows when you're tempted,
And your mind grows dizzy and dim;
Somebody cares when you're weakest,
And farthest away from Him;
Somebody grieves when you're fallen,
You're not lost from His sight;
Somebody waits for your coming,
And He'll drive the gloom from your night.

Somebody loves you when weary;
Somebody loves you when strong;
Always is waiting to help you,
He watches you—one of the throng,
Needing His friendship so holy,
Needing His watch-care so true;
His name? We call His name Jesus;
He loves every one, He loves you.

ON READING THE BIBLE

Read the Bible, and read again, and do not despair of help to understand something of the will and mind of God, though you think they are fast locked up from you. Neither trouble yourself, though you have not commentaries and expositions; pray and read, and read and pray; for a little from God is better than a great deal from man; also, what is from man is uncertain and is often lost and tumbled over by man; but what is from God is fixed as a nail in a sure place. There is nothing that so abides with us as what we receive from God; and the reason why Christians at this day are at such a loss as to some things, is because they are content with what comes from men's mouths, without searching and kneeling before God to know of Him the truth of things. Things which we receive at God's hand come to us as things from the minting-house, though old in themselves, yet new to us. Old truths are always new to us, if they come to us with the smell of heaven upon them.—John Bunyan.

FOUR WORDS

There are four words that are able to melt the heart of stone, and turn a nominal Christian into an active one; they will make any man think; they will set a soul on fire, if he gives five minutes a day to them.

These words are death; judgment; heaven; hell.

God says, "It is appointed unto men once to die; and after that, the judgment."

Death—when will it come to your own being? You may be getting near the threescore years and ten that are allotted to man as the period of his probation and preparation. Death cannot be very far off for you. And after this the judgment. Then it is either one of two things for you—eternal bliss in heaven, with the Saviour who gave His life for you, and who loves you with an everlasting love; or hell, everlasting punishment, eternal banishment from the presence of Him who is Life and Light and Love. Or you may not be so old; in fact, you may be very young; but you have absolutely no assurance that your life will last another day. Babies, children, young people, those in the prime of life—are taken away when one least expects it. Death, judgment, heaven, hell.

You may be spared many, many years, but what about that loved one of yours, in your home? What about your friend? Your business associate? Death, judgment; then what? Heaven? or hell?

There is one other thought that is better still. There are some people who will never die. One of these days the Lord will come again, and those who are the members of His body will be caught up to meet Him in the air, caught up with their loved ones who have gone on before, who were members of His body. Then the judgment; then heaven for them; but hell for those who have not received the free gift of eternal life that He offered. We are just as uncertain as to the time of that as we are of the time of any one's death. Should He come today, where would you or your loved ones, or your friends, or your business associate spend eternity—in heaven, or in hell?

Settle this question today for yourself, if it is not already settled. Then, Christians, think about those who have not—in your own home, among your circle of friends, your business associates. Think about them and these four words—death, judgment, heaven, hell!

Go tell them about Jesus who is mighty and willing and longing to save them. "The King's business requireth haste."
—North Avenue News, Atlanta, Ga.

—The daily papers bear a report that the W. F. M. S. of our church contemplates a suit at court to settle the controversy between that society and the Board of Missions elected by the last General Conference. A friendly suit may best lead to the way out of an unfortunate situation. When people cannot agree about questions of right it seems proper to submit the questions to experts in such matters. There are many who are sure the W. F. M. S. is pursuing the course of plain duty and there are others who will insist that the Board of Missions is within its rights and on the plain path of duty. We are glad that we do not have to decide the matter though we have an opinion. If it is decided by a tribunal of trained and distinterested men, both parties may accept the decision gracefully. It is too bad for the work of missions to be held up or even embarrassed by a want of agreement among mission workers.

Outline for Leader

Since this is the season of the year when every one is thinking about Christmas gifts, let us study something about "God's Christmas Gift to the World." Very often we become so absorbed in the getting and giving of gifts at Christmas-tide that we lose the spirit of the occasion. The real joy of giving gifts is not in their material value, but in the spirit of love and friendship that they suggest. It was deepest spirit of love for the world that caused God to give His only Son that we might be saved. God's gift was the supreme gift of all time.

The coming of Christ into the world meant more to the world than any other one thing that can ever take place. He gave us a love that will never die. This same love should be reflected in our hearts and minds especially at this season of the year.

Questions to Be Answered

1. Why did God send His Son into a world of sin when heaven is pure and holy?

2. Did Christ's stay on earth accomplish His purpose in coming?

3. What has the coming of Christ into the world done for the home? The community? The nation?

4. What kind of a place do you think the world would have been if it had never heard Christ's teachings?

Topics to Be Discussed

1. God's Christmas Gift a practical gift.

2. God's Christmas Gift a gift of love and sacrifice.

3. God's Christmas Gift a gift of redemption and eternal life.

Ten-Minute Bible Reading

Abundant life (John 10:10); love's gift (John 3:16); eternal life (Romans 6:23); hope (I Peter 1:3-6); peace (John 14:27); forgiveness (I John 1:9); salvation (Acts 2:12); love (I John 3:1-3); unspeakable gift (II Cor. 9:15); joy (I Peter 1:8); a sacrifice (II Cor. 8:9).—C. E. Quarterly.

Poetry to the Point

A thousand years have come and gone,
And near a thousand more,
Since happier light from heaven shone
Than ever shone before,
And in the hearts of old and young
A joy most joyful stirred,
That sent such news from tongue to tongue
As ears had never heard.
And we are glad, and we will sing,
As in the days of yore;
Come all, and hearts made ready bring,
To welcome back once more
The day when first on wintry earth
A summer change began,
And, dawning in a lowly birth,
Uprose the Light of man.

—Thomas T. Lynch.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

DEC. 23: PAUL'S LAST MESSAGE

Scripture Basis: II Tim. 4:1-18.

Golden Text: I have fought the good fight, I have finished the course, I have kept the faith. II Tim. 4:7.

Timothy

"Timothy was one of the best known of Paul's companions and fellow-laborers." It is very probable that he was a native of the city of Lystra, and was converted to Christianity by Paul's teaching during his first missionary journey. Early in the apostle's career he became a co-worker, and it is interesting to note that he was faithful to him and the service of Christ to the end. His father was a Greek and his mother a Jewess. Paul mentions the faith found in Timothy's mother, Eunice, and his grandmother, Lois, which he declares was evident in him also.

The letters of Paul to Timothy form two of the three "Pastoral Epistles," the other being to Titus. These were written to ministers who had been given charge of churches in Ephesus and the Island of Crete, Timothy the former, and Titus the latter. "The Pastoral Epistles were written to guide them in the discharge of the duties devolving upon them as Christian pastors. . . . —much that is personal, and much also that is concerned with Christian faith and doctrine and practice generally" is contained therein.

The time of the writing of these epistles must be close to the Neronic persecution in A. D. 64. The letter to Titus was doubtless written between the first and second letters to Timothy. "It is universally acknowledged that II Timothy is the very last of Paul's extant epistles."

Timothy Taught

The fact that the messages to Timothy (and Titus) were written to guide the faithful minister in the discharge of his duties, as well as to teach Christian faith, doctrine and practice generally, has already been stated. The closing chapter of the second letters begins with a solemn charge to the writer's spiritual son and co-worker with Christ to fearlessly preach the unadulterated Word of God, which is equally as incumbent upon the ministers of Christ today. It is "the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." (Rom. 1:16).

Paul foresaw the time when weak and professed believers would seek the easy, the novel, the compromising forms of religion. It was evident to some extent in his day, but it seems that it was spoken especially for our day. "'Itching ears' are ears that want to be tickled with verbal novelties, with rhetoric and eloquence, with wit and extravagance, with new and strange teachings; the gospel has become tame and familiar to them." "But," says Paul, "avoid these things thyself; endure afflictions for the sake of Christ, if need be; prove the full worth of thy ministry."

Timothy's Trustful Teacher

Paul, then, refers to the status of his own life. He had run the race of life with courage and vigor. He had finished the course that had been laid out for him by the Lord of all. He had kept the faith—"the sacred deposit of historic truth and teaching." In other words, he was conscious of having won the race of life.

The winners of the athletic contests in those days received a crown. It was only a crown of leaves—olive, laurel, parsley, or ivy—but it was much coveted by the contestants. The crown of the faithful apostle was not of leaves, but "of righteousness;" not a material crown, but a crown of glory. Tis trust in the "Righteous Judge," who would thus reward him in the day of reckoning was implicit. It was something well worth while to hope for—not only for him, but for all who are "faithful unto death," and are longing for His appearing.

Triumphant Thought of Transition

Before his closing remarks, Paul briefly depicts his sorrowful condition. Only those who visit Rome today and are shown the Mamertine Prison in which the apostle spent his last days can at all realize his condition. Underground, with only a hole in the ceiling through which he was let down and a meager bit of light entered; the dungeon was cool, damp, and unhealthy. Here he stayed in loneliness, some having left him, others he sent on missions. Only the physician, Luke, ministered unto him. He wanted to see Timothy once more, also John Mark, for he proved to be a worthy assistant. But with it all, he declared, "the Lord stood by me."

Having the Lord with him, he feared not death. He knew it would come, but he was only concerned that the Lord's command to go and preach would be carried on as he had begun it. So, in his thought of the transition that would be his, he gloried in the God and Father of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

"It is not at all likely that Timothy reached Rome in time to greet his revered 'father in the Lord' and cheer his last hours. Paul was beheaded—on the Ostian Way, according to tradition—some time between the end of A. D. 66 and the death of Nero, which took place on June 9, A. D. 68. Thus one of the noblest of men ended his glorious career, and went to be with Christ, which, he said, 'is very far better.'" (Phil. 1:23).

Dear Friends: This, Tuesday morning, finds us hastening away for a splendid donation. It also finds us with a bit of sickness in the Home, although the conditions are better than last week. Several of our boys and girls have had, and some do have, mild cases of flu. We are taking every precaution to check it and keep our children well. So our hands have been so full that the hour is upon us when this must be mailed and we cannot list the gifts of various articles of food and clothing that have come to us during the week. We will do that for the next paper.

We are glad to correct one mistake of last week. The Thanksgiving box from Siler City which was credited to the Woman's Auxiliary should have been credited to the Philathea Class, and the contents of the box were: one dozen tablets, one dozen pencils, eight boxes Skidoo, three pairs bloomers, one shirt, 10 towels, 17½ yards of dress goods and several spools of thread. Thanks for the privilege of making such corrections.

I also fear we neglected to give due credit for eight dressed chickens delivered to us from Kernersville by Mr. Ad Linville on the day before Thanksgiving. If so, we apologize and hereby give the credit and thanks due.

Faithfully yours

A. G. DIXON.

NEW CENTURY SERVICE

Comparative Statement for 1927 and 1928

Those of you who follow with interest the progress of things, especially the finances of the denomination, will look at this.

This statement covers the period of the first six months of the fiscal year, May 1 to October 31, for this present fiscal year and the corresponding six months of the last fiscal year. It is being given because a great many people are supposing lots of things, among them that receipts for this year ought in the very nature of things not to be altogether encouraging. These figures are taken from our ledger account:

From	1927	1928
Budget receipts	$62,896.47	$61,618.34
W. F. M. S.	11,449.23	12,056.52
W. H. M. S.	7,121.60	3,408.49
Totals	$81,467.30	$77,083.35

As you see, budget receipts are a bit less; the W. F. M. S. a bit more, but the big drop is with the W. H. M. S. Now, then, W. H. M. S. ———.

Anyhow, while we take some comfort in just about "holding our own," don't be too comfy about it. All the boards,—oh, well, it's near Christmas, and let's see what can be done.

Spring Church on Spring Church Charge is the first to pay its A. C. B. apportionment in full. Who will be second?

We have so many obligations that ought to be met that it is no easy matter to say which ought to "have right of way." Of course the college apportionment is already on the "main line," and is getting up some speed; but if we are to get it in the "terminal" by Christmas, we shall have to "pull the throttle wide open" for the next two weeks.

Some of our brethren have been kind enough to carry the balance on our Gratitude Gift in one of "our" banks for the past nine months, and we ought not to wait much longer before relieving them of this burden. If some member of our church would be willing to take this note out of the bank and carry it until it can be paid, your treasurer will guarantee the interest will be paid quarterly.

When the readers of the Herald tire of the treasurer's "chatter," if they will say so he will "turn off the gas," and promise not to turn it on, except, at intervals. It is our desire to stimulate the members of the church in North Carolina to do better by the interests of the denomination than they have ever done, hence, these weekly reports.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Winston-Salem.—Mrs. Roy Hauser entertained the Philathea class at her home on Patterson avenue with 15 members, one new member, Mrs. Freo Surratt and one visitor, Mrs. Freck, present.

The president, Mrs. W. C. Tise, presided, and also conducted the devotionals. At the conclusion of the routine of business, the following officers were elected: President, Mrs. W. C. Tise; vice-president, Mrs. H. G. Paschal; secretary, Miss Leota Loggins; assistant secretary, Mrs. W. G. White; teacher, Miss Nannie Watson; assistant teacher, Mrs. J. R. Brewer; reporter, Mrs. J. E. Kirk.

Mrs. W. D. Coble was presented a shower of lovely gifts in celebration of her birthday.

A social hour followed the business meeting and the hostess, assisted by Mrs. R. T. Hauser and Mrs. J. C. Kapp, served delicious refreshments.

Reidsville.—While "poundings" are the order of the day we ask permission to say that we are not left out. We have been pounded. It was a good pounding, too. Sugar, flour, lard, potatoes—Irish and sweet—fresh meat, wood, canned goods galore, and so on, were used to pound us with. The onslaught was terrific for a few moments, but, like the "Boy on the Burning Deck," we stood our ground bravely. We are grateful, and we are trying to prove it.

A few days after we had been pounded we read in the Herald that we were to be given a donation, and we swelled up with pride. "Two donations to the same preacher in the same week," we though, "now we shall have ample occasion to brag, and lord it over the brethren.'" But when we found out that the notice had reference to the donation already received, we felt for the swelling, but it was gone. So I am admonished, Brethren, "that a man ought not to think more highly of himself than he ought to think."

We are working to get things lined up for a good year's work. It is our fervent prayer that success may attend our labors.

GEO. R. BROWN.

Orange Charge—Announcements: Christmas services will be held as follows: Sunday, December 23rd: Hebron, 11 a. m.; Chestnut Ridge, 2 p. m.; Union Grove, 3:30 p. m.; Efland, 7 p. m. Christmas offerings will be received at each church.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

South Lexington Church.—Bro. Isley's sermon last Sunday was very forceful. He has great things in mind for the furtherance of God's kingdom. Let us line up with Bro. Isley and help to carry out his plans.

The first quarterly conference will meet at South Lexington church next Saturday, December 15, at 2 o'clock. Bro. Isley urges all the members to attend, as this will be a very important meeting.

Three new members have united with our church this year: Bro. James Hunt, Sadie Conklyn and Eugene Turner. We are very glad to have them, and trust God to lead us through the year that we may get a great blessing by being in His work.

We are working on a Christmas program. The boys and girls are taking a great interest in our Sunday school and church work. The Christian Endeavor is doing good work also. May God help us to realize the value of serving God.

We will have our Christmas tree on Christmas eve, December 24. We extend a hearty welcome to all.

Pray for us that we may have a good year.

REPORTER.

Hope, Chatham Charge.—Rev. A. O. Lindley brought us an appropriate message last Sunday. I am sure we are going to be well pleased with him and we are hoping for a good year together.

We were very glad indeed to have Mr. H. A. Garrett with us. He spoke for a short while in the interest of our college fund. At the close of his remarks volunteer subscriptions were taken and I am glad to report that we went over the top in raising our quota. Several friends from other churches gave liberal donations, and we appreciate this very much. The congregation was good considering the fact that several of our people were kept away from the services on account of illness.

We are not planning any public entertainment for Christmas, but will have a special program at Sunday school on the 23rd, and a treat for the Sunday school children.

Arrangements are being made to heat our Sunday school rooms and we hope to have it completed in the near future.

The first quarterly meeting will be held at Hickory Grove on Saturday, December 15, at 2 p. m. Let as many of our people as can go.

GARA ANDREW, Reporter.

Bessemer City Church.—We are still moving along, doing very well at present. Our revival meeting closed December 2nd. Bro. Phililps was our pulpit help and delivered some very interesting sermons. We had a very good meeting. Bro. Henderson filled his appointment again yesterday morning with a very interesting sermon. We had 149 in Sunday school. We are planning to have a Christmas program and hope it will be a success. Pray for us that we may succeed in the work for the Master.

LUCY BRACKETT, Reporter.

Stallings, Mecklenburg Charge.—The Ladies' Auxiliary was delightfully entertained at the home of Mrs. R. F. Kinley December 6th. A large attendance was present and the meeting was presided over by the president, Mrs. M. L. Stallings. We had an interesting Christmas program. The members present were: Mrs. P. L. Garmon, Mrs. J. E. Hartis, Mrs. M. L. Stallings Mrs. Carl Stallings, Mrs. Paul Curlee, Mrs. W. C. Hall, Misses Vera Stallings, Irma Drye, Gladys Kiser, Mary Kinley, Etta Hall. Three new members, Mrs. R. F. Kinley, Mrs. Love and Miss Faye Love. We were very glad to have them join our little band, and hope to have others join.

During the summer months the society made a name quilt and gave it to the Children's Home. No name was put on the quilt for less than 25 cents; some paid $5. We cleared $55.96. The money was put on the debt of the church.

Our pastor, Rev. W. C. Hall, gave us a very inspiring and interesting sermon the first Sunday. Many were overjoyed and many gave their hearts to the Lord. We hope many others that are on the wrong road may turn before too late.

The Christian Endeavor Society meets every Sunday night. Interest is taken.

The community set our pastor, Rev. W. C. Hall, a surprise birthday supper on Saturday night, December 8th. Many were present and the table was covered with many good eats. Stallings Ladies' Auxiliary gave him a shirt and tie. Zoar Ladies' Auxiliary gave a pair of gloves and other gifts were given.

The Christmas program will be given on Saturday night before Christmas, December 22; also a treat for the Sunday school.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers in the coming year.

REPORTER.

Draper.—Sister Totten is very sick. We hope and pray for her recovery. Our budget is coming along nicely. All Christmas entertainments are progressing fine; we hope for the best one we have had. Our Sunday school is growing every Sunday.

L. C. CRAIG.

Tabernacle, Tabernacle Charge.—Since last report we have enjoyed a splendid program given by children of our Methodist Protestant Children's Home. After the program anoffering was taken which amounted to $46.29.

Ladies of the church served lunch to the children, Dr. and Mrs. Dixon and others. We hope they will come again soon.

The Woman's Auxiliary held the regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Vernon Coble Sunday afternoon. A towel shower was given as a Christmas gift to Pine Ridge School.

The Sunday school is planning to have a Christmas tree and program on Christmas eve.

One of our faithful members, Cecil Garner, is seriously ill with pneumonia. We hope for him a speedy recovery.

REPORTER.

Henderson.—Since Conference we have been so busy with the work here that we haven't found time to write a report to the church paper, and our efficient reporter, Mrs. C. L. Finch, being the happy mother of a new daughter, is also finding it difficult to have time to write.

We thank the church for asking for our return and for their cordial welcome to us at the beginning of a new Conference year. Our first quarterly conference has been held, the every-member canvass made and the college assessment paid in full. We are trying to begin the year right and hope that we may be able to keep things going right.

Monday evening we had one of the best meetings of the teachers and officers of the Sunday school that we have had in a long time. The meeting was held at the home of Miss Elizabeth Fox, who is the new superintendent of the Primary department. About 20 were present. Plans were made for a Christmas program to be given Friday evening before Christmas. Every member of the school will have a part in the program and a splendid service is hoped for.

The attendance at our services since Conference has been splendid until last Sunday, when we felt the results of the flu epidemic which is prevalent here, as elsewhere. Thus far no deaths have occurred in our membership, although a number have been confined to their homes on account of the disease.

Here is wishing for every pastor and charge in the Conference a happy Christmas and the very best Conference year possible.

R. A. HUNTER.

Lexington.—Owing to sickness and absence from town Sunday attendacne was off a little. The services were very interesting and good. At the morning service the importance of the spread of Bibles throughout the land was impressively stresed in a fine address by our pastor, this being the Sunday the American Bible Society asked that this important matter be presented in the churches.

At the evening service a good sized congregation heard another good sermon by the pastor, and immediately after the close the Workers' Council met All members of the church present stayed for the meeting and a few visitors also remained with us. Mr. Luther Koonts was the efficient leader of the meeting. Many important subjects were discussed and plans made for better progress during the coming year.

The children and young people are preparing a Christmas pageant under the direction of Mrs. H. S. Lanier. Mrs. Lanier is especially gifted in this kind of work and will give the children splendid training.

We were pleased to have with us in the service Sunday night Mr. and Mrs. McLaurin and Mr. and Mrs. Newton, of Concord, prominent members of Bro. Hendry's church at Concord.

REPORTER.

High Point.—The December supper meeting of the Brotherhood was held last Thursday eveniny. About 50 members were in attendance. An interesting talk was made by Dean P. E. Lindley, of High Point College, and a humorous debate, which had been arranged by Mr. Ballard, was held.

On Sunday morning Pastor Farmer chose as the subject of a very able discourse, "The Man With a Handicap." Once Robert G. Ingersoll was asked: "If you, with all your knowledge, could change things, would you do so?" He replied that if possible, he would remove pain from life. Our pleasures in life vanish, but pain remains. The common experience of all of us is to want something very earnestly, but to be compelled to do without it. This is a discipline, a spiritual exercise that comes to all of us. Life is like a spelling book, easy at first, but harder on every page, and we grumble at it. Every time God closes a door, He opens another door and a window besides. Livingston wanted to go to China, but instead went to Africa. Robert Louis Stevenson wanted to study law, but, owing to ill health, went to Samoa and wrote books. Handicaps and disappointments are bound to come, but they reveal the essentials of character. "Our light affliction which is but for a moment worketh in us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." Enlargement means expansion or increase, and the soul comes out stronger from the fiery furnace. If Paul had gone east as his inclination led, he would not have gone to Athens, and perhaps would have been a failure. There is no failure in life like giving up. Cowper said, "The clouds that look so big are full of blessings."

At the evening service the pastor brought the message on the subject, "The Gospel in Guideposts."

The Ladies' Aid Society met Monday afternoon in regular monthly session at the home of Mrs. C. L. Whitaker. After the business was concluded the hostesses served delicious refreshments.

Mr. L. R. Johnston, principal of High Point High School, has returned from a trip of several days to Fort Worth, Texas, where he attended a national convention of graded schools and secondary colleges.

High Point is suffering from an epidemic of influenza, and the city schools were closed yesterday (Monday) until December 31st. Fifteen teachers and 500 pupils were ill and not able to meet classes, so Dr. Wingate Andrews and the officials decided it would be best to suspend the school. Many of the out-of-town teachers left for their homes today. The disease seems to be of a mild form, and it is hoped that it will be checked by this precaution.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Robbins have returned from an extended trip to points in Florida and to Havana, Cuba.

Rev. and Mrs. E. L. Ballard have moved into their new home at 805 East Lexington Avenue, and the members of the church and C. E. Sosiety gave them a "pounding" last evening.

The Greensboro Daily News of this morning carries a news item of much interest to the women of our church. It is dated Pittsburgh, December 10, and says that legal action is contemplated by the Women's Foreign Missionary Society against the Church Board of Foreign Missions "to prevent a merger of the two organizations and the confiscation of approximately $200,000 worth of real estate and bonds." The treasurer, Mrs. Lida K. East, is authoirty for this statement, and five attorneys have been employed to file suit. The joint Missionary Board appointed at last General Conference will be asked to account for its action.

Mr. H. U. Oakes and family and Mrs. L. R. Peacock went to Yadkin College last Thursday to attend the funeral of their aunt, Mrs. J. D. Davis, who died Wednesday at the home of her sister, Mrs. R. Lee Wright, at Salisbury. Mrs. Davis before marriage was Miss Lizzie Oakes, and was greatly beloved by a large circle of relatives and friends.

Randleman.—We held our first quarterly conference December 8 at New Salem with all churches represented. The usual business was transacted in harmony. The work has started off nicely and we are looking forward to a successful year. Christmas programs are now being prepared by our people.

Our Sunday schools are off on account of the "flu." The day school was closed today (Monday) until after Christmas, as so many of our children were sick. I have been very busy for the last week visiting the sick; trust all will soon be well again.

The thank-offerings that were raised for the Children's Home by our Sunday schools were fine, and for which we are very proud.

Since arriving here we have been remembered with many good things for the pantry. Bro. W. D. Hannon had a ton of coal sent to the parsonage without any charges. The people of Mt. Lebanon soon found that our car-casings were threadbare, so they dressed our Chevrolet up with new shoes, for which we are grateful.

We hope to be able to repay these good people for their thoughtfulness of their pastors and family.

T. A. WILLIAMS.

Efland, Orange Charge.—Our work is progressing nicely. Bro. Williams has filled all appointments. A Thanksgiving service was held on the night of the 29th. An offering of $145.00 was taken at this time for the Children's Home.

The Ladies' Aid and W. F. M. S. met the fifth and quilted two quilts, one for our Children's Home and one for the Bethel Home. A pair of nice pillow cases and a pair of sheets were also sent to the Bethel Home.

Our Sunday school is increasing in attendance and interest. We hope it will continue to grow.

Best wishes to all the Herald readers for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

MRS. E. S. TAYLOR, Reporter.

Matthews Chapel, Greensville Circuit.—Everything seems to be moving along very nicely with us, and we hope to do more for our Master.

Our Sunday school has been doing good work under the management of J. B. Edwards. He is always on hand.

Our C. E. Society is still going.

Last Sunday was another good day for us. We had with us our new pastor, Rev. E. G. Cowan, who delivered a thanksgiving message, which I'm sure all enjoyed. May we each count our many blessings and strive to do more for Him who has done so much for us.

I am glad to report that Mrs. J. R. Shell, who underwent an operation at Roanoke Rapids Hospital, returned home last Thursday much improved.

Some of the members are planning for a Christmas program at Matthews, so let us get busy.

Best Christmas wishes to all.

ODELL BOWEN, Reporter.

Burlington, First Church.—We held our first quarterly conference on Wednesday evening, December 5th, at 7:30 o'clock, with a fairly good attendance of officers and members of the church. A number of important matters pertaining to the work of the church were attended to at this meeting.

Bro. G. Alexander Cartner, one of our beloved and devoted members, died Sunday night at 11:50 p. m. after a few weeks of ill health, although he was not confined to his room until a day or so before death came to him. He leaves a wife and four children and a host of friends and relatives to mourn their loss. We pray that our heavenly Father will bless the loved ones and comfort them in this dark hour.

The attendance at the Sunday school December 9th was 264 and the offering amounted to $17.41. The new Sunday school superintendent, Mr. Walter Smith, is showing much interest in the work of the school and we predict a good year's work.

On Tuesday evening, December 4th, the Baraca class met in their annual banquet and business meeting, which we hold each year in December. This banquet was thoroughly en joyed by a great number of the "boys." The supper was served by the good ladies of the church and a better supper would be hard to find. After supper was over, the president called the meeting to order for a brief business session. As this was the appointed time for the election of officers for the coming term, this matter was brought up and the election was as follows: President, Dr. H. M. Patterson; first vice-president, H. L. Graves; second vice-president, C. C. Durham; secretary, L. E. Anthony; first assistant secretary, A. M. Wagoner; second assistant secretary, J. B. Coble; treasurer, Dave DeMoss; reporter, Alvis Rich; assistant reporter, G. F. Isley; teacher, Chas. C. Lindley re-elected unanimously; first assistant teacher, George C. Smith; second assistant teacher, Charles A. Thomas. This is indeed an efficient set of officers and competent and consecrated teacher, and we foresee a good year in the work for the term to come.

A number of our folks have been on the sick list and some are still confined to their homes. Members of our pastor's family have had the "flu," but last reports were that they were better and recovering nicely. Other members sick are: E. M. Braxton, Tucker street; Charles A. Thomas, Oak street. Perhaps there are many others we have not heard about.

Christmas time will soon be here and we trust that as we think of the Great Gift of Christmas that each follower of our Savior will consecrate himself anew to His service. Wishing all the readers a very happy Christmas. L. A. BRAXTON, Reporter.

First Church, Winston-Salem.—Everybody please tune in Station MPCWS now broadcasting, and instead of telling a bedtime story we will tell you something that a real wide-awake church is doing.

The most important thing that has happened since our last report is the Sunday school has been divided into graded classes. Instead of all meeting together as before the Juniors and Intermediates meet to themselves and the adults to themselves. This has already proved to be successful, as the children are taking more interest in the Sunday school work.

The next most important thing was the reorganization of our Christian Endeavor Society. There has been a lot of enthusiasm shown over this move and I think it will prove to be very interesting for the young people of our church. Last Sunday night we started on a trip over the Atlantic Ocean, following Lindbergh's trail. As our trip progresses we will tell you more of this wonderful adventure. If you want to hear about how we have fun on this trip keep up with our report that appears in this paper every two weeks.

Say, folks, do you all attend prayer meeting? What? You didn't think it was interesting? Well, if you feel that way about it I'll guarantee that if you go one time you will try not to miss again. At our church Rev. H. F. Surratt is giving a series of talks on "The Ladder of Christian Graces." We have started our ladder from earth to heaven, the rails are called Faith and the first round has been placed and it "virtue." This Wednesday evening we put the second round in; we do not know what it will be, but one thing we are sure of is that it will be presented in a very interesting manner.

Will everybody please stand by for another two weeks and then I will continue my broadcasting?

EVELYN SMOTHERS, REPORTER.

Fair Grove, Why Not Circuit.—We are indeed glad to have our pastor, Rev. J. B. Trogdon back. He has preached for us once since conference and brought us an inspiring message.

Death has recently invaded our ranks and taken Mrs. Martitia Auman Boroughs, wife of Calvin Boroughs, and Mrs. Maggie Reynolds Auman, wife of Kelly Auman. They were sisters-in-law and good Christian women. No children survive.

Mr. and Mrs. Jefferson Auman celebrated their golden wedding anniversary December 4. They have eight children, all present except two, who live quite a distance. There were many other relatives and friends present. Mr. and Mrs. Auman received many gifts and quite a number of gold pieces. After a time spent in conversation the company was invited into the dining room where a three-tier cake with a bride and groom on top and fifty candles lighted was on the dining room table. After thanks for the life they have lived and the fine family raised were given by Rev. Joel Trogdon, delicious refreshments were served. Mrs. Eunice Hayworth sang "Will You Love Me When I Am Old?" After returning to the parlor many old songs were sung before the crowd dispersed wishing Mr. and Mrs. Auman many more anniversaries.

Among the many guests were Mrs. Eunice Hayworth, Mrs. Susannah Auman Cagle and Mr. Green Macon, who were attendants or waiters when Mr. and Mrs. Auman were married. REPORTER.

CANCER—A PUBLIC HEALTH PROBLEM

Cancer today is one of the greatest enemies of civilized men and women. Insidious in its development, it lays hold upon its victims, grows upon them, saps their vitality, and too often ends by laying them away in graves prematurely filled. Moreover, it chooses for its victims men and women in the active and productive years of middle life. In North Carolina one person out of every eight who lives beyond the age of 45 dies of cancer. It is the fifth greatest contributor to the State's death rate, being exceeded only by heart diseases, pneumonia, kidney diseases and tuberculosis.

Cancer, therefore, becomes one of the chief among the State's public health problems. But it is much more than that. It is also an outstanding economic, sociological, civic and religious problem. It calls insistently, imperatively, for the serious attention of our people in order that this problem may be solved.

Cancer cells are not of spontaneous generation. They must and do arise from pre-existing normal body cells. Cancer cells are outlaw cells in the family of normal cells. They are the cells which run riot, change their shape, habits and functions, but this does not happen until normal cells have become irritated in one way or another. It is this irritation which changes the normal body cells to cancer cells. A continuous irritation of already inflamed tissue is believed to be the exciting cause of cancer. So it is the little irritations, the benign moles, the suspicious lesions, the peculiarly obstinate indigestions that are calling to you and begging you to help them before they come to be cancerous and kill.

Would that I could get Mohammedan, Jew, Catholic, and Protestant to join hands in the determination to conquer this common enemy! Would that I could get those who can to give of their means enough to put the prevention and treatment of cancer within the reach of every woman who gives herself in the giving of her sons and daughters to the State! Would that I conld make a place for the laboring man, the man too poor to provide protection which is easily provided by the plutocrat, yet too proud to play a part of pauper, a place where the beginning of his destruction through cancer may be removed safely and surely, yet at a price commensurate with his needs!

When thinking of foreign missions, look what we have at home. Does or does not it call to mind the warning: "He that provideth not for his own household is worse than an infidel." Christian people in other states are giving their means to the fighting of cancer within the confines of their own states. They are "getting the beam out of their own eye." When will the citizens of North Carolina, who can finance cancer control, come and do likewise? If Christ could descend into this land of long-leaf pine, just as He ascended into Heaven some nineteen centuries ago, I wonder what position He would take with reference to this problem. I doubt not but that He would give Himself and all that is in Him to the solution of this condition because it was He who said: "I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink; . . . . I was sick, and ye visited me."—Secretary of State Board of Health.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Hunter

True it is:
"Death rides on every passing breeze;
He lurks in every flower."

We were most distressingly made to realize this fact when on October 7th, last, Blanch Crews Hunter succumbed to the injuries of an automobile accident, which occurred two days previous to her death. She was a member of the faculty of Walnut Cove school, and was returning, after a week-end visit with her parents at Pinnacle, when the untoward circumstance occurred that so untimely ended the bright and promising life.

"Death lies on her like an untimely frost
Upon the sweetest flower of all the fields."

Blanch was just blooming into young womanhood when her life was so suddenly snatched away. Having been born on the second day of August, 1905, her age was 23 years, two months, and seven days. A short, but well lived life, and ending just when young womanhood was unfolding into full beauty. Did we say, "ending?" That can not be. In the beauty of her spirit, and in her good deeds, she lives—and will—in the hearts of those who knew her best and loved her most. She lives here, and in God's summer land she lives in all the glory of a life that death can not touch.

When she was but ten years of age, she professed faith in Christ as her personal Saviour, and united with New Hope Church on Vance charge, where her father was serving as pastor. Later, her membership was transferred to Pinnacle Methodist Protestant Church, and remained there till her death. As a Christian, Blanch was earnest and active. At the time of her death she was a Sunday school teacher, and treasurer of the W. H. M. S. As a friend, she was true and unselfish; as a daughter and sister, she was obedient and affectionate. She was deeply appreciative of the sacrifices that her parents had made on her behalf, and for the influence on her life of her Christian home. She spoke of this very freely and very tenderly in a letter to her parents while she was a student at High Point College. We are filled with an enduring grief because of her untimely death, but despite this, there is much comfort in the assurances of her good life.

The funeral was held in the Pinnacle church, of which she was a member, and was participated in by the following ministers: Rev. R. M. Andrews, Rev. J. E. Pritchard, Rev. P. E. Lindley, and the writer. The very large number of people present, and the beautiful and profuse floral offering attest the high esteem in which the deceased and the family are held. Several other ministers of the conference were present to pay their tribute of loving rspect to the deceased and to mingle with the family their tears of tenderest sympathy. The body was laid to rest in the church cemetery under a covering of flowers, so typical of her pure life.

Besides her father and mother, Blanch is survived by two brothers, Rev. R. A. and Prof. Holt Hunter; and by five sisters, Mrs. J. A. Short, Mrs. Will Edwards, Mrs. Moton Glenn, Mrs. M. S. Hunt, and Miss Nina Hunter. One sister, Mr. Arthur Holloway, preceded her in death. We join the many friends of the deceased, and of the family, in assurances of love and sympathy; we also rejoice with them in the more abundant life upon which she has entered, through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

Almond

Myrtle Lenora Almond, born December 13, 1907, departed this life November 27, 1928. She professed faith in Christ at the age of 12 years and joined Friendship Methodist Protestant Church, which she dearly loved. All that loving hands could do was done to stay the hand of death in one so young, but how blessed it is to die in the Lord. Her last words were: "Good-bye, mama, how sweet it is to go."

She was confined to her bed a little over a year. I had the pleasure of visiting her many times during that time, and see her soul happy, hear her praising God. When her mama would play the song on the Victrola, "Glory Is Coming Soon," she would praise God. She called that song mine and her favorite. What an inspiration to see Jesus in a life like that, a life that will live on.

Her funeral was conducted at Friendship Methodist Protestant Church by her pastor on November 28, and her body was laid to rest in the cemetery beneath a lovely mound of flowers to await the resurrection morning.

She leaves father, mother, brother, three sisters, a host of friends and realtives to mourn her departure, but we feel assured many years side by side. Be faithful a little linger, and you will be reunited where you can wander hand in hand beside the living waters of that still and sinless land.

"O, who can tell the rapture
Of those to whom it is given
Thus to renew the bonds of earth
Amid the bliss of heaven?"

Will say to the children, we know how sad it is to go home and no mother to greet us but how happy to know we have a mother in heaven. For mother, home and heaven are three of the sweetest words to mortal given.

C. H. HILL, Pastor.

Harwood

Martha Ann Harwood, born March 20, 1904, departed this life November 23, 1928. She professed faith in Christ at an early age, and united with Friendship Methodist Protestant Church, to which she remained loyal until death. She leaves mother, five brothers, three sisters, a host of friends and relatives to mourn her departure, but while we mourn no doubt she is happy in that beautiful place she told her mama about. Her last words were: "O, what a beautiful place I have got." No doubt she saw the place that Jesus had prepared for her. All that doctors, nurses and loving hands could do was done to keep her with us, but her mansion was ready and she had to go and take charge.

On November 24 her funeral was conducted by her pastor, assisted by Rev. J. R. Anderson, of Albemarle, and her body was laid to rest in Friendship cemetery beneath a mound of lovely flowers. Jesus, comfort the bereaved, and help us to say, "Thy will be done."

"By thy hands the boon was given,
Thou hast taken but thine own:
Lord of earth and God of heaven,
Evermore "Thy will be done."

Lowder

John Adam Lowder was born January 18, 1890. On December 3, 1928, about 2 o'clock while in the field at work Jesus said, "It's enough; lay down your work and rest." On the following even at 2 o'clock the funeral was held in Friendship Methodist Protestant Church, of which he was a faithful member conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. R. Anderson, pastors of Albemarle Methodist Protestant Church, and Rev. John H. Green, of Salem Methodist Episcopal Church. The large congregation and the beautiful mound of flowers showed how he was loved in his community.

He leaves wife, five children, aged father, three brothers, two sisters, a host of friends and relatives to sorrow here below. Help us to look to the One that can bring comfort to those who mourn. It was said of him that he gave his life serving others. As the poet says:

"We live in deeds, not years; in thoughts, not breaths;
In feelings, not in figures on the dial.
We should count time by heart-throbs. He most lives
Who thinks most, feels noblest, acts the best."

RELIGIOUS EDUCATIONAL ADVISORY COUNCIL MEETS IN ANNUAL SESSION

The second annual meeting of the Religious Education Advisory Council of the Methodist Protestant Church Board of Christian Education convened November 21-23, 1928, in the new Methodist Protestant Church, Cambridge, Ohio. The meeting was called to order by the Executive Secretary, Rev. Lawrence Little, and after conducting a worship service, prepared by Mrs. H. W. Maier, he introduced the following, who responded with brief echoes from their respective fields: Rev. G. I. Humphries, D. D., of Salisbury, Md., president of the Board of Christian Education; Rev. F. W. Stephenson, D. D., Pittsburgh, Pa., Executive Secretary of the Department of Educational Institutions of the Board of Christian Education; Rev. F. L. Gibbs, Durham, N. C., Assistant Secretary, Department of Religious Education; Rev. Harlan L. Feeman, D. D., LL.D., president of Adrian College, Adrian, Mich.; Rev. R. Y. Nicholson, Washington, D. C.; Rev. J. A. Wade, Magnolia, Ark.; Rev. Fred W. Paschall, Asheville, N. C.; Rev. Walter Mollan, Adrian, Mich.; Rev. Geo. W. Beck, Middletown, Ohio; Rev. G. Charles Weaver, Rochester, N. Y.; Rev. E. J. Headley, D. D., Castle Shannon, Pa.; Mrs. Geo. W. Ramsey, Washington, Pa.; Rev. A. R. Corn, Adrian, Mich.; Rev. R. C. Tolbert, Mt. Vernon, Ohio; Rev. Frank W. Lineberry, Jonesboro, Ind.; Rev. F. Lyman Shows, Pollock, La.; Rev. Geo. H. Jackson, Lynbrook, N. Y.; Rev. C. J. Morton, Attica, Ohio; Rev. H. E. Orwick, Mechanicsburg, Ohio; Rev. B. F. Langdon, Cuba, Ill.; Rev. C. J. Kerlin, Logansport, Ind.; Prof. Geo. McLean, Adrian, Mich.; Rev. G. O. McMillan, D. D., president of Westminster College, Tehuacana, Texas; Mrs. J. W. Rhodes, Springfield, Mo.; Mrs. Culbertson, Pittsburgh, Pa., and Rev. I. M. McVey, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Mr. Little then briefly explained the work that was facing the Council and appointed the following committees: Conference Union Organization; Co-operation With Local Church; Evangelism in Religious Education; Leadership Training Schools; Life Service Enlistment and Training; Resolutions; and Findings. These committees lost no time in organizing for their respective tasks. Two busy days followed with most of the time spent on committee work, discussion of committee work, and open forum discussion upon problems related to the program of Religious Education throughout the Methodist Protestant Church.

Regardless of the much work to be done, the council took time to worship and to be sociable. A fellowship supper was arranged in which the members of the council were guests of the officers and teachers of the Sunday school and Christian Endeavor of the Cambridge Church. A happy hour of eats, laughter, jokes, etc., was enjoyed by every one. After this fine fellowship the council members joined with the Cambridge host and hostesses in an evening prayer service. Uplifting addresses were made by a number of those present, including two former pastors of the Cambridge Church, Rev. C. J. Morton and Rev. Frank W. Lineberry. They were followed by Rev. F. W. Stephenson, D. D., Rev. Lawrence Little and Rev. G. I. Humphries, D. D. All these reminded each of us of the personal responsibility each one has in winning the World for Christ.

Rev. H. L. Feeman, D. D., LL.D., also brought a helpful message to the council before each business session which gave us courage and strength for each task.

Achievement! One can hardly estimate the result of one of these meetings to the cause of Christian Education of our Church. One leader remarked that this meeting had made history in that it had gathered the leaders of our Religious Education program around a conference table and had by the adoption of a unified constitution, united the whole Religious Educational program of the Methodist Protestant Church. "This is something," stated the speaker, "that very few churches, with all their wealth and numbers, have not been able to do after much effort." Not only was this plan of organization adopted, but other things of importance were planned; namely, the sponsoring of two Denominational Leadership Training Schools to train instructors; the promoting of 23 Leadership Training Schools during the coming summer; the conducting of district and local Church Standard Leadership Training Schools in Denominational centers.

One outstanding advance in our work revealed at the meeting was the wide acceptance of the standardizing of our Adult Courses to the level of the International Council of Religious Education. Of the 19 Leadership Training Schools conducted last summer, 17 had courses in the Standard Leadership Curriculum with a total of 348 credits awarded. No work of this type had been done prior to the past summer in our Church and this hearty response is indeed encouraging to the Council.

Another thing! Those present will not soon forget the hospitality of the pastor, Dr. Geo. H. Miller, and his church people. Lunch and dinner were prepared by the various circles of the Woman's Auxiliary and lodging and breakfast was provided in the homes of the parishioners. This, plus a well-equipped church furnished all the comfort needed for such a meeting.

At the close of the session on Friday a vote to continue the council for another year was unanimously carried.

LINCOLNTON AND COLLEGE ASSESSMENT

The writer has just visited Lincolnton in the interest of High Point College and found a hearty response! An unusual response! In fact, he was presented with a $100 check by the fine arrangements of the enthusiastic board of stewards. This was Lincolnton's part of the present campaign. That's not all. The Lincolnton church is giving 100 per cent support to their pastor and wife, Rev. and Mrs. Fred Love. They have a budget plan and are paying as they go on all interests of the church. That was the reason for their being able to produce the $100 so easily and deprive the writer of taking the pulpit time for appealing for money. They are a happy pastor and people. Also, $40 placed in their church school treasury in three Sundays and $20 of that amount given to the Children's Home. A people with such a vision of service couldn't be otherwise than happy! Watch Lincolnton station make the honor roll this year:

Merry Christmas to all.

FLAT ROCK W. H. M. S.

The W. H. M. S. of Flat Rock church, Vance charge, met in the home of Mrs. U. J. Parrott on Tuesday evening, November 20, with the president, Miss Mary V. White, presiding. Devotions were conducted by Mrs. U. J. Parrott. The program was then carried out as given in the M. P. Herald.

The new consolidation was discussed, and each member urged by the president to attend the district meeting at Union Chapel Thursday, November 22, and learn more in regard to the consolidation. The society then adjourned, after which delicious refreshments were served by the hostess.

We were glad to have as guests Mrs. Williams and daughter. Mrs. Williams is a sister of Mrs. F. M. White.

If I can do some good today,
If I can serve along life's way,
If I can something helpful say,
Lord, show me how.

If I can right a human wrong
If I can help to make one strong,
If I can cheer with smile or song,
Lord, show me how.

If I can aid one in distress,
If I can make a burden less,
If I can spread more happiness,
Lord, show me how.

If I can do a kindly deed,
If I can help someone in need,
If I can sow a fruitful seed,
Lord, show me how.

If I can feed a hungry heart,
If I can give a better start,
If I can fill a nobler part,
Lord, show me how.

It made its first scheduled run on Christmas day of that year. On June 17, 1831, its boiler was destroyed by an explosion. A negro helper was annoyed by the noise of escaping steam at the safety valve and screwed it down, causing the explosion. The Southern has had an engine made after the model of that first one and is displaying it to show the progress in engine-making since that first engine was made. It weighed only four tons.

"Communion of Saints"

In our church services we glibly repeat, "I believe in the communion of the saints." What do we mean by it? Perhaps some of us mean one thing and others of us another thing, and very likely some of us mean nothing at all or have a meaning so very vague that it would be impossible to define it.

But we should mean something by it or cease to repeat it as a part of worship.

Roman Catholics believe in the communion of saints only for members of that church. Hence to be turned out of the church is to be excommunicated, a dreadful thing since it involves loss of the privileges of church members. Protestants, however, attach a broader meaning to "the communion of saints." They believe that all believers in Christ thereby become saints and enjoy with all other believers a common inheritance in Christ. What we should mean when we say, "I believe in the communion of saints," seems to be that we believe all Christians have equal part in Christ, sharing alike in responsibilities and in privileges. It does not mean a community of goods but it does mean equality in spiritual experiences; not that all have the same degree in grace, but that all may make the same attainments in grace.

Contribution of the First Christmas Day

The world had little knowledge or appreciation of it, but that first Christmas day was the Day of Days in the history of our world. It was a great day when the world was made. The sons of God shouted for joy at the sight of the new creation. But that first Christmas day was a greater day than the day of creation. On that great day God Himself entered the world He had made in the guise of a creature, in the form and person of a man. This seems so a priori improbable that to this day many men will not believe it. They think there must be some mistake about it, that men who believe it are under delusion. But after the most careful thought and fullest investigation, the great majority of men, including the great majority of the world's great thinkers, are convinced that it is true, that God became incarnate in human flesh and lived for a generation on earth as a man. Surely such an event takes rank among the greatest events possible. As a rule contemporary historians are not able to measure correctly the movements of their time. This was true of the historians of the generation in which God was seen upon the earth as a man. Strange powers, superhuman powers, emanated from his personality, but men did not discern either the purpose or the power of his life. He did not do the things that men thought God would do. He did and endured some things that men felt sure God would not do or endure. But centuries have now passed and that mysterious personage has become a marvelous figure in the world's history. Today He looms up in ever-increasing proportions. The world does not yet fully understand what it sees.

It seems that this incarnation of God was not an afterthought but a forethought, contemplated in the eternal ages. It was a part of God's original program. Not only did God plan to create the world and people the world, but He also planned to enter into human experience on the plane of man's life and thus accomplish for man what He could not otherwise accomplish. By thus coming to earth He revealed Himself as He could not through the glories of creation. He thus became our God. We were brought to realize as we did not and could not before the tenderness and depth of His love for us. At a tremendous cost to Himself He brought to us a most precious and most affecting revelation of Himself. That first Christmas day was the first of a great series of days, the last of which has not come yet. But the world has been impressed, the thought of the world has been turned back to God, human life has been redeemed from despair, and the future has become richer to every man in Christendom because of that first Christmas day.

A Little Book With a High Aim

In 1896 John Thomas Cooper was graduated from Harvard College. He returned to his native state, West Virginia, and became a prominent lawyer and member of the state legislature. He spent his leisure moments in compiling a devotional book to be used by individuals in the culture of spirituality. He provided in his will for the circulation of this book. The name of it is Via Maxima. Many ministers commend it highly. To us it seems well adapted to its purpose and its purpose is supremely high, to help in reaching life's true goal. It would make an appropriate gift to a friend whom you would help spiritually. It is for sale at 25 cents a copy by the brother of the author, Rev. Arthur B. Cooper, 1453 Race St., Denver, Col.

A Lesson from the "Flu"

Whatever else we may learn from the prevailing epidemic, we may be impressed with the fact of our absolute dependence upon God. In the possession of exuberant health we are likely to be obsessed with the idea that we are in no danger of loss of health. Others may languish in hospitals, but we feel safe. But lo! an invisible swarm of something fills the air and the strongest are laid low. Thousands who were in apparent health yesterday are on beds of pain today. The miracle of it teaches us or should teach us that our lives are in the hand of God and whatever seems good to Him will befall us. But God is gentle and loving in His afflictions. It is consoling to know that we are in the hand of God who knows how and when to heal those who have been smitten. Disease germs are His agents, doing His will.

THE HOME OF THE SOUL

By Hugh Latimer Elderdice, A.M., D.D., LL.D.

(Thirty-first Baccalaureate Sermon of Westminster Theological Seminary)

A popular poet sings of Heaven:

"That Beautiful Land, the Far-away Home of the Soul."

A practical poet sings:

"I know not what the Future hath of marvel or surprise."

The former indulges in "poetic license"; the latter clings to sanctified common sense. Instead of dogmatizing concerning the final abode of "the spirits of just men made perfect," it were well for us to clip the wings of our imagination, keep our feet on solid ground, and, since we cannot discover either the location or the looks of "the Heavenly Jerusalem" until we shall "have crossed the Bar," to fix our thought and center our speech on another Home of the Soul—open to us now and here.

The oldest poem in the Hebrew Psalter is the Ninetieth and its first verse is the text of this sermon: "Lord, Thou hast been our dwelling place in all generations."

What does Moses mean? He seems to contradict himself; for he once prayed: "Look down from Thy holy habitation, from Heaven, and bless Thy people Israel." But in the text he locates Him on earth, and in both references names Him as the Home of a Nation still living. If an invisible Spirit above the sky, how could He have been for generations the abode of a Nation in flesh and blood?

Evidently this ancient "Man of God" is indulging in a reverie—a retrospect of five hundred years of National History. He sees the curtains rise on the panorama of a marvelous past. The first scene is Abraham—"the father of the faithful." Obedient to the call of the true God, he forsakes the altar of his pagan deity, renounces his citizenship, bids his friends a final farewell, turns his back upon his ancestral home, and goes "out, not knowing whither." His son Isaac and his grandson Jacob join his Chaldean caravan bound for Canaan, and with them "he sojourns in the Land of Promise as in a strange country, dwelling in Tabernacles."

The scene shifts to the brickyards of Egypt. With his Burning Bush Commission, Moses lives again his Military career. He sees himself the first National Emancipator in Human History, organizing three million slaves into "the first World's Republic, the United States of Israel." His shepherd's staff is transformed into a mightier weapon than Pharaoh's sword. Without a navy he transports his troops across the Red Sea; without money or Government Bonds, cots or ammunition, he marches his hosts through desert sands forty years. When rations run low, the Manna covers the camp; when canteens are empty, the Rock splits and a fountain flows; when lost at night, a Flame signals the way; and when in doubt by day, a Cloud is the code to guide in the right road to the "Land flowing with milk and honey." With no hospitals nor surgeons nor trained nurses they survive the earthquake and the plague, and are delivered so marvelously from every foe by their National Deity, that they have learned well the battle-cry of their first great leader: "The Eternal God is thy Refuge." And now their old commander closes his reverie, rejoicing that these homeless wanderers had "pitched their tents in the Heart of Him Who has neither beginning of days nor end of life." To Him he pays the tribute of the text:

"From age to age, Lord,
Thou hast been our Home."

This Mosaic conception of God as the Home of His Chosen People while they were yet living on earth was re-echoed five hundred years later by "The Sweet Singer of Israel." Though David was king in a Royal Palace, surrounded by a bodyguard, and protected by veteran warriors outside his fortified citadel, yet he prayed to his great Commander-in-Chief: "Be Thou my strong Habitation, whereunto I may continually resort—for Thou art my Rock and my Fortress." And to every subject of his kingdom who had by faith entered with him into this invisible Stronghold he gave this assurance: "Thou hast made the Most High thy Habitation; there shall no evil befall thee, neither shall any plague come nigh thy tent. For He shall give His Angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways."

Another thousand years pass and these rhapsodies of the Old Testament Prophet and Poet strike a responsive chord in the hearts of the New Testament Saints. When the Jehovah of the Children of Israel revealed Himself as the Saviour of all nationalities He gave His followers the counsel which has the force of a command: "Abide in Me." The best interpreter of the New Home of the Soul was "the beloved Disciple"—John—and he found entrance by two keys: Obedience and Love. "He that keepeth His commandments dwelleth in Him." "God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God." Paul faced his Athenian audience of cultured Greek poets and philosophers and declared that their Unknown God was "not far from any one of us; for in Him we live, and move, and have our being." And to his Christian converts in the Colossian Church he gave the mystical message: "Your life is hid with Christ in God."

The early Church Father—Augustine—addressed the Soul's Center thus: "Thou hast made us for Thyself and we are restless until we rest in Thee.' Luther's ein feste burg ist unser Gott—"a strong city is our God"—was inspired by the Psalmist's creed: "God is our Refuge;" and when the Reformation faced dark hours he would say to Melancthon: "Come, we will sing the forty-sixth Psalm and let them do their worst."

The Modern Conception of God as the Home of the Soul

The man of our day does not conceive of a Transcendent Being sitting upon a starry throne far above the sky; nor does he confine the Risen Christ to the altars of a Church or even to "the third heaven." He can better grasp the Deity as Immanent, and see Him both above and in all, "Whose Temple is all Space—Whose Altar Earth, Sea, Skies." Some of our devoutest, like Jones Very, visualize Him in "The Present Heaven," and pray:

"Open our eyes that we that world may see!
Open our ears that we Thy Voice may hear,
And in the Spirit-land may ever be,
And feel Thy Presence with us always near."

They are not Pantheists when they sing with Alexander Pope:

"All are but parts of one stupendous whole,
Whose Body Nature is—and God the Soul."

Nor are they Naturalists when they echo the melody of Charlotte Perkins Gilman:

"I feel His Breath in the blowing Wind,
His Pulse in the surging Sea,
And the sunlit Sod is the Breast of God
Whose strength we feel and see.
His Tenderness in the springing Grass,
His Beauty in the Flowers,
His Living Love in the Sun above—
All Here, and Near, and Ours."

Most of us, however, are not poets but only prosaic plodders doomed to daily drudgery. Where is our Heaven on earth? How can we with our feet on the treadmill dwell in God? By giving Him our hearts, thinking His thoughts, echoing His words, sharing His tasks, and submitting to His will. In return He gives us His constant care, provides a bounty that faileth never, proves Himself a conquering comrade in all our mental and spiritual conflicts, and lifts us "out of selfish individualism into fellowship with His Eternal Self and with His vast Family past, present and future." Goldsmith's Village Preacher lived in a "modest mansion" on "forty pounds a year," was "more bent to raise the wretched than to rise," and so preached that the "Truth from his lips prevailed with double sway,

And fools who came to scoff remained to pray.
The Service past, around the pious man
With ready zeal each honest rustic ran;
E'en children followed, with endearing wile,
And plucked his gown to share the good man's smile.
His ready smile a parent's warmth expressed;
Their welfare pleased him and their cares distressed;
To them his heart, his love, his griefs were given,
But all his serious thoughts had rest in Heaven.
As some tall cliff that lifts its awful form,
Swells from the vale and midway leaves the storm,
Though round its base the rolling clouds are spread,
Eternal sunshine settles on its head."

If we dwell in this Soul Castle while busy with the problems of pulpit and parish our fellows will know where to find us always—serving in the three temples of Mercy, Justice, and Truth. If we show to others the mercy we hope to receive from our Maker, hold the scales of justice with unerring balance without fear or favor, and champion truth alike for friend and foe, our whole community will recognize that we "sojourn in the world and yet apart." And thus finding us in God they will also find God. If we respond to every call of duty, meet all tests of temptation and hardship, "endure as seeing Him who is invisible," they will learn that real religion is not a cold creed but a devoted life, and that the Supreme Being is not only an unseen Personality but also a seen Power.

"God is a Force to give way to!
God is a Thing you have to do!"

The whole of life's duties may be condensed in one short sentence: Do the thing that ought to be done, at the time it ought to be done, and in the way it ought to be done. He who obeys this rule of conduct will find himself not only in but a part of God; not in a theological but an ethical sense, not an identity of personality but a kinship in spirit and purpose.

"God in the daily work we've done,
In the daily path we've trod?
Stand still, my heart, for I am a part—
I too—of the Living God!"

Robert Louis Stevenson, the Scotch poet and novelist, spent his life in a pathetic search for health for his frail body and truth for his restless spirit. Seven years before his death on the Samoan Islands he wrote the Requiem for his tombstone:

"Under the wide and starry sky,
Dig the grave and let me lie—
Glad did I live and gladly die,
And I laid me down with a will.
This be the verse you grave for me:
'Here he lies where he loved to be;
Home is the sailor, home from the sea,
And the hunter home from the hill.'"

A sympathetic critic of this "Swan Song" of the sufferer who had long been "an unresting traveler in the spiritual country," concludes that at last he "had come to rest upon certain great convictions in which his spirit had its home." For such sentiments as expressed in the Requiem "imply more than they express; perhaps they mean more than the speaker knows. In them we hear echoes of a Great Voice that calls Home the Thinker to Faith, the Struggler to Achievement, and the Dead from dying to new Faith. In all these the True Life is at once making 'for a land that is very far off,' yet at the same time it is ever coming Home."

MEMBERS OF THE GRADUATING CLASS!

Your faith in Biblical Revelation and your knowledge of Church History have convinced you that God has been the Home of His People in all past generations. It is for you to discover Him as your Home in the present generation. Your task is stupendous. Was ever an age like this? The foes of the Christian Religion are legion. They are found in Temples of Science, Halls of Philosophy, Schools of Sociology, Theological Seminaries, and Christian Churches. Next Tuesday night, with diplomas in hand, you will march down these aisles with high head, happy hearts, and swift steps. Six months from now with bowed heads, and hearts, and trembling voice you may lift your eyes on high and cry: "Where is the Lord God of Elijah?"

While you are calling men to bow before their Maker, some Sophomoric Scientist is calling them to worship the Molecule, the Atom, and the Electron. While you are preaching God is Spirit, some fool Philosopher is proclaiming Materialism: all is Matter. While you are urging the certainty of knowledge of spiritual reality, some know-nothing Agnostic declares that we cannot know any reality outside the realm of the five senses. While you are pleading with your young people to cultivate their Conscience, improve their Memory, and strengthen their Will, some Behaviouristic Psychologist tells them that they have no such invisible guides but are only jumping-jacks, moved by Environment outside and Complexes inside their bodies. While you are demanding of both young and old high standards in conduct, some Moral Outlaw replies that the day of authority is past, and that every person must decide for himself what is Right and what is Wrong. And while you are sweating over your sermon in the pulpit, half your flock will be "listening in" at their home radio, or "joy-riding" in their automobiles fifty miles away, or dozing in some picture show to escape "serious thought and the collection plate."

STAND STEADY AND KEEP SWEET!

Let none of these things move you. Elisha found the Lord God of Israel where He had always been—in the front of Israel's battles. You, too, will learn that the God of our fathers can give you patience, poise, and power in every conflict. You will soon discover only shallow Scientists and half-baked Theologians claim that Nature and Revelation are contradictory for the Works and the Word of God are always in harmony, and you will echo the verdict of the quaint old preacher: "God married Science and Religion in the Garden of Eden, and what God hath joined together, let not man put asunder." You will not worry over the skeptical crank who ventilates his mechanistic philosophy by claiming that you are only a human machine; but will silence him by asking: "Why does not a Ford crank itself?" Or, "Why does it not fill its empty gas tank?" Or, "Why does it not with its own intelligence repair its punctured tire?" There will be no need of more questions for by this time your human gas-bag is punctured and his shifting-gear deadlocked.

Nor will you spend sleepless nights over the latest Intellectual monstrosity—The Intelligentsia of Ethical Bankruptcy. These are they who assassinate all good manners and customs, hallowed by tradition; brand all social and moral reformers as "morons" and "yokels"; advocate a "go-as-you-please pace" in all conduct; and follow but one teacher—"the Prophet of Impulse." Giddy girls and brainless boys may applaud the Theological Professor who would bury the Ten Commandments. He said "Away with such fellows as 'Thou shalt' and 'Thou shalt not.' They are not fit to live in modern Society." But you, as serene dwellers in God, will remain quiet and content; for you will agree with Dean Brown that "The Ten Commandments have been knocking about the world a good while, and that they have a way of taking care of themselves, and, in the end, of justifying their existence."

Nor will you be unduly concerned over the new brand of Social Cynic who sneers at the silly Idealists who preach the Sermon on the Mount to be hard-boiled Industrial, Economic, and Political generation of our day. The Golden Rule, they say, is the wildest dream of insanity, and the only co-operation for human good must be compelled by the Law of Military Might, not by the Christian Law of Love. You will turn your back upon these Jingoes, enter your Church every Sabbath, join your peace-loving flock in the prayer: "Thy Kingdom come," and every day you will see His will being done in you and yours "as it is in heaven."

Nor dare you despair over the Spiritual Poverty of your Local Church. Many of your members may be "cave-dwellers," running to God only in sudden danger; but you will always find at least a few who "abide under the shadow of the Almighty." Listen to a preacher's wife: "I am not troubled with pessimism about life in general, but pessimism about the Church. Being a normal human being who sees sunrise and sunset and changing skies, I know that 'God's in His Heaven, and all's right with the World.' But the Church, our Church, what has it to do with God at all? The Choir that sings His praises on Sundays jazzes throughout the week. The Official Board whose business members do well for themselves have only the left-over of business acumen for the Church. Our Church members can present more alibis in summer Church attendance than a murder trial calls forth. The Sunday School muddles along, instructing children for an hour a week. Does any one take the Church seriously these days? I wonder!" But this good woman soon recovered her poise and swung from pessimism to optimism, as all intelligent, well-informed, and faithful Christians must do or else lose both reason and faith. Hear her conclusion: "Let us think in terms of Individuals. There is a group whose memory is precious to me, scattered individuals that I call 'gatekeepers in the House of the Lord,' men and women who choose to keep the Church 'high and lifted up' in their lives. There was a man who could sing, not well, but better than any one else in the congregation. And he always came to Church. Nobody knows but the unmusical pastor of a small church what that meant. There was the Financial Secretary who could not secure pledges nor collect them, but who reached into his own pocket and gave till it hurt. There was the Woman whose eye was on the Missionary Budget, and who always saw that the Ladies' Aid came across with their share. Then there were the Quiet Souls everywhere who Pray. One learns to know them by the clasp of their hands and the look in their eyes. No, the glory of the Church cannot depart while there are those who pray. The faithful few—the gatekeepers of the Temple—will they grow to a multitude who shall sing the Hallelujah Chorus around the Throne?" Yes, else your preaching is vain, and vain also your Master's mission of World Redemption.

And so the generations come and go, each with its strange names, its peculiar customs, and its changing battlefields. But the Home of the Soul is always the Eternal—"Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, and today, and forever." Wars may change the thrones of kings, and time may crumble the castles of the mightiest monarchs, but "the Imperial Race of Heaven has never lost its Regal Habitation."

APPEALS TO YOUNG MINISTERS

First—Let Your Generation Find You Dwelling in God.

Before you enter your first pulpit be sure of your own personal relationship and intimate association with the Invisible Person Whom you represent. How can you introduce Him to others if you yourself have only "speaking acquaintance" with Him? Constant companionship and identity of plan and purpose alone can qualify to preach with conviction and authority and power the quaint old message: "God created the Earth for Beast, the Sea for Fishes, the Air for Fowls, and Heaven for Angels and Stars. So that Man has no place in which to dwell except in God."

Second—Let Your Parish Find Your Parsonage a Heaven on Earth.

Let it be the Mecca to which your "pilgrims of the night" come for light. Here lead your doubters into faith, your tempted into strength, your discouraged into hope and your sorrowful into solance. As the Shunamite woman with broken heart rushed in her grief to the hut of Elisha, so may your stricken parishioners turn in silence from every Gehazi to unburden their hearts to their well-beloved pastor! And happy indeed your lot if your wife be a worthy helpmate; for then she may share the exalted tribute paid to Mrs. Mattox, in Hangchow, China. Robert Speer tells us that she "had been accustomed to invite little children to her home and make them happy there. Once a Christian teacher was talking to some of them and asked: 'Where do you want to go when you die? To Heaven?' 'No,' they answered. 'To Hell?' 'No.' 'Where then do you want to go?' They replied: 'To Mrs. Mattox's house.'"

EXTRACTS FROM A LETTER FROM PAUL F. WARNER, JAPAN

Dear Dr. Haddaway:

Ever since I heard that you had been elected as the new Executive Secretary to the Board of Missions, I have been wanting to write to you. Various activities, however, have reduced my time for writing to a minimum. But I do want to send at least a personal word of greeting and felicitation. Your election as secretary is a great source of satisfaction to me persnoally. Having been associated with you in Baltimore and the Maryland Conference I have a first-hand knowledge of your splendid abilities. It is needless to say that I have perfect confidence in you. The fact that others of our Mission have expressed a similar opinion is particularly gratifying to me. It means so much to us missionaries to have full confidence in the Board and its officers. Of course there will be many problems to be solved as a result of the new union. It is my prayer that everything will work out for the best interests of the Kingdom. May God bless you abundantly and use you largely in your new field of service.

The work has been moving steadily at all points. There have been ten baptisms and thirty-one accessions to the various missions. Most of these have been young people of great promise for the future. As district superintendent, I have baptized most of these people and have had the opportunity to meet them personally. There are fifty-five inquirers enrolled, and we are hoping and praying and working that they also may come to know Jesus Christ as their Lord and Savior. More than three thousand tracts have been distributed, and nearly four hundred calls have been made during the quarter. The seed has been faithfully sown. Let us pray the Lord of the harvest for an abundant increase.

One of the outstanding events of the quarter has been the loss of one of our missions. But we are glad to report that it is a progressive loss. Kuwana Mission has become a Conference church. Despaired of several years ago, under the leadership of Pastor Tamura it has taken on new life, and from October 1st will function as a Conference church. It has met the membership and financial requirements of the Conference easily. For the present the Mission's financial responsibility remaining the same; the church of course has raised the amount necessary to meet the Conference requirements, and hereafter will not appear in our reports. We know that you will rejoice with us and join with us in prayers of thanksgiving for Kuwana's achievement. Surely "we shall reap in due season, if we faint not." Sometimes we (of little faith) despair of the time and money and effort that we have apparently vainly spent at some particular point. But who knows when God may give the increase? Be patient with us, brethren, when our work does not progress as rapidly as we hope. Witness Kuwana's success! With undiminished faith, and unslackened hand, let us await His good pleasure.

Since there are but two mission stations in the Yokohama district they may well be reported here also. The work at Oyama continues the same without any startling developments. The work at Tsurumi, however, requires special mention. Our chapel there is supplied by one of our theological students, M. Ohashi, a young man of exceptional earnestness and ability. He has been doing a fine work there. On Sunday, September 16, I visited Oyama, where I preached and conducted a communion service. In the evening I went to Tsurumi, where we had a very helpful communion service together. Less than two days later, on the morning of the 18th, the building which we had rented as a chapel was destroyed by fire!

The origin of the fire is unknown, but it was probably defective wiring. There was no one living in the building at the time. We wish the Misson could afford to keep some one at each of its chapels, not only for the sake of caring for the property, but rather to make the most of every opportunity to spread the Gospel. Of course we lost all our furnishings in the Tsumuri chapel, including a good organ. (If some church at home has an organ to send us, it would be fine, but) the Tsurumi people are going to work heroically. They wish to buy a new organ themselves, with a little aid from the mission! We have rented another place, somewhat smaller but in a much better location, and for less money. The work is going forward after but little interruption. In the near future we hope to have a much better place for our meetings. The mayor of Tsurumi district (which has now become a part of Yokohama City), although not a Christian, is much interested in our work. His daughter is one of our most loyal members. He is willing to build us a building suitable to our needs, on a piece of ground that he owns, and rent it to us for a period of years. If the Mission consents to such a plan, the work at Tsurumi ought to develop very rapidly. If these things come to pass, the particular moving cause will have been the fire. What first appeared to be a calamity has become a blessing! Surely God moves in a myterious, yet none the less wonderful, way!

THE QUADRENNIAL SESSION OF THE FEDERAL COUNCIL

Rev. J. C. Broomfield, D.D.

It was my privilege to attend the Sixth Quadrennial Session of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, held in Rochester, N. Y., December 5 to 12, and to serve on its Committee of One Hundred having in charge the program, and on its Business Committee, to which all business was referred for review and recommendation to the Council.

Because of the intimacy of contact, I was in a position to receive some very definite impressions, and these I desire to share with you.

The Council is composed of twenty-eight denominational units, and with few exceptions all were present.

The quadrennial meeting of the Council can be regarded as the most significant gathering of Protestantism in America.

When the Council was created in 1908, it was composed exclusively of denominational units. In the meantime other units of united Protestant forces have been admitted, not into membership, but into affiliated relationship, and into administrative responsibility.

In this session, insistent demands from certain groups—such as local and state councils—and urgent appeals from other groups were made for membership in the Council.

To meet the situation a Committee on Function and Structure of the Federal Council was authorized, and directed to report to the quadrennial meeting in 1932.

If these demands and appeals are granted, the name of the Council may have to read, "The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ and Allied Agencies in America."

I question the value of this prospective omnibus.

The Seneca Hotel was chosen as headquarters for the Council, and under its roof all the delegates were housed and practically all of the meetings held. This made possible a very refreshing social situation.

I was much impressed with the apparent strength and fineness of the men and women in attendance. It was not difficult to conclude that they are among the best the churches can provide, and it was a real delight to mingle with them.

The program provided for three types of meeting—conference in the morning, business session in the afternoon, and inspirational public service in the evening.

In the discussions, in the conference and business sessions, a very small proportion of the delegates participated, and in this small proportion by far the major part was that composed of secretaries of commissions or councils, or those in official position. In this Council of Churches the voice of the pastorate was strangely silent. This ought not to be.

I was impressed also with the apparent secretarial and denominational group consciousness, and with the equally apparent lack of Council consciousness.

To me the Council as a whole manifested a strange hesitancy to defend the acknowledged faith of its units, or to assume corporate responsibility in the choice of new paths, and plans for advance therein.

The Council seemed unable to become articulate. Christian courtesy seemed to stifle Christian courage. There was virtually no willingness to display the sword of Christ when necessary. It seemed impossible to bring the Council down out of its idealism. It was not found walking amid the realism of the daily experiences of man and nations. It talked down to these, but seemed hesitant to do more.

The bigness made the meetings of the Council top-heavy in their emphasis of the Christian ethic, and lacking in their emphasis of the Christian dynamic. Christianity as popularly understood, rather than Christ, was pre-eminent.

This must have been in the mind of the speaker who referred to the "impulsive activism of socially-minded Christians in these days," and to the paralysis of analysis from which we are suffering.

I was reminded of the words of the late Dr. Jowett to the special meeting of the Council held in 1917 in Washington, D. C., when he said: "If you Americans would do less organizing and more agonizing, you would accomplish more."

To me the axis on which the meetings revolved was a question mark. Nearly every new problem, and every new path, was introduced interrogatively. The vision of the Council seemed reasonably clear, but it did not seem sure enough of itself to make the adventure to the limit of its function.

It found itself inevitably seeking shelter under lee of the Administration Committee, the Executive Committee, or the next quadrennial session.

The need of the Council is not more program, but more and greater prophets; not more questions, but more efficient answers to the questions we already have.

The hope of the situation to me is in the fact that the delegates who recognized the call to the church to take advance positions in Kingdom strategy, but hesitated to participate in adopting a Council program relating thereto, will go back to their own denominations and churches, to interest their people in heeding this call.

This leads me to say that notwithstanding my disappointment in some regards, the gathering was eminently worthwhile.

The masterly address of Dr. Cadman on "The Genius of the Protestant Movement, and Its Contribution to the Life of Mankind"; the soul-thrilling sweep of the address of Dr. Speer as he cried out: "An energy that could conquer death, can conquer anything else! Anything is liable to happen in a world in which Jesus is alive again"; the inimitable interpretation by Dr. Stanley Jones of "The Christ of the Final Word"; and the plea of the veteran of Methodist bishops; Bishop Cranston, for less dependence on mere intellectualism, and greater dependence on the Holy Spirit—these and many other deliverances abundantly repaid the visit to Rochester.

P. S.—The other members of our delegation present were Drs. Davis, Brown, Day, and Daugherty. Drs. Makosky and Smith, of the Maryland Conference, and Brothers Wills and Pugh were unable to attend.

Dr. Haddaway, who was in Rochester in connection with letting the contracts for our new Centenary Church, attended several of the sessions.

UNTO US A CHILD IS BORN

Blest Trinity! what wonders Thou hast done!
How glorious Thy unveiling to the sons of men!
The years and centuries passed, and lo, the Son
Came as a little Child in Bethlehem.
He came, whose goings forth had been of old—
The "Scepter out of Israel, the Star
Of Jacob"—Balaam His nation thus foretold;
His tribe of Judah Jacob saw afar;
His family inspired Isaiah said
Would be the stem of Jesse, and His name
The angel gave as Jesus ere His kingly head
Lay on His Virgin mother's breast. He came,
This heir of all things, who had also made
The world! Though mighty God, as Prince of Peace,
His glory with the Father He had laid
Aside; for He had come to bring release
From penalty of sin. O stars of morn,
Sing in sweet harmony! To us is born
This Holy Child—"the Lord our righteousness!"
We are redeemed! The Lord has come to bless!

—Grace W. Haight.

THE CHRISTIAN'S DUTY

Remember, man, if the grace of God hath taken hold of thy soul, thou art a man of another world, and, indeed, a subject of another and more noble kingdom—the kingdom of God—which is the kingdom of the gospel, of faith, of grace, of righteousness, and the kingdom of heaven hereafter. In those things thou shouldst exercise thyself, not making heavenly things, which God hath bestowed upon thee, stoop to things that are of the world; but rather here beat down the body, hoist up thy mind to the things that are above, and practically hold forth before all the world the blessed word of life.—John Bunyan.

OPTIMISM | The President's Letter | EVANGELISM

Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples.—John 15:8.

Fairview-Glen Raven

Dec. 15-16.—On Saturday, December 15, we were with this charge in quarterly conference at Fairview church. Only a very small number of the officials were present—three from Fairview and two from Glen Raven. However, the business of the conference was transacted. Pastor Neese had worked out the apportionments for each church and charted them on a large sheet of paper. The apportionments were endorsed by the conference, and will be posted in each church. Reports showed both Sunday schools active, and each makes a monthly contribution to the Children's Home. Reports showed but little financial progress to date. The conference was urged to raise something at once on pastor's salary, a need which they recognized, and to which they will attend. We urged that the apportionments for each church be assessed, as ordered by the last conference.

On Sunday, at 11 a. m., we preached at Glen Raven. Several were present, and the spirit of the service good. We believe that this charge has a good future, and we trust that every necessary effort may be made to keep the work up to the opportunities. Bro. Neese and his family are happy in their new field. They have been gladly received, and the work for the new year is being wisely and earnestly planned. We expect a year of progress on this charge. Our visit with them was enjoyed.

Quarterly Conferences

We must find some way of getting more of the officials present at these meetings. It often happens that only a very small number make plans that affect hundreds of members. This is not well, and should not be so. Best results always follow when most people have a part in shaping the plans of the church. We suggest that pastors and officials study this problem, and try to arrange for holding the quarterly meetings at a time when most officials and other members of the church can be present.

College Assessment

We presume that this matter has been presented at most of our churches, and it is gratifying that a considerable amount has been paid in. However, many churches have not yet finished their totals. We urge that the matter be pressed during the remainder of this month, and that every dollar possible be sent in to Treasurer Brown by January 1.

Conference Order

The Winston conference ordered that the full amount of the budget apportioned to each church—pastor's salary and all conference claims—be assessed to the membership, each member being allowed to make his own assessment where he chooses to do so. Where members do not assess themselves, the stewards and trustees are instructed to assess them, as per the church law. Pastors and stewards will please see that this order of the conference is carried out.

Christmas Greetings

It is too close to Christmas to talk shop much this week, so we are stopping right here. Our hearty Christmas greetings go with this letter to all of our conference family, and to all readers throughout our connection. We hope and pray that the season for all may be one of happiness and peace, and that the Christ of Bethlehem's manger may be at the center of all our joys.

"O holy Child of Bethlehem,
Descend to us, we pray;
Cast out our sins, and enter in,
Be born in us today.
We hear the Christmas angels
The great glad tidings tell;
O come to us, abide with us,
Our Lord Emmanuel."

Appointments

Dec. 23.—Liberty, 11 a. m., preaching service.

Dec. 30.—Greer's church, 11 a. m., corner-stone laying.

Jan. 13.—State Street, 11 a. m., anniversary of the opening of the Sunday school building.

"And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host, praising God, and saying,

"Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

Fraternally,

Third—Let Your Community Find You on Frontiers.

You are to dwell not only with the God of the Past but of the Present and the Future. You are to be the leaders in every adventure of faith. While a Conservative with all discoveries vital and permanent, be a Progressive looking "for more light and truth to break forth from His Word." In his "New Frontiers of Faith," Charles W. Gilkey reminds us that "we cannot go back, even if we would, to the simpler days and the simpler life that are forever behind us now. We can only go across the Old Frontiers into a Twentieth Century world complicated by economic and political, racial and social problems and relationships of which our fathers never dreamed. But it is the perennial faith and the recurrent discovery of vital religion that this New World also is God's Country and that we shall find Him not behind us, but with us, as we go forward." Rise to His challenge for Leadership in your day, and victory shall be yours!

"Thrice blest is he to whom is given
The instinct that tells
That God is on the field
When He is most invisible."

THE PEACE PACT

It is needless to remark that now the hurly burly of the presidential contest has passed, the churches of the nation await with eager expectation the senate's action upon the Kellogg Pact. As Christmas draws near, what better gift could it bring to America and through her to the world than the senate's prompt, cordial and united ratification of this great instrument?

OUR STORY PAGE

MRS. M'GUIRE'S CHRISTMAS TREE

Little Mrs. McGuire was curious and who would not be, if they had lived next door to a little empty brown house for three years, and especially loved company, and detested an empty house.

She was washing her breakfast dishes that morning when a moving van had stopped next door, followed by a shabby old auto, in which were a motherly looking woman and five children ranging in age from fifteen to three years.

"Praises be," said little Mrs. McGuire, "I'm going to have neighbors at last." She watched as they went slowly up the walk, looking around at the unkempt yard, and neglected garden.

Her eyes followed the children wistfully, for she dearly loved children, and she noticed how mannerly and considerate these seemed to be. "I'll bake them a warm apple pie for their dinner. How fortunate it is that brother Jim brought in that sack of apples this morning," she thought.

About eleven o'clock, as she was taking the delicious pie out of the oven, little Mary from next door knocked at the kitchen door.

"Could you please tell us where we get our drinking water?" she said.

"Sure," said Mrs. McGuire. "Right here at my well; there right at the corner." Talking busily, she showed the child where the well was, her keen old eyes all the time taking note of the worn but clean dress, and the thin shoes. "They are very poor, but they are good respectable people," she thought, "I know I am going to like them just fine."

Her good opinion of her neighbors had not changed any when the fall months had sped by, and it only lacked two weeks till Christmas. Her brother, who had brought her a load of wood, asked how her neighbors were making out.

"Sure, and they are the best neighbors a body could ever want," she said, "but it's plain it is hard to keep them youngsters in decent clothes, and feed them. The mother sews and John works after school, and little Edward sells papers, but it takes it all, and nothing to spare. But with all they have to do, they never forget this old woman. They run her errands, carry in her coal, and shovel her paths. I sure do like them children."

One day she was over in the little Keith home, watching Mrs. Keith as she sewed. Mary just home from school was telling her mother about some Christmas trees she had seen down town.

"Mamma, couldn't we have just a little tiny tree this Christmas? Please say 'Yes.' A little one would not cost much."

"Not this year, dear," said her mother, "but I know you children will be happy and contented even if we do not have a tree or gifts this year."

As little Mrs. McGuire slipped out the door and went home, she said, "Now just as sure as my name is McGuire, them children is going to have a tree this Christmas. I haven't much more money than their Ma, but I don't have to worry and plan to get enough to feed them growing youngsters, like she does."

She was standing at her kitchen window the next day when her eyes fell on a straight little evergreen which stood almost on the line between her little home and the little brown house.

"Why Pa's tree, that he planted the year he died, would make the finest Christmas tree, but law me, I just couldn't bear to cut that down. Sure, I'd not be doin' right to do it."

But she could not get the thought out of her head, of what a beautiful Christmas tree it would make. She was standing under it the next day, peering up into the branches, when Mrs. Keith called to her, "Are you looking for fruit in that tree?" she laughed.

"If this wasn't Pa's tree I would cut it for the children's Christmas," she said.

"Now dear Mrs. McGuire, please don't let what those children said about a Christmas tree worry you."

"Well," said little Mrs. McGuire, "I just think so much of them youngsters and they do so much for this old woman that I have a mind to cut down this tree."

"You will do nothing of the kind. Why dear Mrs. McGuire, I would not let you do it." Then a happy thought came to Mrs. Keith.

"Why—perhaps we could trim it a little and use it right there."

"Praises be, would the children think it a rale Christmas tree?"

"Oh, they would be just wild with delight. You know what outdoor children they are."

"It looks like Mr. McGuire planted it for that," said Mrs. McGuire happily.

"I have a few trimmings, and the boys would gladly work nights to get candles."

"No, no, I want it to be a surprise for the boys. We'll let brother Jim in on this. He has no children, and he'll be glad to help."

"Aunt Marie gave me a coat to make over for Mary," said Mrs. Keith. "I thought I could not possibly do it before Christmas, but I'll sit up nights and get it done, and I can make Jean's doll a new coat out of the pieces left over."

"Pa had a foine pocket knife, I don't know of any one I'd rather have it than John, an' I'm goin' to give Edward his game of checkers. Then you know brother Jim keeps me in lard and flour. I'm goin' to make a whooping big batch of doughnuts, and cut out all kinds of things for the children. I'm going to make some tarts too, and little punkin pies, and popcorn balls and—and—"

"Dear Mrs. McGuire, I must not let you do so much."

"Sure an' don't my brother kape me in eats, more than I can use? 'Tis a pity if I can't share my good things with the children," said little Mrs. McGuire.

The two weeks before Christmas went all too fast for the two busy, happy women. The children were all to take part in their Sabbath school entertainment, and were so busy learning their recitations and songs that they did not notice their mother's and Mrs. McGuire's mysterious ways.

The night before Christmas, they were all dressed and ready to start on the long walk to the church, when Mrs. McGuire came running in.

"Brother Jim says if you are all ready, you can ride up town with him, and he will wait till after the program and bring you home."

"Oh, won't that be fun," shouted the children, who had often wanted a ride in Mr. Green's big car. "But Mamma isn't ready yet. Will he wait just a minute?"

"Mamma has some sewing she just must get done before tomorrow," said their mother, shooing them all into the car. The children looked very sober as Mr. Green started the car.

"What's the matter?" said he.

"It seems so strange to go to church without Mamma," they said, but Mr. Green was so comical, and said so many funny things they were soon enjoying the pleasant ride to the utmost.

The church was crowded, and all listened while the minister told them the ever new story of Christ coming as a little child and His love for the little children. Then after the children had all spoken their recitations, and sung their Christmas songs, and the delicious treat of home-made candy and oranges and apples had been distributed, they were surprised to find Mr. Green waiting at the door for them.

"Oh," said little Jean, "did you hear me say my piece?"

"I sure did," he answered, "I'll tell your Mother you did fine."

They were soon on their way home. As they grew near, Mary was the first to see the light and the beauty of Mrs. McGuire's tree, as it glistened and sparkled in the frosty air.

"Oh, oh, look, oh look," she cried.

"Hey there, you'll fall out of this bus if you stand up like that," said Mr. Green, but he soon had all he could do to keep the rest of the children from falling out. When he stopped the car they rushed pell mell, helter skelter to the tree.

Out came happy Mrs. McGuire and their mother, acting as surprised as the children themselves, and slipping away when they plied them with eager questions.

As Mr. Green, on a stepladder, played Santa Claus, his sister said, "Leave the strings of popcorn and the cranberries, James."

It was long after midnight when the children got to bed, and then they were so happy they talked till nearly morning.

The next day as Mrs. Keith, the girls, and Mrs. McGuire were putting the delicious dinner, furnished by both families, and Mr. Green, on the table, little Edward ran in out of breath.

"Oh come! Come and see! The birds are having the dandiest Christmas dinner in our Christmas tree."—The Presbyterian.

WENT HOME ON A PROMISE

It is related of the saintly Frances Ridley Havergal that on the last day of her life she asked a friend to read to her the forty-second chapter of Isaiah.

When the friend read the sixth verse, "I, the Lord, have called thee in righteousness, and will hold thine hand, and will keep thee," Miss Havergal stopped her.

"Called—held—kept—used," she whispered. "Well, I'll just go home on that."

And she did "go home on that," as on a celestial chariot, and the homegoing was a triumph, with an abundant entrance into the city of God. What word of God have you to go home on?—Selected.

THE TREASURE OF UNANSWERED PRAYER

Not every true prayer is answered in the way that it is offered. The petitioner's ignorance of the mind of God makes many a supplication unavailing. The indifference or impenitence of the person prayed for keeps back the answer of many an earnest prayer. A measure of self-interest may nullify a multitude of petitions at the throne of grace.

Some of the greatest and best prayers of history must be credited to the unanswered list. Jesus' prayer in the garden for deliverance was not answered. And there is no evidence that His prayer on the cross for His crucifiers to be forgiven was ever answered. Paul's thrice offered prayer that the thorn in the flesh be removed was not answered. We are commanded to pray for all men, but a large number of these fail to get any benefit from them. Christ enjoined prayer for enemies, but there is no assurance that all enemies are blessed or helped by these prayers. In the world war both sides prayed earnestly for final victory, and God could not answer all these prayers.

But all true and believing prayer is answered either by action, reaction, or heavenly treasure. There is an illuminating statement from the lips of Jesus, setting forth how prayer may react richly in behalf of the one who offers it. In the commission of the seventy Jesus said: "And into whatsoever house ye enter, first say, Peace be to this house. And if the son of peace be there, your peace shall rest upon it: if not, it shall turn to you again." So often a prayer of intercession is not answered because of the unreadiness of the person prayed for to receive the blessing; but a proportionate blessing reacts upon the intercessor. So all prayer, like giving, may bless either the supplicant or the beneficiary, or both.

In Rev. 5:8 there is mention of "golden vials, full of odors, which are the prayers of the saints." These stored-up prayers are most likely unanswered prayers, placed to the eternal credit of faithful saints.

The gymnastic value of supplication should not be lost sight of. No exercise of the soul brings to it more strength than that of prayer. It was Jacob's wrestling that brought him power with God and with men and enabled him to prevail. In the persevering exercise of prayer the soul breathes the invigorating atmosphere of another world. And no such breathing can be lost.

GOD'S WAY

"Let no man when he says, 'Our Father which art in heaven' suppose that he addresses a God without any color of strength, of equity, or of penalty. He is a God who loves you so that He will not suffer wickedness in you, and that if it be needful to purge wickedness out from you by exquisite pains, will employ the pains to purge it out. A God of love and justice will do that which is necessary to be done in order to redeem a soul from death; and whether pains and penalty will be now or hereafter, it will be averaged to the measure of necessity."—Selected.

EXPERIENCE MAKES FOR EFFECTIVENESS

A minister of deep religious experience is always effective. I care not how poor his voice is, or how uncomely his countenance, or how awkward his gestures, or how shabby his clothes, or how lame his grammar. By taking care of our own vineyard, we learn how to help others in the care of theirs.—Spurgeon.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

Hymn.
Opening prayer.
Announcements.
Leader's talk.
Scripture lesson.
Poem.
Discussion of topics.
Special music.
Answering of questions.
Season of singing.
Open "story" period for all.
Sentence prayers.
Ten-minute Bible reading.
Christmas story.
Mizpah.

Outline for Leader

The topic for this meeting, "Worshiping Christ in Story and Song," is the last in our series of Christmas lessons. First, we learned "How a Christian's Christmas Should Be Different," and last meeting we studied about "God's Christmas Gift to the World."

The greatest songs that have ever been written have had Christ for a theme.

The songs which we are going to talk about tonight are the ones which honor Christ as the angels did above the hills of Bethlehem.

The other division of our service is concerning the stories written about Christmas. Some of these are based on the idea of Santa Claus, Christmas gifts, and the like. But the ones that honor Christ are the ones exalting Him by telling the story of His birth.

We are going to sing a number of the songs and then we would like for a number of the members to give us a story which helped you to love and appreciate the Saviour.

Topics for Discussion

1. My favorite Christmas song.
2. My favorite Christmas story.

Questions to Be Answered

1. How can we increase the use of songs that tell the story of Jesus?

2. How can we increase the influence of stories that help people to worship Christ?

Suitable Songs

"Holy Night," "Christ Is King," "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name," "Rock of Ages," "I Love Him," "All Praise to Him," "More About Jesus," "Praise the Name of Jesus," "Sweeter As the Years Go By," "Tell Me the Story of Jesus," "Jesus Is All the World to Me," "He's a Wonderful Saviour to Me," "Since Jesus Came Into My Heart," "Jesus Is All the World to Me."

Poetry to the Point

THE HEART'S ADORATION

"Brightest and best of the sons of the morning,
Dawn on our darkness, and lend us thine aid!
Star of the East, the horizon adorning,
Guide where our infant Redeemer is laid!

"Cold on His cradle the dewdrops are shining;
Low lies His head with the beasts of the stall;
Angels adore Him in slumber reclining,
Maker and Monarch and Saviour of all.

"Say, shall we yield Him, in costly devotion
Odors of Edom and offerings divine,
Gems of the mountain and pearls of the ocean,
Myrrh from the forest or gold from the mine?

"Vainly we offer each ample oblation,
Vainly with gifts would His favor secure;
Richer by far is the heart's adoration,
Dearer to God are the prayers of the poor."

—Reginald Heber.

OLD YADKIN AGAIN

If a few more like Miss Vera Garrett could be found the amount necessary to install "Old Yadkin" would soon be in hand. She noticed that the fund was not growing as rapidly as it should and by personal correspondence among friends she was able to send me a nice check for $8.00. Who will be next to take this matter to a number of friends and in this way be able to help out so that the matter can be closed out.

Previously reported in cash and pledges	$ 8.00
Rev. H. S. B. Thompson, cash	1.00
Rev. S. W. Taylor, pledge	1.00
Rev. J. D. Williams, D. D., pledge,	1.00

BIOGRAPHY OF JOHN EATON BURROUGHS
(1843-1926)

Mr. John Eaton Burroughs was born in what was then Granville County, in an old homestead known as the "old Burroughs place," about two and one-half miles southeast of Dabney, on the Henderson road, March 17, 1843. This day is nationally observed by the Irish as "Irishman's Day." The place is now owned by Mr. William Ellington, who has built a house within a few yards of the old homestead, thus showing quite a contrast in the homes of former days with those of today. The house is a large two-story house with a number of large rooms, each of which has extremely large fireplaces and doors. It is located in the center of a great green lawn, only a few yards from the road. On the left side of the house is a well of refreshing water. The old stables and other buildings have been torn down and replaced with new ones. Several old walnut and locust trees stand in the yard, which would actually tell one that it is an old place, for people of olden days believed in having locusts, out of which they made beer which they served when their intimate friends came to call on them.

His mother was Miss Rebecca Turner before her marriage to Mr. Basil Burroughs. Their ancestors came from England.

Mr. Burroughs' boyhood days resemble those of other boys of his day. They had very little school education. He walked several miles to a little one-teacher school located in an old straw field. "Readin', writin', and 'rithmetic" constituted his course of study. He did not have paper and pencils, but a slate, which lasted a lifetime unless carelessly broken, and a hard lead pencil. For instance, one spelling book, commonly known as "Webster's Blue-Back Spelling Book," lasted one until his education was complete. He went bare-foot until he was grown; otherwise, he wore wooden shoes to school, any many times on his way to school he would stop, build a fire and warm his hands and feet. His lunch was far from being elaborate and fancy, although as good as that of anyone else of his day.

The chief means of transportation was on aa ox-cart, wagon, or buggy. On Sunday his family rose early, prepared dinner and went to church on a wagon to spend the day.

Mr. Burroughs was a tall, slender, blue-eyed, light-haired and graceful young man.

He lived with parents on the farm until he was about twenty years of age. He then married Miss Mary Sue Glover. It is very interesting to hear her tell of the night that she became acquainted with Mr. Burroughs. It was at a party given at the home of her friend. She talked to him at the party and, as would now be said, "loved at first sight." Miss Glover, as she was then known, and several other girls stayed all night with her friend, as it was raining and quite a long distance home and she said that she couldn't go to sleep; therefore, she wouldn't let any of the other girls sleep, so they stayed awake all night, talking and laughing. Miss Glover was very beautiful in her younger days and mischievous, also. From that nigh on Mr. Burroughs and Miss Glover were sweethearts until their marriage, July 4, 1864.

To this happy couple were born seven children—four girls and three boys. Two children died while infants and one after she was grown. Three are still living.

Mr. Burroughs, though only a young boy, offered his service as a soldier, but did not fight in the Civil War. He served in the army of the War Between the States in Company K, 54th Regiment, and always held a tender spot for his old comrades who were less fortunate than himself. After remaining in the army a while, Colonel John Windbush selected him from the other men as an express messenger on the Raleigh and Gaston Railroad, now old Seaboard. After securing this position he moved his family to Raleigh. His brothers fought in the war, one of whom died of typhoid fever while serving.

When they were married Mrs. Burroughs' father gave to her as a present a servant. This servant remained with them for years. While they were living in Raleigh a troop of Yankees came by and persuaded her to go with them; so she ran away and has never been seen or heard of since.

Mr. Burroughs was express messenger for years. He then, wishing to change his occupation, moved to what is now Dabney and built a home. There was only a church and one house –a section foreman's. After building a house he built a store and began his trade of merchandise. He was elected postmaster and remained at this position quite a while. He was one of the first men in this vicinity to propose education. A small school was built and grew by leaps and bounds until it came to be known as the Dabney Academy. He was elected as a member of the board of committeemen. As a member of the board of county commissioners he probably did more than anyone else, in a public capacity, for the county he loved so well. He was re-elected again and again to this responsible position and stood for economy, progressively fostered, and wished all to have opportunity for the best that life holds. His idea was that roads and education should have a prior claim upon the tax-payers and that all things should be economically administered, so that childhood should have the best possible chance for an education.

He was superintendent of the Sunday school at Harris Chapel a greater part of his life. He was a great churchman, although he never joined the church before he married. All of his people were Baptists, but when he married his wife moved her membership from Herman Methodist Episcopal church to Harris Chapel Methodist Protestant church. The two became two of the strongest and most loyal members of the church during its history at present.

After his children had left home he took his granddaughter, Victoria Olivia Clark, to rear. She lived with the two happy people until her marriage. They were very passionate toward their granddaughter.

He was elected as a member of the House of Representatives for one term. When this term expired he was re-elected by his friends as a member of the State Senate during the Reconstruction period in the old county of Granville. This was the session of 1901. He reserved the ninth seat. After Vance County was formed he again represented the counties of Vance and Warren in the Senate of North Carolina.

After his term in the Senate expired he was too old to accept this responsible position again but returned home and took up his former trade as a merchant. During his career as a merchant he met with many misfortunes. His store was destroyed by fire several times, but through his will power he replaced it with another.

He was a charter member of Henry F. Grainger Lodge No. 412, and walked with the brotherhood upon the level of good will to the end of his journey. He continued this trade until his heart failed him and he could no longer hold the position. His retirement from service disappointed many, friends as well as children, who when they entered the store looked for some candy or something nice. He was very devoted to children and won the favor of all he saw.

After his retirement from service he remained at home with his aged and devoted wife. He was a victim of heart disease for many years and on the last day of January, 1926, about 5 o'clock, he surrendered to the grim reaper and passed into a better world to meet many friends. He died at his home at Dabney, North Carolina, where he had been confined to his bed for about three weeks. He was 83 years, ten months and fourteen days old. Interment took place at Harris Chapel Methodist Protestant cemetery February 2, 1926. He is survived by ihs widow, after 64 years of conjugal felicity, beautiful to look upon; two sons, J. L. Burroughs, of Jacksonville, Florida, and W. L. Burroughs, of Washington, D. C.; one daughter, Mrs. S. W. Clark, of Dabney, North Carolina.

"Vance County has lost one of its best types of old Southern gentlemen in the passing of Senator Burroughs. He was a friend to the poor, a neighbor to all with whom he came in contact and an all-around Southern gentleman who lived a life of honorable usefulness and went hence loved by a multitude of the best citizens of Vance County," says Mr. Andrew Harris, a noted lawyer of Henderson.

RUBY McCANN, Great-Granddaughter.

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS TO MISSIONARY AUXILIARIES

As the Christmas season draws near we always think of the ones to whom we would like to send personal greetings and wishes for happiness and prosperity. It is impossible for me to write each one of you personally. There are many of you whose names I do not even know, so I am asking our mutual friend, the Herald, to carry to each man, woman and child in our missionary organization my best wishes.

In celebrating the birthday of the Christchild, may we each resolve anew to present to Him the very best we have—time, talents, money—everything. And may we strive more earnestly to be obedient to His last command and make next year one long to be remembered for what we do for missions.

In a recent letter from our dear Dr. Roberta Fleagle she asked me to give her love and best wishes to her friends in North Carolina. Even though she is no longer our missionary, she loves us and I am sure we love her.

One of the joys of a pastor's wife is in having so many friends, and I have many more by being associated with you in missionary work; so my joy is increased by that much.

May this Christmas bring to each of you all the joy and happiness you desire.

With love,
MRS. GEO. R. BROWN.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Chapel Hill, Davidson Circuit.—Our new preacher preached for us today. I think we'll like Brother Reed fine; he preached a good sermon and people seemed to listen attentively. Sickness was the cause of so few being at church.

Our Sunday school has been good till today; hope by next Sunday people will be well. We have our prayer meeting right after Sunday school every Sunday, except the third Sunday.

We were pleased to have Mr. and Mrs. Reed in our home for a short time today.

Wishing everybody a happy Christmas.

LIZZIE CRANFORD.

Elbaville.—Owing to sickness in our community, attendance at church was very small Sunday, although a very interesting and worth while sermon was presented to those present by the pastor. The Scripture lesson was taken from Saint Luke 2:1-20. Everyone enjoyed hearing him tell the story of "The Other Wise Man," since it is so near Christmas, the time of our dear Savior's birth, the time when we are all happy and enjoying the giving and receiving of gifts. We are planning to give our Christmas program Saturday night, December 22, at 7:15 o'clock. Everybody is invited. Our program is going to be interesting, especially to the primary folks. Also come to see and hear our play, "The Resurrection of Santa Claus," given by the large boys and girls. But the most interesting of all is going to be our "tree," one such as has never been in a country church before. We are very proud of it. Come!

We are proud of our young Ladies' Aid Society and the work it is doing. It sent a large supply of food to the Children's Home Sunday, which was carried by the pastor.

Christmas will soon be here, the happiest day of the year, and we trust that as we think of the Great Gift of Christmas, each follower of our Savior will consecrate himself anew to His service. Wishing all a merry Christmas and a happy, prosperous New Year. STELLA BAILEY, Reporter.

Dulin's, Mocksville Circuit.—Since I haven't seen any report written by our new reporter, I will try to make a little report myself. We are indeed glad to have with us this year our same pastor, Rev. J. W. Braxton, of High Point College. He seems to be a splendid young man. We are indeed thankful to Annual Conference for sending him back.

We seem to be getting along very well in this new conference year. The work is moving on in every source. Our Christian Endeavor Society, which was organized by Brother Braxton, is very successful and beneficial to the young people of this church. The Sunday school is still under the leadership of E. C. Hendrix, and is creating very much interest in things now just before Christmas.

Since the new conference year came our pastor has preached several inspiring and helpful sermons. He told us some beautiful Christmas stories yesterday about the wise men on Christmas night which was enjoyed by all who heard him.

The first quarterly conference was held at Bethel last Saturday afternoon.

The Sunday school is planning to give a Christmas program next Saturday night at 7:30 o'clock.

Since last conference we have purchased our new gas lamp and also a collection plate which we are indeed thankful for. The lamp was greatly needed.

Mrs. Cecilia Jones, one of our oldest members, had the misfortune of getting her hip broken last summer. She hasn't been to church much since, if any. She is greatly missed by all.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Foster seem to be greatly grieved about their young son, Theodore, who died last fall. They have not attended church since. If any of our former pastors are able to send them a word of cheer during the Christmas holidays we will be glad, or any of you other good people.

We are planning to get us some new church hymn books soon.

We wish you all a merry Christmas and a happy New Year.

LEONA HENDRIX, Reporter.

Spencer.—We are glad to report donations: For hymnals, Mrs. Marshall Hatley, $1.00, Albemarle Ct.; pledges paid on our new church, Mr. Walter Glass, $5.00, Moriah Ch.; Mr. George T. Penney, $50.00; Mr. W. L. Ward, treasurer Board of Church Extension, $40, to pay quarter interest on mortgage. We are very thankful and may the Lord bless the gifts and givers. "A friend in need is a friend indeed." This treasurer was in sympathy with Dr. Brown, so the more thankful. Our pastor, Rev. W. F. Ashburn, was with us again Sunday and brought us two inspiring messages, and we appreciate our pastor's talks on the Sunday school lesson in class. Owing to sickness (flu) in so many of our homes we have called off our Christmas program, I am sorry to say. MRS. A. L. MOORE.

Mt. Pleasant Church, Mt. Pleasant Circuit.—Quarterly conference was held Saturday afternoon at 2:30. The Sunday school is planning a Christmas tree for Monday, December 24, at 2 o'clock. The children of the first three classes and the cradle roll will be treated at this time.

The resignation of Mrs. J. S. Ferguson as trustee was accepted Sunday, and Miss Georgie Amick was elected to fill the vacancy.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Spoon and daughter, Miss Miriam, will entertain both the Senior and the Young People's Christian Endeavor Societies at their home on Monday evening, December 31.

LILLIAN SHOFFNER, Reporter.

Halifax.—We held our regular services yesterday. We preached at Harmony yesterday morning. The church here has been repaired since conference, which adds much to its appearance. We held our services at Eden in the afternoon. We are planning to hold three Christmas exercises on the work.

We are busy trying to raise our college assesment on the work. Bethesda church has more than subscribed the $50.00 apportioned to them, and I think the other churches will.

On Wednesday night the Bethesda church gave its pastor a big surprise. It was one of these big Methodist poundings. This is one advantage a preacher has that serves six churches; they get more than one pounding. This is the second round.

About 7 o'clock Wednesday night the members of Bethesda church began to ring the door bell, and when all had come, or sent their bundles, we found we had a great variety of good things to eat and wear. We will not undertake to give the names of those who contributed, as we might omit some name, and the editor might not have space, but I think that almost every family had a part in this pounding. And we feel profoundly grateful to every one who had part in this pounding, not only for its value, but for the spirit that prompted it. One member said in passing out: We want you to know we are glad you are back for another year. This made us feel good. We want to thank one of the Eden members for two dozen eggs.

Thanks to all and a merry Christmas.

C. L. SPENCER.

Kannapolis.—The usual services were held at our church Sunday. Mr. Lowdermilk brought a splendid message at each service. The congregation was good considering the flu.

The Ladies' Aid Society recently held a bazaar and chicken supper from which a nice little sum was realized. Mr. M. W. Henderson, the efficient superintendent of our Sunday school, is confined to his home by illness.

The many friends of Mrs. Lowdermilk will be pleased to learn that she is getting along nicely following a very serious operation at the Clinic hospital in Greensboro. We miss Mrs. Lowdermilk at all services and hope that she will soon be able to return to her home and church. We are planning to have a Christmas tree and treat for the children on Saturday night, December 22. The first quarterly conference will be held on next Friday night. Pray for us that we may succeed in our year's work for the Master.

MRS. C. B. PRICE, Reporter.

Hollister, Halifax Charge.—Our first quarterly conference was held December 7 with all churches represented except Harmony. We were very glad indeed to have President Taylor with us. He gave us a very helpful talk which I'm sure all enjoyed. The business of the conference was transacted in a spirit of love and harmony.

The attendance and interest in our Sunday school and preaching services are increasing. We hope they will continue to increase during the winter months.

Next Sunday morning at our regular preaching service we will try to raise our assessment for High Point College.

Our missionary societies met last Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. J. L. Alston. The president, Mrs. C. L. Spencer, presided, and a very interesting program was given by Mrs. Alston and other members. There were thirteen members present and four visitors. The hostess served delicious fruit salad and cake. The next meeting of the society will be with Mrs. T. C. Williams in January. Miss Kathleen Shearin will have charge of the program.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers for a merry Christmas and a happy New Year.

REPORTER.

Fairview, Glen Raven Charge.—Our first quarterly conference was held last Saturday at Fairview church with President Taylor presiding. Both churches were represented, but not many were present from either church. The usual business was transacted in a very harmonious manner. The budget was apportioned on basis of pastor's salary. It is our purpose now to place the entire budget before the church, and then break it up and distribute it among the individual members. We may not collect one hundred per cent, but we may reasonably expect greater results by using business-like methods.

Bro. Taylor delivered an able and inspiring sermon at Glen Raven Sunday morning. A fair-sized congregation was in attendance. On account of the flu some no doubt were kept away. The regular evening service also was well attended.

Committees are at work preparing for a Christmas service at each church on Christmas eve.

We have received supplies from the following: Mrs. Maude Amick, Mrs. C. C. Garrison, Mrs. Dan Ingle and Bro. Pete Troxler. We thank each donor.

The more we mingle with the people, and the better we become acquainted with them, the more pleased we are with our new field. Brethren of the charge, pray for us, that the word of God may be glorified.

WM. H. NEESE.

West Forsyth.—Owing to much sickness the attendance at our services last Sunday was smaller than usual. We were at Pleasant Hill for the 11 o'clock service and at Tabernacle at 2:30. We were glad to have Bro. Elwood Hunter worship with us in the preaching service. He is a University student.

We arrived at Tabernacle in time for the Sunday school which meets at 1:30 o'clock on the regular preaching appointments. Miss Gertrude Masoncup, one of the talented young women of the church, is superintendent and pianist, occupying both positions in a splendid manner. At the preaching service a vote was taken on the question of authorizing the church trustees to proceed with the covering of the church, and they will make this needed improvement as soon as the funds are collected for the purpose.

The second Sunday we were at Union Hill for the 11 o'clock service. Owing to sickness the attendance was reduced. We were invited to the splendid home of Brother J. E. Douglass, superintendent of the Sunday school, for dinner, and the pastor and family enjoyed a good dinner.

The meeting of the first quarterly conference was held at Pleasant Hill church the second Sunday afternoon. All of the churches except Union Hill were represented. The business was transacted in a spirit of harmony. Bro. J. Henry Speas was re-elected secretary of the conference. The pastor's report showed that he had made 31 pastoral calls, preached seven times and received $80 on salary during the period from November 11 to December 9. The pastor's recommendations were adopted by the conference. These included the acceptance of the Annual and General Conference budgets, the college assessment, the Gratitude Gift deficit, and superannuate fund assessment. Also that the assessment for the college be raised during December. The pastor's salary was apportioned to the diferent churches, some changes in the amounts being made. The next conference will be held at Stony Knoll church.

Pleasant Hill and Stony Knoll churches are preparing Christmas programs. The Stony Knoll church is to render their program on Saturday night and Pleasant Hill will have theirs on Christmas night, it is understood.

The pastor and family are grateful to the people of the charge for their kindly remembrances since our last report. We thank Bro. A. R. Long, Bro. Eugene Long, Mrs. Jasper Long, Mrs. C. G. Hunter, of Pleasant Hill church, and Mrs. S. M. Speas, of Stony Knoll church, for these gifts.

The appointment for next Sunday will be at Harmony Grove for the 11 o'clock service. This will complete the appointments for the month and for the old year. We will observe the Lord's Supper at that church next Sunday.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Draper.—Last Sunday afternoon Mr. J. J. Dodson's little girl was run over and killed by a hit and run driver at Reidsville, N. C., Clarence Talley by name. Funeral service was held in the Draper Baptist church on Tuesday afternoon. She was buried at Dan Mill cemetery at Draper, N. C.

We will have our Christmas entertainment on next Monday night. Sister Boyles is not as well as we would love to see her. We know her friends wish for her a speedy recovery.

Our pastor, Rev. W. T. Totten, went to Greensboro last Sunday to a funeral service.

S. C. CRAIG, Reporter.

Orange Charge.—Wednesday night, November 12th, a number of our friends from the Efland church and community came upon us suddenly and pounded us severely with things suitable for the kitchen pantry. We will not attempt to mention articles received nor names of givers.

May God's blessing be upon them all.

B. M. WILLIAMS AND FAMILY.

Kistler's Church.—The members are glad to welcome Rev. C. E. Ridge as pastor. Last Sunday at 11 a. m. he preached a most inspiring sermon.

We held our first quarterly conference at Kistler's church Saturday, December 1. Preaching at 11 a. m. The sermon was rendered by our new pastor. Dinner at 12 o'clock, after which the conference business was transacted harmoniously, the reports being very good.

On November 21 our pastor moved into our nice new parsonage, which we hope he will like very much. We are all glad to have him and his family in our midst.

Our Sunday school is progressing very nicely. We took our offering for the Children's Home Sunday and received $4.00.

Our appointment is the first Sunday at 11 a. m.

FLORA IVESTER.

Mecklenburg Charge.—Stallings and Beulah churches pounded us with good things to eat and some money. We very much appreciate these gifts and the spirit that prompted them. We pray the Lord to bless every one of them an hundred fold in this world and eternal life in the world to come. I love the people on the Mecklenburg Circuit and I feel by their actions that they love us. It is fine for the people and pastor to love each other as we do.

We held our first quarterly conference last Saturday, December 8. The new conference year is starting off fine. The outlook for the year is good, we trust, for a more progressive year than last year.

Yours in the service for the Master,

W. C. HALL, Pastor.

Welch Memorial, High Point.—We are happy to report that our attendanue for both Sunday sdhool and dhurch services is very good, despite the epidemic of influenza.

All departments of the church are co-operating to the fullest extent with our new pastor, Rev. Geo. L. Curry.

We had the children from the home with us for a Thanksgiving service, which was enjoyed by a large audience.

The Senior Christian Endeavor Society prepared 32 baskets for distribution among the unfortunate families of our city on Thanksgiving.

We are planning many and varied activities for the future. We have entered the new conference year with a very optimistic outlook, and, in fact, are expecting this to be a great year for Welch Memorial.

With best wishes to the Herald and its many readers.

LUTHER R. MEDLIN, Reporter.

Cleveland Circuit.—We left the good people of Davidson on November 21 for our new field of service on Cleveland circuit. Our four years' stay on Davidson circuit were pleasant and, we believe, profitable. We thank them for their many favors and kindnesses shown us. We reached our new field on the evening of the 21st and our property was unloaded in the new parsonage. It being dark when we arrived, we spent the first night in the home of Bro. Jno. A. Powell. We very much enjoyed the hospitality and Bro. Powell and his family.

We have been very kindly received by the people at all the churches. The parsonage has been partly furnished and our furnishings were moved free of charge. This helped us wonderfully, and we are thankful. We have had much company since moving here. This has been very helpful. Many who came have remembered us with articles such as a family needs. For all this we are grateful.

The parsonage is located within a few hundred yards of Oak Grove church. This enables the pastor's family to attend our own church and Sunday school.

Our first quarterly conference was held at Kistler's Church on December 1st. This was a splendid conference, well attended. Bro. Charlie Grant was re-elected secretary. The reports were encouraging. Pastor's salary paid to date. The conference authorized the parsonage trustees to build a barn, a garage, etc., finish the well, and present the bill at the next quarterly conference.

There is always lots of work to do to get things arranged, buildings completed at a new location, but we shall strive, both pastor and people, to make our new home one of attraction.

My people are pretty well taxed at this time with their local obligations, some of which I have mentioned, but I hope we will soon have this met so we will be ready to turn our attention to other interests of the kingdom.

The influenza epidemic is raging in our community at this writing and will no doubt affect our plans for Christmas exercises.

I will stand aside now to give room for others.

Wishing the editor and his big Herald family a mast joyful Christmas and a happy New Year. C. E. RIDGE.

Lawndale, N. C., Rt. 1, Dec. 12.

Tabernacle Charge.—Tabernacle church was delighted with the program given by the children from the Home a few Sundays ago. It was also a pleasure to have Dr. and Mrs. Dixon present and to have Dr. Dixon tell about the needs of the Home. Our offering was $46.29.

The work of the new conference year is starting off well. The Missionary Socities are very active, the C. E. Society holds helpful meetings, and the attendance for the preaching service is good. Plans were made at our first quarterly conference to raise all claims in full this year. We hope these plans can be worked successfully. All of our college assessment will, I think, be raised soon.

An entertainment and Christmas tree will be given at Tabernacle on the night of December 24.

Many of our members at Julian and Tabernacle are sick at the present time. We trust that they will soon be well again.

Thanks to Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Hanner and Miss Anna Hardin, of Julian, for appreciated pantry supplies.

H. L. ISLEY.

Weaverville.—While we read reports from other fields, we are happy to send in our first report from Weaverville. Arrived here November 20, through a blinding snow-storm, but to our delight we were not alone when arriving; at the parsonage everything lighted up and, my! what a family awaiting us. Supper, fire, friends, and everything to comfort our cold bodies and cheer our weary hearts.

Well, they treated us so nice and kind, wife and children couldn't think of getting homesick. But, to our surprise, this generosity hasn't ceased yet. Hearing a bit of commotion outside last Friday night after dark, I opened the door and the house just ran full of people who pounded us up proper with everything that could be thought of from candy roasters to chicken roosters. Well, I never got the least bit sore, although this was my first experience, and we really enjoyed it immensely.

We are happy with these good people, who are as loyal as we ever met, notwithstanding their number.

We had not arrived many days until called to the bedside of one of the oldest members of Weaverville church and community, who died November 28, 1928, at 8:30, aged 80 years and seven months.

Bro. John Wesley Gill was a member of the Methodist Protestant church for 60 years. He joined at the early age of 18. The community shall miss him, as well as the church. A man of sunny disposition, of unstained character and a Christian gentlemen of the highest order. He loved his church, was devoted to his family and was consecrated to its altar. But our loss is heaven's gain. Peace to his dust, and may God's blessings rest on the family who are left behind. Funeral was conducted by Rev. J. D. Cranford, assisted by the writer.

Q. L. JOYNER, Pastor.

Albemarle.—There has been quite an epidemic of flu among our members for the past few weeks, but our church services have continued, despite the small numbers present. Services Sunday were very well attended, showing that conditions are now improving.

Mrs. Anderson, our pastor's wife, with their two attractive children, Johnnie Lou and Fay, left last week for Atlanta, Georgia, where they will spend the holidays with relatives and friends. We wish them a very pleasant visit.

Services next Sunday morning will be held in the new church auditorium for the first time. The pews have been installed and carpeting is being laid this week, which will add the finishing touches to the already beautiful building. We shall have cause to be doubly thankful this Christmas by reason of being able to occupy this beautiful house of God just one year from the date of the burning of the old church. And we feel sure that every member that is able will make a special effort to be present next Sunday morning.

Our Christmas exercises, which are being supervised by Mrs. C. S. Moton, will be rendered next Sunday night, and will take the place of the regular preaching hour. The Christmas tree and treat for the children will be held in the basement of the church on Monday night. Everybody is cordially invited to these services.

MRS. JOHN U. WHITLOCK, Reporter.

First Church, Concord.—A merry Christmas and happy New Year to all readers of the Herald.

Just now a great many of our people are sick as a result of an epidemic of influenza that is sweeping the town. There are several hundred cases in the city and well nigh a hundred of our own people are suffering with it. Our reporter and her family are suffering with it. This accounts for my writing at this time. Fortunately there have been no deaths among our people as a result and we are delighted that none are seriously ill with it.

The work of the church continues steady and progressive. Many beautiful and worthwhile things are being accomplished. Only recently the Sunday school faculty presented the church with a beautiful and modern interchangeable Sunday School bulletin board. Mrs. J. R. Helms has also presented an extra tray with glasses for the individual communion set. The Adult Class of the Sunday school, B. F. Waddell, teacher, has furnished drain pipe for the conducting of the water from the new Sunday school building to the street. The pipe has been laid by Mr. J. L. Sides free of cost to the church. The Baraca Class has constructed a much-needed partition in the basement of the new building. The Ladies' Aid Society has built a beautiful lattice fence about the church grounds on the Moore street side.

The Beginners' Department of our Sunday school has recently equipped its room with a number of small tables for class work.

We are now looking forward to the Christmas services of the church. The Sunday services next Sunday will feature the Christmas spirit. Monday night a program will be rendered by the Primary and Junior Departments of the school, following by a Christmas tree and treat. G. H. HENDRY.

Pinnacle.—The Sunday school is holding out very well through the winter months.

Mr. J. F. Whitaker and son, J. L. Whitaker, attended the quarterly meeting at Pinnacle M. P. church last Saturday.

We are going to give an interesting Christmas program and a tree on Christmas eve night, beginning at 7 o'clock. We extend a hearty welcome to every one.

We are not having preaching during this month. Our pastor, Rev. Mr. Hunter, is on a vacation. We are expecting to have preaching again the first of the year.

A merry Christmas to all.

REPORTER.

Davidson.—We held our first quarterly conference Saturday; pulled it off in high gear. Brother Bethea was with us, and in his accustomed catchy way, rendered us very helpful service. He would make a fine presiding elder if our church would allow that distinction. But since we can't make him P. E. we will content ourselves by electing him president of our conference after President Taylor's time has expired. I am sure that if Davidson carries out her pledges, and we confidently expect her to do it, you will find her climbing the hill in high gear.

It appears to us that there is more wealth and better homes on this charge than any rural charge we have ever served. Oh, if it were just consecrated wealth!

The people have not lost the grace of inviting the preacher into their homes to spend the night. And they have more big, fat feather beds than we ever saw. Some say that mattresses are more sanitary, but for sleep inducers, to my mind, there is nothing that beats the goose product. The people have not discarded the old-fashioned way of loading the preacher's modern wagon. Monday morning, not satisfied with what we had eaten while there, Bro. Perly Walker and his good wife, whose hearts are bigger than they, loaded us with enough eats to supply us for more than a month. Mrs. Elliott, Mrs. Frank and Mrs. Lanier are continually remembering us in a substantial way. Others have remembered us, but we're just touching the high spots. No place to stop, but we must spare the editor.

We are having plenty of work to do here on this large field, but we find it a glorious thing to be presiding elder of such a large district. W. D. REED.

Asheville.—The Christian Endeavor Society held its December monthly meeting and elected the following officers: President, Nancy Clouse; vice-president, Mrs. F. W. Paschall; secretary, Clarice Younginer; treasurer, Walter Bevan. These were nominated by the following committee: Rev. Mr. Paschall, chairman; Mrs. E. H. Pratt, and Richard Hanner. In addition to the regular officers elected, Clarice Younginer was elected as reporter of the society and church at large.

A silver tea was given by Mrs. Y. D. Eller and Mrs. U. S. Miller at the home of Mrs. Eller on Ann street on Friday afternoon and evening. This tea was well attended, netting a nice little sum for the local work of the woman's auxiliary.

The Young People's Circle of the Auxiliary met Monday evening at the home of their chairman, Mrs. Paschall, to organize. Officers were elected. Nancy Clouse was elected chaplain, Mildred Younginer, secretary, Clarice Younginer, treasurer, and Oleta Miller, chairman of the program committee.

The Brotherhood supper was held at the home of Mr. J. A. McIntyre, Biltmore Pines. Rev. F. W. Paschall was speaker for the evening.

The first quarterly conference met Monday evening at the church. Important church matters were discussed.

We were pleased to note the presence of several who have been away at school: Elma and Margaret Fawcett from Guilford College, Barbara Younginer from N. C. C. W., and Eudora Younginer, teacher in High Point High School.

Several of our members are recovering from an attack of influenza. REPORTER.

Greensville Ct. to Thomasville.—For five years I roamed the hills, built good roads, repaired parsonage and churches, preached two and three times each Sunday. Many kindnesses received from this kind people. Some of them, it seemed, never tired of doing for their pastor. These kind Virginia friends will always have the warmest place in our hearts. It is indeed hard to leave a people after a long stay. We notified them in the first quarterly conference of last year that it would be my last year with them. I also called their attention to same fact in our last quarterly conference. Notwithstanding, they voted almost unanimously for me to return to them the sixth year. Three did not vote for or against. I asked the stationing committee to leave me without appointment at my own request. I finally decided to take work and was assigned to the First M. P. church, Thomasville, N. C. I came here and filled appointments on the first Sunday in December. The good people gave me a nice check and told me to go back and get ready and move as soon as possible. I did so on last Thursday morning. We were to leave Virginia. Our truck did not arrive as we had expected, so we were up, ate breakfast, and about 8 o'clock I looked and saw my truck coming. Every one was busy for a few hours. At 10:30 my goods were on and the truck rolling for Thomasville. We finally got the family started at about 12:30. We left part of our goods with Bro. Cowan. Henry also stayed behind. I came with the least degree of auto trouble. At 8 o'clock p. m. we were at the parsonage unloading. Bro. D. R. Connell, wife and others, were here with a good fire. Coal was in the bin and wood in the wood-house. Bro. Connell brought over a nice supper for us. Every evidence that we are in the midst of a kind people. We are meeting the people and are pleased with them.

I held a funeral yesterday afternoon.

We are surely living in a great age. We slept on our beds at Triplet, Va., last Wednesday night, picked them up Thursday morning and brought them 186 miles and slept on our same beds Thursday night. Modern invention has brought the whole world to our door.

We have had flu. I have almost lost my voice for the last five days. I have been forced to go. We are expecting to have a good year with this people.

May the Lord bless Bro. Cowan and the good people we left. Bless us and the good people here, and may we be a blessing to each other. H. L. POWELL.

Enfield Charge.—There will be a community Christmas tree on the lawn of Bro. Stanley Whitaker's on Friday evening of this week at 6:30, sponsored by the members of the Whitakers Chapel church. The folks living in the community are earnestly requested to come and enter into the spirit of the occasion.

The Enfield church is having her Christmas services Sunday night. There will be a Christmas tree in the hut.

At this writing Mrs. Ida Keeter is seriously ill. J. CLYDE AUMAN.

MY IDEAL

Elizabeth, Elizabeth,
You are a charming girl;
To me, my only sweetheart,
Lovelier than a pearl.

Elizabeth, Elizabeth,
You are my comrade rare;
Happy am I in any place
If you are only there.

Elizabeth, Elizabeth,
You are my counsellor;
My constant inspiration,
'Tis you that I adore.

Elizabeth, Elizabeth,
You are my ideal wife;
Richer than Ophir's gold,
Richer to me than life.

—GRENVILLE KLEISER.

NEARING THE ANTARCTIC ICE

The Byrd Antarctic Expedition has left Dunedin, New Zealand, for the Bay of Whales. The supply ship, Eleanor Bolling, is towing the ice-breaking ship, the City of New York, to the edge of the Antarctic ice pack, in order to save fuel. The two ships will have to force their way through the ice for hundreds of miles before they reach the Bay of Whales. When the expedition establishes its base on the Ross Ice Barrier, the Eleanor Bolling will return to Dunedin for more supplies. Commander Byrd has announced that his expedition will remain in the Antarctic for eighteen months.—Current Events.

—The twenty-fourth annual Founders Week Conference of the Moody Bible Institute will be in session in Chicago from Tuesday to Friday, inclusive, February 5 to 8, 1929. The public services will be held in the Institute auditorium, LaSalle Street and Chicago Avenue. The D. L. Moody birthday anniversary, Tuesday, February 5, will be observed as Alumni Day, a number of special features being presented. Chief among them will be the public memorial service at the evening hour in honor of the late Rev. Reuben A. Torrey, D.D., world-famed evangelist and Bible teacher, who was the first superintendent of the Institute, serving from 1889 to 1901.

—The King of England still continues very ill.

We shall appreciate it if those sending remittances will be careful to state: 1. The name of the charge. 2. The name of the church, or churches, to be credited. 3. The interest to be credited. 4. And please do not forget to write your name plainly. If you can not write your name unmistakably plain, please print it. By observing these simple requests you will help your treasurer keep his accounts correct.

How do you like "Treasurer's Corner" as a heading for our reports? Is there anything in it suggestive of liberality on the part of the members of a great church like ours? We think not. Our contributors to the kingdom of God ought to be too large to be tucked away in a corner of our paper each week. Well, it doesn't matter what we think, we can not change it unless our brethren think more largely in terms of dollars and cents.

State Street, Lexington, makes the first contribution to the G. C. B. Who will be the next to follow State Street's lead? If the readers of this "corner" are discerning they have no doubt been impressed by the fact that our so-called weaker charges and churches, with few exceptions, are making these reports possible.

I think this bring us up to date in reporting all the money and supplies that have been sent us up to December 18th. If anything has been omitted please call our attention to same.

Last week we credited Mt. Moriah, Fallston, with $7.00; Mt. Moriah church is on Cleveland, so we gladly correct.

We will not try to report next week since it is Christmas week. We wish all our friends a very happy Christmas.

The flu conditions are much better in the Home at this writing, and we hope all our children will be well by Christmas.

No Programs Rendered

We started in bravely to get up a good Christmas program, but for the last two weeks we have had from six to 20 in bed with the flu, among them three of our workers, so there was no day when we could have practiced for the program. So all engagements must be cancelled.

A Personal Word

Mrs. Dixon and I have had no time for Christmas shopping, and will not have. We have not even purchased a Christmas card this time except one box of those sold by the Home, so while we cannot mail cards to our many friends this Christmas you will know that we would like to, and will please take the will for the deed. May God bless and keep every one of you, and prosper you in the new year so soon to come.

Yours in His blessed service,

A. G. DIXON.

—A Christmas card received from some esteemed friends bears this good mentiment:

"There are no friends like old friends,
The friends of long ago,
And there's no time like Christmas
In which to tell them so!"

—A genuine case of the flu will convert you to a good many beliefs you didn't have before.

—If you have the flu, don't pass it on to your neighbors.

—A popular question of the day: "Have you had the flu?"

—Overheard on the radio: "Where did all those big rocks come from?" "O, they were brought down by the glaciers." "But where are the glaciers?" "They have gone back after more rocks."

—Bro. E. G. Lowdermilk called Tuesday afternoon to report that Mrs. Lowdermilk is improving rapidly and hoping to be out soon.

—On Monday of last week the Pan-American Conference on Arbitration and Conciliation met in Washington. Twenty of the 21 American republics were represented. Argentine was the exception. The same day they met two of the nations represented were on the eve of war against each other; these were Bolivia and Paraguay. A committee was appointed to investigate the trouble and try to prevent war. Already there has been bloodsted and the situation looks ugly. This conflict is a result of a long-standing dispute over a boundary line between the two countries.

—President Coolidge suggests that the nation provide a residence in the uplands to which the president may retire with his family for rest and recuperation whenever he finds need of it. This, he says, should be within easy striking distance from Washington. The suggestion seems reasonable.

—A lady sends $3 for two Christmas gift subscriptions to the Herald, and suggests that others may also wish to give a gift that lasts the whole year. We gladly pass the suggestion on.

Manlikeness of God

When we say Godlikeness of man, we are thinking of man and considering in what respects he is like God. When we say Manlikeness of God, we are thinking of God and considering in what respects He is like man. Either expression implies that there are certain characteristics possessed by both God and man. These characteristics, however, may not be possessed in equal degree by both persons. It is usual to speak of the one having the quality in lesser degree as like the other; but we may also say that the one having it in greater degree is like the other.

In our conception of God we may err in two ways in our inclusion of human elements; we may make God too little like man or too much like man. "Anthropomorphism" is a word which implies that the latter error has been made. Children and simple-minded people are likely to picture God in human form, as a very great or perhaps a very old man. They have not learned that God is "without body or parts," that He has no physical anatomy. The Hebrews were forbidden to make any graven image to represent God. Misrepresentations of God, whether made by sculptors or painters or simply by imagination, do harm. All representations which lessen the power of God or which distort His character are to be avoided. We cannot know God fully, but it is important that we know Him accurately, that we apprehend the truth as far as we apprehend at all.

There is nothing else in the world that so well represents God to us as man himself. Of nothing else was it said that this was made in the image of God. Because man was made like God, we may say that God is like man. But still we must discriminate between elements in which there is similarity and elements in which there is no similarity. God is not like man in having bodily senses or other bodily organs. God does not share the limitations of man's mind and soul. Yet it is in the region of mind and soul that we find the similarity of God to man.

Man has personality and God has personality. This is a most important respect in which God is like man. Without personality there is no moral character. Some have denied moral character and all elements of personality to God and reduced the universe to a great mass of material elements, each element functioning according to a law of its own nature. In place of one God, with aim and effective volition, there is an infinite number of independent molecules, and what we call the universe is no universe at all, but simply the aggregate of these independent elements. But the presence of design everywhere in the world proclaims the presence of a Designer, a personal God. All admit that the designer of a steam engine or an automobile must have had intelligence and will. The same logic demands that the designer of a plant body or an animal body must have intelligence and will. If nature exhibited but one case of apparent design, that might be explained by the theory of probabilities as a chance occurring once in an infinite number of throws of the dice; but in the universe design is the rule. In view of what the world exhibits, no man can be at the same time a thinker and an atheist. And admitting God, His personality must also be admitted. He is the great Architect and Builder. The universe is the work of His hands.

Not only is God like man in ability to design and construct and operate mechanism, He is also like man in ability to feel and appreciate. God is an esthetic being. He loves the beautiful. This is abundantly seen in the face of nature. He that made the rose must know beauty. He that threw up the mountains and spread out the oceans, and formed the milky way in the heavens must have an appreciation of the effect of grandeur. God shows that He is like us in taste and feeling. He that formed the eye, shall He not see? He that formed the ear, shall He not hear? He that created the human soul with its sensibilities, shall He not feel?

The most important similarity is the possession of a moral nature. We have moral natures and God has a moral nature. In this God is like us and yet very different, because we have become morally corrupt and unreliable whereas God has retained His infinite perfection. In His moral perfection He has sought and found what we could not have imagined possible—a way to restore us to a moral purity like His own. This is a greater miracle than the miracle of our creation when we were brought forth in innocency.

The fact that God is so much like us inspires us with the great hope of becoming like Him. "We shall be satisfied when we awake in His likeness."

Good Words from France

Two religious leaders of France this Christmas time sent to America messages of good will. In the message of Cardinal Dubois we find this passage: "May the light of truth which Christ brought upon earth spread throughout the world, for the guidance of men. May true brotherhood, respecting the rights of each individual, unite the sons of the same Heavenly Father. And may there spread more and more widely on earth the Kingdom of God, for whom the little child of Bethlehem made Himself here below the messenger to bring to humanity the only efficacious conditions of peace and happiness."

Henry Soule, Huguenot pastor, has in his address this exhortation: "Let us take the initiative. You, the United States of America, to remain faithful to your traditions symbolized by the Pilgrims of the Mayflower; we, France, once called the eldest daughter of the church, also with its heroic line of martyrs of the reformation. This crusade for the triumph of the gospel throughout the world will unite us more and better than political decisions alone. The only lasting, fruitful, profound, eternal truth is the unity of hearts when we are on our knees at the feet of the divine Master, Christ, born and dead on the cross, who reigns from century to century and says to us day by day, 'Love one another.'"

CHARLES WESLEY'S POEMS

By H. H. Smith

Very few perhaps know that Charles Wesley, who has been called the poet of Methodism, besides being the author of more than six thousand hymns, was also the author of a number of other religious poems of great value. These compositions cover a variety of subjects, and afford such inspiration and uplift that they should be more generally known. Space will permit only brief quotations from these poems, which we chanced to find in an old book published some fifty years ago.

Wesley teaches us to sanctify all life. For the parents, the birth of a child should be the occasion for deeper consecration to God, and earnest prayer for the young life committed to them. We quote a few stanzas from one of his poems entitled, "For a New-Born Child":

"Father, Son, and Spirit, come,
Enter now Thy human shrine;
Take my offspring from the womb:
Mine he is not, Lord, but Thine.
Thine this moment let him be,
Thine to all eternity.

"Seize, O seize his tender heart,
Beating to the vital air;
Everlasting life impart,
Sow the seed of glory there.
Grace be to my infant given,
Grace, the principle of heaven.

"Father, draw him from his birth
With the cords of heavenly love;
From the trivial joys of earth
Raise his mind to joys above.
Gently lead Thy favorite on Till Thou giv'st him to Thy Son."

His lines entitled, "Oblation of a Sick Child," breathe a noble spirit of trust and resignation:

"Father, Thy will be done, not mine,
Thy only will be done.
To Thee my Isaac I resign,
I render up my son.

"Without a murmuring wish I give
The child Thou gavest me;
Or let him to Thy glory live,
Or let him die to Thee.

"I hear the providential word,
I bless the will divine;
Remove him from my bosom, Lord,
And take him up to Thine."

In 1749, on his 41st birthday, he wrote an interesting birthday poem. It contains fourteen stanzas. We may catch the spirit of this production from the three stanzas quoted below:

"Away with my fears!
The glad morning appears
When an heir of salvation was born.
From Jehovah I came,
For His glory I am,
And to Him with singing return.

"O the infinite cares
And temptations and snares
Thy hand hath conducted me through!
O the blessings bestowed
By a bountiful God,
And the mercies eternally new!

"My remnant of days
I spend in His praise,
Who died the whole world to redeem:
Be they many or few,
My days are His due,
And they all are devoted to Him."

The early Methodists were a despised and persecuted people. Charles Wesley wrote several hymns especially for their benefit, from one of which we quote the first and last stanzas:

"Jesus, the growing work is Thine,
And who shall hinder its success?
In vain the alien armies join
Thy glorious Gospel to suppress,
And vow with Satan's aid to o'erthrow
The work Thy grace revives below.

"Our suffering shall advance Thy cause,
And blunt the persecutor's sword,
Dispread the victory of Thy Cross,
And glorify our conquering Lord.
Evil shall work for Zion's good:
Its seed is still the martyr's blood."

The first lines of another poem entitled "On the Loss of His Friends," read:

"Take these broken reeds away!
On the Rock of Ages I
Calmly now my spirit stay,
Now on Christ alone rely;
Every other prop resign,
Sure the sinner's Friend is mine."

He composed his epitaph, which reads:

"With poverty of spirit blest,
Rest, happy saint, in Jesus rest;
A sinner saved, through grace forgiven,
Redeemed from earth to reign in heaven!
Thy labors of unwearied love,
By thee forgot, are crowned above.
Crowned, through the mercy of thy Lord,
With a free, full, immense reward!"

Just before he died, while extremely weak, he called his wife to him and dictated his last verse:

"In age and feebleness extreme,
Who shall a sinful worm redeem?
Jesus, my only hope Thou art,
Strength of my failing flesh and heart:
O could I catch a smile from Thee,
And drop into eternity!"

LINEUP OF CHURCH OFFICERS

Dear Dr. McCulloch:

When we were in Baltimore wrestling over some of the problems of the committee room you suggested that I sometime give you some of my ideas as to a lineup of church officers. I could hardly believe you could have been teasing me and yet I can but wonder why you should have made the request. I have just completed the election of the officers of my churches and I am sending one of the ballots used in the election of that church. This gives about my idea of the officers an average church should have. This plan has been carried out at each of my churches. After the nominating committee, which was elected by the church to work with the pastor, had done its work the list of nominees was posted for a time that the church might become informed. Then ballots were prepared as the one enclosed and at an appointed time the congregation voted as per directions. The Christian Endeavor ballot was used in about the same way. I am also enclosing a sample monthly statement which I send out each month to as many of my people as I can. The certificate of church membership is one that I like and use. I realize that it is not the one we adopted at the General Conference. The first certificate I was called on for after I returned from the General Conference was for a man who was to join the Christian Science Church and I certainly could not "affectionately commend him to the fellowship of said church," these words being, as you remember, a part of the form we adopted at the General Conference.

I am not sending these samples to you seeking editorial comment. Since we worked together at Baltimore and since I remembered your suggestion I just thought this matter might be of some interest to you.

Yours very truly,

GEO. L. CURRY.

P. S.—Punched paper is used so that papers might be filed in loose leaf binders which I do and recommend to my people. G. L. C.

(The ballots used by Bro. Curry contain names of nominees for each office, so that voter has only to indicate his choice by a mark. The labor involved in preparing ballots might deter some from using the plan.—Ed.)

Fayetteville Drayman and New York Millionaire

W. J. McAllister was a colored drayman of Fayetteville. W. W. Fuller is a New York lawyer numbered among the multi-millionaires. When Fuller was a child he lived in Fayetteville and he and McAllister became friends and remained friends until McAllister's death five years ago. The negro's wife had died and he had no children. Therefore he bequeathed his estate to his New York friend, Mr. Fuller. Mr. Fuller invested the proceeds of the estate, amounting probably to some hundred dollars, in Bethlehem Steel stocks, and committed them to a board of three trustees with the instructions that they make an annual distribution of the dividends to needy negroes in Cross Creek township. This year sixty aged negroes, some of them blind, were helped by this fund. There is beauty in the story and we take it from the daily press and pass it on.

AT THE ELEVENTH HOUR

We often put off salvation until the last possible moment. The Scriptures say: "Now is the day of salvation. Now is the accepted time." But we go on with a kind of ease, delaying the day of action. We talk a lot about God but we seemingly never can make up our minds to do. Our motto should, in the language of the Latins, be, "Res ante verba," meaning, "Deeds before words."

"Oh, well," we say in our thoughtlessness, "there is plenty of time. I will decide about the claims of the Christian religion when I have a more convenient season." Thus we delay, delay and delay, hindering God's work by our temporizing. Comes a time, perhaps, when we do decide to ask God to put us into His vineyard. If we have delayed long we look back upon the wasted years with despair and cry, "Why did I waste all these years in idleness?" It gives us a pang too. Regret, ah! what a tragedy in our lives! "Oh!" we cry aloud in our despair, "why did I not give my heart to God in the morning of life? How happy I should have been now, instead of bewailing the lost years as I now do."

What is there left to do now? There seems to be mighty little hope of any sort. But there is a sure remedy and that is prayer. We can pray. We can pray to the Father above who hears our petitions, however feebly uttered. The lowest and vilest of sinners can ask God's forgiveness and shall obtain immediate pardon.—Selected.

HAPPINESS

Half the happiness of living
Comes from willing-hearted giving;
Comes from sharing all our pleasures
From dividing all our treasures.
And the other half is loving
First the Lord, then all things living
Love seed while his life is growing,
So, each mortal should be sowing
For all happiness in living
Comes from loving and from giving.

WHY ARGUE?

One of the most futile things in the world is argument. If you want to persuade anybody, suggest, do not argue. When you argue with a man you arouse his antagonism; you rarely secure his co-operation.

So, if you want a man to do anything, take any other course than argument.

There is a story floating about of a man who went to a clothing store and asked to see a good woolen suit.

The storekeeper produced a suit; the customer examined it and said: "It looks pretty good, but it doesn't look like wool to me. I do not believe it is wool."

"But you like it?" inquired the salesman.

"Yes, I like it all right, but I don't think it is wool."

"Shall I wrap it up for you?"

"Sure, I guess I'll take it. But tell me, why didn't you argue with me when I told you it wasn't wool? As a matter of fact, I don't know whether it's wool or not."

"Well," said the merchant, taking his money, "you see, if I win the argument, I lose the sale, so what's the use?"—San Francisco Examiner.

Denominational Enterprises

FROM INDIA

Dear Dr. Haddaway:

It was with a great deal of pleasure that I learned of your selection as Secretary of the Union Board of Missions of the M. P. Church. The news of Dr. Rosenberger's resignation gave us a sense of doubt as to the future, because we had no idea who the next Secretary might be. However, when the news reached us that you had been chosen and that you had accepted the office, our minds were at rest. I feel more at home with the Board now that you are at its head.

I would like to take this opportunity to assure you that I am willing to render any assistance to you in your work that in any way it is possible for me to help. I know the task ahead of you is an arduous one, but I feel confident in your ability to cope with the situation. You have our continual prayers.

The past quarter has been a busy one, but most of my time has been spent in Dhulia. Beginning July 3, I have spent quite a lot of my time in teaching the Bible to the boys in the School. I organized five classes, grading the boys according to their school ratings, and I have been meeting each class twice a week, holding periods of one hour each. In three of the classes I am teaching the life of Christ, in one class Old Testament history, and in the fifth class the History of the New Testament Church. It has been uphill business, with a great number of difficulties, but I feel that it has been worth the effort expended. Very few of the boys have what might be called Christian background, even though most of the boys in the school come from Christian families, so that it makes it doubly hard to get the right conceptions into their minds.

The days have been filled with the routine duties of supervision of the Boys' School, the Evangelistic Department, the garden of the Boys' Compound, the Boarding Department, and the Farm. All of which takes a lot of time, but which does not lend itself readily to report making.

The following is a partial list of my activities: Attended the regular Marathi Sunday School, Church and Prayer Meetings, attended six Mission Prayer Meetings, five Mission Business Meetings, three Christian Endeavor meetings. Taught 109 classes, and spent almost the same number of hours in preparation. Wrote 48 business letters, 13 Marathi letters. Preached in Marathi 2, led 4 Marathi prayer meetings. Attended 3 funerals. Baptized 12 infants and 3 adults. Administered the Lord's Supper 3 times. Performed 1 marriage ceremony. Held 6 teachers' meetings. Made 15 sick calls, and held numerous interviews with Mission workers. Visited our Ner out-station twice, and the Farm three times. Made out 7 quarterly reports.

In the Boys' School are 6 teachers, 87 boys on roll, 73 Christians, 11 Mohammedans, 3 Hindus, 68 boys in boarding department, 9 boys paying part fees, 4 boys in high school in Dhulia, 1 boy in Training College in Ahmednagar. The school has been in full session during the quarter. All of the classes are well organized and the teachers are applying themselves to their tasks. Every week examinations have been given, so that the progress of the pupils can be checked from time to time.

The 18th of September will be a day well remembered in the India Mission. It was the day of the big flood. The rain poured for several hours, and the stream behind our compound swelled and swelled until it came over the wall and covered all of the lower part of the compound. About 150 feet of our wall was destroyed by the flood, no other damage being done to the boys' compound. I will send an estimate of the cost of repair in the near future.

Rev. Paul Cassen.

A Word from Miss Theresa Frank, India

As mentioned in my personal report, two persons have been baptized during this quarter, after a week of special instruction given daily.

Two Bibles have been given to Hindu seekers, and we are hoping to be able to report further on these at a future date.

The daily village work has been carried on by the two Bible women, as I have been unable to go with them, owing to duties in the school and compound.

J. Chandeker has also been going daily to the villages, distributing free tracts and gospels, and preaching the gospel. He reports a number of workers in some of the Dhulia mills who manifest an interest in Christianity. Let us remember these people in our prayers, that the interest may be deepened, and that they may come to a saving knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ.

MINISTERIAL RECRUITING

For a number of years the Board of Christian Education requested the church to set apart one Sunday when special consideration should be given to the subject of men for the ministry. This plan had the sanction of our leaders, the official approval of a number of our annual conferences and so far as we could learn met no opposition anywhere. It is feared, however, that the plan was neglected, for little recognition seems to have been given the Board's request. It was decided to change the time from the second Sunday in December to the one just before Thanksgiving or some other Sunday at that season which might be more suitable.

The important thing is to respect this appeal by taking some action which will lead our membership to make the cause of men for the ministry the subject of earnest thought and prayer. If our pastors are concerned, our people will be. If the pastors neglect this matter, so will their people. The best way to observe Men for the Ministry Sunday is by a special service of worship with that as the central theme. If this cannot be done, then some reference in a sermon, in the notices, in the teaching of a Sunday school class, in the Christian Endeavor meeting or in the mid-week service of prayer will reveal the pastor's interest and concern.

Many a promising church enterprise today is hindered, halted or jeopardized because of a lack of the right kind of leaders. This is not to be interpreted as implying that we are suffering from a decrease in ministerial candidates. We have as many or more than the usual number in our schools preparing themselves for the ministry of our church. But the number is not as large as it should be when measured by the increase in our membership or the opportunities of widening our borders.

The purpose of observing Men for the Ministry Sunday is to secure united thought and prayer in behalf of a vitally important cause, to arouse the interest of our people and to encourage our young men to respond to the call of which they are already conscious. God is calling as many of our young men as ever. But the church has not seemed very much concerned whether or not they obey that call. Other institutions are anxious to employ their talent. They are making attractive offers in wages and the possibility of advancement. But the church appears indifferent, and the Kingdom suffers. If we are to save these young men to the church, if they are to respond to the call of which they are certainly conscious, we must help them by united prayer and interest. Men for the Ministry Sunday will afford such an opportunity.

F. W. Stephenson, Executive Secretary,

GIVING

It is not giving to pluck a rose
From a garden, blossom-filled;
The tear that falls from the ready eye
Is not by pain distilled.

Giving is when the garden soil
Mothers a single flower,
Torn from its place by one who knows
The need of another's hour.

It is not giving to filch from wealth
A title for some poorer one.
Would one beam be a bounty
From a tropical summer sun?

Giving is when the widow's mite,
Guiltless of any gain,
Drops from a hand worn rough with toil
To ease another's pain.

When God looked down from His judgment throne,
Was His gift such a one?
Not of his angels did He give;
He gave—his only Son.

—Andrew Chapman.

A FOOLISH COURSE

It grows upon me more and more, year by year of experience, how common is the refusal to know the truth about oneself. How few people appear to be ready, frankly, to want to know the truth about themselves. Is there anything so horrible as the thought of multitudes of people waiting to know the truth about themselves till the horrible disclosures after death, when they might know it now but will not?—Gore.

THE SPIRIT ITSELF MAKETH INTERCESSION

If a man will hear God and obey Him, God will hear him; for if a man be subject to Christ's kingly office, his prophetical office shall guide him, and cause him not to err in his petitions; but by an unerring providence and pre-instinct infused by His Spirit, God will so guide him as to ask even that very thing which God intends to give; whereas he knows not what nor how to ask.—Thomas Goodwin.

A CHRISTMAS MESSAGE

Christmas is the celebration of an event and the enjoyment of a spirit. No greater event ever happened than the coming of Christ into this world. All history bears witness to the change which His presence made during the ages that followed His birth. It was so important that heaven and earth, God, angels, and men took a vital interest in it.

Christmas is also a spirit. There is nothing like the Christmas spirit. Everything is a matter of spirit. Home life is a matter of home spirit. Where there is no home spirit, there is no home life. Church life is a matter of church spirit. You can know all churches by the spirit that possesses them or the spirit by which they are possessed. National life is a thing of national spirit. China has no national life because it has no national spirit. America's greatness is to be accounted for by the American spirit. If the spirit that inspires our love for the flag, American customs, and ideals die, our nation languishes, and ultimately would pass away. Christmas is a matter of spirit made possible through the birth of Christ. Since He came there reigns supreme the service of love, generosity, and humility. One great need is to make permanent this spirit which is altogether too temporal and characteristic of so short a time. If these things that came into the world with Christ's coming could only remain during the year, how much greater a blessing His birth would be to all men and nations of the earth!—C. E. World.

CHRIST LIVETH IN ME

An old-time Quaker preacher had a strange experience at his conversion. He fell asleep and dreamed. He seemed to be dead, and laid out for his burial, when a shining face came and bent over him, saying softly, "The man is dead." Then another came and laid a hand over his heart, and said, "It does not throb; he's dead." Then another came and laid upon his flesh, "It is sad; he is surely dead." So one by one came angels and stood around his couch, till one of kindlier face than the rest came and looked upon him, lifted his hand, and said: "Nay, what is this? A nail-print in his palm, and a nail-print in his other palm. This man is not dead; he has been crucified! He has been crucified with Christ and lives with Him!" He awoke and found the place in the scripture where it is written, "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, Christ liveth in me!" —D. J. Burrell.

PUNISHMENT A FRUIT OF LOVE

It is all nonsense, this prattle about God being too good to punish transgressions of His law. It is worse than prattle, for it leads to the utter disregard of God's law, and to the ruin of body and mind here and the ruin of the soul hereafter. Your father loved you when he punished you for your faults. He punished you because he loved you. God is not only good. He is also just. What a weakling He would be if He allowed His creatures to despise His authority!—Selected.

FAITH A NECESSITY

There is only one door to heaven; that door is faith. There is only one ship that sails for the skies; her name is Faith. There is only one weapon with which to contend with opposition; that weapon is faith.—Talmage.

Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples.—John 15:8.

Our Goals for the New Conference Year

Instead of our usual weekly letter, this week we are running in the space allotted to us our goals for the new conference year. They follow:

1. The first purpose of the church first—saving sinners, and keeping them saved.
2. Enriching the worship programs of the church.
3. The church singing, and all churches adequately supplied with standard song books. Our church hymnal first.
4. The Children's Home supported monthly by every church.
5. Unfailing and enlarging support for High Point College.
6. A definite financial obligation for every member, and budgets pressed for every possible dollar.
7. Urging the financial obligations early in the year.
8. Pastors paid monthly, and something on budgets each month.
9. Regular offerings at every regular church service.
10. Observing all special days—Easter, Children's Day, Rally Day.
11. "Men for the Ministry" Sunday observed on every charge sometime during the year.
12. Well planned and well attended rallies in every conference district.
13. Better attended quarterly conferences, and more business of the church attended to by the congregation.
14. Full support for the Pastors' Summer Conference and Young People's Training School.
15. All churches and church grounds well kept and beautified.
16. A Board of Young People's Work in every conference district.
17. The church stronger within.
18. Intensifying the spiritual life of the Sunday school.
19. A full support of every General Conference program.
20. More Women's Auxiliaries and more C. E. Societies.
21. A substantial increase in the circulation of our church papers.
22. Pay-up months—April and October.

Some of these goals are being carried over from last year; but of necessity that must be so. They are perpetual essentials, and must, therefore, be kept constantly before us. Some are new, not in idea, but in the form of a goal. All are worthy, we trust, and any effort to realize them can not but be pleasing to God, and prospering to the local church, conference, and the denomination. We are submitting them, therefore, with the hope that they may have the endorsement of every pastor and every charge, and that they may receive the earnest support necessary to make them real. With grateful thanks for anticipated co-operation all along the line, I am,

Fraternally yours,

Dec. 26, 1928. S. W. Taylor.

CHURCH MEMBERS WITH AN ALIBI

There is a habit among church members which is rapidly becoming a scandal. There are thousands of church members who have been living, let us say in New York, Boston or Philadelphia, for a quarter of a century whose membership is still in Ohio, Maine or Virginia. These people float from church to church, they enjoy a sermon here and there, but they have no church home. They have become "church tramps," having no sense of obligation to attend any church in particular. Often they stay away from church altogether. They claim that the little "home church" from which they come needs what money they can afford to give. Often we have wondered if "the little church at home" really gets much from the members who have moved away from it, and who have neglected their Christian obligation for many years. If that little church "at home" gets much money from such people we are greatly mistaken. In many instances these absent members have ceased to communicate with the home church, their names have been erased, and they have been lost to the denomination. Pastors who hold on to the names of their absent members are in part to blame for this state of affairs. If this paragraph comes under the eye of those who have a loved one living far away from home we trust that it will be the occasion of a letter in which this paragraph will be enclosed.—Watchman Examiner.

"THE ATTRACTIVE CHRIST"

What the hand is to the lute,
What the breath is to the flute,
What the fragrance to the smell,
What the spring is to the well,
What the flower is to the bee,
That is Jesus Christ to me.

What the mother to the child,
What the guide in pathless wild,
What is oil to troubled wave,
What is ransom to the slave,
What is water to the sea,
That is Jesus Christ to me.

THE HOLY BIBLE'S ROCK FOUNDATIONS

A modern Bible slogan: Let the Bible defend itself, and it will break every hammer that hits it.

Jesus Christ's Bible slogans: Light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil. Search the Scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life; and they are they which testify of me.

Paul's Bible slogan: What advantage hath the Jew. . . . Chiefly because that unto them were committed the oracles of God.

David's Bible slogans: Thy Word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path. Wherewithal shall a young man cleanse his way? By taking heed thereto according to Thy Word.

"Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter."

King Solomon's Bible slogan: Fear God, and keep His commandments; for this is the whole duty of man. For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil.—Rev. J. McCarty Duckwall.

THE LAW OF COMPENSATION

We shall never forget the indelible impression made on our boyish mind by the first reading in the Latin class of the immortal Fables of Aesop. And especially of the incomparable story of "Juno and the Peacock." Most of our readers are familiar with it. Juno was the goddess of the birds, and one day the peacock, rustling in all its glory of wanton coloring, appeared before Juno with a bitter complaint. Displaying her tail and marvelously beautiful featherage, she reminded the goddess of her raucous voice, comparing it with the mellifluous song of the little drab nightingale. And this was Juno's answer, "It is not the habit of the gods to bestow all excellences upon one individual."

This is true of creation and of the way of God with man. Compensation is nature's law only because it is God's law in life. He takes and giveth as He pleaseth. In the parable of the talents the Lord of the servants gives ten and five and two talents apparently without considering the previous claims of the men on whom the trust was bestowed. The reward of the faithful keeper of the five talents was exactly like that of him who had the ten. And the terrible lot of the keeper of the two talents was simply the result of his misunderstanding of the Master's orders. He failed because he was unworthy of the trust, not because his two talents did not bring to the master other ten or other five. God bestows according to His own free will and grace.

The history of mankind is full of marvelous examples of what men have accomplished under the greatest handicaps for God and for the world. Some of the greatest characters of human history had to struggle with tremendous obstacles and in the struggle made themselves immortal. The impressionist school of art in Germany depicted our Lord as most hideous in His outward appearance, simply because the prophet has said, "He hath no form nor comeliness and there was no beauty in Him that we should desire Him"; and that wholly without slightest confirmation in the Gospels or from any contemporaneous source.

But to other great leaders of men this is strictly applicable. Alexander the Great, according to competent testimony, was both a hunchback and an epileptic. Paul, according to Chrysostom, was "an unsightly dwarf," yet he touched the stars; Shakespeare was a cripple; so were Scott and Byron and Lord Kelvin; Nelson and Napoleon were men of small and unimposing stature; Homer and Milton were blind poets; and that greatest of all composers, Beethoven, was so deaf that he could not hear the heaviest thunderclap; and some of the greatest preachers of the ages were men of bodily weakness and infirmity, sometimes even deformed.

Always and everywhere we find this law of compensation. Did they perhaps achieve what they did because they first overcame their tremendous handicap? There is comfort and inspiration in this thought for men and women of high ideals, but whose path is one of shadows and trials. We should "carry on," as the English said in the late war, no matter what are the hindrances; trusting in God, go forward in the way of His pointnig and do with your might what your hand findeth to do. Thus God gets all the glory; we are but His poor instruments. Martin Luther used to say: "God can hit a straight blow with a crooked stick." And time and again the history of the world and the church has proved the truth of this saying of the great reformer. Paul prayed long and ardently for the removal of the thorn in his flesh, but the remaining thorn was of greater help to him than its removal could ever have been. "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run and not be weary; they shall walk and not faint."—Christian Observer.

THERE'S A SONG IN THE AIR

There's a song in the air!
There's a star in the sky!
There's a mother's deep prayer
And a baby's low cry!
And the star rains its fire while the Beautiful sing,
For the manger of Bethlehem cradles a King.

There's a tumult of joy
O'er the wonderful birth,
For the Virgin's sweet boy
Is the Lord of the earth.
Ay! the star rains its fire and the Beautiful sing,
For the manger of Bethlehem cradles a King.

In the light of that star
Lie the ages impearled;
And that song from afar
Has swept over the world.
Every hearth is aflame, and the Beautiful sing
In the homes of the nations that Jesus is King.

We rejoice in the light,
And we echo the song
That comes down through the night
From the heavenly throng.
Ay! we shout to the lovely evangel they bring,
And we greet in His cradle our Saviour and King!

TRUE FREEDOM

Men are in bondage to the love of money; to the fashions of the world; to the opinions of mankind. By these they are enslaved and led on in the face of the demands of duty. Every man is really enslaved who is in fact led counter to his convictions of duty. He is free only when he acts in accordance with those convictions. This is the true idea of liberty. Only when reason and conscience control the will is a man free —for God made men intelligent and moral beings to act normally, under the influence of their own enlightened conscience and reason. This is such freedom as God exercises and enjoys; none can be higher or nobler.—Charles G. Finney.

ABSENT FROM GOD'S HOUSE

Whenever people begin to absent themselves from the house of the Lord, it is a sad day for them. People who stay away from the house of the Lord, like Thomas, miss the joy of seeing Jesus. They miss the thrill of great joy which oftentimes comes, and miss the joy of giving because they have missed the joy of receiving. The greatest joys of life come from giving love, sympathy, service, and money. And if the channels of our life have been closed so that we could not receive, then we are not in a position to give.—Robert A. Clark.

Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging: and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise.—Prov. 20:1.

A LONG-AGO CHRISTMAS

The things related in this story happened long, long ago, even before your grandparents were born, or maybe indeed, your great-parents. For, while it happened in what is now the State of Pennsylvania, it happened long before Pennsylvania had any very large cities—indeed, I doubt if Pittsburgh, big and flourishing as it now is, was more than a little trading post at a fort, though Philadelphia had some thousands of people, being then the largest city in the country. Most of the inhabitants, however, lived, not in cities or towns, but in little settlements or on farms, or some even on small clearings made in the heart of the forests which still covered the State.

It was in one of these clearings that Benjie and Marsie Slocum lived, and their home was a large and comfortable cabin made of logs and plastered inside with clay. It had but one room, which was kitchen, and dining-room, living and bed-rooms combined, for Benjie and Marsie slept in a wide trundle-bed which stood about one foot from the floor and in the daytime was pushed under the high four-poster bedstead, and at night was pulled out beside it.

About two weeks before Christmas, father had come back from a hunting expedition with a fine wild turkey in one hand, its legs and wings tied with strong grapevine runners, for the woods were full of wild grapevines.

"We'll keep it for Christmas," said father, so the turkey, with its wings clipped, was tied by the leg to a post and allowed to run the length of its tether by day, and was penned behind palings at night. It was fed so plentifully that it became so big and fat that no modern-day oven would have held it.

Now it happened that the big stone "outside oven" that father had built did not hold it either, for two days before Christmas the turkey vanished, while tracks in the snow around the pen showed plainly that a huge bear had climbed over the palings and climbed back again, carrying the turkey under one arm. Doubtless it had been killed in the pen, otherwise its gobbles of alarm would surely have awakened father. But the turkey was gone, and the children were disconsolate.

"We never tasted turkey, and we wanted turkey," they wailed.

"I was a good deal older than either of you when I first tasted turkey," said mother, for mother had been born in England, where there were no turkeys. Mother had told them over and over again of the way in which Christmas had been celebrated in her old home when she was a little girl; of the singing of carols and the trimming with greens, and the little pig which was roasted whole and served with a carrot in its mouth. She tried to tell again some of the old tales, but the children could not listen. "We wanted turkey," they lamented.

"Maybe father can shoot a wild turkey tomorrow," said mother, but when evening had come, and father had not returned with another big bird, their hopes failed. "We wanted turkey," they still insisted.

Maybe father can shoot a deer; venison will be nice," said mother. Now, venison, you know, is nice, exceedingly so, and in these days very scarce and costly, for the deer have mostly vanished. Very few people know what venison tastes like, but the early settlers relied on it greatly for their meat.

So, "venison would be nice," said mother. But Benjie and Marsie shook their heads. "Not as good as turkey," they vowed, which was a bit strange, since they had never as yet tasted turkey.

"Come now," said mother, "eat your mush and milk and get to bed."

"Don't like mush and milk. We wanted turkey," sobbed two little voices together.

Mother was at her wit's end. She had had to listen to this wailing all day. Of course, children today do not think of complaining when they do not like things, but you see they have so many other things to make up for the loss of one that it does not matter. But these little children far away in the woods when Pennsylvania was still a new State, had hardly any playthings, and had never been inside any store of any kind. They had never even seen any other children, so they may perhaps be excused when they wailed over their disappointment.

But if we will excuse them, their mother would not. So she spoke sharply. "Now you must stop that right away. I will have no more of it." But as both little faces quivered, she remembered their lonely little lives, and said what she would not have said had she thought a moment.

"Jump into bed, now," she said kindly, "so you can get up early and see what Santa Claus has brought you." And the two fairly flung themselves into the low trundle-bed and after rapturous discussion as to what they might get on Christmas morning, they fell asleep.

"Oh, what have I done?" said mother. "They will be so disappointed. I did not mean to promise them anything, yet I really have done so. Now I must get something ready. What shall it be?"

Sure enough, what should it be? She might make a new corn-cob doll for Marsie, and when father came home, he might fashion a top for Benjie, but would not these toys, which they already had, merely increase their disappointment? What should she do? Then she heard father coming, and opened wide the door, so the light from the logs burning in the huge fireplace would shine out on the pathway. No turkey hung from the hand, but he was carrying something carefully in his arms. Then she gave a little gasp herself. "Oh, father! the dear little fellow. Where? How?

* * * * *

In the morning two little heads bobbed up from the trundle-bed. "Merry Christmas," they shouted, and jumped out from under the covers. "What did he bring us, mother; what did he bring?"

And mother pointed to a baby bear, about the size of a puppy, sitting on its haunches before the great fire. Both children ran with little delighted squeals and gathered it into their arms. It was so young that it did not know that man was really its enemy, and it cuddled up to them just as it had to father the night before. After breakfast (again of mush and milk) the two went hand in hand with father to the smoke-house. There on the floor lay a huge dead bear. "That is how I got the baby," said father. "See what a fine thick rug her skin will make for the floor. After I had shot her, I heard her baby whimpering, and knew I could not leave the little fellow to die in the woods; so I took him home to you. But what do you think I found at the door of her den?"

"What?" both asked, with eyes sparkling in anticipation.

"Turkey feathers," said father, "the mother bear had taken our turkey to feed her baby."

"We don't care," they shouted delightedly. "We'd a great deal rather have our baby bear. You can play with a bear, but a turkey, you just—just eat."—Fannie Phillips in The Presbyterian.

CONCERNING A REVIVAL

"And I sought for a man among them, that should make up the hedge, and stand in the gap before me for the land, that I should not destroy it; but I found none." Ezekiel 22:30.

Most of us have at times come to places where only God could help; vain indeed was the help of man. At such times, we did not say our prayers; we prayed with all the ardor of our being in all the power of our lives. The need was urgent —time was pressing and we prayed! And we know that God heard, as He always hears real prayer. Now I believe if we pray for a revival with the same urge and agony, that revival will come.

A minister, earnest and sincere, stood up every night during Passion Week and preached the unsearchable riches of Christ, the matchless passion of the Saviour, and the vicarious praying of Jesus! There was not a flicker of response so far as a revival, or rebirth, was concerned. At the last service, on Easter night, there was a missionary sermon, with the Great Commission as a text; at the close a manly plea was made for an offering. A few pitiful dollars were subscribed while the congregation sat untouched and unmoved. And this situation is not unique; the same incident could be told of many Christian (?) congregations. What is wrong with these churches? As I sat in that unmoved group the other night, I realized as never before that nobody was standing in the breach! And I have prayed that I, weak and nothing, though I am, may help stop the leak in the dyke, may stand in this breach.

Do we really want a revival? Do we want fires kindled anew, flickering torches relit—the world made safe for humanity and welcome for humanity's King? Is this want greater than our desire for cars, and fashionable dress and questionable amusement and "freedom of thought"? Do we want Christ's Kingdom to come among men, or are we satisfied with the rule of Satan? These are burning questions that should fasten themselves in the mind of every Christian until they are answered.

If they are answered in the affirmative, it will mean no flowery bed of ease, but self-denial and self-distrust. It will mean hours spent on our knees when all the world is slumbering. But in the end it will mean soul-satisfaction and multitudes saved. Are we equal to the task, the self-imposed task, for God desires free service as well as free giving?

The world is hurrying on. To what? At the present rate, how long can nerves and physical strength endure, to say nothing of our spiritual lives, which sometimes seem to be dying? And the mad rush exists in the lives of Christians, too; we hurry from perhaps one perfectly worthy task to another, and when we come to examine the day's record, we find every act was a seeming necessity. Then what is the trouble? I believe it is in the haste itself, which is always of the devil. If he can keep us excited over the prospect of another task just around the corner, he knows that the present one will be poorly performed. Such a mental and physical condition works a weakening of the moral fiber, and results in inferiority in the finished product. And our minds and spirits are jaded and life almost a burden! Thank God for that "almost," for through the mists we can catch a glimpse of God and "wish for the day."

We have all heard of "chain letters," which are another invention of the devil to bring just a little more unrest to the world. (On this very day a dear little lady asked if I had sent one to her; it carried my last name! The twenty-four hours had about expired, and she had not time to ward off the bad luck promised in case the chain were broken!) We eschew the devil's processes, but to some it appears heavenly for chain communications to girdle the globe! But it takes time to write letters and attend meetings, and time seems to be the most precious commodity of the day; and sometimes letters are worse than time wasted!

Will you stand with me in the gap that our beloved land, more, our world, may be saved from the destruction that seems imminent? Will you pray with me, morning, noon and night that a great revival may sweep the world and usher in the day of our Lord? I am one who believes He is coming, and in the imminence of that coming. May our back-slidden church be revived and not be found wanting! May the Great Commission fall no more on deaf ears, and may His Gospel be carried to the ends of the earth! Yes, and in this, our day!

But as I begin this breach-breaking, this gap-stopping task, I find it impossible to pray effectually for a world-wide revival until I have sought and felt a revival of my own heart! There must be a surrender of my "little" besetting sins, that are nevertheless big enough to keep my family life from running smoothly, that cut out the view of God and the future reign of Christ in the earth! So let us every one pray, "God be merciful to me a sinner"; and as surely as day follows night, so surely will God 'deliver us," and then we will glorify Him by prayer for a world-wide revival! How many will stand in the breach?—Selected.

IN THE LIGHT OF HISTORY

It is not true that the wine-drinking country of France consumes less spirits because of its wine-drinking. It is not true that the beer-drinking country of Germany uses less spirits than the United States because it drinks more beer. It is not true that drunkenness is not to be found in those countries.

Wine rotted the greatness of Rome. Wine and beer, or barley wine, sent Egypt to a drunkard's grave. All of the drunkenness of ancient history, all the drink disasters of ancient times, were due to fermented liquors only, for whisky was not then known.

The horrible pictures of Samaritan debauchery in the Bible show the results of wine-drinking. "Their wine is the poison of serpents and the cruel venom of asps," says the Bible in Deuteronomy 32:33. "Who hath woe? who hath sorrow?" asked Solomon, but whisky was not invented until many centuries after Solomon's death. Alexander's brilliant career was closed by the drink that we are told is responsible for the "fact" that there is no drunkenness in France. Nero's orgies were not served with whisky, but wine.—Selected.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

Announcing

The Initial "Denominational Young People's Day" for February 3rd, 1929

To Pastors, Sunday Schools, Christian Endeavor Societies, and Church Leaders, we are taking this opportunity to call your attention to the NEW SPECIAL DAY that was authorized by the last General Conference. It seems fitting that such a day should be observed by the youth of our church, and we have cause to rejoice in the fact that the General Conference has so recognized the growing interest of its young people to set aside such a day.

The pastors of the church are to give Sunday evening over to the young people at which time the youth will give a suitable program under the auspices of the local pastor and church leaders.

Materials are now being prepared for this occasion and can be secured upon request from the Department of Religious Education, Board of Christian Education, Box 772, College Station, Durham, N. C.

The program is to be primarily educational. Write us for further information.

Yours in His service,
F. L. GIBBS,
Assistant Secretary.

DEBT TO THE CHILDREN

If the physicians of this State would give themselves unstintedly to the correction of diseased tendencies and the cure of actual disease in all the pre-school children of all the people in North Carolina; when these children become rich in years the "pains, aches and qualms" of three score and ten could not exist.

The State Board of Health would say to the medical profession and to the parents of the State, that having in the past been guilty of the great sin of omission in so far as their duty to pre-school children is concerned they are making work for somebody in that you are creating the tremendous job of alleviating the pain and helplessness which will come to the aged that are now your children through the ravages of preventable disease.

Make amends, O you good doctors, mothers and fathers, by taking the 83,000 children that were born to you last year and in so far as possible make and keep them physically whole. Get the habit so that year after year it will be easier and considered a greater privilege to have "little children come unto you for theirs is the Kingdom of Health." Get the habit and remember that every child born to North Carolina is worth $10,000 to the state; 83,000 worth $10,000 apiece—$830,000,000 of state property. As Christians, as citizens, and as men and women, what are you going to do about it?—The Health Bulletin.

HERBERT HOOVER

"Thou hast been faithful over a few things."
I was an hungered,—Me ye fed;
Athirst, ye gave Me drink;
In rags, ye gave Me clothes instead—
In prison, ye did think
To visit Me:—ye dared to come
To aid the war-wrecked town.
In helping others stricken dumb,
Ye did your Master crown!

And in thine own afflicted land,
When floods, both great and sore,
Swept farm and meadow, thy kind hand
Helped health and wealth restore.
Ye served, when Duty called, the State,
In divers helpful ways:
New duties, still, thy hands await
In these tumultuous days.

Perhaps, like Lincoln, thou canst save
From lawlessness and strife:—
Men wise and gentle, kind yet brave,
Must guide a Nation's life.
Who sees the woe, who seeks the cause,
Who feels the people's need,
Will find the cure in Nature's laws,—
And serving, must succeed!
Thou wilt not birthrights sell for votes,
Nor pander to desire
By pouring liquor down men's throats
To set their hearts on fire!
Thou wilt not stab Truth in the back,
Nor loose the hounds of hell,
By "Law" presuming to attack,—
In this thou doest well!

To "know" is much; to "feel," and "do",—
These mark God's nobleman.
In being wise, and being true,
Ye work out Heaven's plan.
Great Heart,—oft proved the People's Friend,—
Ennobled by Love's creed,
Perchance, thou'lt serve a brigher end
In this new Hour of Need!

FOR A WARLESS WORLD

A Message from Dr. Daniel A. Poling

My dear Fellow Endeavorers:

The campaign to defeat the will of those who would modify and destroy the Eighteenth Amendment has passed through one ordeal to triumph. But let no one of us think that the war is over. It has just begun.

We count on you to keep "fit and ready," to have the facts and to release them, to support with unabated interest the united effort to complete the great work we are in.

But the campaign for prohibition is not all. In our Crusade with Christ we have joined the most sublime crusade of man, the crusade to win the warless world. In this the Christian Endeavorers of the North American continent are united with the Christian Endeavorers of all continents, and our common ensign is Calvary's cross.

For us of the United States there is an immediate objective. It is the great imperative of the peace movement—ratification by the Senate of the Pact of Paris.

This Pact is the greatest forward step since the signing of the Armistice. Our Crusade with Christ comprehends its spirit and accepts its challenge. Taken seriously, confirmed finally, the Pact will make armed conflict an outlaw, as much an outlaw as the individual murderer. It will crystallize into permanent form the peace-longing of the ages. Right in principle, it has also the spiritual dynamic which to come into fulfilment needs only to be released by Christ-minded men and women.

We call upon Christian Endeavorers everywhere to give their utmost support to the campaign to secure prompt and favorable action by the United States Senate. Let nothing stand between the Kellogg-Briand treaty and confirmation. Every other plan should be held in abeyance. When we have won here, we shall have made the great beginning. To lose this would be for America's moral leadership an irretrievable disaster.

Christian Endeavorers, we are counting on you!

DANIEL A. POLING.

THE BRIDGE-BUILDER

An old man going a lone highway, came at evening cold and gray
To a chasm vast and deep and wide.
The old man crossed in the twilight dim,
The sullen stream had no fear for him.
But he turned when safe on the other side
And built a bridge to span the tide.
A fellow pilgrim standing near Said, "Old man, you're wasting time building here.
You've crossed the chasm dark and wide,
Why build a bridge at eventide?".
The builder lifted his old gray head,
"In the path I've come," he said,
"There followeth after me today
A fair-haired youth who must pass this way;
This chasm which has been naught to me
To this fair youth may a pitfall be;
He, too, must cross in the twilight dim.
Good friend, I'm building this bridge for him." —Anonymous.

Same Old Alibi

For some reason my wife was absent from the dinner table one evening. The children and I took our accustomed places with the exception of my youngest, Dorothy, aged seven, who seated herself in the mother's chair. With proper poise she announced, "I am the mother now and you kids must behave." The other children entered into the spirit of the assumed situation, until my boy of ten said, "Well, Dorothy, if you are the mother, how much is six times nine?"

Without a moment's hesitation and still retaining her maternal role, she replied: "I'm busy; you ask your father."—Children.

Jimmy: Granny, do your spectacles magnify?

Granny: Oh, yes, they magnify a little.

Jimmy: Ah, well, would you mind taking them off when you cut my next piece of cake?—Exchange.

—Rev. Lawrence Little has sent out a very fitting Christmas letter to his friends and co-workers. We thank him for a copy.

—Rev. E. L. Ballard and family, of High Point, are spending the Christmas holidays with Mr. Ballard's parents in Baltimore.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Asheboro.—Some few weeks ago I said I could not report any of the big welcome services nor receptions which some of the brethren had been reporting; however, I feel now that I can report something equal to these, if not surpassing them. On a recent evening we heard a noise on the front porch, and having forgotten that it was our 16th wedding anniversary and not having poundings especially on the brain, it did not dawn on either of us that we were in for a good pounding. But presently here they came right through the house, into the dining room, where things were piled on the dining table until it almost groaned under the load. I will not attempt to give names of those who came, neither will I try to enumerate each item, but will say it was a generous pounding. This preacher tried to express to the people the appreciation of the parsonage family. Then after a brief prayer they went as quickly as they came.

The Christmas service by the Sunday school was given last night and it was a splendid service. Misses Exie Calicott, Beatrice Lowdermilk and Virginia Lowe and Mrs. W. F. Redding, Jr., had the responsibility of getting up the service and considering the large number of cases of flu they accomplished almost the impossible.

Death invaded our community yesterday afternoon and claimed a sweet little girl, Sara Rich, the four and a half year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Otis W. Rich. Sara had suffered with diabetes for a year or more and her system was too weak to stand pneumonia, which struck her on Saturday night. She was an exceedingly bright child and had told her mother that she had rather go on and be with Jesus where she would not have to be taking medicine all the time. The funeral will be held at our church this afternoon at 2 o'clock. She is survived by her parents, and by one sister, Mary Louise, and one half-brother, Hal Rich.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

North Davidson Charge.—Christmas is here, and all the grown-ups, as well as children, are made glad because old Santa is here. We had a nice Christmas tree at Bethesda on Monday at 2 o'clock; each class entered into the program and made it real interesting. Each class had its own part, and did fine. After the program all of the Sunday school received presents and a nice treat, and after it was all over and we were ready to go home, Bro. Bruce Yokely presented to pastor and family a real old-time pounding, and we loaded our car with groceries and came home. We thank these good people for their fine Chirstmas present. Our people at Friendship had a Christmas tree, also; but we could not get there for lack of time.

Monday night the C. E. Society of Shiloh gave the program. A pageant, "Christmas Customs of Many Lands," was rendered well and everybody enjoyed it. Every member of the society did well. We want to thank our C. E.'s for their faithful work.

Greer's Chapel had their Christmas program Monday night, but at this writing I have not heard from them.

On Sunday, the 30th, we will have our corner-stone laying at Greer's Chapel. President Taylor will be with us. Preaching at 11; dinner on the grounds; corner-stone laying in the afternoon. Everybody is invited. Please come and bring dinner and enjoy the day with us.

We have been remembered in a very substantial way by friends, both new and old. Bro. C. R. Ephland, of Fountain Place, a box of socks; Bro. Jeff Berrier, apples and oranges; Mrs. Jeff Berrier, $1.00; Mrs. Jim Shoaf, $2.50; Bro. J. R. Berrier, Jacfisonville, Fla., a check for $50, and just before dinner on Christmas day Miss Emma Berrier came in with a great big banana cake. My! it certainly was good. We thank these good people for these gifts, and wish them, with all, a merry Christmas and a happy New Year.

We are glad to have Bro. Tom Berrier from Jacksonville, Fla., home to spend Christmas with his parents, Bro. and Mrs. Jeff Berrier. We are always glad to see the boys come home.

A happy New Year's wish to all.

R. S. TROXLER.

Orange Charge.—Had a good day yesterday. Visited each church; held Christmas services at each place. Offerings were received for "New Century Service."

We have been presented with a number of useful gifts during the holiday period. For all we express our sincere thanks. Packages have been received from Efland Ladies' Aid and Ladies' S. S. class, ladies of Hebron church.

At Union Grove church yesterday while the writer was in the church his car was tampered with considerably, it being filled so completely with packages he hardly had room to ride home in it. Then, to cap it all, one of the leading members of Union Grove, placed a $5.00 gold piece in the writer's hand. For all of these expressions of kindness we are grateful.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Lineberry, Davidson Circuit.—Our folks hated very much to give Brother C. E. Ridge and family up. After being with us four years they seemed a part of our big Lineberry family. His family were attentive members of our Sunday school and we miss them very much. But our new pastor, Rev. W. D. Reed, and his good wife moved into the parsonage and Bro. Reed has taken up the work where Bro. Ridge left it off, and our people are liking him fine.

The flu is making a wide swath in Lineberry community, but few families being exempt, and it looked like Lineberry would be wiped off the map of activities, but our church services, Sunday school and Christian Endeavor Society have all been functioning with a very reduced attendance, but still with interest good, and we hope to see our people able to be back at church again.

Brother Reed has been giving us some fine sermons and since the flu epidemic has been busy every day visiting his sick people and has not only proved himself an able preacher, but a fine pastor, and is making our handicap (like Paul of old) a means of making friends.

Miss Della Ballard, a sister to L. M. Ballard, died at High Point Hospital last week and was brought to her brother's and carried to Macedonia church near Eldorado and buried Sunday, December 23, at 11 o'clock.

The wedding bells have been ringing. Mr. Bob Lanier, one of our members, and Miss Janie Coggins, a member of Pine Hill church, were married a few days ago.

Mr. Edward Hall and Miss Pauline Loflin, both members of Lineberry church, were married Christmas Eve.

Mr. Bradley Loflin and Miss Virginia Fine, both of Alleghany church, and Mr. Sherman Loflin and a Miss Morgan, of Rowan, all were married during the Christmas holidays.

Mr. Matthew Varner, of Chandler, and Miss Verdie Caster, of near Kannapolis, were married Sunday, December 23.

For fear I will be too long and the goat might get this, I will close by wishing the Herald family a merry Christmas and a happy New Year.

J. P. ELIOTT, Reporter.

Draper.—Hello, folks! I hope you all have had a merry Christmas and hope for you all a happy New Year.

We are glad to report that Sister Boyles is able to be out at church again. Sister Totten is a little better at this time.

We held our Christmas entertainment on Monday night, December 24. It was a great success. The whole church wants to extend its thanks to Bro. Keaton and Sister Keaton, Sister Boyles and Sister Ollie Chandler and Sister Troxler for the interest they took in drilling the children their parts of the program.

L. C. CRAIG.

Draper.—Since conference my people seem to be taking hold of everything with more zeal. The Sunday school is larger and more interesting. The Christian Endeavor Society has grown. The prayer meetings are good. Every Sunday night the stewards have money for their pastor. The church members and neighbors are very kind to us while my wife is sick. At the Christmas tree last night we got so many presents that I felt if we had little children I could go home and play Santa Claus. Today the pounding continues.

W. T. TOTTEN.

Dr. L. P. Jacks, the editor of the Hibbert Journal, tells of a trip to Ireland by an Englishman, who was far off his course and confused about his next directions. He asked an Irishman, cutting peat in the wilds of Connemara, how to get to Letterfrack. The old Irishman labored over the directions, so intricate and roundabout were the roads, until, having done his best, he added this: "If it was meself that was going to Letterfrack, faith, I wouldn't start from here!"—New Outlook.

—Right here in Raleigh, within two blocks of this office, where this article is being written, there is a man who is well over eighty years of age, who is making a living in the insurance business. His hobby is flowers, and the work in the open air in his flower garden, when he is not about his labors, affords him all the exercise he needs, and he is as happy at eighty as the average man is at fifty. So it goes. We might go on and enumerate examples on almost every city block, and in every community in the state, of people of this type.—Health Bulletin.

THE CRUISER BILL

The Cruiser Bill should not pass. In a Memorial to the U. S. Senate presented December 17, 1928, a group of over 350 representative citizens of the United States said: "We believe that the wholesome effort of the General Pact for the Renunciation of War upon the sentiment of nations and peoples will be largely nullified if the nation which first proposed the General Pact expresses lack of confidence in its efficacy by increasing its own armament." In order to strengthen the efforts of those Senators who are opposed to the passage of the Cruiser Bill, we must demonstrate that they have the backing of a considerable part of the sober opinion of the country. For that purpose we are calling a conference of leading citizens from all parts of the country, and we urge you to make every effort to attend. It is highly important. This conference will be held in Washington, D. C., Tuesday, January 8, 1929, at the Hotel Washington, Fifteenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue, Northwest.

Should you be unable to attend, try to find someone who can, that your community may be represented. Further, if you endorse the purpose of the meeting, but are unable to come, please be sure to send a message which may be presented to the Senate. This may be addressed to the Citizens Conference on Cruisers, Hotel Washington, Washington, D. C.

If the validity of the Pact is to be preserved, personal sacrifices are required.

THE LEGEND OF THE THREE AGES

Tradition has added much to the story of the Wise Men and the guiding star as found in the Gospels. There no number is mentioned, but tradition has fixed on three, partly because the gifts were of three sorts, gold, frankincense and myrrh. Tradition has also furnished them with names. It also told their ages: one was a youth of 20, another was middle-aged, whilst the third was old. They were uncertain what they would find at Bethlehem. They discussed among themselves whether they would find a king, a priest or a physician. Whichever he was one of the gifts they had brought would be suitable—gold for a king, frankincense for a priest, myrrh for a physician. They agreed to go into the presence separately and whichever of the three gifts was accepted would prove what he was.

So was it arranged, but each found his gift accepted, which seemed to suggest that Jesus would fill not one, but all three roles. When they questioned one another as to what they had seen—each had a different tale. The youth said he had found one in radiant boyhood like himself, to the middle-aged man he had seemed in the fullness of perfect manhood, whilst to the older men he had appeared in the ripe serenity of age. The vision to each was different. Each saw through his own eyes, and in a wonderful way each found that Christ met his needs.

Christ is the Savior of youth no less than the Saviour of age. His religion, as Dr. Jacks says, is not primarily a religion for the old that somehow has to be adopted for the young. For youth Christ has all the radiance of youth in His eyes. He who can speak comfortable words to the sorrowing and the old, can speak brave and challenging words to youth and middle age.

"The star of Bethlehem," it has been said, "is in turn morning star, the noonday sun and the light at eventide."—F. C. Hoggarth, in The New Outlook.

We have sent our check to the college for 25 per cent of the $10.000 assessed for current expense. Brethren, we intend to pay it all "eventually, why not now?"

We got the impression somehow that Methodist Protestant laymen were keen to make money, especially easy money; but the impression must have been made by some quirk of an imagination stimulated by the wish that it might be so. The offer to pay 6 per cent interest to anyone who would take over the C. G. Gratitude note, amounting to $2,400.00, has not been accepted. We guaranteed to pay the interest quarterly until the note should be taken up. This is not only an opportunity for someone to make a little money; it is an opportunity for him, or her, to render a real service to the Conference. We may add that the note is endorsed by men of unquestioned financial standing. "First come, first served."

New Year, the time for making new resolutions, will soon be here. Do not forget to include: "Resolved, that we will meet our obligations to the church monthly." And then do it.

Brethren, do not hold money collected for General and Annual Conference purposes. Send it in just as fast as you get it. THANK YOU. GEO. R. BROWN, Treas.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

McKnight

Gaither Jacob McKnight departed this life on the evening of December 4, 1928, at the age of about 20 years. Funeral services were held at Stony Knoll Methodist Protestant church at 1:30 o'clock on the following afternoon. In the absence of the pastor, who was away during the day, Rev. Mr. Adams, of East Bend, pastor of a group of Baptist churches, was called to conduct the funeral services.

Gaither Jacob McKnight was the youngest son of Brother W. Burgess McKnight and Sister Mollie McKnight, faithful members of Stony Knoll church. Gaither united with Stony Knoll church a number of years ago and was a regular attendant at the Sunday school and preaching services. He was a splendid young man and liked by his companions and friends. His going from the loving parents and church and Sunday school and the community in general was sad, since it was so sudden. He was in his usual health up to the time of his death. The end came while Gaither was engaged in his evening work at his home.

The church, the Sunday school, relatives, friends, neighbors and all who knew Gaither McKnight are bereft of a faithful worker and loyal member and excellent young man. Indeed, it is true that their loss is his gain, for he has entered into that rest prepared for the people of God.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Moser

On December the eighth the spirit of Willitm Lloyd Moser silently took its flight. Lloyd was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ervin Moser, and was two years, eight months and 27 days old. He had influenza and then pneumonia. The funeral was conducted by the writer from Mount Hermon M. P. church Monday, the tenth, at eleven o'clock.

Brother and Sister Moser's youngest living child is now in a hospital at Burlington, having been seriously ill, but is improving.

Our hearts go out in sympathy for these heart-broken parents. May they be sustained by the God of all grace. The light which has gone out here shines more brightly over there, and may its light ever be a beckoning star, guiding the lives of those it illumined here.

Wm. H. NEESE.

Allen

James Monroe Allen, one of the best known and most beloved men in Randolph County, passed to his heavenly rest December 13, at the Allen home about four miles southeast of Asheboro. Brother Allen was born March 17, 1863, and therefore was in his 66th year.

In early life he was united in marriage to Miss Antemelia Cox, who survives him.

He was a public-spirited man and had represented Randolph County in the State Legislature, had been County Surveyor two terms and at the time of his death was Secretary of the Farmers Mutual Fire Insurance Company of Randolph County.

He was a lifelong Methodist Protestant and had been especially active in promoting the Annual Circuit Rally of Why Not Circuit for the past several years.

He is survived by his wife and by four sons, Homer, W. D. and Garrett Allen, of Texas; B. C. Allen, of Charleston, S. C., and by four sisters, Mrs. John Reynolds, of Troy, N. C.; Mrs. S. F. Lowdermilk, of Asheboro; Mrs. Wiley Holt, of Star, N. C.; Mrs. J. R. Comer, of Seagrove, and by two grandchildren, Verna Gail and Mary Lynn Allen, of Texas. The funeral was held at Flag Springs church where the deceased had been a member all his lifetime, on Sunday afternoon, December 16, at 2 o'clock, and in the absence of his pastor, Bro. Trogdon, who was sick, was conducted by the writer. A great assemblage of people were present and the floral offering was immense.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

Keeter

On Tuesday, December 18th, Mrs. Ida Keeter, a loyal and faithful member of the Enfield church, passed to her reward. She was twice married, having had two children by the first husband and one by the last husband. She had lived a beautiful Christian life. She had been in feeble health for a number of years. During the last few weeks of her life she suffered intensely, not being free from pain night or day other than when she was given medicine. She was laid to rest in the cemetery at the Eden Methodist Protestant church on December 19th at 2:30. Her age was given as 60 years, six months and 23 days.

The air is full of farewells for the dying;
And mourning for the dead;
The heart of Rachel, for her children crying,
Will not be comforted!

Let us be patient! These severe afflictions
Not from the ground arise,
But oftentimes celestial benedictions
Assume a dark disguise.

J. CLYDE AUMAN.

Cartner

George Alexander Cartner was born May 18, 1879, and passed to the spirit world on December 9, 1928. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Martha Cartner, two daughters, Mrs. B. A. Moser and Miss Czarena, and two sons, Robert and Russell. There are also two sisters surviving, Mrs. H. M. Scott, of Burlington, and Mrs. Nannie Moore, of Roanoke Rapids, N. C. There are two half brothers, Messrs. John and Isaac Watson, of Barbers Junction.

The funeral was conducted December 11th at 2:30 p. m. in the First Methodist Protestant church, of which he had been a member for several years, by Rev. S. W. Taylor and the pastor. Brother Cartner had been ill only a few days. In fact, he had apparently recovered from an attack of flu and was up and about when he was taken with a heart attack and died in less than 24 hours.

The testimony of his neighbors, friends and relatives is that he was a good man, and that he was faithful to his church. We are glad that this can be said of him. The difficult task of attempting to bring comfort to bereaved hearts is made somewhat easier when such can be said of the deceased. Then it is that the minister can say: "Sorrow not as others who have no hope." A large congregation was present to bear testimony to the high esteem in which Brother Cartner was held in his church and in the community. After the service at the church his body was laid to rest in the Pine Hill cemetery to await the resurrection morning when all loved ones who have died in the faith shall be united again to part no more.

May the Lord graciously look upon Sister Cartner and the children in this time of great sorrow and give them comfort.

L. W. GERRINGER, Pastor.

Dixon

On Thanksgiving Day, Mr. John Dixon, one of Alamance county's oldest and most widely known citizens, passed away at his home on 109 Guthrie street, Burlington. He was over 74 years old and a member of the famous Dixon family of this section. Funeral services were conducted from Mt. Hermon M. P. church, where he was a member.

Mr. Dixon had spent his life mostly in Coble township. For the last 12 months he had lived in Burlington. He was born April 27, 1854, and died November 29, 1928. His death came as a close to a long illness. For over a year he had been confined to his home.

The funeral was conducted Friday at 2:30 o'clock from Mt. Hermon church. Dr. Buck, pastor of the First Baptist church, Burlington, made a very comforting talk. The service was in charge of the Mt. Hermon pastor. Interment followed in the local cemetery.

The deceased is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mattie Dixon; five children, Gladys, Joe, Paul, Barbara, and Thomas, Roanoke, Va.; one brother, Prof. Z. H. Dixon, Elkin, N. C., and a number of nieces and nephews.

Mr. Dixon had been a member of Mt. Hermon church for over a half century. He was a splendid Christian gentleman. The greatest words of praise the pen has may be expressed in these lines which came to me the day following the funeral: "You buried one of your best members yesterday. Mr. Dixon led my father to Jesus Christ more than 40 years ago. Both have passed on to their reward."

J. ELWOOD CARROLL, Pastor.

Davis

In the passing of Mrs. J. D. Davis, Yadkin College church loses one of its oldest and most influential and faithful members. She had been a sufferer for some time, but not until December 5, 1928, did she succumb to the dread monster, death. She was born August 1, 1860, making her age 68 years, 4 months and 4 days.

Mrs. Davis joined the church at Yadkin College in her early girlhood and remained true to her vows until she was called from labor to reward. She was first married to James Benson and after his death was later married to James B. Davis. To both of these she was a devoted and faithful wife. Her last husband preceded her to the world beyond about four years ago. Before her marriage she was Lizzie Oakes, daughter of Prof. John A. Oakes.

Too many good things cannot be said of Mrs. Davis. She never had any children of her own and yet she became a mother to several of her nephews and nieces who made their home with her after their parents' death. She lived for the good of others and many are the expressions that are being heard now commending her for her faithfulness, and she will be sorely missed by her loved ones who lived with her. She will be greatly missed by her pastor, for whom and to whom she always had a kind word of appreciation. She was always in her place at church unless providentially hindered.

The many who came in her honor to take part in the last rites attest the high esteem in which she was held by all who knew her and the many floral offerings as well as the many tears shed shows something of the love that her friends and kindred had for her.

"She hath done what she could." She "being dead yet speaketh." Surely, one so faithful and true will live on in the lives of others, and eternity alone will reveal the good done and the rewards that shall come to her.

N. G. BETHEA.

Sykes

Mrs. Nancy C. Sykes died December 3, 1928, aged 79 years, 9 months and 20 days. Funeral services were conducted at the home by the writer on December 4, after which the remains were placed in the family cemetery.

Sister Sykes had been a member of Chestnut Ridge church for 60 years or more. She had been confined to her bed for about four years. She seemed to be perfectly resigned to her condition. We think she was a good woman who is now at rest.

A large number of friends and relatives were present at the funeral services.

May all the bereaved ones be comforted.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

A PLEA FOR LOYALTY

Letters have come to me in recent months that were distressing. I have been told of some of the good women of our church who, though they are interested in the work at Pine Ridge and have a most kindly feeling for the workers here, yet they can no longer give us their support and co-operation because of the changes that have been brought about by the General Conference action. I have decided that perhaps a few statements in our church papers might be the most helpful reply I could make.

First, I want to say that the work at Pine Ridge is going steadily forward. We have an enlarging program for the work, and we are reaching out farther than ever before. And we are greatly encouraged by the fine spirit of co-operation manifest by the Board of Missions and the Church at large. We are not hampered because of lack of support, as some seem to think.

As to what we think about the General Conference action: I would say that it is my opinion that a great majority of our people have had, in recent years, a growing conviction that a change would soon be necessary with regard to the work of our Women's Missionary Societies. Many of us prayed ernestly that God would guide and show us the way. Our General Conference was conducted on a high plane. Sincere men and women sought God's guidance and control. Personally, I felt very sure that God was leading us forward. Conclusions were reached after careful consideration and discussion and, while the changes made were very great, and to some quite shocking, yet who would dare to stand up against them and be unwilling that they should at least be faithfully and honestly tried out!

I also believe that there was not a single person who took part in bringing about the changes referred to who had a selfish or low motive in so doing, but, on the contrary, every one was honestly seeking to do that which would make the work of our Church in every department more efficient and helpful in advancing the Kingdom of God.

Oh, if all of us right now would just stop seeking occasion to find fault and knocking and just loyally stand by the decisions and plans of our General Conference and wholeheartedly give ourselves to the work, what a wonderful showing could be made this quadrennium. "I cannot beat a retreat," but I am trying to beat a charge!

We are so glad for the achievements of the past—not one word of complaint for anyone who has served faithfully in the days that are gone, but, oh, don't let us think that we must go in the old ways or else fail, but let us join heart and hand and in the name of our God, "whose we are and whom we serve," and for the sake of dying lost souls, let us go forward.

THOS. R. WOODFORD.

HER DEAREST WISH

If you have never heard Helen Keller, you have yet to receive one of the noblest inspirations of your life. This marvelous young woman, deaf and blind, and, for most of her life, dumb also, is now able to hear with her fingers and to speak almost as well as other persons. The address I heard her give the other day was evidently impromptu, but it was full of careful thought, there was no hesitation for a word, an dthere are few practised orators that can use the English language so beautifully and effectively.

But what impressed me the most was her answers to questions, and especially to one question. With her sensitive hand placed lightly on the questioner's face she felt the changed expression caused by each word, and so read the questions as clearly and as swiftly as we could hear them.

The answer that moved me most was in reply to the question, "Helen, if you could have your wish, what would you wish for?"

Miss Keller's eloquent face was thoughtful for an instant, while all of us wondered what she would say. Surely it would be that she could have all her senses, like other persons. But, no; that was far from her thought, for her face lighted up, her arms were flung out in eagerness, and she replied, "World peace and brotherhood!" No wonder the large audience burst into hearty applause.

When Helen Keller's dearest wish becomes the dearest wish of all Christians, it will surely be granted. That is the kind of prayer for which God has no negative.—Amos R. Wells.

—Of the ten members so far announced for the new cabinet of the Chinese Government, six are Christians, as follows: foreign relations, C. T. Wang; industry, H. H. Kung, a direct descendant of Confucius; war, Feng Yu Hsiang; communications, Sun Foo, son of Sun Yat Sen; finance, T. V. Sung; justice, T. H. Wang, a preacher's son. In view of the fact that out of a population of 400,000,000 in China, only 400,000 are Christians—a ratio of 1 in 1,000—the proportion of Christians in the cabinet is exceedingly significant as indicating that Christianity occupies a place of influence in the new China which far exceeds the power of mere numbers.

MARRIED

Cox-Burrows

Miss Inez Burrows and Thomas A. Cox gave their friends a surprise when they motored to Greensboro Christmas Day and were quietly married at high noon. The vows were spoken before Rev. W. F. Ashburn at his home on Julian street. Only a few close friends were present. Immediately after the ceremony they drove to the bride's home where an informal reception was held.

The living room and dining room were beautifully decorated for the occasion, carrying out the Christmas colors.

Mrs. Cox is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. U. Burrows, of Julian. Mr. Cox is the eldest son of Mrs. L. A. Cox, of Randleman.

After January 1, 1929, Mr. and Mrs. Cox will be at home in High Point.

Young-McAdams

Lucian R. Young and Nellie McAdams were married by the writer at the parsonage in Efland, N. C., December 22, 1928. Mr. Young is a member of the Efland M. P. church; Mrs. Young, Hebron M. P. church. We wish them happiness through life.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Brown-Brown

In a simple yet very impressive ceremony, Miss Elizabeth Brown was married to Mr. Newman Norman Brown at the home o f the bride in Gibsonville last Thursday afternoon. Only the relatives and close friends of the famalies were present. The ring ceremony of the bride's church was used, the writer officiating.

The bride is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Brown, of Gibsonville, a very fine and influential member of the Methodist Protestant church. The groom is from Richmond, Va., and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Brown, of that city. After a wedding tour through the state of Virginia the couple will make their home in Gibsonville.

We wish and bespeak for them a long and happy life.

P. E. LINDLEY.

—Hallam, Lord Tennyson, died December 2, at his home on the Isle of Wight, at the age of seventy-six. He was the oldest son of Alfred, Lord Tennyson, the famous English poet, and was his father's secretary and constant companion. He, too, became a distinguished author, although he did not write poetry. He was the author of a biography of Alfred Tennyson and also published an edition of his father's complete works. From 1902 to 1904 he was the first Governor General of the Commonwealth of Australia. Since 1913, he had been Deputy Governor of the Isle of Wight.—Current Events.

—We congratulate our chum of long ago, now Dr. Herbert Stephens, of Westminster, Md., on his poetic effusions. We print one of them this week. Had we known that we were rooming with a future poet in those days of long ago, we might have been even more respectful.

NEW YEAR'S WISHES

I'd like to be an editor
And use the one best word;
Odd letters from the public
I'd blue-mark "Quite absurd!"

I'd like to be a plumber
And keep the Union's rules;
I'd walk a mile or two to work,
Then walk back for my tools!

I'd like to be a printer
And so win lasting fame;
With very little type and ink
I could surely make my name!

I'd like to be an actor
And lie in bed all day;
While other men had work to do,
I'd only have to play!

I'd like to be a doctor
And take my favorite pills;
Then I'd not have to worry,
I'd have no doctor's bills!

I'd like to be the President,
My orders would be terse;
The grafters and the sycophants
Would travel in a hearse!

I'd like to be an orator
And make a mighty speech;
I mean, of course, by radio,
Beyond the public's reach!

I'd like to be a cartoonist
And sketch the livelong day;
If threatened by starvation
I would promptly draw my pay!

I'd like to be a grocer
And have good things to eat;
My credit would be excellent
Without my own receipt!

I'd like to be a millionaire,
Despite the income tax;
I'd load my gold on ample trucks
And treat the poor with sacks!

—Grenville Kleiser.

(Mr. Kleiser hopes that readers will submit additional rhymes).

I'd like to be a poet
And make the whole world new;
I'd put in what pleases me
And leave out what pleases you.

I'd like to be a chauffeur
And drive upon the street;
I'd teach some folks a thing or two
Or knock them off their feet.

I'd like to be a dentist
And hear the people scream
As I wake them out of what they thought
Would be a pleasant dream.

I'd like to be a judge
And sentence the maker of union suits;
I'd send him up for sixty years
With other like galoots.

I wish I were a painter
With a brush a mile long:
I'd paint the sky all black
And move the world to song.

—J. F. McC.

I'd like to be a lawyer
In these days of quick divorce;
I'd draw my fees without much thought,
While the statutes took their course.

I'd like to be a preacher
About this time of year,
For poundings high on pantry shelves,
Add much to Christmas cheer.

I'd like to be a lover
In these days of hair-brained sheiks;
The girls to me would come in droves,
And leave those silly freaks.

—J. W. S.

—Captain Paxton Hibben died in a New York hospital on Wednesday of last week, his 48th birthday, of pneumonia following an attack of influenza. During his comparatively brief career, Captain Hibben had achieved a wide reputation as diplomat, journalist, and author. In the first year of the World War he went to Europe as war correspondent for Collier's Weekly. In 1915 he became a staff correspondent in Europe for the Associated Press. Following the entrance of the United States into the conflict, he was commissioned a lieutenant in the field artillery, later being advanced to the grade of captain. After his discharge in August, 1919, he was made a captain in the Officers' Reserve Corps. While with the military mission to Armenia in 1919, in the service of the Near East Relief from 1920 to 1922, and as secretary of the American Committee for the Relief of Russian Children, Captain Hibben had an unusual opportunity to obtain a knowledge of conditions in eastern Europe. He was a strong advocate of the recognition of the Soviet Government by the United States—a stand which nearly cost him his commission in the army. In addition to his magazine and newspaper work, Captain Hibben had written several books. One of these, "Henry Ward Beecher—An American Portrait," aroused widespread discussion upon its publication in 1927. During the present year Captain Hibben had been working on a biography of William Jennings Bryan, of which his friends hope enough may have been completed for the work to be brought out in the spring.

—Lord Hallam Tennyson, who died recently at his home in Freshwater, Isle of Wight, was the son of the poet Tennyson. He also had literary leanings and wrote a biography of his famous father and brought out an edition of the poet's complete works, containing notes by both the poet and his biographer. In 1902, the son became the first acting governor-general of the commonwealth of Australia. Since 1913 he had been deputy governor of the Isle of Wight.

—Deep sympathy is being extended to Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in his bereavement through the death of his wife, Laura V. (Bennett) Cannon, at Sibley Memorial Hospital, Washington, D. C. They had been married 40 years.

—I will strive to raise my own body and soul daily into all the higher powers of duty and happiness, not in rivalship of or contention with others but for the help, delight, and honor of others and for the joy and peace of my own life.—John Ruskin.

MORE CHINESE EGGS COMING INTO UNITED STATES

Exports of frozen eggs from China to the United States are on the increase, totaling 5,000 tons so far this season, compared with 1,250 tons to the corresponding date last year. This statement brings up again the old problem of the wider range from which cities can get their supplies. The development of rapid transportation and the processes of refrigeration have transformed the whole business of marketing. Who would have thought a few brief years ago that China could become a serious competitor to our American poultrymen?

Vegetable and truck growers are particularly concerned with this same problem. Time was when the season of new fruits or vegetables was short and confined to the short season when such products could be grown locally. Today the season of any of these fruits and vegetables has been widened to include nearly the whole year. Strawberries, for example, can now be had on the New York market if the consumer is willing to pay the price.

Without a doubt, this competition for local growers is going to continue and increase. It does not take much imagination to see what aeroplane transportation is going to do in the not distant future. What, then, is the answer for American farmers who depend on their own markets for the success of their business?

Proper adjustments of the tariff giving farming the same advantages other business has will help some. We should not be buying eggs from China, for example, as long as American poultrymen can produce enough of them at reasonable prices.

But the chief answer to the problem is, we believe, for our own farmers to continue to improve the quality of their products. As long as the quality of our local products is good, our farmers will continue to have the advantage for many years to come of lesser costs of transportation and of a freshness and wholesomeness in the product that no amount of refrigeration can give to food brought from long distances.—American Agriculturist.

ANOTHER CHANGE IN TURKEY

The Turkish dictator has decided that the complicated Arabic alphabet is to be abandoned, and the Roman alphabet brought into use. In 15 years Parliament has ordered the use of the Roman alphabet to be obligatory. It takes a child from four to ten times as long to learn the Arabic system of writing as to learn the Roman letters, and this, it is said, is one of the causes of illiteracy in Turkey.

—In presenting his resignation as pastor of the First Congregational Church of Los Angeles, Cal., Dr. Lloyd C. Douglas says: "Anybody who, seeing a church row in the offing, can think of a good way to head it off, should be called blessed, I think, by both factions, if he suggests his remedy. I now crave that blessing. Rather regretfully, grateful to the very considerable majority who have been loyal and co-operative, and without any bitterness toward those who have not seen eye to eye with me, I offer my resignation to take effect on the last day of January." Dr. Douglas went to Los Angeles two years ago after a pastorate of five years at First Church, Akron, Ohio.

NEAR EAST RELIEF

Past Success

Near East Relief, chartered by and responsible to Congress to which it issues annual reports and financial statements, is the greatest humanitarian, educational, and religious effort ever attempted by Americans.

It has saved over 1,500,000 lives, including the remnant of the oldest Christian nation in the world.

More than 125,000 children have passed through its orphanages and have received its mental, manual and spiritual training. Most of them would have perished but are alive, earning their own living and helping in the building of a new and better Near East.

It has relieved hideous suffering. It has been the Star of Hope shining in Bible Lands, bringing courage and new life to hundreds of thousands of persecuted peoples.

It has combatted illiteracy by giving every orphan an elementary school training.

It has promoted industry by teaching every child a practical trade.

It has improved sanitary, agricultural and economic conditions.

It has represented spiritual America in a way that should make every American's heart glad.

Present Difficulties

Several months ago Near East Relief announced its final campaign to secure sufficient funds to carry on its work to its completion.

It meant raising between now and June 30, 1929, the close of its fiscal year, a little over double the amount raised during the similar period the year before. Unfortunately the very announcement that it was a final campaign was interpreted to mean the need was about over and contributions slumped alarmingly.

There are still 32,131 orphans under Near East Relief's care. Already some have been turned out prematurely because of insufficient funds.

Your gift will help maintain the children still remaining in the orphanages and keep them there Christmas Day.

The Future

Depends entirely upon America. The great task is almost finished. The 32,131 orphan children still remaining need this one more final lift and then they, too, will be self-supporting.

Your contribution now will mean a successful conclusion to a work unparalleled in history for its unselfishness and its spirit of Him whose Birthday is upon us, and who, too, went about doing good.

—Rev. H. F. Foglen has done an unusual and valuable thing in his giving of Christmas gifts this year. He has sent out a neatly printed church directory, including the name sof the members of the three churches of his charge, Mt. Carmel, Rehoboth, and Union Chapel churches, constituting Granville Circuit.

—Webster's Distionary is 100 years old. Webster's "American Dictionary of the English Language" was first published in 1828. Recently the 100th anniversary of the famous dictionary was fittingly commemorated at Yale University, New Haven, Conn. There was a fine exhibit in one of the university buildings of manuscripts and printed works of Noah Webster, and of books showing the history and growth of English dictionaries. Noah Webster attended Yale College for four years as a member of the class of 1778. He made his home in New Haven in his later years and died there in 1843. His dictionary, too, was printed in New Haven.
